Alabama's Senate Choice

REPRESENTATIVE JOHN J. SPARKMAN won handsomely over each of his four opponents in the Alabama Democratic primary to choose a successor to the late Senator John H. Bankhead. Complete, though unofficial, returns give him 84,682 votes against 36,476 for his nearest competitor. But being a little short of a majority over the combined opposition, he apparently must clinch his nomination in a "runover."

Since his first election to Congress from the Eighth Alabama District in 1936 Mr. Sparkman has grown steadily in the esteem of his colleagues and in the confidence of his constituents. His record is that of a constructive liberal. In the recent race he swept the rural counties of his home district and also ran strongly in industrial centers. Birmingham and Montgomery gave him clear majorities over all the other contestants, chief of whom were State Senator James A. Simpson and Representative Frank Boykin. Mr. Sparkman's endorsement by the C. I. O. and other labor groups appears to have caused little stir beyond the charge by Representative Boykin that the Political Action Committee was trying to "purge" him.

The brief campaign, though intensive, was mild and happily free from bitter personalities. The Associated Press reports that "Negroes voted, as usual, without incident and in small numbers." For years past, the A. P. adds, Negroes who were registered have voted in the primaries in most of Alabama's 67 counties. In the other counties they were excluded "until the State Democratic Executive Committee, in line with a Supreme Court ruling, decided last January that they could not be barred."

Lister Hill, John Sparkman and Big Jim Folsom are given credit for the superior political climate of the Cotton State

(This is the third of a series of articles on the political situation in the South.)

WHILE Georgia has moved in one direction with the unappetizing fanatic, Eugene Talmadge, near-by Alabama has moved in exactly the opposite direction. There the people have confirmed as the reigning political triumvirate three genial, outsized politicians who are firmly opposed to everything Talmadge stands for.

Senator Lister Hill is the senior member of this triumvirate. He is a large, affable man, who conceals beneath his surface geniality, great shrewdness and real intelligence. "Raised to politics" by his prosperous family, he entered the Senate in the middle thirties as a moderate conservative, but he has tended more and more to become the leader of the small liberal wing of Southern Congressmen. He has made a real impression in the Senate, and he has been mentioned as a Vice Presidential possibility for 1948. But it is unlikely that this will ever be more than talk. A national candidate from the deep South would probably cost the Democratic ticket most of the Northern Negro vote.

Number 2 is John Sparkman, majority whip of the House, who was nominated to the Senate by a clear majority over two opponents this month. A big, red-faced man, son of a tenant farmer, his ten-year record of support for measures to help the farmers and the low-income groups, combined with his patent sincerity, have made him the best-liked politician in Alabama.

Finally, there is James E. Folsom, always called Big Jim in Alabama. An enormous man, many Alabamans believe that his huge feet, which he has a habit of displaying without shoes, together with his string band and his jokes, had more to do with his success in winning the Governorship than his liberal politics or his support from the C.I.O.

Even some of Big Jim's enthusiastic supporters are keeping their fingers crossed against the time when he moves into the impressive old State House in Montgomery. Folsom knows nothing whatsoever about the more tedious aspects of the business of government. It is believed that some of the men around him are not entirely unselfish in their motives. Moreover, Big Jim does not always measure up to the full standard of gubernatorial dignity. Alabama is still buzzing with talk of the uninhibited vacation he took in a Florida hotel, after he won the Governorship. On one occasion the manager is reported to have informed him that while the hotel was not stuffy about ties and coats in the dining room, it was necessary to insist that shoes be worn.

His Heart's In the Right Place

Most Alabamans are agreed that Folsom's heart is in the right place, but they fear that if he regards the Governorship as some bright new toy he may do the cause for which he stands real harm. However, last week he came to Washington, and Hill and Sparkman, with the help of Alabaman Hugo Black, undertook to impress him with the fact that the eyes of the nation are now upon him. The course of indoctrination reached its climax at a small dinner given by Postmaster General Robert Hannegan, at which Big Jim was seated next to the President. He is reported now to be suitably impressed with the seriousness of his new responsibilities.

Whatever their personal qualities, most Alabamans are proud of the three men who have been given the three most important political jobs in the state. One Alabama newspaper commented on a new dance which had been invented. "The Georgia Trot, one step forward and three steps back." It remarked that an "Alabama Polka, one step back and three steps forward," would be equally appropriate. While Mississippi has confirmed the Ku-Kluxer Bilbo and the screeching John Rankin, and while Georgia is faced with four years of Talmadge, why has Alabama taken its three steps forward? This reporter asked many Alabamans, of varying political complexion, that question.

Racial Issue Affects Everything

The answers differed, but always, sooner or later, the name of Lister Hill cropped up. Hill is quite obviously no radical from the North; he opposed F.E.P.C. (it would be hard to find a Southerner in Congress who did not). Yet his persistent counsels of reason and moderation have had a real effect on Alabama political thinking. On the more practical side, he has built himself an effective political organization, no machine in the Crump or Tammany sense, but a good working organization.

Finally, two years ago, Hill beat James Simpson when Simpson raised the White Supremacy issue. Simpson plastered billboards up and down the state with "Vote for Jim Simpson and White Supremacy," but Hill won by a comfortable majority. Simpson ran again this year against Sparkman, but this time the racial issue was never seriously raised.

" Perhaps it would have been," said one liberal editor to this reporter, "if the Negroes had voted here as they did in Georgia. But they didn't. All the same, the racial issue is still the basic issue here. It colors and affects all politics, even when it is never raised." How deeply that is true, and why it is true, is something that non-Southerners must understand if the yare to understand what is happening politically in the South.

State Goverment Changes Seen Under Folsom Regime

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.
Sun. 10-27-46

By REX THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

Alabama will see a striking change in the temper of its State Government when "Big Jim" Folsom takes office as governor next January.

Recent public utterances from Folsom and from the present chief executive, Chauncey Sparks, illustrate clearly how far apart are their concepts of the working of State affairs.

On such questions as schools, highways, public health, their views are fundamentally alike, but on things like the Boswell amendment and international relations, the Governor and his successor are at loggerheads.

Both have opposed the poll tax as a requisite for voting, but from different angles. Folsom campaigned for outright repeal while Sparks has expressed the view that Alabama could do without it after registration requirements have been strengthened.

But on voter registration itself, they are completely at odds.

Gov. Sparks is outspokenly in favor of the Boswell amendment to place new restrictions around voting qualifications on the grounds that almost anyone can qualify for registration under Alabama's present statutes.

That, of course, would include Negroes, the core of the dispute over the amendment.

Folsom's version is quite different. He takes the position that the voting franchise is already so restricted that "only a very small percentage of our citizens are able to participate in our primaries and elections."

The Boswell proposal, he argues, would only make them more restrictive.

On World Affairs

Equally distant are Sparks and Folsom in their approach to international problems.

When the present governor made a speech in Mobile on Sept. 6 branding members of the Communist party as "potential traitors" and labeling the United States as the dumping ground for Russian Communists, Folsom followed in a few days with a different stand.

He criticized American foreign policy for what he termed opposing everything Russia stands for and lambasted the "idea that every man who wants peace with Russia is a Communist."

But of all their differences, perhaps none is more pronounced than their regard for the so-called "liberal" philosophy of government represented by former Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace.

Folsom is a keen admirer of the onetime vice president; bolted the Alabama delegation at the Democratic National Convention in 1944 and voted for Wallace as running mate to Roosevelt.

Ignores Visit

Sparks, on the other hand, makes no secret of his dislike for the man President Truman recently booted out of the cabinet, and when Wallace spoke at Tuskegee Institute some months ago, the Governor officially ignored his visit to Alabama.

Finally, when Folsom was named State chairman of the Democratic party's fund-raising campaign, he set up his entire organization without calling on either Sparks or the head of the party in Alabama, Gessner T. McCorvey.

Instead, he left the job of raising $200,000 for the party's war chest to people who were close to him in his gubernatorial fight. Folsom associates, however, disclaim any political significance in this. As one put it:

"Jim is extremely conscious of the fact that he hasn't actually been elected governor yet (the formal election will be Nov. 5) and until he is he doesn't feel at liberty to call on all the people to help him in such a campaign as this.

"Consequently, he felt he had to rely on his friends who helped him in his race for governor in the primary."

"No. 8: This amendment helps come a leader in the transportation field. In order that Alabama shall stay abreast in air transportation, it is essential that we have airport facilities. It is necessary for this amendment to pass in order that we may participate in federal funds and acquiring Army airfields. Yes.

Demand Whites Keep Negroes From Polls

The Defender
Chicago, Ill. Sat. 6-29-46

JACKSON, Miss. — Complete mob violence was demanded this week by Chief Race-Baiter Theodore Bilbo as the frightened Dixie monarch waged a last ditch battle to keep 2,000 Negroes from the state primary July 2.

Seeking Senate renomination and speaking in his own behalf, Bilbo called upon "every red-blooded Anglo-Saxon in Mississippi to resort to any means to keep Negroes from the polls," adding, "and if you don't know what this means you are just not up on your persuasive measures."

Thus Bilbo, trying for another six years of senatorial hate, wound up his campaign true to form, in open defiance of a recent U.S. Justice Department order that Negroes must not be barred from voting in Southern Democratic primaries.

Events Come Swiftly

Developments in this race are following each other in rapid-fire order.

Just before the Bilbo rabble-rousing speech, Etoy Fletcher, Negro veteran of Pucket, filed an affidavit in which he swore that he was flogged and threatened with death when he attempted to register at Brandon County June 2.

A survey of 48 of the 82 counties in the state showed that few Negroes had registered.

T. B. Wilson, Negro president of the Progressive League, declared that many reports have come in that circuit clerks by ruse and intimidation are preventing Negroes from registering.

Representative Rankin, who asks return to Congress from the 1st District, joined Bilbo in urging law-abiding Negroes to refrain from voting in state primaries.

Nelson T. Levings, who seeks Bilbo's seat, charged in a campaign speech that the latter is responsible for Negroes voting in Mississippi.

Bilbo Fearful

And Bilbo, fearful that his "political" future is doomed if Negroes in his state voted on an equitable and fair basis, says: "The white people of Mississippi are sleeping on a volcano, and it is left up to you red-blooded white men to do something about it."

He charges that Negroes, "spurred by the CIO and the Political Action Committee, are going to make an all-out effort to vote, and if you don't know what that means you are not awake to the crisis ahead."

History Repeats

The historical aspect is significant. Bilbo, following a pattern established immediately after the Reconstruction era, is making a last attempt to stave off the inevitable downfall of white supremacy.

He verifies this when he says, "If you let a handful go to the polls July 2, there will be two handfuls in 1947. And from then on it will grow into a mighty surge."

Though the vast majority of Negroes here are Republicans and therefore, theoretically, should agree with Bilbo's platform on many points, the concensus here is that the majority will vote straight down against Bilbo July 2.

Mississippi Election May Be Investigated By Group In Congress

Pittsburgh Courier
Chicago, Ill.

Many Reports Current Negroes Not Allowed To Register For Ballot

JACKSON, Miss., July 1—(AP)—The oratory ends tonight in Mississippi's hectic congressional campaign, and tomorrow Democratic voters will cast their ballots for a United States senator and seven representatives.

But today in Washington, the Senate elections committee is due to meet and consider whether an investigation is warranted by published reports that Negroes are being deprived of their legal voting rights in Mississippi.

ONE NEGRO HAS declared he was beaten for trying to register; others have claimed they were prevented from registering by "ruse and intimidation"; and the National Negro Council has asked federal intervention to "protect the polls."

The latter organization has cited Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo's campaign appeal to "every red-blooded Anglo-Saxon in Mississippi to "resort to any means" to keep the Negroes from voting.

In tomorrow's primary, which is equivalent to an election in the one-party state of Mississippi, Bilbo faces four opponents— former Rep. Ross A. Collins, State Supreme Court Clerk Tom Q. Ellis, Naval Veteran Nelson T. Levings and Frank Harper, former state senator.

FOUR OF THE STATE'S representatives face opposition—John E. Rankin, head of the House committee on un-American activities; W. A. Winstead, W. M. Colmer and Dan R. McGehee. Reps. Will M. Whittington, T. G. Abernethy and Jamie L. Whitten are unopposed for renomination.

Bilbo scheduled a rally this afternoon at Raleigh, and will conclude his campaign with a radio address here tonight broadcast over "every station in Mississippi and one in Tennessee."

Levings will wind up with a rally tonight in Jackson's Poindexter Park. Ellis has addresses on his program for Ripley, Pontotoc and Coffeeville.

Collins completed his schedule Saturday night in Meridian. Harper has carried on a hitch-hiking campaign tour with no announced program.

WASHINGTON, July 1—(AP)—Sen. Taylor (D., Idaho) expressed belief today that President Truman should send troops into Mississippi to protect the Negro's right to vote "if that is the only way that their rights can be assured."

This assertion came as he prepared to go before the Senate elections committee to demand an investigation into the accuracy of reports quoting Sen. Bilbo (D., Miss.) as calling upon "redblooded" Americans to "use all means to insure a clean and white primary" Tuesday.

Bilbo Tells Hearers to Frighten Citizens

TWO ARRESTED

Sat. 7-6-46

Passenger Snatched From Train, Attacked

By CARDELL W. M'VICKERS

JACKSON, Miss.—A wave of terror was spreading through Mississippi last week in the wake of Senator Bilbo's fascistic radio appeal to "red-blooded Anglo-Saxons" to employ violence in preventing colored citizens from participating in the July 2 Democratic primary.

New developments were:

1. A mob of four white men, armed with heavy clubs, severely beat a man and his wife on the streets of Brandon, seat of Rankin County, where a Navy veteran, Etoy Fletcher, was abducted and unmercifully flogged on June 12.

2 The mysterious disappearance of Fletcher, following publication of an affidavit by the NAACP. He had been previously warned that he would be killed if he "told anybody" about the nocturnal flogging.

3. The brutal beating at Senatobia, Miss., scene of a sensational lynching, in 1933, of a 22-year-old Chicagoan, after he had been forced off an Illinois Central train en route to New Orleans.

4. Bilbo's defiance of Federal authority, by exhorting white hearers here to visit the homes of colored voters the night before election day as the "best way to keep the n----rs away the polls."

Not Intimidated

The desperate measures resorted to by Bilbo, who is fearful that he may not regain his seat in the Senate, have not served to intimidate thousands of registered colored voters who are determined to make use of their newly-conceded right to participate in Democratic primaries.

That was the belief expressed here by Percy L. Greene, editor of the Jackson Advocate and president of the local NAACP branch, whose organization was responsible for exposing the after-dark terrorism against colored citizens.

Greene agreed with political observers here that this bloc of voters may be the deciding factor in forcing Bilbo into a runoff race, a move that is virtually certain to end in his defeat.

The race is a close one of Bilbo against the field, with former Congressman Ross A. Collins and State Supreme Court Clerk Tom Q. Ellis running neck and neck for second place.

Either Ross or Ellis, while not exactly liberals in all senses of the word, are far more acceptable than Bilbo, according to Greene.

The latest victims of Mississippi terrorism were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pinkey of Brandon and John Taylor of Chicago.

The Pinkeys reported they were en route home after attending Sunday night church services, when they were severely beaten by white assailants, who told them that "no n----rs would be allowed on the streets of Brandon after dark."

The two were so badly beaten that it was necessary for them to be treated at their home, physicians advising their condition was too serious to permit their removal to a hospital.

Sheriff Henry Laird announced the arrest of two men in connection with the beating. Giving their names as F. M. Floyd and Webb Neal, they were allowed their freedom on $300 bonds on charges of assault and battery.

Knocked Down With Club

Mrs. Pinkey said her husband was knocked down first by one of the men wielding a wooden club, while another of the men struck her in the mouth with his fist. Both were kicked while they were on the ground.

Taylor said that he was beaten and robbed by two officers at Senatobia, after he had been forced off the train. The trouble started, Taylor said, when he was unable to locate his ticket.

He said he was struck by the policemen as soon as he was on the ground. Taken to jail, he was beaten again, two teeth being knocked out, and his bag searched.

Relieved of all his money but $2, Taylor quoted the officers as saying, "You boys go up North, stay awhile, and then get too smart for your britches." They then freed him and gave him 5 minutes to get out of town.

Hitchhikes to Memphis

Hitchhiking a ride on a truck, he made his way back to Memphis, where he told a lawyer, A. A. Latting, of his experiences.

Senatobia in 1933 was the scene of the sensational Jeff Williams lynching. Williams had been accused of killing his half-brother, a deputy sheriff, in a pistol duel. Father of both men was a white planter.

The whereabuots of Etoy Fletcher, a student of Jackson College here, the first victim in the Bilbo-inspired terroristic drive to keep colored citizens from the polls, remained a complete mystery Saturday.

Fletcher, a Navy veteran, was snatched off the streets of Brandon in Rankin County, carried to the nearby woods, and flogged by four white men with heavy cable wire.

Missing Since June 15

He disclosed the affair in an affidavit sworn to before R. B. Dansby, registrar of the college, on June 15, and has not been seen since.

College authorities have been unable to locate him since the affidavit, rushed to New York, was made public by the national NAACP office. No information as to his whereabouts could be obtained from the place where he roomed at 1610 Cox St., while attending school.

Contradiction occurred in the Fletcher case when Dr. C. J. Matranga, white, of Jackson, swore out an affidavit that Fletcher had told him he was beaten by colored men, not white as the NAACP affidavit charged.

Dr. Matranga said he treated the flogging victim.

Bilbo, sneering at reports from Washington that his inflammatory tactics would be the object of investigation by both the FBI and the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections, said: "Don't worry about Bilbo; just send him back to Washington and he'll take care of his seat in the Senate."

"Mississippi's good white people should go to any means justifiable to maintain white supremacy at the polls," Bilbo shouted in a talk at Stuart.

ELECTION CLAIMS DENIED BY SHEFFIELD MINISTER

Birmingham Age Herald - Alabama

BY HUGH W. SPARROW

Alabama Methodists had been assured today by no less an authority than the pastor of the First Methodist Church of Sheffield that inflammatory propaganda by W. Earl Holaten, dry force leader, against the people of Colbert County and Lt. Gov. Handy Ellis in connection with the recent Colbert County local option election was not based on facts.

In a letter to The Alabama Christian Advocate which gave Mr. Hotalen's scurrilous attack a play in the March 28 issue, the Sheffield clergyman, Dr. W. Glenn Bartee, denied accuracy of Mr. Hotalen's claim that a "Negro balance of power" gave wets victory in the Colbert County election and strongly deplored Mr. Hotalen's appeal to race prejudice. Tues 4-23-46

Dr. Bartee declared that though he regretted as much as any the fact that drys lost the Colbert County election, the drys would have lost even if no Negro had cast a ballot. That, he said, is shown by the official Colbert County voting records which lists fewer Negro qualified voters in the entire county than the vote margin between the winners and losers.

Race Question Introduced

The clergyman added that "not only has the cause (prohibition) not been helped any, but another issue—the race question—has been brought to the front in a manner that tends to be inflammatory."

Raising of the race question, according to Dr. Bartee's letter "harks back to and draws an imaginary parallel with an era we all want to forget, and is, to say the least, ill advised."

Mr. Hotalen, former leader in Ku Klux circles in Chattanooga and Birmingham, used inflammatory terms in describing the leaders of the wet forces in the recent election, charged that these leaders voted Negroes in wholesale lot to assure a wet victory.

The Christian Advocate, edited by Dr. A. E. Middlebrooks, which gave the Hotalen propaganda a full page play, published Dr. Bartee's letter to the editor in an obscure position at the bottom of a series of letters to the editor, appearing in the April 18 issue.

The Hotalen attack was published recently in the form of a so-called "hate sheet" which was widely circulated via mail. The Christian Advocate reprinted the attack verbatim. Besides charging wet leaders with using Negro votes to defeat the so-called better elements of Colbert County, Mr. Hotalen managed to insert a strong boost for Gubernatorial Candidate Joe Poole and a blast at Poole's opponent, Lt. Gov. Ellis.

Advocate Favors Candidate

The Christian Advocate likewise has been favoring Mr. Poole over Mr. Ellis although Mr. Ellis is a member of the Methodist Church, himself.

The Hotalen propaganda blast sought to show that Poole's supporters in the Colbert election were on the side of the drys while Ellis' backers were lined up with the wets. However, the Tri-Cities Daily, published at Sheffield, which is backing Mr. Poole in the gubernatorial race, took a militant lead in the pre-election fight to eliminate bootleggerism and gangsterism in Colbert County.

Dr. Bartee's letter follows:

"Dear Dr. Middlebrooks:

"The article which appeared in the March 28 issue of The Advocate concerning the liquor election held recently in Colbert County, unfortunately contains some statements that are inaccurate. This, I must believe, was not intended by the author who, doubtless, has been misinformed. I have received letters from over the conference concerning the article and many here—drys as well as others—are not happy over it. So am asking for a bit of space to make a correction which you will welcome.

"I refer, especially, to the heading which says 'Negro balance-of-power vote wins wet majority in Colbert County liquor election' and a subsequent statement that 'It is estimated by careful calculation that if these Negro veterans had not registered in the last hours and run in to vote at Sheffield on election day the drys would have won by 450 votes or more.'

Facts Are Presented

"This is a mere surmise; here are the facts: The official poll list, just published, reveals that there are 261 Negroes registered in the county, 110 of which are in Sheffield. The wets won the election by 419 majority, official count. So, like it or not, and I don't, the final result would not have been changed had no Negroes voted.

"This is pointed out to say that, not only has the cause not been helped any, but another issue—the race question—has been brought to the front in a manner that tends to be inflammatory. Harking back to, and drawing an imaginary parallel with, an era which we all want to forget, it is, to say the least, ill advised. Tues 4-23-46

Negro Vet Statements

"Of certain brazen statements attributed to Negro veterans I know nothing; one official says 'It seems unthinkable that fear would deter them.' Suffice it to say no abnormal relation is in evidence here but some things tend to create it. The old Negro quoted as saying 'dis means more trouble for the Negroes' might have added 'for whites, too' if continued.

"One thing is sure, we cannot hope to win on one moral issue at the expense of another, which is certainly no less vital. Sound reason and earnest persuasion, not belligerency and prejudice, are avenues to ultimate victory. In these anxious days the church and its correlated agencies must hold high the spirit of fraternity and good will among men, else I shudder at what the future may bring.'

— WASHINGTON NOTES —

The Alabama Primary

Daily Worker, New York, N.Y.

Fri. 5-17-46

— by Rob F. Hall —

WASHINGTON.

A TESTIMONIAL to Luther Patrick's popularity among labor-liberal groups in Washington was the vast sigh of relief when word reached here last Friday that he still has a chance to retain his seat in Congress.

The first reports were that Patrick, who has represented the Birmingham, Ala., district here off and on since 1936, was beaten in the May 17 primary by Maj. Laurie Battle. In fact, Patrick himself was so certain that Battle had a clear majority that he sent him a telegram of congratulations and virtually conceded defeat.

But election officials began counting absentee ballots on Friday. The final results were:

Battle	23,381
Patrick	17,925
Dubose	5,578

Briefly, Battle lacked a majority of all ballots cast by a narrow 121 votes. Under Alabama primary law, Battle must fight a return engagement with Patrick in a run-off June 4.

Because he has a liberal voting record, Patrick has the support of CIO, CIO-PAC, the AFL and the Railroad Brotherhoods. Usually he has also received the votes of the 800 to 1,000 Negroes who have voted in the Democratic primaries in Jefferson County for a number of years. He is opposed by the Chamber of Commerce crowd, the power trust and the steel interests. Fri. 5-17-46

Patrick is one of those superbly confident people who finds it hard to believe ill of any one. When the CIO boys frantically urged him to return to the district and help campaign, he didn't worry. Some of his business men "friends" had told him it was in the bag and that Battle didn't have a prayer.

Finally Patrick did go to Birmingham and found the unionists were right and the businessmen had deliberately given him the wrong dope. Battle, with the support of the corporations and utilizing his war record, had quietly built up an impressive following. It was too late to affect the outcome, and the result was that in the first primary Battle piled up a big lead over Patrick.

But Patrick and his labor friends now have almost three weeks to conduct their campaign. They must get all of Dubose's vote and recapture some of Battle's if Patrick is to win June 4. It wont be easy.

Some Washington newspaper comment distorts the facts in the Alabama primary. Fri 5-17-46

Jim Folsom, backed by labor-farmer groups, who led the field in the gubernatorial race, is pictured as some kind of clown, an Alabama version of Pappy O'Daniels and Jimmy Davis. Actually Folsom is a thoughtful, educated son of the people. His use of a hillbilly band in his campaign shouldn't blind any one to the fact that he has a progressive program, based on a fairly good understanding of the role of labor in the progressive movement.

His favorable references to Gov. Arnall of Georgia indicate that the 6-foot-8-inch candidate will, if he wins the run-off June 4, give Alabama its most progressive administration in many years.

But his victory is certainly not to be taken for granted. He must still win a clear majority before he is definitely in.

Comment on the defeat handed Joe Starnes by Rep. Albert Rains in the 5th Congressional District is likewise misleading. One writer, for instance, expresses amazement that the "predominantly rural" 5th district should elect a progressive.

In the first place, Rains is not a fullfledged progressive. While FDR was alive, Rains voted for the Administration program. During the past year, he has sometimes yielded to reactionary pressure, voting for the Case bill, for the Dirksen amendment to give USES back to the states, and against the Powell amendment to the school lunch bill. On the crucial votes on OPA and veterans housing, Rains was absent.

In the second place, the 5th district includes the city of Gadsden where there are large steel mills, stove foundries, textile mills and tire factories. These workers are organized, mostly in CIO, and they played a decisive role in defeating Starnes two years ago and again on May 7. Although the district includes the blackbelt counties of Tallapoose and Chambers, it is largely made up of hill counties, where small farmers predominate. Among them, the Farmers Union is relatively strong and has lots of influence. These are the groups that went down the line for Rains in order to block Starnes, the former Dies Committee member.

Latest reports from Alabama are that Mrs. Pauline Thomas Dobbs, former state secretary of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, was one of the 14 highest candidates for the state legislature from Jefferson county and therefore will be in the run-off. Seven of the 14 will be elected. Mrs. Dobbs was thirteenth in a field of 35.

Alabama's 'Big Jim' Folsom

Time - Herald

ALABAMIANS have elected as their next Governor, for better or worse, JAMES E. FOLSOM, almost invariably called simply "Big Jim." He is 6 feet 8 inches tall and he is only 37 years old. He has a personality to match his size. Plain-spoken, plain-mannered, affable and humorous, he has an extraordinary flair for political showmanship. His opponents accused him of being a "clown." But anyone who followed Alabama's lively gubernatorial campaign must realize that there is something more to the man than political showmanship. He obviously appealed deeply to many people. Otherwise, he would never have been able to defeat one of the ablest and most experienced political figures in Alabama, LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR HANDY ELLIS, who was his opponent in the run-off. Sat 5-18-46

ELLIS himself has enjoyed wide political popularity in Alabama for many years. He has had a reputation for being liberal and progressive, although in recent years he seems to have grown rather cautious, if not a bit conservative. FOLSOM had the endorsement of CIO-PAC. His opponents raised the cry of use it and the mop to clean up the Capi- repeal of the poll tax; for a minimum and buttol. Incidentally, Life magazine in its issue of June 3, gave this picturesque campaigner quite a spread, illustrating his campaign methods.

These campaign practices are crude. "Big Jim" campaigned with a hill-billy string band and brandished a mop more than this accounted for "Big Jim's" victory. Observers testify that there was went on his homespun, friendly, expan- something about his campaigning that impressed voters. Sat 5-18-46 salary of $1,800 a year for teachers; for a monthly pension of $40 to everybody over 65 years of age, to be increased to $50 two years after he took office; for hard-surfacing all farm-to-market roads; for free school textbooks through the high schools, and other measures which appealed to the voters. Richmond

We strongly favor poll-tax repeal, of course, as well as better teachers' salaries, free textbooks and hard-surface farm-to-market roads, but it seems highly improbable that a minimum salary of $1,800 for Alabama teachers is even conceivable during FOLSOM'S term as Governor. As for his plan to give everybody over 65 $40 a month at the outset, and $50 in two years, regardless of need, this is simply fantastic demagoguery. One of his appeals to the electorate evidently was to promise nearly everybody something, whether or not he could deliver on the promise.

It will be interesting, and a bit alarming, to watch the experiment in government upon which Alabama has embarked for the four years which begin in January. FOLSOM may turn out to be a "bust" as Governor; but then again he may prove to be a new power in Southern politics.

Folsom's June Race Majority Tops All Records In Alabama

advertiser

James E. Folsom's vote June 4 was the biggest ever received by a candidate for governor in the history of Alabama.

Although the exact official vote will not be known until the State committee meets and canvasses the returns, the count currently shows 201,688 votes for Folsom to 142,928 for Lt. Gov. Handy Ellis. 6-11-46

The previous record was established by W. W. Brandon in 1922, when he polled 163,217 votes to 44,151 for Bibb Braves. Although the total vote in succeeding elections has been much greater than in 1922, the Brandon-Graves race was so one-sided that up to now no candidate had ever received as many votes for Governor as Brandon did. He carried 66 of the 67 counties, and still holds the record in that respect and also in size of his majority over his opponent. Montgomery, Ala.

Folsom's election upheld two well-established traditions. First, the practice of electing a man who has been beaten once and tries again. Second, that in Alabama the office of lieutenant-governor, instead of being a stepping stone to the governor's chair, is actually a "jinx" to the man who holds it if he aspires to go higher.

For the past quarter of a century every governor but one has been beaten in his first try for the office. The tradition started in 1922, when Brandon, defeated in 1918 by Thomas E. Kilby, ran a second time and won. Graves, defeated by Brandon, was elected on his second attempt in 1926. B. M. Miller was elected in 1930 in his first race for Governor, though he had been defeated for a place on the Supreme Court four years before. Graves was elected a second time in 1934, defeating Frank Dixon, who came back to win in 1938. Chauncey Sparks, runner-up to Dixon, tried again in 1942 and won, with Folsom second man in the race.

Ellis was the third lieutenant-governor to run for Governor in the last 20 years, and the third to be defeated. The other two were Charles S. McDowell in 1926 and W. C. Davis in 1930. In all three races the lieutenant-governor looked like a winner at the start, but weakened in the home stretch. 6-11-46 - Jun.

That Alabama voters like a good loser was indicated in the recent race for lieutenant-governor as well as for Governor. J. C. Inzer, nominated for lieutenant-governor in a close race with Reuben L. Newton, was running his second time for the office, having been defeated in his first bid in 1942.

Big Jim Is A Strange One

Atlanta Constitution Ga.

CULLMAN, Ala.—"Big Jim" Folsom wanted to be Governor of Alabama the worst way possible, as we say down here.

Alabma wanted a new face.

Each got what it wanted. But neither knows yet what it got.

Other than seeing the show first hand, people here know little more about "Big Jim" as a prospective governor than folks elsewhere. It went on over and over—the ambling six-foot-eight figure who talked rambingly from the platform, an oversized Will Rogers without the deft and penetrating Rogers touch; the hillbilly band; the bucket that was passed around for campaign contributions; the mop that he flourished as a symbol that he intends to clean up the State Government.

"Big Jim" is equally unknowing about the job he assumes next Jan. 20, though he has set out to learn all he can. He has never held public office. The only other time he got elected was as a delegate to the 1944 Democratic Convention where he persisted, with one other Alabama delegate, in voting for Henry Wallace for the Vice Presidential nomination. The delegation bosses argued with him and damned him. And when he refused to budge, they said he'd never get any political office in Alabama. Sunday

BUT here he is.

He ran twice for Congress some years back against the late Rep. Henry B. Steagall, which was taking on quite a lot. He ran for Governor in 1942. It took two elections to give him the victory this year, the second a run-off.

He is the hero and the victim of one of those not infrequent revolutions peculiar to our politics. All sorts of folks voted for him, from CIO to Ku Kluxers, but mostly he appealed to the farmers, the dirt kind. People here who followed the campaign closely said it wouldn't have mattered what he stood for or what he talked about. A majority of Alabamians wanted a change. They were tired of the professionals. So they elected "Big Jim." 7-28-46

He likes to call himself "just a country boy" — and he is that. There's lots of "country" in him, which can be a healthy influence. There are shrewdness and common sense. And now that the campaign is over he is out of his truck clothes, and when he steps out of his big white house here, he is a handsome and personable fellow, looking like the cowboy actor leaving the movie set and his rope and chaps to go to his club in a sport roadster.

BUBBLING over in him is an infectious boyishness. He's surprised at what has happened, obviously a bit nervous about what's to come when he moves into the shabby Governor's Mansion in Montgomery.

He impresses you as soft clay as of this moment. He might easily become a harmless sort of Southern demagogue, not the ruthless Huey Long type, nor the devious Gene Talmadge type, nor the mean Bilbo type. There appeared no trace of any of that in this big, genial, friendly fellow who overflows with human kindness. 7-28-46

He might become a very effective fellow. He wants to be a good Governor for all the people of his State. He carries a mandate of a kind from the plain people and seems conscious of it. Though nobody seemed to pay much attention to it, he had a program that could carry this State forward in a progressive way if he can get any of it done—long needed revision of the State Constitution; reapportionment to give the city folks more representation in the Legislature; increased old-age assistance, tax reforms and abolition of the poll tax. In that respect his election was progressive in instinct, a popular revolution for a change in Alabama.

HIS CHIEF handicaps are lack of experience and a naivete about the processes of government. Much will depend on how well he can measure men and motives and what kind of advice he takes, and how well he can manage his Legislature. There are those ready to trip him, to use him, and they are clever and experienced.

Did you ever know a successful candidate for high office who could come to a meeting, announce to the audience that he had been up until 3 a. m. from campaign traveling and was too tired to speak, tell the folks that the band would play whatever tunes they wanted, excuse himself, then walk off the platform and go over and lie down under a tree and go to sleep?

Well, he did.

So maybe he can get away with it.

Alabamians Give Sparkman Lead In Senate Race

Atlanta Ga. Journal

BIRMINGHAM, July 31.—(AP)—Representative John Sparkman of Alabama, Democratic whip of the House, was within sight Wednesday of a primary election majority which would guarantee him the Senate seat of the late John H. Bankhead.

REP. SPARKMAN

Returns from 1,532 of 2,360 voting districts gave Sparkman 67,588 votes for the Democratic nomination to 67,943 for four others. Unless he could overtake their total in the counting which remained, he faced a runoff August 27 with State Senator James A. Simpson.

Simpson had 38,326, Representative Frank Boykin, 28,435, Ted Allen of Union Springs 764 and Thomas H. Maxwell of Tuscaloosa 418.

Sparkman had the support of the C. I. O.-P. A. C. and other elements of organized labor. But the ten-year veteran of Congress, himself the son of a tenant farmer, obtained his most whopping majorities Tuesday in rural areas.

Negroes voted throughout the state. The polls were opened to them in some counties for the first time to conform with a Supreme Court decree that they could not be barred because of their color. In other districts, they had voted for years.

The Arkansas Democratic Primary Tuesday, involving state offices only, resulted in an easy second term victory for Governor Ben Laney, who nearly doubled the combined vote of two opponents.

A World War II winner of the congressional medal was nominated by a similar margin for lieutenant governor. He is Nathan Gordon, 30 year old Morrilton lawyer and wartime aviator. Although it was his first political start, he finished far ahead of his nearest rival, Moy Milum, dean of the State Senate.

J. Oscar Humphrey rolled up a 3 to 1 victory over the total for two opponents to win renominaion as state auditor.

To test a new law which would exclude Negroes from voting for state officers, Arkansas held this primary separately from one July 16, when Congress nominees were chosen. Nevertheless some Negroes voted Tuesday without reported incident.

GOVERNOR OF ALABAMA

Birmingham News, Ala

To the Editor of The News:

Just ask your own self the question: Has Alabama ever had a real governor, so that every man, woman and child, white and black, could feel the touch from Montgomery in their homes, at the fireside and at the dinner table? And clothes for the body, real, necessary for the people? This is not hard to do. Just first get your plans made and get together with your Legislature and stay together, and the work you do can be felt by the people back home. Fri. 7-12-46

Franklin D. Roosevelt did this. Every white man, woman and child and every colored person, every tramp and cripple in the United States could feel and see what F. D. R. was doing for them.

Now the next governor of Alabama has a chance to do this very thing. Roosevelt did it by getting his plans before the Congress and staying with Congress. Folsom can do it by staying with his Legislature. He had a fine program of campaign plans and promises that he is surely duty-bound to fulfill. He can if he will, and every person in Alabama can feel and see him in their homes.

Don't just be a chair-warmer, paper and bill signer, run to Washington, vacation places and guest at big clubs, and try to live on the dignity and honor the office of governor gives him, but be governor.

The campaign promises made by Folsom must be carried out, or the people will demand a recall. The people, both union and non-union, who had not voted for some time elected Folsom. They are looking for results. They are looking for results. Folsom belongs to nobody but the people. They financed his campaign. He is tied to no corporation or faction, but he is tied to the public. The people have asked new and progressive reforms at Montgomery and have called on and elected a more youthful and modern man to do it. A change from the older to the younger. It is now up to Folsom and the people to back him up.

Warren Sweeps Calitornia; Folsom Wins in Alabama

Daily worker

New York, N. Y.

Labor-backed candidates won one victory in Tuesday's primaries but lost heavily in several other important contests.

In Alabama, James E. Folsom, supported by CIO-PAC, won the Democratic nomination for Governor against Lt. Gov. Handy Ellis in a run-off election. With 2,127 of the 2,344 districts counted, Folsom had 187,004 votes to 133,609 for Ellis.

But in California, Attorney General Robert W. Kenny, militant progressive and leader of the Democratic Party, lost both the Republican and Democratic gubernatorial nominations to Republican Gov. Earl Warren. Kenny had the backing of CIO-PAC and many AFL leaders. The State AFL backed Warren.

PATRICK LOSES

PAC-backed nominees for two Congressional seats, one in Alabama and one in New Jersey, were defeated. They were Rep. Luther Patrick in Alabama's fifth district, who was defeated in the run-off by Laurie C. Battle, a war veteran; and Walter J. Schaeffer, who contested Rep. Fred A. Hartley's Republican nomination in New Jersey's 10th Congressional district.

In California's Senate race, the incumbent, Sen. William Knowland, led by a wide margin in the GOP primary. In the Democratic primary, Will Rogers Jr. was way in the lead with about 40 percent of the precincts counted. Knowland was second and Ellis Patterson, progressive Congressman, was third. The state CIO favored both Patterson and Rogers.

Times.

It was not possible to determine yesterday whether Kenny's disastrous defeat indicated a general anti-Democratic reaction of voters to the Truman program that big business had succeeded, temporarily at least, in isolating labor politically.

Times.

SEE WARREN BOOM

Warren's victory started a boom for his nomination for President by the GOP in 1948.

Folsom's victory in Alabama was considered especially significant because he campaigned on an anti-polltax, pro-labor platform and gained heavy majorities in the rural areas of the state.

Other primary developments where labor took no position were:

● Alfred E. Driscoll defeated Harold G. Hoffman for the GOP nomination for Governor of New Jersey. There was no contest for the Democratic nomination, nor for the Senatorial nomination in either party. All Congressional incumbents were renamed.

● Sen. Dennis Chavez was slightly ahead of Gov. John J. Dempsey in the Democratic Senatorial contest in New Mexico. Labor favored either to oppose Maj. Gen. Patrick Hurley in the fall. Hurley had no opposition for the GOP nomination.

● Gov. O. M. Sharpe of South Dakota, Republican, was defeated for a third term by Attorney Gen. George T. Mickelson.

Truman Torpedoed Kenny, Bridges Says

Daily Worker Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Harry Bridges today placed the blame on President Truman for the defeat of Robert Kenny, candidate for Governor in the California primaries yesterday.

"We consider the loss of the elections by the Democratic slate a result of the President's attitude toward organized labor and his drastic proposals for anti-union legislation," Bridges said. "Under these circumstances, it was impossible to convince union members to work to get out the vote on election day for the Democratic slate."

Hats Off!

P.M. New York, N.Y.

Today's Hats Off must deal with one piece of good news and one piece of bad news. Our salutes are to the people of Montana and the people of Georgia. Both put up a good fight for better government. In Montana, they won with the primary defeat of isolationist Burton K. Wheeler by Lief Erikson. In Georgia they piled up a clear mandate in popular votes for the liberal candidate, James V. Carmichael, but are being cheated out of their democratic will by a feudalistic county-unit vote system which will make reactionary Gene Talmadge the new Governor, even though he ran second at the polls. OK, Montana, and God help Georgians.

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES

The Times-Union Jacksonville Fla.

"There's a third thing..."

Mr. Crump's men won easily in Tennessee, and would have even without benefit of Mr. Crump's personal possession—the Memphis vote. Renomination of Senator McKellar and Governor McCord by big majorities against all-out PAC-CIO opposition spells dark reaction in the Deep South to some observers, just as the Bilbo victory in Mississippi and the Talmadge one in Georgia do. Certainly some pretty dark reactionaries have won and are going to be in office. But I suspect that they will be having trouble with the very people who voted them in. For they have been voted in, not by reactionaries but by that vast unrepresented body of Southerners who know we can go ahead in these parts only in our own terms and that the progress offered us by the PAC, the Perpetual New Dealers, the controlled economic Federalists, and the uncomprehending outside reformers on the race question, won't work.

As between Pepperism and Bilbo, they choose Bilbo. But they don't like Bilbo. As between Arnall and Talmadge they vote Talmadge, but they hold their noses. As between Mr. Crump and the PAC-CIO, they are for Mr. Crump, but left alone they would be coming to a place where they would no longer endure his dictatorship. Having put down now the radicals who would go to the root of things and tear them out, I believe they may be trusted to make trouble for the reactionaries offered them as the only way to oust the others.

There is light in our Southern people. It is capable of advancing this region under its own kilowatts. Let's watch for it, and work for it!

Pat-worded, brilliant, sometimes penetrating, always interesting Time Magazine, which hates this part of the country without scruple or perspective, and goes out of character to indulge the hate, has noted the Monroe lynchings. Searching lustfully for words with which to damn 3,123,723 Georgians for the sin of 20, it hits upon these: "Gene Talmadge's campaign to be Governor of Georgia has ripped the thin gauze of decency from the body of his State. Last week the Nation saw the running sores beneath it." It is safe to say that 90 per cent of Georgians deplore the unconscionable murders at Monroe as much as Time says it does. Indicating a whole people dishonestly is all in the day's work for Time, if they are Southern people. In the same dishonesty a few months ago it enormously overstated the number of lynchings in the South, and after having the error pointed out to it and privately admitting the mistake, refused to make a public correction.

Nazis in the South

Times Dispatch-Richmond, Va.

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

Bilbo has been re-elected in Mississippi and now Talmadge has maneuvered into office via the infamous unit system. Bilbo's advocating that all red-blooded Anglo-Saxon citizens should do all that's within their power to keep Negroes from casting their votes, and Talmadge's declaring that the Negro "ought to learn only one thing—how to stand with his hat in his hand before white people and say, 'Yes, sir,' and 'No, sir'—makes me wonder why we ever declared war on the Nazis.

What is the difference between Hitler and these two Southern politicians? Both are advocating suppression of the minority race while the master race rules. (Hitler preferred plonds for his Aryan organization, while Bilbo and Talmadge will settle for the white race in theirs.) Aug 7-24-46

Why don't we purge these race agitators just as we did in Europe and the Far East? Why don't these two realize that reverting back to slavery will solve nothing? The solution comes through the education of the Negro by making him a useful, more intelligent citizen.

Already in Virginia some of the leading school systems are attaining those ends by equalizing educational opportunities for both races by having the salary scale the same for Negro and white teachers. Virginia must continue these progressive steps in order to lead her neighboring Southern States out of the dark ages. The most effective way to accomplish this is by turning up at the polls on election day and voting to keep the reactionary, Fascist tending politicians out of public office.

As for Georgia, the people of that State should demand that the unit system be abolished.

Bilbo, Talmadge and Wheeler

Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

To the Editor of The Courier-Journal:

Two out of three—lost! How we yearned for the back of barbarous Bilboism to be broken in the recent primary and for the Mississippi monstrosity to be liquidated politically. Yet "white supremacy" with its consequent intolerance, inhumanity, and un-Americanism was set forward by the renomination of one who ought to be barred from every public office higher than that of small-town dog catcher.

Again, the forces of right and progress have just suffered a heavy blow at the hands of Talmadge followers down in good old Georgia. That glow on the peaches is more than the sun-kissed normal red. It is the modest blush of shame at the nomination of Eugene Talmadge. After all, the vicious and heathen Ku Klux Klan will be revived, we fear, to militate in hooded secrecy against Negro, Catholic, and Jew. Surely, the unit system of nomination worked in reverse this time. Ellis Arnall's man was the popular choice, and that fact is the only hopeful element in the entire picture.

But a rank foe of international collaboration, the arch-isolationist Wheeler, has been buried for all time to come. His loss is a win for true statesmanship of the type now mandatory. Isolationists and reactionaries of the Old Guard must go forever as the ox cart has gone. One out of three! Tuesday

Why all the clap-trap about Gene Talmadge not getting a majority of all votes cast in the recent Georgia election? The President of the United States may be elected and still not get a majority of all votes cast. The county unit plan is the constitutional law in Georgia.

An Optimistic Negro Student

I read in The Courier-Journal of July 24 a letter headed "A Pessimistic Negro Student." My reply to the student is this. The note of despair in the letter would indicate her mind is in a groove. It is a pity, for there is a bright side if she cares to look at it.

I, too, am a Negro student (of the Bible) and a very optimistic one. I have lived in this world nearly 58 years. There were Bilbos and Talmadges before, and they will always be here. But over against them stand the John Browns and the Abe Lincolns, the editor of this paper and of The Louisville Times and many others who speak for the right, not because of race or creed, but for love of justice, God bless them!

You must know that the wheels of justice grind slow (as we count time) but they grind exceeding small. God sits on his throne. He can and He will deliver. Bilboism has no terror for those who wait on Him. Lift up your eyes unto the hills whence cometh your help. OPTIMISTIC.

A similarly hopeful letter was received from Dorothy Williams, Louisville.—(Editor.

A Pessimistic Negro Student

Courier-Journal

I am a Negro student and a very pessimistic one. After reading despairingly of the victories of the man Bilbo, and Talmadge by their wide usage of the argumentum ad populum, I cannot foresee the one world that Wendell Willkie wrote of, nor the coming world of peace that is supposedly in the process of materializing. I ask myself, why was World War II fought? Did members of my race merely lose their lives to preserve theories that are never put into practice? The war slogans of "winning the battle for peace and liberty," and the shining faces on posters and magazines of soldiers marching gallantly to death to keep something that exists only in the minds of a few, are to me simply symbols of fantastic prevarications.

I do not see even a dim light shining out of the darkness of chaos that is sweeping this country. With such deplorable men as the South is putting into office, there will be more of a disparity in the rate of development in our civilization than ever before, one section of the nation being bogged down in the muck and slough of ancient prejudices and customs that it refuses to dispense with. What is the value of educating the people to new ideas if they are not willing to accept them? What is the value of glorifying a group of democratic principles that are only pretentious myths? What are other nations to think when they look at the one that is to lead them? Louisville, Ky.

As a student and member of my race, all I am able to see is a reversion to a state of semi-barbarism, with Bilbo and Talmadge and others similar to them holding the reins of the Government. It will take more than an atomic bomb to shake this world out of its coma of prejudice and hate.

Sirs: Time New York, N.Y. 9-24

The reason why we people of the North are so vitally—and at times vociferously—interested in Southern elections is because we are a part of the United States, and we realize that a cancer anywhere in the country affects the health of the entire nation.

Especially is this true when the rights guaranteed by the Constitution to any race or religion are in jeopardy. We hope that our Southern friends will turn the white light of publicity upon the men whom we nominate for high offices in the Government and be as unsparing in their criticism—if it is deserved—as we have been of Bilbo. . .

. . . When are we going to get over being so "techy" about Yankee interference that we let it throw us completely off guard against our own little ignoramuses, who push their way up by inviting criticism and then shouting "Yankee interference"—who promote fear by shouting "white supremacy"?

I'm a Georgian and I know how Yankee criticism hurts. But if we ever hope to get away from it we've got to learn to think straight through it, and not let ignorant little men get our backs up. . . .

Talmadge, Hitler and Bilbo

The Courier Pittsburgh, Pa. Sat. 8-3-46

Issues raised in the campaigns of Theodore Bilbo in Mississippi and Eugene Talmadge in Georgia, coupled with the lynching of two men and their wives last week in Georgia, have a portent so clear and ominous that no American who loves this country and hopes for it to be a place where his children and his children's children can live in peace and happiness can afford to ignore it.

The American people as a whole should seriously consider what is happening to their Government.

Every public official in the United States, North and South, from the President to the lowliest justice of the peace, should alert himself and prepare to take action to see that such democracy as is left in this country should be preserved and extended.

The American people at present, by dint of circumstances fantastic to behold, are being led along the road which carried Germany to its doom.

Prejudice against Negroes and Jews in this country is winning to seats of power in the State and Federal Governments and is becoming official.

That is a terrifying fact.

Before Hitler, there was little actual prejudice against the Jews, and what there was lay dormant, too timid to show its face.

But Hitler and his gang gave this quiescent prejudice official recognition and prestige. It caused it to grow by forced feeding.

Hitler and his gang told the Germans they were a "master race," that it was their destiny to rule the world. In 1940, he proclaimed that he had brought a new order to Europe, an order which would last a thousand years.

Today, Hitler is gone. Twenty-two of his confederates, tried by their conquerors, contemplate death by noose or firing squad. Germany is dismembered and ruined. The world rose in wrath against her, her leadership and her master race ideology.

What is the lesson for America?

First, it must be admitted that there IS race prejudice in the United States, that many Americans carry such poison in their system, and that they are not quiet and inactive about it. That does not have to be proved here.

What is more significant is that, in the face of this active, existing prejudice, there are men aspiring to public office, just as Hitler did, who use racial hate as a means.

They are giving the abundant race hatred already in the United States the kind of prestige and official recognition which Hitler gave to prejudice against the Jews in Germany, a prejudice which was slight in comparison.

Nevertheless, it was possible to intoxicate the German people and commit the nation to suicide.

Bilbo in the United States Senate is a part of the Federal Government. He is the colleague and partner of such men as W. Lee O'Daniel, of Eastland, of McKellar, of Connally, of Russell. These men, occupying key spots in the Senate, wield great and decisive power, as do their colleagues in the House of Representatives.

Talmadge, if finally elected Governor of Georgia, will have the power to influence the thought and actions of the people of a large State, just as Hitler did. Last week, in the wake of his demagogic appeals to prejudice, to his championing of "white supremacy," four Negroes were murdered.

Two American Hitlers, Talmadge and Bilbo, have taken over two American States.

Let it not be said that these two men, because of their crude antics, can be ignored. Hitler was but a sort of crack pot sign painter, but he carried a nation to its doom.

Talmadge and Bilbo are shrewd, cunning men. They are master brewers of the stuff they drink and serve their ready followers. It is the stuff that makes men mad.

The Pittsburgh Courier addresses a warning to all Americans to rally, not to protect Negroes as such, but to save the Nation. Sinister forces are loose and growing which bode evil and destruction. The Talmadges, the Bilbos, and what they represent, must be tackled and smashed now.

President Truman has been busily engaged in an effort to save the OPA. Talmadge and Bilbo challenge him to do something to save the Nation. There are millions of Americans who will follow him if he will chose the right road instead of allowing the Army to put up signs, "No Americans (Negroes) Wanted."

Hitler and his gang dealt around old Von Hindenburg. We hope the President will not permit Hitler's counterparts in this country to deal around him.

There is no time to waste.

CONDOLENCES TO THE STATE OF GEORGIA on the untimely resurrection of Eugene Talmadge. After four years of Ellis Arnall's enlightened administration in Atlanta, it would be hard in any circumstances for Georgians to face a return to the spoils system in government, ranting chauvinism in public life, sinking standards in boss-controlled schools, and all the other blessings peculiar to the Talmadge-Bilbo brand of demagogy. It is particularly hard to face this prospect in the knowledge that a majority of Georgians want no part of it and voted against it by a margin of more than 70,000. Talmadge owes his election to two known factors. The first is Georgia's county-unit electoral system, whereby one vote in Chatahoochee County is the equivalent of twenty votes in Atlanta. This rotten-borough mechanism goes far to explain Talmadge's victory over James V. Carmichael, who was Governor Arnall's choice as a successor, but it does not go far enough. Four years ago Arnall won despite the county-unit system and without the 100,000 Negro votes that supposedly went to Carmichael.

The Nation 7-27-46

New York, N.Y.

THE KEY TO TALMADGE'S SUCCESS WAS the intrusion of a third candidate—former Governor Rivers. There is reason to believe that the Rivers campaign was financed by the same Georgia Light and Power gang that backed Talmadge, in a deliberate and successful attempt to cut into the Carmichael vote in doubtful counties. By subtracting the 100,000 Negro votes from the Carmichael total it would appear that a majority of 30,000 white Georgians voted for Talmadge, but here a third factor—necessarily unproved but reliably credited—must be taken into account: namely, that the full Negro vote did not in reality go to Carmichael. A number of these ballots are believed to have been bought for Talmadge, a substantial number captured by intimidation, and an unknown percentage simply stolen. If such explanations, however valid, are small comfort, there is at least the reassuring fact that a majority of Georgians did vote against Talmadge. They are not likely to allow archaic electoral machinery to prolong minority rule indefinitely.

New Republic 7-29-46

The old political axiom in Georgia—that "you can't beat Gene in a three-cornered race"—was never more forcibly or more sadly proved than in last week's Democratic primary in that state, when bigoted, explosive Eugene Talmadge was returned to the capital for his fourth term as Governor. Pledged to plunge the state into an era of unprecedented election lawlessness (he pitched his campaign on the promise to restore the Supreme Court-voided "white primary" by repealing all state primary laws, leaving it to be regulated only by whims of the Governor and the Democratic Party), red-gallused Talmadge will return to the executive post in the wake of able, progressive Ellis Arnall, who backed Talmadge's chief opponent, 36-year-old James V. Carmichael. E. D. Rivers, also a former Governor, was the third contender and, with the anachronistic county-unit system under which Georgia's elections are held, the key to Talmadge's success in that he split Carmichael's vote.

New York, N.Y.

The irony of the election was that a majority of the voters did not want race-baiting Gene Talmadge again. Returns from 153 of the 159 counties gave Carmichael 310,906 votes, the biggest popular ballot ever given a gubernatorial candidate in Georgia. But his support was centered in the larger cities and his unit vote was held to 148. Talmadge, on the other hand, had only 299,936 votes, representing majorities in 105 counties with 242 unit votes. Only 206 are required to carry an election. Rivers had 67,409 votes, and a unit-vote count of 20. The balloting was the the heaviest in Georgia's history. More than 100,000 votes were cast by Negroes, far more than in any other Southern primary.

The victory for Talmadge was carefully planned, by the Georgia Power Company, big textile mills and the railroads—paradoxically enough, all owned or controlled by Talmadge-baited "Yankees." The Georgia Power Company, probably the most potent influence in Georgia politics, supported both Talmadge and Rivers. Talmadge's victory was sought by the power company because it has never liked the way Arnall has refused to take its orders, and the textile mills fear success by the drive to organize labor in the South. Talmadge, viciously anti-labor, can reasonably be expected to support their interests.

Only two hopes remain this week that Talmadge and minority rule might somehow be denied supremacy in Georgia. An FBI probe of complaints that Talmadge forces intimidated Negroes and made fraudulent use of marked ballots in a number of counties might possibly result in voiding his election. The other [illegible] pinned on the possibility that Arnall supporters might induce a liberal to run in November, when the unit system will not apply, as an independent. This persistent rumor had not crystallized early this week. It was not likely, however, that Carmichael himself would enter the general election, since he indorsed Georgia, policemen, on your toes!

Sometime during the next two weeks I will attempt to force entry into the courthouse of your city.

I bought a skeleton key and a jimmy today. Also, a pair of rubber-soled shoes.

I am now busy arranging an alibi.

Once in the courthouse, I will tip-toe to the room where the records are kept. And once in the record rooms, I will seek the file that holds the birth certificates.

I will turn to the folder that contains the records of those whose name begin with "McL." From the folder I will take out the sheet that records the information that, on Dec. 2, 1906, a son was born to J. S. and Minnie McLemore.

I'll tear it up, right there. I'll tear it into small pieces and then grind it under the heels of my rubber-soled shoes.

Why? You know. You must know.

A Man Without A State

Atl. 7-26-46

Now that Georgia has once again seen fit to place Eugene Talmadge in the governor's chair, I don't want to be associated with the state.

This is not an easy thing to say. You don't pull up 39-year-old roots from red clay without a struggle. For Georgians who might consider this treason, let me say this: My forefathers wore the gray of Georgia when the shooting was tough; they hid their Community Plate when Sherman rode down Peachtree Street; Ty Cobb was, and still is, the greatest baseball player of all time, and I'll fight Byron Nelson, Ben Hogan, and Lloyd Mangrum if they ever try to tell me that they could beat Robert Tyre Jones of Georgia when he was in his prime.

But now I must seek another State to claim as the place of my birth.

I must find not only another State, but another town, another shady street, another old frame house with a porch with rockers and a swing.

Lawdy, what a nice state to have to give up!

And what a nice State to be governed by Eugene Talmadge!

The things he stands for, the words he has said, make him undesirable as a citizen of Georgia, much less the leader of one of the 13 original States. Talmadge, he of the red suspenders and the "chaw" of tobacco, was chosen on a platform that violated every principle of a man named Abraham Lincoln; a platform that outraged every motive that caused Georgia boys to walk to the enlisting office and offer their service to the country in World War II.

Mississippi Bids Rejected

A man who makes his living as I do, as a minor humorist, could come very close to being funny about the election of Talmadge. He could say that the laundry business in Georgia is in for a whale of a boom, what with the extra business it'll get doing flat work—sheets and pillow . . . slips. He could work in a few jokes about mama telling junior how papa had insured his (junior's) future by getting the contract to supply clay for chinking cabins, and arranging to supply the State with the lumber for chain gang sweat boxes.

But this is the time for tears, not laughter. Fri. 7-26-46

Georgia, originally founded as a refuge for the oppressed, has struck a 1946 blow against the oppressed. It has chosen to remain a State bounded on the North by Tennessee and North Carolina, on the East by South Carolina and the Atlantic Ocean, on the South by Florida, on the West by Alabama, and, on, all sides, by intolerance and bigotry.

What State will take me? By the way, Mississippi, you needn't answer.

Talmadge And Hitler

Birmingham Ala.

ATLANTA—The most Hitleresque governor since Huey Long is back in power in Georgia.

Ole Gene Talmadge, for three terms virtual dictator of Georgia, is now in the saddle again, looking a little thinner, a little older, but still snapping his red galluses, still able to grandstand his way into the hearts of the rural voters. Wed. 7-24-46

He has come back to power with all the earmarks of a Hitlerian victory. In fact, the Georgia election, carefully examined, looks like the most alarming political development in the nation.

In the first place, Talmadge, like Hitler, was elected by a minority of the voters. His opponent, James Carmichael, rolled up a clear majority, but under Georgia's peculiar unit rule Talmadge won.

Like Hitler also, Talmadge has a great radio technique. Carmichael had none. A total of 125 Georgia newspapers were against Talmadge, while only seven were for him. But his radio appeal won out in the end.

And just as big business in Germany put up the money to finance Hitler, so the Georgia Power Company and big business generally backed Talmadge. Worried over the CIO drive to organize the South, they knew Talmadge would be anti-labor, keep down taxes, play ball with big business. As governor before, he had put textile strikers behind a barbed-wire concentration camp and, if necessary, they expect him to do it again.

Now that they have elected their "Cracker dictator," however, some business men are already worried for fear they have a bear by the tail. Perhaps they remember how the Thyssens and the Von Schroeders and other German industrialists were kicked out by Hitler shortly after they had financed his way to power.

Talmadge's biggest break came when the Supreme Court handed down its ruling against the Jim Crow law in interstate bus traffic. This played right into the hands of the rootin'-tootin' gentleman from Sugar Creek. From that point on he ran his campaign on the theme of white supremacy.

"A nigger's place is to come in the back door, hold his hat in his hand and say 'gee' and 'haw' to a horse," proclaimed red-gallused Gene. Wed. 7-24-46

Talmadge boasts of having read "Mein Kampf" seven times.

He makes no secret of being a student of Hitlerian methods. During his previous "reigns" as governor, Talmadge called out the militia 10 different times. For a while no one could get into the Highway Department without a military pass. Talmadge's chief use of the militia was to oust elected officials. It made no difference that the state treasurer had been duly elected by the people of Georgia, Talmadge called out the military and forcibly evicted him from office. When the treasurer locked the vault where state money was kept, Talmadge blew the door off the vault. For a while Talmadge spent the state's funds on a cash basis, with no record of expenditures. He employed an ex-racketeer to inspect the books of the universities, and if he didn't like them they were burned.

Greatest Hitlerian threat to Georgia's future political system is Talmadge's new plan for abolishing state primaries. Most people haven't examined this scheme carefully. On the surface, many are inclined to welcome it as a move to take the vote away from the Negro.

Instead of a primary vote supervised and policed by the state, Talmadge plans to run a private primary policed by his own political organization. In other words, the Democratic party would become a private club—in this case the Talmadge club. He would name his own state Democratic executive committee. It would make all the rules governing elections, would specify who was qualified to vote, could abolish all criminal laws governing elections, do away with all rules against fraud.

There would be no control over the ballot boxes, over the counting of the votes, or anything else—except the control laid down by Gene Talmadge. Under such a plan the new governor of Georgia plans to have "free" elections. Wed. 7-24-46

In other words, like Hitler, once Talmadge gets into power no opposition party could ever stop him. No better pattern for fascism ever was devised in the U. S. A.

And yet Talmadge is elected to office, by a minority vote!

Ol' Gene And Young Herman

News-Age-Herald Birmingham Ala.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24—There are wistful hopes outside of Georgia that the fight on Eugene Talmadge is not over, that the Supreme Court or an independent opponent may still keep him out of the Georgia governor's mansion. Even those Georgians who most bitterly detest Talmadge and everything he stands for do not share these hopes. But because of the county unit system of voting, peculiar to Georgia, Talmadge will be governor for four long years, despite the fact that a movement is now under way in Georgia to test the constitutionality of the county unit system before the United States Supreme Court.

If it finds the system unconstitutional (which is by no means certain), Talmadge would still retain the governorship unless a special election were ordered, a most unusual step. And even if such an election were ordered, knowledgeable observers in Georgia are certain that Talmadge would win a majority of the popular vote. They believe that the Negroes would be prevented from voting, that most of the white vote that went to former Gov. Rivers would swing to Talmadge, and that the result would be a smashing victory for "ol' Gene." Sun. 8-25-46

UNAPPETIZING AS THE prospect of the next four years is to many Georgians, even more disagreeable is the considerable possibility that Georgia may be in for an interminable Talmadge dynasty. It is sadly expected that the next candidate of the Talmadge forces, in 1950, will be Gene's son, Herman.

Neither Talmadge should be underestimated. Eugene is a highly intelligent man. He is well educated (he holds a Phi Beta Kappa key), despite the hayseed act he puts on, and he is an exceedingly shrewd lawyer and politician. Son Herman is reputed to be at least equally smart, and maybe a bit more so. He is a vigorous youth and has a respectable war record. On the radio his voice is wholly undisguishable from his pappy's famous screech.

Yet if the melancholy fears of some acute observers of Georgia politics are fulfilled, there will be no need for Herman to rely exclusively on his war record, the Talmadge voice or the Talmadge name. These observers fear that Gene Talmadge has both the means and the intention of establishing a statewide political machine as well-oiled and as closely controlled as Huey Long's ever was.

TO ACHIEVE THIS END, Talmadge intends that one representative of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation, with an assistant, be sent to each one of Georgia's 149 counties, to assist the local sheriffs in their arduous duties. These men would be under the control of Talmadge, and it is expected that during lulls between crime waves they would not be idle. It is certainly possible that they may form the basic network of a statewide political machine, with overtones of political espionage. A Georgia governor cannot succeed himself, but young Herman may well find his father's crime-prevention officers useful. The prospect of the two Talmadges playing a game of political leapfrog with each other, alternating in successive terms, is hardly a pleasant one.

All this has been intensely discouraging to those in Georgia who have for years fought everything Talmadge stands for. Yet it is a serious error, often made by non-Southerners, to underestimate the strength of the opposition to Talmadge and Talmadgism in Georgia and throughout the South. When Talmadge becomes governor, Northerners will be increasingly inclined to think of Georgia and Talmadge as synonymous, forgetting that in Ellis Arnall the citizens of Georgia elected one of the best and most progressive governors in the country, and that all qualified observers are certain that if Arnall could have run to succeed himself he would easily have defeated Talmadge.—©.

Talmadge Wins By a Minority

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

Aug 7-19-46

James V. Carmichael received the highest number of votes. But Eugene Talmadge was nominated yesterday which means elected, Governor of State of Georgia on the Democratic ticket.

With 80 percent of the state's precincts reporting, Carmichael had 245,730 votes while Talmadge received 222,041 and Rivers trailed with 45,082.

Here's how "democratic" elections are determined in Georgia primaries. Results are based on county unit votes. Each county, ports, Fulton County, which includes most of Atlanta, gave Carmichael 53,882 votes and 19,521 for Talmadge—a plurality of 34,301 votes for the candidate supported by outgoing liberal Gov. Ellis Arnall. The three tiny counties of Montgomery, Madison and Lee cast a total of 2,015 votes for Talmadge and 1,090 for Carmichael—a plurality of 925 for Talmadge. Yet the three small counties each with two unit votes nullified Fulton County's entire vote.

At press time Secretary of State Byrnes had not yet threatened to block credits to Georgia or to call the Congress without Georgia because it makes a mockery of democracy.

Upon his election Talmadge immediately assailed "alien influences" and "Communist doctrine," foreshadowing attempts to sabotage Operation Dixie, the CIO organization drive in the South.

Another result of the unit system was the apparent defeat of liberal Mrs. Helen Douglas Mankin, representative from the Fifth District. She led in popular votes, and lost out in unit votes.

At press time Sen. Byrnes vies with Sen. Talmadge tried to purge the dishonored Negro-University of the Congress without Georgia because of being the most rabid Negro-hater in the country. As a Governor once before, the red galluss Talmadge tried to purge the State even faintly supported the Constitution.

A Setback To Democracy

Atlanta Daily World

The apparent selection of Ex-Gov. Eugene Talmadge over Atty. James V. Carmichael for the governorship in Wednesday's Democratic primary, which is tantamount to election in our state, comes as a surprise and to some extent a disappointment to Negroes in view of the fact that "white supremacy" was the principal issue in the successful candidate's platform. Atlanta Ga.

Under the county unit system which prevails in the selection of the governor in the primary election, it appears that Mr. Talmadge is the winner, not withstanding the fact that so far he has received a smaller popular vote than his main opponent, Mr. Carmichael.

We consider the result of the primary a setback to the cause of democratic government.

It reveals clearly to what extent the passion of racial prejudice can be inflamed. We believe the race issue was the deciding factor. Fri. 7-19-46

There can be no mistake of the fact that both leading candidates made their positions clear.

The irony of the results of the election is that Mr. Talmadge carried practically all of the counties in the southern part of the state where the Negro should be politically the stronger. It seems that out of a lack of education or fear the Negro in South Georgia does not realize his power and responsibility to his state and race.

But we believe the shock of the result of the election will wake them up as never before. The Negro in Georgia and the South generally is up against a real, and not theoretical, situation. He must adopt more real and practical methods of exercising his political strength. We believe even the masses of people NOW are aware of this fact.

Wednesday's election must prove a stimulant and not a deterrent to our fight for our race's right to vote without fear or intimidation.

We are gratified over the enthusiasm displayed by our people as a whole in the balloting. Our estimate is that the great majority of those who were qualified took the time necessary to cast their ballots. And what is more important, they voted their honest conviction for the candidate whom they believed would represent good government.

For instance, at one practically all-Negro Atlanta precinct, Mr. Carmichael received 4,550 votes to Mr. Talmadge's four. In Columbus, the Negro precincts did not give the successful nominee a single vote. Fri. 7-19-46

Notwithstanding the results of the election, it was a great victory for the Negro. An estimated one hundred thousand of them voted in the state primary for the first time. The result of this experience added to the outcome of the election will make them more appreciative of the important right of the franchise.

Time will show that Democracy has suffered only a temporary setback.

Most Interesting Election Day Yet

Atlanta, Ga. Fri. 7-19-46

Well, at this writing (Thursday morning), it seems pretty certain that our choice in the gubernatorial stakes was beaten. Mathematically, the finish could change. But it would be a miracle and the odds are just about hopeless.

Well, if there was no element of chance, either in politics or hoss racing, there'd be no fun in either.

It is up to all the folks who didn't vote for Talmadge to accept the outcome in good grace and to continue working for, and hoping for, the advancement of Georgia.

Our Day Was Quiet

Personally, the day was a quiet one. Everyone eligible to do so, in our families, voted.

The top lady and I went to the courthouse in Decatur a little before 10 Wednesday morning. The lines of waiting voters extended all down the stairs from the second floor and halfway along the downstairs hall at that time. It took us about 30 minutes to wait our turn, get our ballots, mark 'em, put 'em in the box and leave.

I should guess there were about a score of Negroes in line. While we were there they were allotted a separate line from the white voters. There was, of course, no reason for anything unpleasant and there was none. Everybody moved quietly and orderly along and that was that.

The top lady and I did not mark our ballots identically. On the main race, yes, but there was a slight divergence otherwise.

In the evening, at home, we listened to the radio reports. The younger members wanted to make something of a party of the occasion, so we procured a large, cold watermelon and interrupted our report-listening to enjoy it.

About midnight I went to bed and to sleep, disappointed, I'll admit, at the way the reports were running, but knowing I could do nothing about it, anyway.

Poor Night

My night was poor. Some folks seemed to have the idea I'd be up and around all night. The telephone kept ringing. Each time I'd manage to get to sleep, that phone bell would awaken me. Some sought reassurance that there was still a chance for Carmichael. Others wanted to crow over the apparent victory of their man Talmadge. I couldn't help either side. I'm afraid, around 3 o'clock, I may have sounded a trifle impatient to some of my callers. If so, I apologize and hope they understand it was nothing but the inevitable irritability of a man needlessly disturbed from his sleep. 7-19-46 Fri.

Now it is Thursday forenoon.

Probably the primary result has nothing to do with it, but there is no sunshine at the moment. It is raining. Not heavily; the men are continuing work on the new building across the street.

Will Go On

Perhaps that is significant; the work goes on. Georgians always get very excited about their politics. Perhaps too excited.

Yet it seemed to me, and still does, that the issues in the recent campaign were of fundamental importance. Personally, I was fearful—and still am—of what may happen with Talmadge again Governor. His past record in that office, to my mind, is good ground for such fear.

Yet it may turn out differently. It is well within the cards that an older Gene will be more stable, emotionally. It may be the years have mellowed him and he will be content to act quietly and steadily in manner which will reflect only good on the name of his State.

Anyway, I am sure the Carmichael supporters will be—when the last mathematical hope of victory is gone—good losers. They were good, clean campaigners and of such are good losers made. I expect, by the time you see this, they will have accepted the verdict which now appears inevitable.

It is the verdict of the people of Georgia, freely given. As such, all good Georgians must accept it.

There should be comfort for Jimmie Carmichael in the knowledge he led the field in popular vote. In any other State he would already be the victor.

But he entered the race knowing the county unit vote system prevails in Georgia and ran on that basis. The unit vote system is, in many respects, a good system. It may appear unfair when the candidate with substantial majority in popular vote is still the loser.

But there is nothing unfair about any competition when all entrants know and accept the rules governing when they enter the contest. Be it politics, business or sports event.

Now, let's all pull together to move Georgia nearer the wonderful future which can be hers if her people prove worthy.

Well, I'll Tell You

Atlanta, Ga. Fri. 7-19-46

Since I was in there with my coat off swinging as hard as I could, it is but natural, I suppose, there are those who wonder how the results of the primary of July 17 affected me.

I do not mean those characters with mean, festering little minds who call up to say obscene things, but those on the other side who were in there swinging, too. They won. And they would like to know how it went with me.

It went hard.

It made me feel pretty sick.

It was a bitter pill to swallow. There was very little sugar, if any, on it. At least I didn't taste any as the pill went down.

I don't like to lose. I don't guess anyone does. Losing goes awfully hard with me. But I was on the losing side. I did all I could. It wasn't enough. And that's how I felt. I hope that covers it.

Mr. Eugene Talmadge said he wants to be a good Governor. That was my ticket. I hope he will be. I won't do anything in opposition to that platform.

So much for that.

Decision

I would be less than honest if I did not say, in this recapitulation, that I believe the issue which gave Mr. Talmadge his victory was presented in a manner which deceived the people.

There never was any deep, dark racial plot. There was no one advocating, or wanting to advocate, mixing races. There would not have been any attempt to mix the races in schools, to propose any equality save equality of opportunity, education and equality before the law.

Nevertheless, many normally common-sense persons, largely in South Georgia, where most of the Negro population is, were made afraid. They didn't really believe the awful picture presented them, but they were uncertain and fearful and they took no chances.

Tensions and fears do no State anything but harm, and I would not hesitate to make the same choice over again.

I hope they can be allayed. None can say the voting was anything but orderly.

Explanation As to why Mr. Talmadge was able to win so definite a victory, the chief reason has been advanced above. The people were made afraid of the Negro issue.

That is 98 percent of the explanation.

Ed Rivers had the most positive, but somewhat extravagant, platform. James Carmichael had an excellent one and a sound one. But Mr. Talmadge talked only one issue.

Another factor was Roy Harris. Those who have followed these pieces of mine know that often in the past I have expressed lavish praise of Roy Harris' ability as a behind-the-scenes manager of a political campaign. There isn't one as good as he in Georgia. I have never believed he would make a good candidate. But if I were a political candidate in Georgia I'd want him in my corner if I wanted to win and you may put it down he was very useful indeed in handling things. The technique of election-night stampedes is his specialty. He is a very handy person to have around. I thought, too, that Herman Talmadge handled the general aspects of the campaign for the winner with an expert hand.

The Rivers campaign simply never got off the ground.

It was a bitter and hard-fought campaign. It should have been. There was bitterness and hard blows on each side and I would think everyone knows that. That seems to be the sort of campaigns we have in Georgia. I noted that Herman Talmadge mentioned the prejudice injected by the other side. That's all right. He won. It was about even-Stephen.

It will be a great tragedy if the winner goes through with his announced plan to abolish all the primary election laws. Let us hope that calmer reason will prevail.

The county-unit system is sure to be largely discussed. It is probable Carmichael will poll about 40,000 more votes than his opponent and yet lose by a big margin.

That's about it.

As a Democrat, I did all I could in a Democratic primary and lost. I am still a Democrat.

Progress in Georgia

The Courier Pittsburgh, Pa. Sat. 7-27-46

A wave of regret swept over the Nation last week when returns from the primary elections in Georgia showed that former Governor Eugene Talmadge had won what amounts to election in that State and would be the next occupant of Georgia's Executive Mansion.

Talmadge represents all that is worst in Georgia and many fear that his election may be the signal for a wave of racial bigotry and violence unparalleled in recent times.

It has been reported that already some few Negroes have declared their intention to leave the State at the earliest opportunity for safer soil.

We do not believe there is any cause for apprehension or pessimism if the reports emanating from Georgia are true.

In the first place, more than 100,000 Negro citizens participated in the Democratic primary for the first time in some generations.

In the second place, there was none of the violence which had been almost hopefully predicted by certain professional agitators.

In the third place, while Talmadge won on the basis of the county unit system, he actually received much less than HALF of the popular vote.

Inasmuch as the primary contest was fought on the straight issue of white supremacy, the election must be regarded as a defeat for that issue, else it would have won the bulk of the popular vote.

On the evidence, it would seem that there has been vast improvement in civilization in the Empire State of the South, and for that, all of us should be thankful.

Contrary to the representations of certain elements which love to dwell upon the alleged fear and frustration of Negroes in Georgia and elsewhere in the South, the colored folk eligible to vote turned out more than 100,000 strong without any evidence of fear.

Talmadge just slipped in by a narrow margin and when he goes out four years hence, that will be the last of his type in Georgia.

TALMADGE AGAIN

The Chronicle Detroit, Michigan Sat. 7-27-46

When Governor Talmadge takes office, the good citizens of Georgia will find themselves governed by a man whom the majority of them voted against. Those who are always harping about majority rule in cases involving Negroes should take note of the election system of Georgia. If, however, you should subtract the Negro votes which were cast for James Carmichael, Talmadge's chief opponent in the primary, it becomes clear that the majority of white voters in the state did favor Talmadge.

Like Bilbo, Talmadge campaigned on a clear cut white supremacy platform and the "wool-hat" boys took advantage of their well advertised "last chance to save Georgia for the white folks." The only consolation that we can find in the election is that thousands of Negroes for the first time voted in the state's Democratic primary without having to suffer violence. Progress is slow anywhere but it is slower in Mississippi and Georgia than anywhere else.

While it is always inspiring to look on the sunny side of the street, we have got to look the facts full in the face. After the comparatively sane administration of Governor Ellis Arnall, Georgia has deliberately chosen to return to the past and it is an ugly past. The further you go back, the uglier it gets. Only time will tell whether any of the good works of Governor Arnall will be allowed to stand.

The election of Talmadge on a white-supremacy platform to a four-year term is bad news for the nation as well as Georgia. He sought and got the support of the revived Ku Klux Klan and if he runs true to form, the future of the Klan in Georgia, at least, must be considered bright. Wickedness in one individual can be a terrible thing but when wickedness is organized and becomes the goal and purpose of great groups of individuals then there are no limits to the terror which may be expected.

The victory of Talmadge thus would not be so unpardonable if it did not mean a victory for the Ku Klux Klan also. With Bilbo, Rankin, and Talmadge in the saddle once more, the liberal white Southerners are going to be pressed to the wall and the Southern Negro who dares to raise his head will do so at the risk of life. Judging from the temper of some of the Negro leaders of the South, it is going to take mob violence to restrain them from moving toward full citizenship.

A flourishing Klan in the state of Georgia will

The Tribune Scranton, Pa. Sun. 7-27-46

TALMADGE VS DEMOCRACY

Mr. Talmadge does not hide his aversion to Negroes' participation in government even on the simplest level. He does not want them to vote because he knows the value of the ballot. He knows that the right to vote means the right to hold office, and he doesn't want Negroes to hold office. He lets his imagination get away with him and pictures all sorts of dire things to happen. He takes advantage of the average white person to whom he magnifies the advantages which will come to Negroes. He promises evil things to come in Georgia because Negroes are prepared to exercise a right which their citizenship under the constitution entitles them to, and which the South has persistently denied to them. Mr. Talmadge's attitude towards Negroes provokes the question as to just what Mr Talmadge would do as citizens. Would he have them, 1,840,000 strong remain apathetic about their citizenship, indifferent as to their welfare and be content to remain a parasite to the state's social, economic and cultural life? If Mr. Talmadge's desires are supported by the people of Georgia, there will be little hope that Georgia will be able to drag itself out of bottom position among the rest of the states in the country. Of course Mississippi with its triumvirate, Bilbo, Rankin, and Eastland, is lower down. Mr. Talmadge pledges to maintain Southern traditions, but he can not do both, maintain Southern traditions and maintain democracy, because most of the items of Southern tradition are not miscible with democracy. One or the other will have to be sacrificed. Inconsistently enough the traditions of the South, as they relate to Negroes, were taken along with them to the battle fronts of the recent war that was an armed crusade in the name of democracy. It injected itself into the affairs of other countries, Africa, Italy, France and England whose people knew nothing of Southern traditions. Various instances of assault upon Negro soldiers who were in the company of women of other countries, are cases in point. In spite of protestations of democracy and friendship for Negroes their political future in Georgia is far from reassuring.

Difficult To Understand

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga.

Editor Constitution: Georgia has elected to follow the leadership of a man, who by his actions, placed himself in the same category as the dictators we so recently condemned. It is difficult to understand how a freedom-loving people failed to grasp the opportunity to forever banish the influence of Eugene Talmadge from state government.

As a native and resident of Georgia, I am sincerely sorry that our position as the laughingstock of a nation will no longer be vacated. The presence of this advocator of hatred and racial prejudice in the Governor's mansion precludes the possibility of a government tolerable to an intelligent people. Wed. 7-24-46

Need for Education

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga

Editor Constitution: Talmadge did win his election on the Negro question alone. It was of course entirely false. I do not think that the papers on our side published enough facts regarding this to really carry across. The eligible white voters are about eight to one to the eligible Negroes. There is only one county in the State, Long, where the registered Negroes could outnumber the whites. If ever the Negroes should control our elections, it would be simply because not enough of us white voters voted. Thur. 7-25-46

It seems to me that the great result of the election is that Georgia needs education badly. We have sunk to the level of Mississippi.

One of the syndicated editors, called columnists, who reflects the sentiment of the Harlemites, says that in Georgia 125 newspapers supported Mr. Carmichael for the nomination for governor in the recent primary and that only seven supported Mr. Talmadge; from which the conclusion follows that The Savannah Morning News alone was able to choke off the brilliant efforts of at least 30 or 40 gazettes in Georgia. Foolish Citizens, Silly Scribe

The News and Courier Charleston, S.C. Fri. 7-26-46

Those violent citizens of a village in Georgia who threatened a poor old editor because he wrote in his gazette that "in country counties ignorance and prejudice rule and there is a negro problem but in the cities where education and enlightenment reign Carmichael piled up a huge vote" ought to be ashamed of themselves. The behavior of these citizens was of the kind that might be expected from pickets in Detroit. What the old editor said was silly. Education and enlightenment are distributed in about equal ratio in the country and in the cities, but in the cities roughnecks and semi-imbeciles are more easily herded than in the country. The reporter now writing has "covered stories" of political meetings, in great cities, attended by 5,000 or 10,000 people, and they applauded speakers whose statements were of an ignorance pathetic. Once he heard, in a Northern city, a great mass of people yell with delight when the politician praised Jackson who "stood like a stone wall" Both the audience and the orator thought the allusion was to President Jackson, "Old Hickory". At that time it was a sin in a Northern city to pay tribute to General Thomas J. Jackson. In the cities, the specialists in professions and trades dwell, and so do numbers of minds narrower than the average mind in the rural districts.

White Man's State

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga

Editor Constitution: If Gene Talmadge and those who "elected" him want a "white man's state," as advertised, perhaps they would prefer that all others vacate in order that they may have the State and its work to themselves.

There is a great deal of room in some parts of the country, particularly the West, where comparatively few Negroes now reside, and where they would at least be permitted to express their political preferences through free exercise of the franchise. Tues. 7-23-46

This statement could not be construed as exactly constituting "outside interference" in Georgia's local affairs, since the writer has spent some time in the State in the past, and does not believe it deserves to have Talmadge happen to it. 7-23-46 A. G. ADAMS.

Sympathy

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga

Editor Constitution: We would like to put in a word of sympathy for the people of Georgia. Our sympathy comes from the fact that more of the people of the State did not have the opportunity to see Germany after its defeat, as we did. Had they, we feel quite sure that the election of Eugene Talmadge would have been impossible. Those people thrived on racial hatred and intolerance, the very issues that elected Mr. Talmadge. By this election, this State has proven itself to be on the same level with that of Mississippi—in fact, we believe Georgia is worse! We had four years of progressive government and now have thrown it over. We have now regained the position that we held for many years before—the bottom rung of the ladder in the States of the Union. We wonder if the people of this State realize that by this election we are in danger of having a form of government which so many of our native sons died fighting against. Tues. 7-23-46

White editor has to apologize for Talmadge story

Tribune Atlanta Ga. Sat. 8-3-46

THOMASTON, Ga.—Threatened by a mob of about 100 men who said they would not "be responsible for what happened", a white editor, J. B. Hardy, of the Thomaston Times, publicly apologized last week for an editorial which asserted that governor-elect Eugene Talmadge won in counties ruled by "ignorance and prejudice". 7-27-46

Hardy said he was not afraid of physical harm but thought they might wreck the newspaper plant, so he "apologized" by telling them "the editorial was not aimed at anybody in Upton county, but if they were offended I'd be glad to say in the next issue of the Times I did not intend to offend them." Sat 7-27-46

The Times plugged for Gov. Ellis Arnall's candidate, James V. Carmichael, who won in Upton county. Hardy dismissed the incident as "just one of those things that come along in politics."

Talmadge Plans Vote Shift Start

Atlanta Ga Journal

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., July 30.—(AP)—Eugene Talmadge, who becomes governor of Georgia for the fourth time next January, said Monday night that machinery to make Georgia's Democratic elections a "white man's primary" would be set up at the party's forthcoming state convention.

Mr. Talmadge, visiting Chattanooga on business, declared that under Georgia law he could appoint 246 of the 410 delegates to the convention in October—one delegate for each unit vote he received in the July 17 primary—and thus was assured control over the party's action.

He added that plans to organize a "white man's" primary were already under study and would be ready when the convention delegates assemble.

"We want to set up rules for the Democratic party in Georgia to eliminate Negro voters from our primary," Mr. Talmadge continued. "That will be the main purpose of the convention.

"The convention will adopt a resolution requesting the Georgia General Assembly to repeal the Neal primary law. With that out of the way, future Democratic primaries in Georgia will be under party control instead of under state control. That will satisfy the findings of federal courts. South Carolina has a similar setup for its Democratic primary, and Tennessee ought to have the same thing."

Editor Constitution: As Georgia citizens and as students in this State we are proud of our record of untiring effort in behalf of the candidacy of James V. Carmichael. We are convinced now more than ever that no finer man ever offered for Governor of Georgia. We are grateful for his gallant fight. We have faith in the principles for which he fought and we will continue our efforts to promote good and progressive government in Georgia. We know that every other group which worked in this campaign will do likewise.

Ellis Arnall's victory in 1942 was Georgia's greatest step forward in many years. He has made a great Governor. We are proud of him. We are confident that his brand of liberalism is not dead in Georgia or in the South. We want all the nation to know this.

Eugene Talmadge promised during his campaign that he would not interfere this time with the Board of Regents or the University System. His campaign slogan was "Talmadge keeps his promises." We expect him to keep this promise. But we serve notice now that we will be here in Georgia during the next four years and we will be watching Eugene Talmadge. We will co-operate and support him if he will keep this promise and works for the good of Georgia. But he will continue to have our uncompromising opposition unless his next term is the best in his career.

We will continue to work together as students to promote the interests of our colleges and our State. Atlanta, Ga.

Right Choice 7-28-46

Editor Constitution: I think the three things that put Mr. Talmadge in were: (1) the voters that have always been supporters of Talmadge (2), Rivers splitting the opposition, and (3), the racial problem. Whose Primary

Atlanta, Ga. Constitution

Editor Constitution: An article appearing in the newspapers stating that the Republicans in a State Party Conference decided not to run a candidate in the coming General election because they had voted in our Democratic Primary and were bound to Talmadge, brings to light a number of things.

What is the reason for a Democratic Primary if registered Republicans vote and can tell us what Democrat to choose? It has always been my understanding that the Democratic Primary gave our party a chance to select a person who most represented our ideals, principles, etc., and the opposing forces presented their candidates in the General election. Those people who shout about purging the voters from the Democratic party if they do not support a Democratic ticket are a little out of line, I should think, if Republicans, by their own admission, vote in our Primary. Is there any such thing as a real Democratic Primary?

While we get excited over white supremacy and such nonsense, the Republican party gains more and more ground by the election of people who refused to support the program of the greatest Democratic President the country has ever known. Sat 8-10-46

The Courthouse On Election Day

ELLAVILLE — Here's how it was in the Courthouse town of two unit votes in Schley County on election day.

The people didn't have to be wheedled into voting. Old-timers said they couldn't recall the electorate coming in such volume and with such punctuality. Accustomed to vacant booths in the early hours, managers found folks waiting when the polls opened at 7 a. m.

They kept coming in a heavy stream and lines were formed most of the morning. Whether the urgency was decided by the threat of rain or some issue in the campaign was a matter for speculation. Certainly the talk gave no hint. The people were good natured and mostly nonconfiding.

Negroes voted in a separate booth reached by a side entrance which didn't require the races to mingle and scarcely a reference to their presence could be heard.

Registrars were in session all day to interview challenged voters. All new registrants of both races had been summoned and the guesses of the outcome were abundant. The Gallus-Snapper Wins

Times-Dispatch Richmond Va.

THE victory of EUGENE TALMADGE in Georgia, coming close upon the similar triumph of BILBO in Mississippi, is highly embarrassing to well-disposed Southerners. Yet we must bear in mind that this election would have been a triumph for JAMES V. CARMICHAEL in any other State in the Union, for CARMICHAEL got a substantial popular majority, and only the unique "unit system" gave TALMADGE the nomination.

Even with the unit system, TALMADGE probably would never have won, had it not been for the United States Supreme Court's recent ruling that segregation on interstate buses is unconstitutional. The mop-haired, greasy-skinned "Sage of Sugar Creek" seized upon this like a trout leaping at a fly. He emphasized and reiterated his opposition to the ruling to such a degree that observers in Georgia said there was only "one issue" in the campaign, the race issue. One of TALMADGE'S more brutal declarations to his audiences was that the Negro "ought to learn only one thing, how to stand with his hat in his hand before white people and say 'Yes, sir' and 'No, sir'." He also declared that the Supreme Court's ruling will have no validity in Georgia when he becomes Governor, since passengers on bus lines will have to get out at the State boundary and buy other tickets. This, he contended, will prevent them from being classified as "interstate" and hence subject to the court's dictum. It remains to be seen whether any such scheme will be legal, and whether he can make the bus companies put up with it. Fri 7-19-46

The TALMADGE victory is somewhat unexpected, for the justices of the peace throughout the State, who had accurately forecast the winner in the four preceding gubernatorial contests, predicted that CARMICHAEL would win. The recent defeat of the heavily entrenched Cracker party in Augusta, whose candidates also paramounted the Negro issue, seemed to portend defeat for TALMADGE. But the fantastic "unit system," the only thing of its kind in the country, gave the gallus-snapping candidate a huge advantage. When he first ran for Governor in Georgia, he boasted that he would be elected without carrying a single county with a streetcar in it, and that is exactly what happened. Virtually the same thing has happened this time. CARMICHAEL'S popular majority in the State means nothing when it is considered that the three smallest counties in Georgia, with a total of fewer than 11,000 inhabitants, had the same number of "unit" votes in the election just concluded as Fulton County (Atlanta), with 400,000. Given such a state of things, it is surprising that any except candidates appealing to the rural sections ever succeed in getting themselves elected to State office in Georgia.

The only lasting hope for Georgia, politically, lies in getting rid of the undemocratic and utterly indefensible unit system. Maybe the defeat of the popular will by this means in Wednesday's primary will arouse enough indignation to effect a change.

However, lamentations over what has occurred can do no good now. Georgia is in for four years of TALMADGEISM—which means race baiting, Ku-Kluxery, bigotry, obscurantism, persecution of citizens and meddling with educational institutions. It is a dismal prospect.

EDITOR, THREATENED, APOLOGIZES IN SOUTH

Times

THOMASTON, Ga., July 22 (AP)—J. B. Hardy, editor of The Thomaston Times, apologized publicly Saturday for an editorial in which he said Eugene Talmadge got his nomination for Governor from counties in which "ignorance and prejudice rule."

The apology came after Mr. Hardy was threatened by a group he estimated at 100 men who said they would not "be responsible for what happened." He said that about ten men came to his home and told him that "unless I came down in front of the office and said I was sorry for the editorial they could not be responsible for what happened." Times 7-23-46

The editor said he was afraid of "property damage."

Mr. Hardy said he accompanied the group to the office, where he found "probably as many as 100 men" standing around.

He gave this account of his "apology":

"I told them the editorial was not aimed at anybody in Upton County, but if they were offended I'd be glad to say in the next issue of the Times I did not intend to offend them. I am sorry if I hurt anyone's feelings, as I had not intended to."

The editorial in question said:

"In the country counties, where ignorance and prejudice rule and there is a Negro problem, Ole Gene got his big votes, but in the city counties, where education and enlightenment reign, Carmichael piled up a huge vote." Times 7-23-46

The Times was for James V. Carmichael in the Governor's race and he carried Upton County.

Talmadge Is a Great Man

Times-Dispatch Richmond Va.

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

Whoever wrote the editorial "Gallus-Snapper Wins" (July 19) not only insulted Eugene Talmadge, but also the farmer. The remarks you have made about the unit vote system of Georgia as being appealing only in the rural sections leaves an absolutely unfair reflection upon the farmer, whether you meant it that way or not. It sounds like a typical "city slicker" attitude and misunderstanding of the folks who raise the food we eat, here or anywhere.

Certainly the farmer in Georgia has plenty of good horse sense about how he wants to vote, and he chose to re-elect Talmadge for very good reasons. You have left out the fact that the unit vote system is a good system of check-and-balance, allowing the white farmer to speak his piece at the polls. Democracy has to have its limits in such a check-and-balance system, to make it possible that those in minority may have their rights, too.

I hereby challenge all your statements about Eugene Talmadge as untrue, and dare you to have this little piece published. This being a country of free speech, the foregoing presents something of the other side of the question in regard to your editorial. Certainly, no one can deny that Gene Talmadge has the courage of his political convictions. He stands up and speaks "what is what," and remains on those grounds steadfastly, and is not blown about with the changing moods of political doctrine, particularly the doctrines of the modernists who are intent upon changing the everlasting fundamentals of democracy our forefathers formulated.

Whether for or against Talmadge, all have to give him credit that he is not wishy-washy but is a very firm politician. And I say that he is a great man. He ought to be President.

Why Talmadge Won

Published 7-24-46

Times-Dispatch Richmond, Va.

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

In reading your forthright editorial July 19 concerning the gubernatorial primary in Georgia, I find but one point with which to take issue. It is hardly accurate, I think, virtually to hang the election of a Southern Governor on even as important an issue (certainly to the South) as the United States Supreme Court decision on racial segregation.

It is true that Talmadge did take advantage of the ruling to make a spurious appeal to the minds of the Southern Georgia rural folk, and others in the State who think similarly. This fact alone, however, as you stated yourself—though indirectly—was not enough, I believe, to swing the election in Georgia towards the lowbrow who will be seated as Georgia's next chief executive.

The unit system in Georgia obviously must be abolished to insure a democratic electoral system. But of course this will hardly occur during the next four years, assuming that the quasi-Governor Talmadge lasts that long. And equally as obvious is the need for valid enlightenment among uninformed groups of the people of the State.

I do not take it upon myself to justify the campaign for the Georgia primary. Nor am I erecting a pedestal for the expression of my critical dicta over the head of the editor of a large newspaper. But this point in your commendable article, I felt, was excessive. Pub. 7-24-46

Majority Rule

Constitution

Editor Constitution: Having long since passed my three score years and ten, as a native of Georgia, I have seen many elections come and go. In my opinion we have a long way to go before we get anywhere politically, as long as we let a little bunch of politicians in every County of the State usually, "a Courthouse ring" and a few lawyers, run the politics and name who shall run for office and who shall not.

As matters now stand, half of the people don't take enough interest to register and vote. Many of the other half who do vote do not know who or what they are voting for. They are so full of hatred, prejudice, selfishness and intolerance. Just let any one of the leaders yell that we are influenced by a man from the North, or any other "furriner," or just mention Nigger, they go wild, forget all main issues and would vote against the best qualified man that could be found, or for anyone else named by their leaders, as being in favor of these things. Times

My ancestors have lived in Georgia since 1796. My father was a Confederate soldier. Born in the first year of the war I well remember some of the tragic happenings of reconstruction days. I think the War Between the States is over, or should be, by this time and we at this late hour should begin to think more about the problems before us today and the future, and elect men to office who will help us think along these lines, and less about things that divide us and keep a turmoil from one election to another. 9-3-46

Personally I believe the Constitution of the United States, that a majority of the people should rule, and it seems that the people in 47 of the states think so. I see no justice or reason in giving one man from 30 to 100 times as much voting power, over any other man, just because he lives just over the line in another county, or any other county, with a small list of voters. Sirs: Life

It is indeed a pleasure to have Gene Talmadge back again as the governor of Georgia. It was a clean-cut victory, leaving nothing to doubt as to how the people of Georgia stand on the question of white supremacy. It must be recognized that a large segment of the popular votes cast against Talmadge were by 18-, 19- and 20-year-olds whose immaturity and consequent inexperience render them generally incapable of casting an intelligent ballot. Particularly is this true from the standpoint of the Negro, concerning whom they have temporarily liberal views that will normally become conservative with greater age and knowledge. Also another large bloc of votes accrued from the younger veterans, recent victims of service propaganda advocating the equality of the races. The inherent fallacy of that theory will inevitably become apparent to them. . . . The result of this will be an ever larger number of votes from their ranks for conservative ways and away from the dangerous liberalism of men like Ellis Arnall.

Fear Talmadge Era

LIBERALS WORRIED OVER GA. ELECTION

The Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sat. 7-27-46

ATLANTA, Ga.—Gene Talmadge, who promised to keep Georgia a "white man's State," will have every opportunity in the next four years to do just that. The red-suspenders-wearing, gallus-snapping advocate of "white supremacy" will take the Governor's chair for the fourth time come next January, although the majority of his fellow-Georgians voted against him.

Talmadge won under Georgia's unit voting system by carrying the majority of the State rural counties. His leading opponent, James Carmichael, won the popular vote with over 10,000 majority polled in the heavy urban centers of the State. Backed by liberal Gov. Ellis Arnall, Carmichael received the almost solid vote of the 100,000 Negroes who voted in a Georgia primary for the first time in nearly a half century.

TALMADGE PROMISES NO MORE NEGRO VOTES

In a victory message, Talmadge, keeping the records straight on his campaign promise to defy the authority of the Federal Government and keep Negroes from voting, stated:

"Most Negroes know their real friends are Southern white men. No Negro will vote in Georgia for the next four years."

Negroes did not accept the primary advice of Talmadge to "stay" away from the polls. An estimated 100,000 went to the polls last Wednesday and voted in an orderly manner. Reports from throughout the State said most Negroes voted without friction, although a few isolated incidents were reported.

LONG LINES OF VOTERS

In some of the large cities Negroes formed lines blocks long waiting for the polls to open. At some places they voted in separate booths, some of which had been requested by Negro leaders, and in other counties they voted at polling places with the whites.

The heavy Negro vote was the result of an intensive registration drive in Georgia following the repeal last year of the State's poll tax law and the Supreme Court's decision outlawing the white primary.

Thus Georgia presented a different picture from the few other deep Southern States, where Negroes have voted this summer. In those States the Negro vote was negligible.

Liberals throughout the country are distressed over the resurgence of Talmadge as an important political figure in the South following so closely on the victory in Mississippi earlier this month of Senator Theodore Bilbo and Representative John Rankin on the issue of "white supremacy."

MIXED REACTION TO VOTE RESULTS

The issue of Southern liberalism to reconstruction days when big land owners sought to overcome the voting strength of Negroes and carpet-baggers residing in the cities after the Civil War. Under this system each small county gets two votes, but the maximum vote of a large county is limited to six. Thus Fulton County, which includes most of Atlanta, gave Carmichael 53,882 votes to 19,521 for Talmadge was nullified by three tiny counties—Montgomery, Madison and Lee, that cast a total vote of 2,015 for Talmadge and 1,090 for Carmichael.

Ironically, Carmichael was defeated by the very same system he once fought to retain on the grounds that it kept Georgia's populous counties from controlling State politics.

MANY MAY LEAVE STATE

Some Negro teachers in Atlanta have vowed to seek jobs in other States and there is evidence of a serious exodus of colored people from urban and rural areas to other sections of the Nation to escape the tensions and violence that may follow Talmadge's announced policies.

The Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

On the other hand, however, prominent businessmen of both groups, who supported Mr. Carmichael see little possibility of racial tension, encouragement to the Ku Klux Klan or any spectacular change in relations between the races.

These businessmen are willing to dismiss as so much political oratory Talmadge's promise to search incoming Pullman cars to remove Negro passengers, to keep travelers from crossing Georgia in interstate buses by making them change at the State line to vehicles with jim-crow seating arrangements, and other proposals to "keep the Negro in his place."

Talmadge, a shrewd politician, staked his chance for a fourth term in the governorship on the rural vote in order to overcome the stronge support Carmichael had in the large cities. This is the second time Talmadge has been elected on the unit vote when he came out second best in the popular vote.

Georgia's unit system harks back

Primary Elections (Georgia)

"Mr. Talmadge is sincerely interested in the common run of the people in Georgia, black and white. He will give my people a first class school of the university type, and he will do it now.

"He believes as I do that it is for the best interest of all the races in Georgia and the South should be in separate schools, but the accommodations should be the same.

"The new governor has given me the assurance that we will work out a long range program for the education of my people in Georgia, and, believe me, it will be plenty."

Negro Educator Endorses Talmadge

By RUTH BRIGHAM

ALBANY, Ga., July 24 (INS)—A prominent Negro educator, born of slave parents, deplored the use by his race of their recently-acquired vote in Georgia.

He regretted the solidity of the Negro vote.

Dr. Joseph Winthrop Holley, 70-year-old founder and president until recently of the Georgia Normal School at Albany, pointed out that nearly all of the Negroes who went to the polls in the Wednesday primary voted against governor-elect Eugene Talmadge.

In an interview with International News Service, Dr. Holley declared:

"That would seem to show that the Negroes permitted themselves to be organized and voted in a bloc with the so-called race issue the only question before them."

The grey-haired Negro, graduate of Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., Boston's Revere College, Lincoln University and Aberdeen University, in Scotland, then disclosed that he had voted for Talmadge.

Dr. Holley explained why he supported the red-gallused campaigner for "white supremacy," who had promised to eliminate Negroes from the Democratic primary.

He asserted:

"The background of slavery gave the Negro race a training in trades and industries, morals and manners, and despite its faults, this background gave him a basic training that should have been an economic asset to the race.

"Governor Talmadge is interested in helping the Negro take his place in the New South, but he is going to work along the vocational lines rather than the liberal arts and classical."

Holley said he supported Talmadge because:

'Dooms' Negro Vote With '4-Year-Ban'

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga. Fri. 7-19-46

Eugene Talmadge, who hailed himself as "the white man's candidate" from a platform of white supremacy and strict Southern tradition, yesterday had clinched his fourth term as Governor.

Behind him in unit votes calculated from mounting returns in Wednesday's primary come James V. Carmichael, the youthful challenger of the old campaigner; E. D. Rivers, twice former Governor, and Hoke O'Kelley, a veteran of the two world wars, with a modest campaign.

The results showed that the voters considered the race practically a two-man contest between Carmichael and Talmadge. Rivers ran a poor third in both popular and unit votes, and O'Kelley took no unit votes.

Carmichael was the man campaigning on a pledge of continuing the government of Ellis Arnall.

Arnall's administration saw the repeal of the poll tax; it saw the lowering of the voting age to 18 years; it saw defense of the Supreme Court ruling that Negroes could vote in Democratic primaries.

"FOUR-YEAR BAN"

It furnished the springboard from which Talmadge entered the contest.

He called for strict Southern tradition in race relations; he called for maintenance of white supremacy; he called for the Supreme Court ruling to be circumvented by altering the primary laws in such a way as to cut the link between the ruling and State law books. He cited South Carolina as an example.

The Associated Press interpreted the election of Talmadge this way:

"After pioneering a new political way in the South that amazed the nation, Georgia has returned to rock-ribbed Southern tradition and sent Gene Talmadge to the Governor's office again."

And the Associated Press also quoted Talmadge as saying:

"I had to win for the good of the South and the nation. No Negro will vote in Georgia for the next four years."

JIMMIE'S UNIT VIEWS

Negroes voted Wednesday for the first time since State Democratic primaries were started nearly two score years ago. Talmadge opposed the Negro vote. He campaigned for restoration of it to the white people only.

He advised "wise Negroes" to stay away from the polls, but apparently 100,000 of the 135,000 registered did cast their ballots. They voted heavily against Talmadge, primarily for Carmichael.

Carmichael had pleaded with the voters to let the Negroes vote. He based his plea on the argument that to keep them from voting would mean the repeal of all laws regulating primaries. This would leave the way open, he said, for fraud in elections without possible recourse; it would mean, more, he declared, that the county unit system of election would be in danger of falling before a plan of machine politics in which the populous counties could control State politics and weaken the voice of the smaller counties.

HOIST BY OWN PETARD

Above all, he based his plea on protecting the county unit vote system. Ironically, he appears to have obtained a larger popular vote than Talmadge although a lower unit vote. Heavy majorities in his home county, in Fulton, and other large city counties gave him this lead in popular votes.

Indications are that his popurule with a required four-fifths vote of the State Democratic Convention required to change it.

GENE CERTAIN OF UNIT MARGIN

With complete returns from 139 counties of the State, Eugene Talmadge was assured of nomination in Wednesday's Democratic Gubernatorial Primary, according to Associated Press tabulations.

In the completed counties alone, Talmadge had 208 unit votes, two more than the necessary majority.

Of these same 139 counties 126 unit votes went to James V. Carmichael, and 18 to E. D. Rivers.

Talmadge: Leading in 103 counties with 238 unit votes and a popular vote of 227,842.

Carmichael: Leading in 47 counties with 154 unit votes and a popular vote of 244,864.

ANOTHER GEORGIA PRIMARY ELECTION is history. Georgia's Gene Talmadge has again been hurtled into Georgia's capitol. The gallant forces of liberalism in Georgia have received a stunning setback. To their credit be it said they stood most heroically before the gates of Georgia's white house but Gene Talmadge would not be denied.

It is useless to lament that Talmadge won because of Georgia's unit system of election. Arnall has won some signal victories in Georgia in spite of the system. Georgia will not be redeemed until its liberal forces can beat Talmadge, system and all. The unit system is the rule in Georgia and it is unfortunate that the system works to the detriment of the most intelligent. It may some day be otherwise in Georgia; but until then we must endure what we cannot help. 8-6-46

GET ENCOURAGEMENT Tues.

It has been said that the spider gets her poison where the bee gets his honey. So, just as Talmadge and his followers get great cause of elation out of the election results, the liberal elements can likewise get great encouragement, and there are many reasons therefore. In the first place Lady Luck elected Talmadge rather than his political campaigning. The final determinant in the campaign was not politics but circumstances. It has come about that at the end of our world wars there is a resurgence of prejudice against Negroes. During these wars the lines of prejudice are gradually relaxed in the interest of the efficient prosecution of war, once victory is assured these lines are again tightly drawn. Atlanta, Ga.

Within recent months this resurgence of Negro-phobism has been everywhere noted, much to the dismay of those who would see the cause of inter-racial cooperation advanced. The movement to put the Negro back in his place enjoys wide support throughout the country. Talmadge caught this tide at its flood and it helped mightily to bear him on to victory. Without the help of this resurgent anti-Negro movement it is doubtful if Talmadge could have won even under the aegis of the unit system of Georgia.

Decisions Help Cause

In the second place, the supreme court decisions came at an opportune time to advance the cause of Talmadge. It is hard to conceive of a more favorable "break" for the cause of Talmadge than for the supreme court to rule that the primaries were to be opened to Negro voters. If this was not a pump primer for Talmadge's political pump, then there is no such thing. With the prospects of the Southern Negro thronging the ballot box, it was easy for Talmadge to see a threat to white supremacy. Even the dullest backwoodsman of Georgia could understand this.

Then there was the decision that Jim-Crowism was to end on interstate carriers. This was the most powerful influence that could have been manipulated at the time. It meant the actual physical contact of whites and Negroes after a manner the South had not known before. The rural Georgian could see in this new ruling a threat that filled him with great consternation in contemplation. Talmadge promised to do something about it. He went so far as to state his solution and of course rural Georgia fell hard for it. It was these supreme court decisions that beat the liberal forces in Georgia and not the political appeal of Talmadge.

In other words the victory of Talmadge was circumstantial and not political. In this there is room for abundant hope. When a team wins on luck and fumbles, it is bound to lose by and by. Lady Luck has a way of shifting her favors. Luck as a factor in achievement is strictly limited and in these limitations the adherents of Arnall can take courage.

Gallant Showing

Even more outstanding than the victory was the gallant showing of the vanquished. When Georgia can muster a majority of its voters on the side of decent government we are going to have decent government in Georgia sooner or later. That is the important thing. We must not be too dismayed over the Talmadge victory to remember those gallant forces that opposed him.

Arnallism in Georgia has not failed. It has had a temporary setback, to be sure, but it is on the way and will not be denied. This writer will never be able to understand just why these supreme court decisions were timed to help the election in Georgia. Just why these decisions were synchronized with the political necessities of Gene Talmadge of Georgia. Talmadge a victor of circumstances!

'LAST TIME,' SAYS TALMADGE—Negroes in a line more than two blocks long await their turn to vote at Marietta, Ga., in the home town of James V. Carmichael, gubernatorial candidate, as Georgia's primary got under way. The Negroes at Marietta were provided with separate voting places, but Negroes and whites voted together in some places in the State.

Georgia Holds Its Nose

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

And while on that subject, that stench assailing your nostrils comes from Georgia where hate-mouthed, gallus-snapping Gene Talmadge scored a hollow victory for white supremacy in last week's gubernatorial primary which is tantamount to his return for his fourth term as governor.

But for the cockeyed situation in Georgia, where the county unit vote counts more than the popular vote, James V. Carmichael, with a plurality of some 18,000 votes would have won. Mrs. Helen Mankin, member of Congress from the Atlanta district, was also the victim of the unit system, although polling the highest popular vote.

All of the progressive legislation advanced by outgoing Governor Ellis Arnall is in peril and already a number of colored teachers are resigning their jobs, so fearful are they of what the Talmadge regime holds in store. Under the last Talmadge administration, the State's entire educational system was discredited and Georgia suffered further disgraces as a result of his crude political manipulations.

We can rest assured now that, with Bilbo and Rankin still in power, Talmadge will again pit Georgia against Mississippi for the undisputed title of the worst State in the Union. Sat. 7-27-46

Talmadge Hit By Illness at Beach Resort

The Times-Union Jacksonville, Fla. Sat. 10-5-46

Georgia Governor-Nominee Is Rushed to Hospital After Hemorrhage.

Eugene Talmadge, Georgia's fiery 61-year-old three times governor and nominee for a fourth term, was admitted to St. Vincent's Hospital here early yesterday suffering from a stomach hemorrhage, but his physician said last night that he was responding to treatment and "is much improved."

Talmadge and his wife were staying at the Wave Crest Hotel at Jacksonville Beach with friends when he was stricken. He was admitted to the hospital at 2 o'clock and given an immediate blood transfusion.

The hospital issued a statement saying he was in a critical condition when admitted, but had improved and would be confined for several days for treatment and observation.

Retains Consciousness.

Talmadge was conscious when he arrived at the hospital in an ambulance, but the physician said he did not know how much blood he had lost. The physician said no operation had been performed, and none was contemplated.

After the transfusion, X-rays were made of Talmadge's stomach. They will be examined today and the physician then may be able to ascertain the cause of the hemorrhage.

The Talmadge home is at McRae, Ga. Mr. and Mrs. Talmadge motored to Jacksonville Beach several days ago. Their presence there was known only to a few people.

Herman Talmadge, son of the nominee, arrived here last night from Atlanta, and went immediately to his father's bedside, where Mrs. Talmadge had spent most of the day.

Mrs. Talmadge said that her husband recently had recovered from a cold, and went to Jacksonville Beach to "do a little fishing, but mostly to rest.

Nomination Scheduled.

"He wanted to rest up for the State Democratic convention to be held in Macon next week," said Mrs. Talmadge. At this convention, scheduled for Wednesday, Talmadge is to be formally nominated and a white primary plan he proposed during his campaign is due to be adopted. Nomination is tantamount to election in one-party Georgia.

In Atlanta, a spokesman close to the governor-nominee said the illness of Talmadge would have no effect on the convention, and that it would meet as scheduled. He said, however, he expected Talmadge to be present.

In event of a party nominee's death prior to the November general election, the convention is empowered to choose another nominee.

Mrs. Talmadge said last night that if her husband's condition improved sufficiently, she felt "confident that he will be present at the Macon convention."

"You know how he is," she added, "and it will take a lot of doctors to keep him in bed if he makes up his mind to go to the convention. However, if his physician advises him to remain in the hospital, I feel sure he will follow instructions."

The Rev. A. C. Shuler, pastor of the Immanuel Baptist Church here, and a life-long friend of the Talmadge family, said Talmadge had tentatively accepted an invitation to preach in his church a week from tomorrow.

Rev. Mr. Shuler went to Georgia during the recent primary and delivered a number of addresses in behalf of Talmadge's candidacy. Talmadge won the Democratic nomination for governor in the July primary on a "white supremacy" platform. The term of office is four years.

Talmadge observed his sixty-second birthday anniversary on September 23 at his McRae home.

Talmadge's Victory in Georgia Not Surprising

Jacksonville, Fla. Times Union Sun 7-19-46

If the returns from Georgia's Democratic primary of Wednesday continue as they are piling up as this is written, former Gov. Eugene Talmadge will win the race for Governor. In that event what to many people was the unbelievable will have happened. Mr. Talmadge wasn't given a "Chinaman's chance" for success by more than 90 per cent of Georgia's newspapers, and that overwhelming opposition ridiculed him as few candidates have ever been ridiculed in the South.

The Georgia press couldn't see anybody as a possible winner but James V. Carmichael, former legislator who was backed by Gov. Ellis Arnall. Apparently the newspapermen thought Arnall's liberalism had captivated Georgians—he's been hitting some hard blows in that direction during the last year or so, and has built a reputation that has put him on the lecture platform at $1,000 per lecture, according to reports.

But they discounted an inherent trait upon which Talmadge depended for the winning of votes—the dislike of most of the people of this part of the country for interference in their home affairs by outsiders. Talmadge courted, in other words, the very thing that Arnall and his fellowers had discouraged while they were playing for the plaudits of distant spectators and those who would reform the South and make it conform to concepts that are unfamiliar to the people here. Fri 7-19-46

What has happened in Georgia is largely a duplicate of what took place in Mississippi when Bilbo was re-nominated for another term in the United States Senate.

All of which points to the fact that if that element in the North and East that is constantly meddling in the affairs of the South really wants to see reforms made here, it will let those who understand and live with the problems solve them. In this way progress can be made toward the achievement of the goal that long ago was set for the South by Southerners.

As long as the reformers' interference continues, men who make no contribution to the program will be elected to office.

"There's a third thing. . . ."

Has night come to the Deep South—with Talmadge back in Georgia, Bilbo in Mississippi? Be sure they are thinking so outside.

We may as well admit it is pretty bad. Professional race-baiters, hate-mongers, demagogs both, the two reflect our worst sins, just as Hague does New Jersey's, Langer Dakota's, etc. They are awful examples of what happens to a people saddled with the most delicate and difficult race problem any people anywhere ever had to carry when solutions are attempted by force from outside.

Even Henry Grady, who, as my father said, "died loying a nation into peace," forgot his nation-mindedness at the last when force was proposed. In his last speech to the Boston Merchants' Association in December, 1889, a few days before his death, he was not a nationalist any more but a challenging, aggressive, stand-taking man of the South. It is the fashion of certain so-called "liberal" Georgia statesmen and journalists today to forget this. Lodge's Force Bill was before the United States Senate. "We wrested our State Government from negro supremacy when the Federal drumbeat rolled closer to the ballot box and Federal bayonets hedged it deeper about than will ever again be permitted in this free government," Grady warned the Bostonians. "But, sir, though the cannon of this Republic thundered in every voting district of the South, we still should find in the mercy of God the means and the courage to prevent its re-establishment. . ."

That was 57 years ago. The negro is far advanced now, far more fitted for citizenship, and rightly en route to increasing measures as he qualifies. But now, as ever before, there is still the problem of him here, incapable as ever of being comprehended in the North or solved for us there, subject as ever to exploitation for dark purpose and to the present point, sometimes forcing upon people of light in the South a darkness they hold better at least than the chaos that would come if "nation-minded" leaders, outside or in, had their way.

People voted for Old Gene in Georgia Wednesday who hate the sight and sound of him, despise all he stands for, anticipate nothing but demagogy and backwardness in his return, but who believed him necessary to defeat a crowd so "nation-minded" and Perpetual New Deal-minded and Henry Wallace-CIO-PAC-minded, as to be of an even deeper menace to the South and the country, too. Bilbo was not a necessary evil for Mississippi. There was no such crowd in control or threatening control there. But, in the opinion of many Georgians sincerely on the side of progress and light, Talmadge was a necessary evil for Georgia. I think they are mistaken. I think Jimmy Carmichael would have been no stooge of Ellis Arnall. But the point is that Arnallism make Talmadgism, and has just done so in Georgia.

There's a third thing in the South which is really a first thing, as someone somewhere profoundly once (or twice) has said. It is what the great majority of our decent people believe in now. It is the sort of thing they are working out so admirably in North Carolina — advancement for the negro and everybody else in terms of our own Southern situation and light. It is what this column has called States Rights Liberalism as distinguished from New Deal radicalism, and it is as far from Arnall as from Talmadge, from Pepper as from Bilbo.

Lieutenant-Governor Post Goes to Liberal

ATLANTA—Confident that the State will deteriorate even more and that a new reign of terror is imminent under Eugene Talmadge, who was elected Governor against the people's will, teachers in Atlanta, along with workers throughout the State, have announced that they are making plans to leave their homes and jobs for others in more enlightened areas.

Already, it has been revealed some workers, especially domestic, have served notice on their employers to that effect.

Unwanted by the people, who voted by a more than 25,000-vote majority for James V. Carmichael, candidate sponsored by liberal Governor Ellis Arnall, Talmadge gained his fourth term under the State's antiquated unit vote system.

Under that system, the counties, assigned two to six unit votes, determine the winning candidates in elections, not the people.

Majority Vote Unimportant

Hence, although given overwhelming majorities in the large urban areas, Carmichael was defeated merely because, despite their size, those areas were limited to unit counts of only six.

The system which makes Georgia the only State in which the voice of the people is ignored was condemned generally by Congressmen in Washington following announcement of the result of the election.

'A Travesty on Democracy'

While many stated their disgust in off-the-record comments, terming the election "outside my province and thus not within the range of personal comment," some few indicated openly their reactions.

Typical of the comments was that of Sen. Glen H. Taylor (Dem., Idaho), who said, "It is a shame that one man can get the largest popular vote and still lose. It is a travesty on democracy."

Almost as soon as the votes indicated a victory for him, and the governorship primary victory being tantamount to final election, Governor-nominate Talmadge said "No colored person will vote in Georgia for the next four years."

However, despite varied threats, they did vote in the July 17 primary—an estimated 100,000 strong. Even though Talmadge's henchmen had fostered a purge of colored registrants' names.

The one houeful thing about the election was the nomination, which is tantamount to election of M. E. Thompson to the newly created office of lieutenant-governor.

Thompson, who is serving as State revenue commissioner and who was formerly executive secretary to incumbent Gov. Ellis Arnall, nosed out Marvin Griffin, who had pitched his campaign on the same low "white supremacy" level as Talmadge.

Griffin had led Thompson throughout most of the balloting and his defeat was not conceded until the final official counting of the ballots late Saturday.

The final popular vote count was 314,421 for Carmichael; 304,760 for Talmadge; 69,750 for Rivers, and 11,830 for O'Kelley. Talmadge won on the basis of 236 unit votes, chiefly from downstate rural counties.

Little Resistance Noted

Even though there was advice from "Ole Gene" himself that "wise" colored people should stay away from the polls, even though the nightriders rode in Americus and warnings were posted on church doors in Fitzgerald, they voted. The Afro-American

Furthermore, according to a carefully planned check system, there was no violence and little resistance.

Thus Georgia headed back for the carrying out of a terror period, expected by many to exceed Talmadge's carryings-on in three previous administrations.

To Fight High Court

This time he had promised to outdo himself—to return the white primary, even though Federal District, U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court had outlawed it.

He also vowed to stop colored persons from riding Pullman cars through Georgia, to halt trains and buses carrying interstate passengers at the borders and make them buy tickets in order to dodge the Supreme Court ruling on travel arrangements.

He pledged himself further to continue and emphasize every jim-crow pattern conceivable.

Progress Under Arnall

Talmadge defeated the man who had stated that he would continue Governor Ellis Arnall's good government program.

Under Arnall's administration the poll tax which had disfranchised so many colored persons and poor white people was repealed, the voting age was lowered to 18 years and the Supreme Court ruling against white democratic primaries had been defended. Baltimore, Md.

But race-snapping Gene sprang back to a symphony of hate, opposing the Arnall administration and its candidate, he called for strict southern tradition in race relations, keeping the colored man in his "place." Sat. 7-27-46

Liberalism Defeated

He called for maintenance of white supremacy, for circumvention of the Supreme Court ruling by altering the primary laws so as to cut the link beween the ruling and State law books.

In the face of Carmichael's pleadings and those of Governor Arnall and even Attorney Charles Bloch, who defended the Georgia white primary in the Primus E. King case, Talmadge defied fairness and liberality and won.

Colored persons immediately foresaw a worse Georgia than they have been knowing for the past few years. They were surprised and shocked as the returns came in showing the rural, Southern county votes turning the tide for Talmadge.

All for Carmichael

According to the best estimates, Carmichael carried about 97 per cent of the colored votes cast.

In Muscogee County at Columbus, where Rev. Primus E. King, the primary suit victor, voted first, the five segregated boxes showed every vote for Carmichael, not a single one for Talmadge.

In Atlanta's precinct Three-B which has only ten white registrants out of approximately 5,000 voters, Carmichael carried 4,550 of the votes cast, Talmadge tabulating 4 votes.

Whether the Federal Government would go through with its announced program of prosecuting illegal purging was yet to be seen. Some doubt was expressed, however, since movement was slow.

The FBI announced it was probing attempts to intimidate Georgia's colored persons with a view of preventing their participation in the primary.

Several cases of prevention were reported to the FBI and Federal District Attorney Offices of Northern and Middle Georgia.

Challengers Challenged

In Meriwether County, picketsof the 8th land district were told reportedly refused colored peoplethat no colored could vote because access to the voting precinct whiletheir names were not at the poll-none were reportedly permitteding places.

to vote in Wilcox County, where Talmadge henchmen appeared 600 registrants had been stricken at the polls in Albany and at-from the registrars' lists. tempted to challenge colored

No Action Taken Yet

There was no interference on primary day in Americus although the preceding night a truck containing sheeted whites rolled through a colored-inhabited settlement.

Some 700 names had been purged from the lists there.

In Macon, police seized a number of "marked ballots" carried to the polls, approximately 225 of the 240 persons ever, no arrests were made, but a grand jury action was promised whose names were left on the books voted, nevertheless. by the Solicitor General.

A resident said that all resi-voters, but the manager refused dents of the Davis Mills precinct to let them do so.

In Fitzgerald, although warnings had been posted on seven churches warning colored to stay away from the polls, approximately 225 persons were made, but no arrests were made, but a grand jury action was promised by the Solicitor General.

GENE GRANTS INTERVIEW

Patty Choice, Convention Action Please Talmadge, Now 'On Mend'

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 11

Spruced in bright maroon-striped pajamas and surrounded by a select half doen of the 75 baskets of flowers he has received in the last week, Eugene Talmade sat up in his bed at St. Vincent's Hospital here Thursday and said he was feeling "jam up" about:

1. His helth.

2. The outcome of the Georgia Democratic Convention in Macon

3. The appointment of "non Rosenwald, anti-Community to the bone" Dr. Raymond Paty as Chancellor of the University System.

"They can't find a thing organically wrong with me," declared the Governor-Nominate, putting down the paper in which he had been studying news of the Macon Convention and looking up sidewise through his famous dark-rimmed glasses.

"I've got a little-bitty leak in one of the veins in my intestines and it's going to take rest and quiet to get me well, that's all."

Of Dr. Paty's apponitment, which he had already said suited him, Talmadge said: "I wish for Dr. Paty every success he can attain in his new work. He was selected by the Board of Regents and it is the duty of the people of Georgia to give him every cooperation. Dr. Paty has informed me he has no connection whatever with the Rosenwald Fund; he is anti-Communist to the bone; he does not believe in the FEPC or in equal rights between the races—and by equal rights I mean social equality between the races, of course."

Talmadge said he had talked to Paty personally before his appointment by the Board of Regents.

He said the Macon Convention was "jam up to my expectations," and added: "They did what I thought they would do—fell right in line with the platform I stood for all during my campaign."

The intereview was the only one Talmadge has given since he was stricken with a stomach hemorrhage while vacationing here Oct. 4. Two Jacksonville physicians attending him have forbidden all visitors except his wife and daughter, even turning back a party of five men from his home town, McRae, Wednesday afternoon.

One of his three nurses said he had received 75 baskets of flowers and has generously distributed them to his fellow patients up and down the fifth floor of the hospital. His flowers were also used to decorate the chapel at the nurses' commencement exercises here Sunday.

The Governor-Nominate said he did not know Aurelius Scott, the Negro who is running for Coroner in Fulton County, and answered a suggestion that Scott supported him by saying: "I don't know. He may have supported me. It would surprise some of the uplifters in Atlanta to know how many Negroes were for me."

Talmadge expects to return to Georgia within a week, but said he did not know if he would go home to McRae or to Atlanta. The decision is expected to depend upon the results of a consultation of his physicians Friday. Meanwhile, he is anticipating a visit from his son, Herman, and a first-hand report on the Macon convention.

The Governor-Nominate was apparently little weakened by his illness. His skin was deeply tanned and his voice held its customary hardy, robust ring.

THE GEORGIA PRIMARY

The Defender Chicago, Ill.

The Georgia primary in which Eugene Talmadge, race baiting product of medieval southern reaction, was nominated for his fourth term as governor was marked by a great victory and a tragic defeat. Sat. 7-27-46

Symbol of triumph was more than 100,000 Georgia Negroes, who with dignity and pride, cast their first votes in a Southern Democratic primary. The event was historical. It was the first such mass voting in the South, under similar circumstances since Reconstruction after the Civil War. It was historical—and now it is history. Could we honor each of the anonymous thousands and their gallant leaders, who achieved this end, it would be no more than their due. The sweat and the blood, for so many years a part of the struggle to realize that great moment in time—July 17, 1946—we must pass with the humble respect of the man who writes and exhort, for the man, who fights and sometimes dies on the battlefield of progress.

And now we must look to the future. The battle of the future is clearly outlined in the circumstances surrounding the false victory of Gene Talmadge. Talmadge won his victory, while his progressive opponent, John Carmichael held a comfortable plurality of the vote of the people of Georgia. This was made possible by the primitive county unit voting system in the state, described by progressives as "almost incredible." We describe it—not as almost—but as completely a fascist trick.

This is disfranchisement, pure and simple. Since Talmadge strength lies generally among the rural, uninformed, ignorant white population, the results of the primary point perfectly to the rottenness. It is a rule by minority, deliberately planned to make the South "safe" for prejudice and bigotry, exemplified by such mountebanks as raspy-voiced vulgarian, Talmadge.

Gov. Arnall, despite his overall record of reform, was not able to change this creaking machinery. As a result his candidate for governor was elected by the people and defeated by the system.

In the triumph of our people marching to the polls, we must not forget for a moment the bitter fact that we lost the fight. We did not lose the battle, just one fight. From it we must learn an essential lesson. We must attack the enemy with his own weapons. We must never stop until the weapon of minority rule has been snatched away from every southern primitive.

Killing the "white primary" obviously was not enough, since even that stride forward is in danger with Talmadge in the saddle promising its return. We must freely link our strength with the strength of every progressive movement in the South, and in the country, whether it affects our immediate interest or not.

Only in the unity of all forward looking peoples, regardless of color, can we hope for the day when the overwhelming voice and mass of the people, will outlaw Talmadge and his fellow-brigands, and bring the "good life" to the plain folk of Georgia and the world.

GEORGIA Comfortable Again

New York N.Y. Times

In the red-clay country around Marietta, Ga. an old story was retold. An ancient and destitute woman had scrabbled for years in one of the town's back streets. One day she took sick and a squad of church ladies moved in, tidied her shack, bathed her, dressed her in clean clothes and tucked her into a clean bed. When they called next day, they found the old woman and her bed back in the familiar rags. "I just wasn't comfortable," she explained. "I'll have to git used to them clean clothes gradual." Mon 7-29-46

Last week, rural Georgia was comfortable again. After nearly four years of wearing the laundered government of chubby Governor Ellis Arnall (who cannot succeed himself under state law), she had gone back to his skinny, wild-eyed predecessor, 61-year-old ex-Governor Eugene Talmadge. Talmadge's once discarded political union suit still smelled of demagoguery, Klan support and white supremacy. But it felt easy in the seat.

How "Ole Gene" had wangled himself back into the governorship by winning the Democratic gubernatorial primary was no puzzle to Georgians—even though his principal opponent, James V. Carmichael, had polled 314,421 popular votes to Gene's 305,777. The "Wild Man from Sugar Creek" had just exploited Georgia's county unit system of counting votes.

Under the unit system, Fulton County (where Carmichael beat Talmadge by 23,836) got six electoral votes for its 92,500 voters. Echols County got two for its 619 voters. Thus, one Echols vote had the electoral power of 150 Fulton votes in last week's election. Not one of Georgia's 159 counties is so humble as to have less than two electoral votes.

With that kind of setup, it was no particular trick for Ole Gene. Unworried by popular majorities, he by-passed the cities where Carmichael appealed to the voters (including Georgia's 650,000 adult Negroes belatedly enfranchised this year). He just concentrated on the farmers. Gene had always had the farmers right by their pet prejudices. Once more, he snapped his red galluses at them, borrowed chaws of cut plug from crowds, ranted about the Negro menace, the labor menace, the new carpetbaggers—and promised little but a return to normalcy, Georgia style. Mon 7-29-46

Listening to Gene, the farmers had suddenly realized what it was that had been binding them so long. It was those damn clean clothes.

TALMADGE CALLS KLAN TO HELP HIM RULE GEORGIA

Sat. 10-19-46

IF GEORGIA is destined to produce the man on horseback for American Fascism, that man is Governor-elect Eugene Talmadge, the "Wild Man from Sugar Creek," who expects to climb into the saddle left empty by Huey Long.

Talmadge possesses all the qualifications necessary for a Fuehrer. He is a dynamic and powerful stump speaker, a rabble-rouser with few equals among the piney-woods potentates of Dixie. Despite the fact that he has never had a well-organized machine, he carries in his hip-pocket 100,000 Georgia votes which are his for any office from constable to President of the United States. Most important, he has demonstrated his ability to inspire financial support from some of the wealthiest men in America: the DuPonts, John J. Raskob and Alfred P. Sloan of General Motors have from time to time contributed large sums to his campaign. He is the tool of the Power interest when they see fit to use him.

Talmadge, like most of the political clowns of the South, knows how to dramatize a situation to get the ear and attention of the Georgia dirt farmer, whose IQ is at very low ebb. He did not enter public life until 1927, when he ran as "just a plain ol' dirt farmer" for commissioner of agriculture. He began to "dramatize" then. He centered the fire of his campaign on the Chicago packers, pledging to "free the hog raisers from the tyranny of Armour and Swift." Determined to prove that the peanut-fed hogs of Georgia were just as good as the corn-fed hogs of the Midwest, Commissioner Talmadge sent several carloads of Georgia hogs to Chicago. The Defender

THE PARLANCE of the slaughterhouse, Talmadge guaranteed that the Southern hogs would "kill hard" like Midwestern hogs. They didn't. They "killed soft," as Georgia hogs have always done. The Talmadge blunder cost Georgia about $20,000. There were rumblings of impeachment in the Legislature, but Talmadge cleverly turned the notoriety into publicity and propaganda to boost himself for governor, and in 1932, he breezed into the chief executive's mansion far ahead of a half-dozen rivals with these hundred thousand votes that he always has tucked away in his back pocket.

At Macon, Georgia, last Wednesday Talmadge convened the State Democratic convention. He is the boss of it from stem to stern. He has it packed with all of his croonies. Edward Rivers and James Carmichael, who were his opponents in the race for governor, keeping with state tradition, have given their delegates to Talmadge. And in order to show how he stands on the Klan question, Talmadge has loaded the convention with all of the notorious Klansmen of Georgia.

Commenting on this phase of Talmadge's conduct, Drew Pearson, noted Washington columnist, who went to Georgia some months ago and spoke on the capitol steps at Atlanta in defiance of klanism, says this of the Macon convention: "Taking advantage of that sway, Talmadge has had the brass to appoint as delegates the most variegated array of Ku Klux Klanners Georgia has seen in years.

CORRESPONDENT OF NEGRO NEWSPAPER "INTERVIEWS" MR. TALMADGE

A correspondent of The Chicago Defender, Negro newspaper, came to Georgia recently and "interviewed" Eugene Talmadge, the Democratic nominee for governor of Georgia. His conclusions are that an "era of violence and oppression faces Georgia" and that under the Talmadge regime there is no hope whatever for the Negro.

These conclusions are in no sense justified, but could be regarded as a matter of opinion, and could not be classed as legally libelous. But there is a good deal in the article that is plain libel. If Mr. Talmadge should bring suit against the Chicago paper, and the case were tried in the South, he would win a verdict for heavy damages. It is broadly intimated that he aided in inciting the Monroe murders for political reasons. And the correspondent also speculates on whether Mr. Talmadge, member of an old and honorable Georgia family, which goes back many generations in America, has any Negro blood in his veins! It is of course not honest speculation on the part of the correspondent, for he knows better than that. The correspondent is a white man named Earl Conrad. We assume that he is a white man, since he was at the Henry Grady hotel, and the Atlanta hotels have a way of regulating their guest-lists.

Quotation from Conrad's dispatch to the Chicago Defender regarding the Talmadge interview:

> He sat opposite, wearing no coat, his red suspenders holding up a gray pair of pants. He is lithe, quick of motion, like a young man, and he is very dark, much darker than many Negroes I know. I kept thinking as I stared at him that he was either terribly sun-tanned or that he had color in him. I still don't know which it is. He has leaping gray eyes, which seem large behind his glasses, and his jaw juts and moves about like a prizefighter actively fighting.

Ainsley kept talking of the hunting trip he and Talmadge were going to take right away. They had to fly to Savannah in a few minutes, with Betsy, and there was an air of trying to bring the interview to an end, but I lingered.

Betsy seemed very much on the correspondent's mind. Concluding sentence in his "report": "I returned to my room in the Henry Grady very thoughtfully. I kept thinking of Betsy."

His frame of mind seemed to indicate that if Mr. Talmadge took Betsy out early in the morning and shot a few "niggers" before breakfast, just to work up an appetite for the morning meal, it would not have surprised Mr. Conrad very much.

Conrad makes the outrageous intimation that Mr. Talmadge had a hand in the Monroe lynching. A quotation from his downright libelous story:

> For the massacre of the four Walton County Negroes, it can now be definitely asserted, was but a pawn in Talmadge's political game.
> In fact, this correspondent can report that throughout Georgia there is wide suspicion that Talmadge himself may have given the green light for the "Hester kinfolks" to snuff out the lives of the two men at least.

It is a well-known fact in Atlanta among the police and political leaders that old Barney Hester, father of young Hester, who was knifed by the lynched Malcolm, talked with Talmadge, and the expression "They cooked it up together" is current in Georgia.

When the dust settled after the Georgia primary Gov. Ellis Arnall came out with more prestige nationally than did Talmadge, even if the latter won on the fluke of the county unit system. Arnall's stock mounted and he loomed closer as the compromise of vice-presidential candidate in the 1948 elections in case Wallace should not be satisfactory to the Democratic convention. The talk in Atlanta is that Talmadge needed to cut off the head that showed up higher than his even in defeat, and that he timed the lynching so as to embarrass his rival.

We have never read such utter rot.

It is so libelous that the Chicago paper should be held responsible, if there is any way of getting the issue honestly tried on its merits.

Era Of Violence And Oppression Faces Georgia

Chicago Defender – Ill.

EDITOR'S NOTE—In this revealing interview with one of the nation's leading hate mongers ace Defender Correspondent Earl Conrad brilliantly pictures the arrogant ignorance of the white supremacy clique. From this story we can visualize the haunting spectre which looms over Georgia—a return of Talmadgeism—a reign of terror whose only parallel must be drawn from the dark ages.

ATLANTA—The Negro in Georgia can expect nothing under Eugene Talmadge other than a course of violence and the sharpest oppression, I gathered, after an interview with the governor-nominate here this week.

Interviewing him in his suite in the Henry Grady Hotel, eight floors about my room, I told him that the Negroes of Georgia were fearful that there was tension among them and that I should like to convey to them a statement of reassurance from him allaying their fears.

There was no such reassurance. He looked at me as if I had no understanding of the situation and as if I needed such understanding as he could impart, and this is what he said:

8-24-46

"You can say this: Niggers will be taken care of all right. You got to understand the nigger. The nigger has no culture. He's only a hundred and fifty years old and you can't expect anything of people with no more background than that. The nigger has got to be taken care of and brought along.

'Polite' Talk Sat.

"People here in the South have always understood how to handle the nigger. We took care of him after the Civil War. The Union didn't take care of him. The niggers came back to their old masters and they were taken care of. The niggers love us and they don't like white people that treat them any different than the way we treat them. A good nigger has got no respect for a white man that treats them like an equal. Only thing the nigger respects is a good spanking.

"That's the way to handle the nigger. Take him out in back of the barn and give him a good spanking. He'll love you for that. Finish with him and he'll say, 'Yassuh, boss,' and he likes it, and you'll get along all right.

"This is a white man's country, Anglo-Saxon country and the nigger don't want to vote. There's no reason for the nigger to vote. White people know what's good for the nigger. There weren't many niggers that voted for me. I didn't want their vote. Of course there were a few that voted for me, the finest niggers in the country. Big men among the niggers. Aaron Spaulding and R. J. W. Harley.

"They love me. There was an old lady, an old nigger washwoman and when she saw me she said, "Why Mistuh Talmadge, I shuah am gonna vote for you. I'm certainly glad to see you. Certainly hope you get elected governor.' Why she just fell all over me, and that's the way I get along with niggers.

Saturday

"Northern folks can't understand the nigger. Only white men interested in niggers are just using them, just using them in politics, just using them for tools, just using them that way. There's only two kind of men treat a nigger like they were equals, men using them for political ends, or maybe some damned theoretician full of nonsense."

Talmadge's friends were W. A. Ainsley of Thomson, Ga. ("We spell it without a 'p'; there's no pee in Thomson," he said) and Jim Paige. Ainsley is a big, bluff red-faced business man of Thomson, and Paige kept remarking that he had been manager of the Henry Grady Hotel for nine years. Both kept raining "nigger" down on my ears just to show me how it was done, but the whole mood of the room was political, gay and friendly. They were trying in a candid way to enlighten a Northerner about the "nigger" and Ainsley showed me pictures of his grandchild and invited me up to his place for a few days.

Sad Experience Defender

The whole thing made me a little sad. To see so much conviction and earnestness in these men, mixed with their good fellow attitude toward each other and the white group, to see their utter seeping in the Southern tradition as an attitude that was right made me realize how the Negro question is woven into the Southern soul.

The men were high, not so much from liquor, but political exaltation. Talmadge had just come from a United States District Court hearing of a suit attacking the constitutionality of Georgia's county unit system and seeking to prevent him from assuming office.

My conversation with him opened on that note as I asked him what he thought about the suit and how it might come out.

"It better come out all right," he said, "or we'll tear the place down." Chicago, Ill.

"Do you have any specific program for Georgia if and when you assume office?" I acked. "Things like unemployment, housing?"

There were a few seconds of silence as Talmadge either thought about me or about what he was going to say and then he resumed with his usual anti-Negro substance. I have little recollection what he said here for it was simply more supremacist talk pouring out of him volubly and it had nothing to do with the general question of a program for all Georgia which I had asked.

Red Suspenders Sat. 8-24-46

He sat opposite, wearing no coat, his red suspenders holding up a gray pair of pants. He is lithe, quick of motion, like a young man, and he is very dark, much darker than many Negroes I know. I kept thinking as I stared at him that he was either terribly sun-tanned or that he had color in him. I still don't know which it is. He has leaping gray eyes, which seem large behind his glasses, and his jaw juts and moves about like a prizefighter actively fighting.

I had the feeling of the room seething with potential violence. Betsy, which is Talmadge's hunting rifle, was reclining against a wall in her case. Ainsley kept talking of the hunting trip he and Talmadge were going to take right away. They had to fly to Savannah in a few minutes, with Betsy, and there was an air of trying to bring the interview to an end, but I lingered.

Dramatic Incident

Throughout, the interview was on a plane of civility and frankness. Two of Talmadge's friends, Ainsley of Thomson, Ga. ("We spell it without a 'p'; there's no pee in Thomson," he said) and Jim Paige. Ainsley is a big, bluff red-faced business man of Thomson, and Paige kept remarking that he had been manager of the Henry Grady Hotel for nine years. Both kept raining "nigger" down on my ears just to show me how it was done, but the whole mood of the room was political, gay and friendly. On CIO

"What about CIO in Georgia, Mr. Talmadge?" I asked. "What's your position on that?"

He hesitated around that one and it is evident that he has no definite position and that he intends facing this as situations arise, assuming he becomes Governor. "Well, I believe in enforcement of the law," he said. "If they don't break the law it'll be all right. I'm for labor. I'm a laboring man."

Then I got to the $64 question and I put it this way:

"That Monroe case seems to have put Governor Arnall on the spot. What do you suppose he's doing about it or going to do about it?"

He handled that one easily. "I'm sure the Governor is making every effort to apprehend the responsible people."

I had no chance to pursue the Monroe case further for there was a sudden knocking on the door and Ainsley opened it and admitted a white-haired, stoutish woman in her fifties who burst into the room with a great show of affection for Governor Talmadge and lavished congratulations upon him and I was sure that she was the lunatic fringe of Talmadge's following and that she could not forbear to visit the hero in his lair and had managed to get in.

Gushing Woman

The men surrounded her and she shook their hands and put her arms around Talmadge and gushed, "Governor, you dear wonderful man. I want them to love you like I love you. I want them up North to know you like I know you. And I know they will."

She was welcome as a Gulf breeze and they ushered her into the room and she had taken over.

"Do you remember what you did for me 12 years ago?" she asked. "I shall never forget it. I was trying to get permits for a dozen blind persons in Atlanta to allow them to ask alms in the street and everybody turned me down. EVERYBODY turned me down. These poor people would have had to live on $3 a week if they did not supplement their income from the public and I couldn't bear to see that—and you gave them the permits. You put that thing through for me and made it possible for them to live better. I have always loved you for that."

The four of us were gathered about this woman now watching her as she reminded the Governor that she was an old Mobile belle, that she was Mrs. Frances Levkoff, a Southern aristocrat, and then suddenly the whole air of the room changed. She was saying in different words just what I had said to Talmadge before. She had come here with the tension of the whole community of Atlanta, and she was saying:

No Violence

"Tell me, Governor, tell me that there won't be any violence. That no harm will come to anyone. Tell us that there will be peace. Tell us that these people, these poor, hard-pressed Negro people will be able to breathe and that they will not suffer."

I could hardly believe my ears. The men were stunned. Talmadge was silent. They had no reply. She kept talking, kept praising and championing the people of color, kept pleading with him for a few words of kindness, for assurance there would be no reign of terror. She knew how big he was, she said, and he could help out, bring peace to the state.

But Talmadge was annoyed and his friends were upset. This wasn't the woman that had come in the door. This was a special pleader and she must be gotten out and this Northern white man must hear no more.

Mrs. Levkoff's appeal was harshly broken by the tall, handsome slightly dissipated-looking Jim Paige who questioned her constant use of the word "Negro" and asked, "Why don't you say 'nigger'?"

They Are People

She turned to Paige. "Why should I say that? These people are people, don't you understand?" She tried to tell them of the great achievement of Dr. Percy Julian. He had evolved an anesthetic for use in childbirth, a technique that took away the immemorial pain. Was not this deserving of respect, of the word 'Negro'? She spoke of the great voice of Marian Anderson and asked, "How can you call her 'nigger'?"

But no word such as Mrs. Levkoff or I wanted to hear came from Talmadge's lips. There was nothing but the high sign that he was giving Ainsley and Jim Paige with his eyes to get out, to call the thing off, but they had a few in them and were slow to catch on.

Suddenly Ainsley went for Betsy. He pulled her out of her case and Talmadge arose smilingly and grabbed hold of Betsy and fondled her affectionately as he might a lovely woman. Betsy was a beautiful, nasty-looking rifle. "Got to get to your plane," Ainsley said. "Gotta get going."

Fondly they put Betsy back into her case.

Pressed To Door

There was a busying around the room now as the Talmadge coterie in a kind of cordial enfilading movement pressed Mrs. Levkoff and myself toward the door.

Ainsley was all amiability and kept repeating his invitation for me to come to Thomson where I could learn about "niggers" from him and it was all so terribly embarrassing to one of my views, in full disagreement with these men, who were treating me with the only kind of candor they know and feel.

There was one last burst of politics before we were out of the room. Ainsley was orating:

"You know where the last of the Anglo-Saxon stock is?" and he paused to let us tell him, but of course we didn't know. He explained:

"There's a little strip of country in the northern part of South Carolina and you got some there; then there's Georgia, and then there's a strip of country up in Tennessee, and there's a few counties in Alabama and then there's some parts of Texas. That's where it's all still pure. Pee-ure An-gel-o-Saxon. And the hope of the world lies in that there stretch of country.

"And that man there," he said, pointing a prophetic finger at the very brunette Talmadge, "is gonna lead them."

White Belt Leader

I took another look at the leader of the "White Belt" from whom no denials came and I knew that I had definitely failed to secure any word of hope from the Governor-nominate that there would be peace in Georgia, and indeed, there might be worse than peace throughout the country. "We don't give a damn what the North thinks," one of the men had said during the half-hour session, and I saw now that they really did not care.

Sincere and deluded white supremacists. I had seen the face of American fascism, face to face, and the whole thing was menacing and filled with dynamite. These were the type of men around Talmadge. This was the outlook for Georgia even though a majority of right-minded element had repudiated this future.

Talmadge got in one more point, quite without any solicitation on my part. "I believe in free speech," he said, "and a free press. I certainly believe in a free press. But columnists are causing all the trouble in the country these days. Columnists are not doing the country any good."

Talmadge was probably wondering what this columnist would do with the interview.

I returned to my room in the Henry Grady very thoughtfully. I kept thinking of Betsy.

Dixie Grown Fascist Elected Governor By Trick Vote Count

The Chicago Defender

Chicago, Ill.

ATLANTA — The Klan rode high in Georgia last week, and the heavy stench of race violence hung in the air as Eugene Talmadge, the South's leading fascist and Negro-hater was swept into the nomination for governor on a trick vote counting system and the promise that "no Negro will vote in Georgia for the next four years."

Although an estimated 100,000 Negroes voted for the first time in what was probably the greatest vote ever recorded in a Southern state, other thousands and many whites were frightened away from the polls by Klan threats of violence. Sat 7-27-46

The Talmadge statement made in defiance of the U. S. Supreme court decision outlawing the white primary, placed a Ku Klux Klan shroud over the state's short era of progress. Terrorism and loss o political freedom are in prospect for thousands of Georgia Negroes for the next four black years as Talmadge boasts, "I had to win for the good of the South and the nation."

May Indicate Trend

Talmadge's victory, which may well set the political trend for the South in coming elections was a result of the county unit system which voided the popular majority of votes polled by liberal James V. Carmichael, Talmadge's chief rival. The system which operates in similar fashion to the electoral college, gives the total county unit vote to the candidate receiving the highest loeal vote. This permitted sparsely populated rural counties to turn the tide of victory in favor of the Klan supported hate-monger. There are 159 counties in Georgia with 400 unit votes. No county has more than six unit votes. Talmadge polled 234 of them, while Carmichael won 148. Needed to win are 206.

Anti-Negro Campaign

During his campaign, Talmadge promised to keep the Negro in his place. He said that he would restore the white primary, and prevent Negroes from crossing the state in non-segregated busses. On the eve of election he warned "wise Negroes" to stay away from the polls. The FBI reportedly is investigating threats against Negroes made by Talmadge.

Flushed by victory in the primary, which is tantamount to election in one-party Georgia, the hate monger lost no time in spreading his venom to the nation. In a radio broadcast last week he said that "The right people have got to 'rule' the South and the nation." He has also promised to "protect the traditions that our grandfathers fought and died for." He intimated that when he takes office next January, libel laws will be enacted to muzzle the state's 112 leading papers which opposed his nomination.

Race Baiter Loses

In a victory speech at McRae, Friday, he re-iterated his anti-Negro program for the state. He was greeted by 1,500 howling adherents who subscribed to his fascist proposals. Even though the notorious hate-monger was re-elected for a fourth term, the state rejected the white supremacy candiate for lieutenant governor. Race baiter Marvin Griffin was soundly defeated by state revenue commissioner M. E. Thompson, who left the race issue out of his campaign. The Defender

The day after the primary Carmichael, who was supported by liberal incumbent Gov. Ellis Arnall, said that if Talmadge won, it would prove that the South was not ready for progress. The eyes of the nation are on the outcome, he said, warning that large corporations would not invest in the state under a Talmadge administration. Under previous Talmadge administrations there were several notorious scandals in the state involving Klan tie-ups and misuse of funds. Chicago Ill.

Seek Independent Party

Undaunted by the outcome of the election, progressive forces have begun a movement to have Carmichael run for election this fall as an independent candidate. Although the state is solidly Democratic, it was felt that the only way to represent the people's will is to run Carmichael in the general election which is decided by a majority vote. Carmichael received 314,421 of the 701,778 votes cast, the greatest number ever given a candidate seeking office in the state. To date Carmichael has declined to run. Sat. 7-27-46

Elsewhere in the state, Mrs. Helen Douglas Mankin candidate for Congress from the fifth district, faced defeat at the hands of race-baiter, Judge James C. Davis. Although she polled a majority popular vote in the general election, she also was defeated by the unit system which the party employed at the last minute. Mrs. Mankin, who was elected to fill the unexpired term by Negro and CIO support, has battled the unit vote system constantly. She will contest the election on the basis that the unit system is not binding. Some observers here see an opportunity to form an independent party around Carmichael and Mrs. Mankin, chief sufferers under the unrepresentative unit vote system.

Halls of Congress

The House seat of Rep. Robert Ramspeck (D., Ga.), who quit to take a better-paying job in private industry, goes to Mrs. Helen Douglas Mankin, of Atlanta, Georgia's first Congresswoman. In a special election she polled 11,116 votes against 10,231 for Ramspeck's former secretary, Thomas L. Camp. Sixteen other men also ran.

Rep. Mankin

Backed by Women's clubs, and liberals, Mrs. Mankin upset political prognosticators who predicted a sweeping victory for Camp who had published ads asking Georgians if they wanted Sidney Hillman and New York Communists to dominate their Congressman. It was the first election since repeal of the poll tax and the ruling that Negroes cannot be excluded from the Democratic party. Some 6800 Negroes voted.

Mrs. Mankin drove a Red Cross ambulance in France in World War I, started her political career in the Atlanta City Council, then spent 10 years as a State Representative. Wife of a lawyer, mother of a merchant seaman, she stands for price controls as long as inflation threatens, Federal help in combatting the housing shortage, Federal aid for education, and equalization of the Nation's freight rates.

NEGRO PAPER SAYS VOTE WON ELECTION

ATLANTA, Feb. 13— (AP) —The Atlanta Daily World, Negro newspaper, said today the Negro vote decided the race for Congress in the fifth Georgia district, won by Mrs. Helen Douglas Mankin, state legislator, over 17 male candidates.

Mrs. Mankin, backed by the CIO, received 11,099 votes to win a close race with Thomas L. Camp, former secretary to Robert Ramspeck, whom Mrs. Mankin succeeds. Ramspeck resigned recently to take an aviation post. Camp was given 10,329 votes.

Camp led by 146 votes in the unofficial count until returns were received from precinct B in the third ward, predominately Negro. This precinct gave Mrs. Mankin 956 votes and Camp seven.

"It was clear," The Daily World said, "that the Negro vote had decided the race in a photo-finish."

The newspaper said Negroes served as precinct managers and clerks in Atlanta for the first time in a Congressional Election.

Balloting was in a general special election and all of the candidates were Democrats. Negroes vote in general elections in Georgia and a court test is under way which seeks to give them the ballot in primaries. A primary was not held in the Fifth District Congressional Contest.

Legislator Is Defeated In Georgia

AUGUSTA, Ga. (ANP)—Richmond County's Cracker party—and all the name implies—was swept out of power here for the first time in 20 years when over 4,000 Negroes voted for the first time in the heretofore white primary.

Roy Harris, speaker of the Georgia House of Representatives, who wants to call the general assembly into session to repeal all laws relating to the primary and keep Negroes from voting, went down into defeat before William S. Morris, liberal Augusta Chronicle editor and a citizenry tired of Cracker party ways. For 20 years, the party had controlled everything in Richmond county and run it with an iron hand.

Harris conceded his defeat early the morning following the election, which saw several hundred Negroes turned away from the polls at closing time. Morris polled 12,574 votes to Harris' 7,718.

Harris said upon admitting defeat: "I made the issue for the white primary and lost.

"We lost for three reasons: First, 4,600 Negroes were registered and most of them voted; second, some of our people welcome the idea of the Negro voting in white primaries; third, a great many of our people do not understand the serious predicament in which we find ourselves, but the fight is not over. It has just started. I expect to present to the members of te legislature a petition to call an extra session and I hope a sufficient number will sign."

A Compliment

Speaker Roy Harris, of the Georgia Legislature, has unwittingly paid Negro voters a great tribute.

Harris was defeated in his race for renomination to his legislative seat, and he has raised a great stir about the victory of his opponent, who ran against Georgia's most powerful political machine and won.

His defeat, Harris says, was brought about partly by the Negroes, who voted for the first time in Richmond County's primary.

If that is true, then Georgia and the whole South should be gratefule to those Negroes.

Roy Harris is a political enemy of Ellis Arnall, Georgia's liberal governor, who probably has done more than any other man of this generation to advance the South economically, politically and in reputation with the rest of the country.. . . . . .

It is chiefly because of Harris' efforts that Arnall cannot run to succeed himself as governor.

A vote against him was a vote for the principles Aarnall has supported. A vote for him was a vote for the Talmadge type of reactionary politics and government, which Arnall swept out of the state capitol four years ago in a voters' uprising that astounded machine politicians.

The wounded Harris is calling for a return to the white primary. He will have to find a better argument than his own defeat if he is to persuade Georgia's enlightened and emancipated voters.—The Huntsville Times.

The "Crackers" Crumble

A most significant election in Georgia, Richmond County Tuesday gave the ancient if not honorable "Cracker party" a thorough drubbing. Independent candidates went into the election with hopes—but likely not much conviction that so stirring a victory would be theirs. In the voting, Roy V. Harris, long-time Speaker of the Georgia House of Representatives, polled only 7,719 votes against the winning Independent candidate's 12,574. The margin was reflected in other races. Displacing Harris is William S. Morris, publisher of The Augusta Chronicle. Two other Independent candidates won seats in the Georgia Legislature, and the Crackers lost all County Commission posts.

The election was exciting, it is reported, but quiet. It is estimated that the total vote was the largest in the county's history. Young people took an interest in the election, one motor caravan going to Augusta from the University of Georgia to cast Independent votes. Negroes apparently had a small part in the Independent victory. It may be repeated, the election was very orderly—police on duty said it was the most peaceful they had seen. There is some talk of the influence of Negroes in the election. But only 4,614 of 26,541 registered voters were Negroes. Many were unable to vote, reportedly because of inadequate number of booths in the segregated polling places, and because—on the basis of Cracker party charges—many of the Negroes were unable to complete their ballots swiftly enough.

The defeat of an old-line party is always interesting, and piques even those who "leave politics to others;" news of such upsets tends to irritate the mild and meek, and suggests in a

Georgia's Angry Man

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

Allow me to add to my harsh words of a few days ago a few commendatory ones anent your editorial of July 21 on the political fiasco in Georgia. I feel that your attitude is one of helpfulness and I hope the Atlanta and other Georgia newspapers will take up the banner as vigorously.

I have written to the two Atlanta dailies in regard to the primary in which Gene Talmadge was so falsely nominated. After the promise of a renaissance of Georgia politics with Arnall, this affair leaves a Georgian angry.

An Analysis Of The Augusta Election

BY O. E. McKAINE

Throughout the country, and particularly in the South, much has been written in an attempt to discover the meaning of the Augusta elections. To date this writer, who took an active part in the campaign to increase the number of voters has failed to read anywhere what he considers to be a correct analysis of those results, in either the Negro or the white press.

Most, if indeed not all, of the newspapermen and the politicians have accepted the appraisal of W.S.Morris,legislator-elect of the independents and publisher of the Augusta Chronicle. Mr. Morris, replying to an assertion made by the defeated Speaker of the House, Roy V. Harris, that he (Morris) was elected by the Negro vote, stated that the majority that he and other independent candidates rolled up exceeded the combined registration of the Negroes who participated in the primaries for the first time. Mr. Morris also stated that in the 4th ward, which has the largest Negro registration in the county, Roy V. Harris and the Crackers received 352 Negro votes while the independents received only 221. All of this may be true but the analysis is far from being complete for it does not consider the intangibles involved.

For there was something else much more important and before the voting took place; it is hardly likely that he fools them now. Referring to Mr. Harris' camouflaging efforts, the victor, Mr. Morris, said, "it looks like some people never learn." In the respect that Mr. Morris has in mind, this may be true for the present. But, in a larger sense, it would appear that most people do learn—and when they have learned, they vote for good government, the kind Richmond County now may expect.

very significant which gave the independents their majority: something more than just the physical number of the Negro votes. And this something was the direct result of the greatly increased number of Negro voters. Without exception, where a well organized and effective effort is made to increase the number of Negro voters, there is immediately a corresponding increase in the number of white voters. The proof that this happened in Augusta and Richmond county where an intensive registration drive was undertaken to increase the number of Negro voters, can be found in the fact that the Normal vote of 4,000 to 5,000 rose to nearly 21,000. These new voters, of both races, usually vote against the machine and the incumbent office holders. They are citizens who, themselves, have either grievances against the machine, or want to become office holders or to become the recipients of the patronage the new office holders can bestow upon them. These are the causes, probably the chief causes, of the results in Augusta: they explain the victory of the independents. Memphis Scimitar, Memphis Tenn.

As evidence that the determination to exercise their rights has seeped down to the humblest Negroes, Stanford Smith, writing in The Augusta Chronicle of April 17th, stated that "in the Hill section, white mothers were seen entertaining their children in the public parks where customarily Negro nurses amuse the youngsters. In the homes (white) cold lunches, or none at all, was the order of the day as cooks were voting instead of cocking." In another paragraph the writer said; "On the home front and in business houses white persons experienced hardships as Negro janitors, cooks, yardmen and firemen stood in line many hours." In many of the wards the officials slowed up the process of registering Negroes. Mr. Smith, in the same article wrote that "In the 4th ward, approximately 150 failed to reach the booths." It rained that day in Augusta, it rained all day, but the Negroes had come prepared, prepared to help bring democracy to their city. Tuesday

However, there are other and interesting lessons to be drawn from the Augusta elections. One is that the seemingly "air-tight" machines of long tenure of power can be overthrown by a coalition of progressive forces. This coalition must in nearly all cases derive its stimulus from, and include, the Negro group. And invariably it is composed of liberal whites outside of the labor movement, the labor group itself, and the Negroes. In every instance, in the South, where Negroes have anew exercised their voting privileges in great numbers, they have voted progressive. This is historic and natural. 10-2-46

Another lesson is that the raising of the white supremacy issue spells disaster. It is a matter of record that no proponent of white supremacy has won an election in recent years.

Still another lesson, of particular interest to Negroes, is that when the Southern white liberals are assured of the active and effective support of the Negro population, they will become more vocal and active in trying to bring democracy to the South. Many southern white men and women, who are at heart ardent believers in full political, economic and legal rights for Negroes, remain silent and inactive because in many instances Negroes have not been able, and in some cases willing, to give them a support which would, at least in a great measure, compensate them for the losses they will inevitably sustain among certain white Southerners if they take a firm and bold stand in behalf of their brothers of darker hue.

That in Augusta more Negroes voted for the Cracker party than for the independents in ward 4 (The only ward out of seven which the machine carried), simply shows that there are still with us a group of old line Uncle Tom Politicians, hat-in-hand backdoor thumpers, palms itching for one of the Thirty Places, who perhaps only death can teach or change. The dole givers and the party machine bosses should take note that the results in Augusta have shown that this group cannot "deliver"; and that although they are dying fast, their real influence is already in the last throues of death.

Political Reprisals Retard Efficiency

Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

It is regrettable that one recently re-elected department head has seen fit to discharge one of his long-time employes so shortly after an election in which the latter made no contribution to his campaign fund. For while all the factors in the case have not yet been made public, the circumstances are such as to invite suspicion. 7-26-46

We have been especially pleased that the anticipated purge of the not inconsiderable segment of State employes who supported former Govs. Rivers and Talmadge has not developed. We had come to hope, noting Gov. Arnall's declaration that he had no intention of making political reprisal on those State workers who did not see eye to eye with him in the recent primary, that the era of personal vendettas was over. Certainly it should have been long ago. Friday

So long as competent men are discharged merely because they refused to go all out in support of this or that candidate, so long will the people be taxed for inefficient governmental operation.

Talmadge Denies Klan Backed Him

Answers Charges Made By Columnist Pearson

Louisville, Ky.

Santa Monica, Cal., July 22 (U.P.) —Cigar-smoking Eugene Talmadge, vacationing here after his recent nomination as Governor of Georgia for his fourth term, today took a tolerant view of Ku Klux Klan activities.

Talmadge drawled he didn't know enough about the Klan to decide whether he approves or disapproves of the hooded order; said he was the "only candidate in Georgia was wasn't a Klansman"; and said Negroes were not civilized enough to vote.

Denies Belonging to Klan.

The lanky Governor-nominate called a press conference at his hotel here to deny Columnist Drew Pearson's charge he was supported by the Ku Klux Klan.

"Drew Pearson seems to know a lot more than I do about me. I am not a member of the Klan, never have been and don't ever expect to be." Tues.

Talmadge also denied Pearson's broadcast charges that he had promised to appoint the grand cyclops of the Atlanta klavern as head of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation. 7-23-46

"I don't even know who the cyclops of the Atlanta klavern is and I haven't made a single commitment as to any appointments I intend to make," he said.

APPRECIATES SUPPORT GIVEN HIS DAUGHTER

My daughter and I are very grateful to the colored people of Chatham County for the wonderful support accorded her in the primary of July 17 in which she was a candidate for Associate Judge of the Municipal Court of Savannah.

MACON, July 31—Larkin Marshall, Macon Negro, arrested late Tuesday night on charges of issuing copy ballots during the recent State election, was released from the Bibb County jail Wednesday on a $2,000 bond.

Detectives L. B. McCallum and G. C. Britt, who arrested Marshall, said filing of formal charges followed a probe started by Bibb Solicitor General Charles Garrett at the time of the July 17 election.

At that time several copy ballots were reported in circulation in the hands of Bibb County and Macon voters, especially Negroes.

Red-Gallused Talmadge Wins Georgia Gubernatorial Race

Richmond, Va., Times-Dispatch
July 19, 1946

ATLANTA, July 18—(AP)—After pioneering a new political way in the South that amazed the nation, Georgia apparently has reverted to rock-ribbed Southern tradition and sent Gene Talmadge to the Governor's office again.

It will be the fourth term over the years for the red-gallused exponent of "white supremacy" whose political showmanship and unruly forelocks have become familiar to a generation of Georgians.

Conceivably the result could be changed, but mounting returns from the record-shattering Democratic primary left little doubt, and Talmadge's lead continued to mount over 36-year-old James V. Carmichael.

Eugene Talmadge
Won for 'Good of South'

James V. Carmichael
Loses Georgia Race

In Mississippi earlier this month, Senator Theodore (The Man) Bilbo and Representative John Rankin won on a "white supremacy" platform, but few Negroes were qualified to vote there and even fewer voted.

The latest tabulation showed Talmadge leading in 104 counties with an indicated unit vote of 238, with only 206 needed to nominate. Carmichael led in 46 counties with 152 unit votes. The popular vote was: Carmichael, 227,618; Talmadge, 208,296.

Ex-Governor E. D. Rivers, who ran a poor third and conceded victory to Talmadge, got an indicated unit vote of 18 and a popular vote of 45,898. Hoke O'Kelley, the fourth man, a veteran of both World Wars, got 7,865 popular votes and no unit votes.

Talmadge, who warned "wise" Negroes to remain away from the polls, won in a primary in which an estimated 100,000 or more Negroes voted for the first time, as well as many thousand teenagers.

Exuberant in victory, Talmadge said: "I had to win for the good of the South and the nation. No Negro will vote in Georgia for the next four years."

While Negroes have voted recently in Deep South primaries, there was nothing like so large a Negro vote as there was in Georgia. There are negligible voting restrictions in Georgia and the poll tax was repealed in 1945.

The Negro vote—135,000 Negroes were registered against about 850,000 whites—went apparently almost solidly for Carmichael, who had the blessing of dynamic young Governor Ellis Arnall.

Arnall, who four years ago handed 61-year-old Talmadge the bitterest defeat of his long career, sparked the fight in Georgia for lowering the voting age to 18 and repealing the poll tax.

The Governor thwarted an abortive movement to circumvent the Supreme Court decision that Negroes can vote in the South's Democratic primaries—real election in the one-party States.

Would Repeal All Laws

Talmadge was elected on a platform calling for restoration of the "white primary" in Georgia. This he would do by repealing all laws relating to primaries and leave them regulated only by the Democratic party.

The county unit vote, rather than the popular vote, counts in Georgia. Based on population, counties have two, four or six unit votes. The candidate getting a majority in a county wins its unit votes.

The unique unit vote system, incidentally, provided a muddle in the most interesting of the State's congressional contests, involving Helen Douglas Mankin, the State's first regularly elected Congresswoman.

Mrs. Mankin represents the Fifth District, which includes Atlanta (Fulton County) and two smaller counties. She was elected in a special election a few months ago, with the Negro vote the balance of power.

For 14 years the popular vote had prevailed in the district. But for yesterday's primary the lame duck Democratic committee decreed the unit system. Atlanta has far more population than the rest of the district.

Mrs. Mankin piled up an impressive popular vote over Judge James C. Davis, who led 8 to 6 in unit votes. Mrs. Mankin never recognized the old committee, appointed her own, and the State committee will probably have to decide whether the unit or popular vote will count.

The State's youngest congressional candidate, 30-year-old W. H. Wheeler, ex-Army officer, led Representative John S. Gibson in the Eighth District. Representative Malcolm Tarver trailed Henderson Lanham in the Seventh District.

RURAL VOTE GAVE TALMADGE VICTORY IN GEORGIA TEST

The Times
New York, N. Y.
Sun. 7-21-46

Few Negroes Outside Chief Urban Centers Appear to Have Cast Ballots in Primary

By GEORGE HATCHER

ATLANTA, July 20—Georgia's peculiar county unit vote system, which gives the balance of power to preponderantly rural counties; a division of anti-Talmadge votes among two candidates; and a white supremacy issue all combined to sweep red-suspendered Eugene Talmadge into the Governorship in the Democratic primary this week. Nomination is equivalent to election under Georgia's one-party system.

The absence of any one of these factors very likely would have resulted in Mr. Talmadge's defeat, astute political observers agreed today.

James V. Carmichael, Mr. Talmadge's principal opponent, got the most number of popular votes—in fact, more popular votes than any other Georgia Governorship candidate had ever received—but Mr. Talmadge, carrying his white supremacy campaign to all corners of the State, and particularly into the rural parts of south Georgia, captured a plurality in the most number of counties, and this amassed a county unit vote of landslide proportions.

First Negro Vote

Negroes voted for the first time since Reconstruction days but Mr. Talmadge promised in his campaign speeches, and again upon his election, that the white primary would be restored by him.

Most of the estimated 100,000 Negroes who participated in the primary cast their ballots in the urban centers. Their participation in most rural areas was almost negligible.

Before the election, white voters were admonished by Mr. Talmadge that this election would be their last chance to "save Georgia for the white man." He also advised the Negroes to remain away from the polls. Mr. Talmadge, who has previously served three terms as Governor, said there would be an attempt to mix the races in the schools, on buses and trains and in other public institutions.

White Majority Significant

Much significance is attached to the fact that Mr. Talmadge received large majorities in counties having heavy Negro populations. The whites turned out in unprecedented numbers. Most Negroes either were disqualified as voters, failed to register or simply neglected to vote. There are more Negroes than whites in 46 of Georgia's 159 counties. Mr. Talmadge received the unit votes of thirty-six of these counties and also got about the same proportion of support in sections where 35 to 50 per cent of the population are Negroes.

E. D. Rivers, twice Governor of Georgia and a poor third in this week's voting, and Mr. Carmichael divided the votes of those opposed to Mr. Talmadge in county after county, with the result that Mr. Talmadge's minority became a plurality. Under Georgia's county unit system, heavily populated counties have six unit votes, counties of medium population have four unit votes and every county has a minimum of two unit votes. Of the 410 unit votes in the State's 159 counties, 242 could be furnished by two-vote counties.

Voters' Strength

Thus, a resident of Echols County, where the registration list totals less than a thousand, has many times the voice in Government of a voter in populous Fulton (Atlanta) County, where registrants totaled 122,000. Echols has two unit votes, Fulton six.

The meaning of Mr. Talmadge's victory, as applied to the coming four years, is a subject attracting considerable discussion and concern. Repeal of the primary laws, which must be by act of the Legislature, undoubtedly would lead to protest action in the courts inasmuch as some doubt exists as to whether such procedure would provide a legal side-step of the Supreme Court ruling that Negroes cannot be excluded from State primaries.

Sun. 7-21-46

There is also much concern over the racial animosity which Mr. Talmadge engendered by his campaign tactics and also a feeling that the recently revived Ku Klux Klan received a "green light" from Mr. Talmadge's election. Mr. Talmadge several weeks ago stated that he welcomed the support of the Klan and is said to have been aided in his election by it.

Only four years ago when seeking re-election, Mr. Talmadge was repudiated by the voters for his dictatorial operation of the State government, for his "political interference" and dismissal of educators within the university system, resulting in the loss of the State universities' accredited standings, and for his bitter attacks upon the Roosevelt Administration.

The People of Georgia Have Just Begun to Fight

The Worker
New York, N. Y.
Sun. 7-21-46

By Homer B. Chase

ATLANTA, Ga. — The recent Georgia Democratic primary was an important event for the entire nation. Georgia has a population of 3.5 million of which 25 percent are Negroes. Slightly over half of the state's population lives in urban communities and there is a steady, ever-increasing trend from the plantations to the cities and towns.

The state administration headed by Gov. Arnall and supported by Georgia's labor movement and the Negro people abolished the poll tax, passed the 18-year-old vote and instituted other democratic reforms during the past four years.

Gov. Arnall was and is part of a broad progressive coalition developing in the South. The most progressive coalition of the South-ern people, the sharecroppers and small farmers. Also included are part of the urban middle class and some southern businessmen such as the publisher of 100 newspapers which opposed Talmadge in the primaries.

All these sections of the South-ern people have one aim in common though at present their methods and degree of struggle for that aim are quite different.

THAT ONE AIM is to break the stranglehold of Wall Street and the plantation owners on the political and economic life of the South.

Wall Street and the plantation owners want the South to remain in a semi-colonial position with empty war factories, illiteracy, disease, lynchings and poverty as the order of the day.

The democratic coalition being formed is fighting for elementary democratic rights — full employment, right to vote, educational and health facilities, machine-producing factories and the chance for skilled work that goes with them.

The progressives received a temporary setback in Talmadge's minority election.

THE COUNTY UNIT SYSTEM was devised as a means of keeping political and economic power in the hands of the plantation owners. Reaction was able, for the moment at least, to steal victory from the progressive majority of Georgia voters who voted for Carmichael.

But there were some positive aspects of the election.

- One million one hundred thousand Georgians registered; nearly 600,000 voted.
- 134,000 Negroes registered with over 100,000 reported voting despite threats and intimidation by the Klan element.
- The liberal Mrs. Mankin's large plurality.
- The clear plurality of almost 50,000 voters for Carmichael over Talmadge.
- Defeat of two Congressional reactionaries, Tarver and Gibson.
- The election of three Arnall men to key posts in the state administration and election of a state assembly which appears to be anti-Talmadge.

SOME TASKS Georgia progressives face are:

- Exploring the possibilties of stopping Talmadge from being seated as Governor.
- To mobilize to defeat Talmadge's campaign to evade Supreme Court decisions and restore the white primary.
- To campaign for the end of the county unit system.
- To support Mrs. Mankin in her campaign to be seated in Congress on the basis of her large plurality.

ORGANIZED LABOR must play a leading role in the fight for these demands if it is to escape the Taladge concentration camps of the mid-thirties.

Organized labor can and must carry on further joint political action with the Negro people of Georgia to advance the democratic coalition and defeat Talmadge.

THE NEGRO PEOPLE will not only work with labor and the democratic coalition but will organize actions of their own. The Negro people who voted, acted like heroes in defying Talmadge and the Klan's threats. Never again must the disgrace of a white primary muddy up the name of Georgia. Sun. 7-28-46

During the campaign the Trotzkyites attacked Carmichael and ignored Talmadge. In state PAC they sabotaged support for progressives because "the farmer's vote will defeat progressive candidates if CIO endorses them." This idea was refuted in Alabama where the CIO endorsed Folsom for governor and the small farmers helped elect him.

The recently reorganized Communist Party of Georgia made its main slogan "Defeat Talmadge." The party recognizes that the campaign would have ended with even more positive results if Carmichael and organized labor had raised more sharply the domestic program of Roosevelt whose name retains great prestige with the working people of Georgia.

The people of Georgia have just begun to fight and the reactionaries will have little time to gloat.

Talmadge Is Released From Hospital

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga. Sun. 10-20-46

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 19. (AP)—The attending physicians of Gov.-Nominate Talmadge of Georgia officially released him Saturday from the hospital here where he was brought several weeks ago suffering a stomach hemorrhage but the time or date of his departure was not revealed at Talmadge's personal request.

His physicians said they had told Talmadge he could leave the hospital now at any time he wished.

They said, however, that the Georgian had specifically requested that his departure be kept confidential since he wanted to return to an undesignated place in Georgia to continue a period of quiet and rest.

His physicians said Talmadge had continued to improve since his recent illness, which was serious at the time. They said he had been advised to continue on his present routine of diet and rest for the next several weeks.

Dr. Mays Analyses Vote

WHITE SUPREMACY WINS IN GEORGIA

45a

By BENJAMIN E. MAYS, Courier Columnist

ATLANTA, Ga.—White supremacy alone won for Talmadge in the July 17 election. The white supremacy argument was the one issue that set Talmadge's platform off from the others. On all other isues, such as more pay for teachers, paved roads, good government, et cetera, Carmichael, Rivers, Talmadge and O'Kelley were standing essentially on the same platform. Four years ago I tried to tell my friends that the race issue did not defeat Talmadge in 1942, but rather his discrediting the university system of Georgia. If Talmadge had had foresight enough to lay off the university system of Georgia he would have beaten Arnall in 1942.

In a recent article in The Pittsburgh Courier I stated there that the July 17 would determine whether the preaching of white supremacy alone is sufficient to defeat or elect a candidate in Georgia. Those who contend that a candidate cannot win in this enlightened age by preaching a doctrine of race hatred have only to look at Mississippi and Georgia.

RURAL WHITES BELIEVE IN TALMADGE TALKS

As we analyze Talmadge's victory there are several things we must keep in mind. When a political candidate battles for office on a white supremacy platform he begins with a multiude of sympathetic hearers. There is no doubt in my mind that the vast majority of white voters in Georgia and elsewhere agree with Mr. Talmadge when he says that white supremacy must be maintained. He starts with a great reservoir of support. The more liberal white people disagree with Talmadge when he argues that if Negroes vote white supremacy will be destroyde and Negroes will run the State. The thinking white people know that this is not so. They know that Negroes vote in New York State, but they do not rule the State. They know that Negroes have been voting in North Carolina for about twenty-five years and that Negroes do not rule North Carolina. They see no ill effect of Negroes' voting in Tennessee, Virginia, Kentucky, Texas and Florida. They have no fears that one Negro in Georgia will dominate three white men or that one Negro in ten will dominate America.

But to the vast majority of white people in rural Georgia, they cannot make any such distinction. When Talmadge tells them that if Negroes vote terrible things will happen to white people, that Negroes will usurp power ordained of God for white men only, and that the only way to keep these things from happening is to elect him Governor, they believe him. He appeals to their emotions, their fears, and their prejudices with the fervor of a rural Baptist preacher calling sinners to repentance. He does it so convincingly that even some hard-boiled intellectuals believe him.

It all adds up to this: the human mind can be made to believe any lie, however fantastic, if told convincingly and if repeated often enough. The power of the radio becomes obvious in this case—the power of the human voice over the printed word especially with the non-reading public and the illiterate and the near illiterate. Talmadge's great strength comes from rural Georgia and small towns. Talmadge won this race with Governor Arnall against him and with the vast majority of the newspapers of the State against him; I believe 120 of them. The Courier

COUNTY UNIT VOTE MUST BE CHANGED

Things were happening so fast that the prejudiced Georgians began to look to Eugene Talmadge as the white man's savior; two Federal courts and the Supreme Court saying Negroes had a right to vote; 130,000 registered Negroes on the books in Georgia; a Federal decision against interstate segregation on buses; district judges restraining the purge of Negro registered voters; the dead FEPC which Talmadge implied was still alive and argued that it meant Negro employment in all white concerns up to 40 per cent—all these Talmadge used effectively to the very end. Crusading with a messiah complex, Talmadge made a great impression upon the rural and small town mind. Unfortunately less than half of the million registered voters went to the polls. A larger voting constituency might have helped Carmichael. Negroes voted in large numbers and this may allay the fear of Negroes' voting in the future. Pittsburgh, Pa.

Somehow this county unit vote in Georgia must be changed. It is grossly unfair. Rural Georgia runs the State. There are 159 counties in Georgia. Eight of them have six unit votes; thirty of them have four unit votes and one hundred twenty-one of them have two unit votes each. It means that three small counties in Georgia with a total population of 10,000 have six unit votes, the same number Fulton County has with a population of a half million. Carmichael won by many popular votes. The county unit system defeated Carmichael. What Talmadge's fourth term in office will mean to Georgia and the South we will begin to know next January.

As Mr. Talmadge seeks to further enslave Negroes, he enslaves tens of thousands of white people; the Negroes and whites will be free together or the chains of slavery will bind both to a system of stagnation and injustice. It cannot be otherwise. Sat. 7-27-46

Arnall Bluffing on Klan, Talmadge Tells Newsmen

Atlanta Constitution

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Eugene Talmadge swapped words with a group of big town reporters over the air Friday night for the nation to hear.

Georgia's governor-elect had a ready answer for every barbed question, but nothing much new came out of the broadcast that Georgians hadn't been hearing for months.

Talmadge did allow that he didn't feel disposed to try to bring the poll tax back to Georgia. Its repeal, he said, permits many poor white folks to vote. He's only against Negroes voting. He says he'll carry out his campaign pledge to prevent them from voting henceforth.

How about 18-year-olds? That's all right, so long as they are white. It seems, he observed, a good many 18-year-olds voted for Talmadge.

How about the county unit system which enabled him to be elected without the popular vote? It's a great thing; other states should follow Georgia and use it.

Wouldn't repeal of all election laws, to circumvent the Supreme Court decision that Negroes can vote, imperil the county unit system that permits rural Georgia to dominate state affairs?

No, says Talmadge. It still would have the protection of the State Democratic Committee, as it has.

What about the Klan?

"Don't ask me. I'm not a member. Ask the present governor, Ellis Arnall. He's a member. He's a gold card in it." (Arnall denied a similar charge made against him several weeks ago.)

What about Arnall's "fight to the death" on the Klan?

"Oh, he won't do that. It's all a bluff."

Lynching Record

Talmadge denied flatly 14 Negroes were lynched during his three former administrations. "It's a lie," he said.

When names of some of the victims were read to him, he said: "It's erroneous; it's based on wrong information."

He expressed the view his campaign of "white supremacy" had nothing to do with the recent massacre of four Negroes in Walton County.

Asked what he'd do about the Walton killings if he were governor, he said:

"That's Arnall's business."

The interview was over the Mutual network on the "Meet the Press" program.

Four interrogators shot questions at the governor-elect from a studio in Washington. They were Ernest K. Lindley, of Newsweek magazine; Lawrence Spivak, American Mercury; Arthur Sylvester, Newark News, and Lorraine Nelson, Atlanta Constitution. Talmadge answered them at WATL here.

Minority Rule

Talmadge Wins Against Georgia's Will

Jun 7-19-46

Although he trailed by more than 18,500 popular votes, Gene Talmadge was nominated for his fourth term as Governor of Georgia by virtue of the State's antiquated voting system.

With returns from 1431 of 1735 precincts, Talmadge led James V. Carmichael, by 249 to 141 unit votes. The popular vote was: Talmadge, 235,688; Carmichael, 254,369. Former Gov. E. D. Rivers had 52,583 popular and 18 unit votes.

Georgia's unit voting system assigns from two to six unit votes to a county depending on population (206 are needed for a majority). The maximum of six penalizes urban areas.

Carmichael was the choice of Georgia's liberal incumbent, Ellis Arnall, and had the support of some 100,000 Negro voters, who went solidly for him in the large cities where their votes didn't help under the unit system.

In victory, Talmadge crowed: "Most Negroes know their real friends are Southern white men. No Negro will vote in Georgia for the next four years."

Rep. Helen Douglas Mankin, a

Gene Talmadge, hoisted aloft by supporters.

liberal, representing the Fifth District, including Atlanta, was beaten for renomination by James C. Davis, 8 unit votes to 6, though she led in popular votes 33,675 to 26,175.

Post Mortem

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga.

Editor Constitution: Although election post-mortems are believed to serve little purpose, I think the people of Georgia should realize that, should Talmadge not prove his worth during his coming four-year term, citizens have E. D. Rivers to thank for the deed.

On the basis of present returns, Talmadge has 238 county unit votes; Carmichael 154, and Rivers 18. Thur 7-25-46

It was interesting in checking over the list of counties to see that Talmadge won over Carmichael by small margins in 19 counties with a unit vote total of 44. Had Rivers pulled out and these counties gone for Carmichael, the final unit vote would have read: Carmichael 198; Talmadge 194. This does not allow for the original 18 unit votes Rivers took; Carmichael would have needed only eight of these to have taken the State on the first ballot.

Believe it or not, but in nine of the 19 counties which gave Talmadge small majorities, Carmichael lost the counties by less than 100 votes. Consider Wilkes where the margin was 30 and Rivers' vote 282; or Walton where the margin was 78 and Rivers polled 503; or Thomas where the margin was 298 and Rivers' vote was 1,033; or Rabun where the margin was 99 and Rivers polled 457; or Murray where the margin was 64 and Rivers took 117; or Montgomery where the margin was 23 and Rivers polled 67; or Harris (of Harris County Journal fame), where the margin was 20 and Rivers' vote 62; or Meriwether where the margin was 17 and Rivers' total 167; or Franklin where the margin was 163 and Rivers polled 617; or Decatur where the margin was only 24 and Rivers' vote was 352; or Crisp where the margin was 54 and Rivers polled 243! And so on the list reads for another eight counties.

Mr. Talmadge has said he wants to be Georgia's best Governor in history. Voters of all candidates will heartily indorse this desire, but Mr. Talmadge must do some fancy stepping to achieve his goal in the light of his own past and the excellent record established by Gov. Arnall. Georgia servicemen held up their heads with pride when fellow Americans complimented them on Arnall; previously Georgians would be scorned with "He's from Georgia—you know, Talmadge's State." Georgians should think about eliminating the unit rule.

Estimated 100,000 Negroes Ballot For First Time

Charleston S.C.
News and Courier

Atlanta, July 18.—(AP): Repudiating a new liberalism espoused by Ellis Arnall, Georgia has reverted to Southern tradition and sent 61-year-old Gene Talmadge back to the governor's office.

It marks the fourth time over the years that Talmadge, beaten for the governorship four years ago by young Arnall, has been elected governor of the South's "empire state".

Complete returns from 146 of the state's 159 counties tonight gave Talmadge the Democratic nomination—equivalent to election—over the Arnall candidate, 36-year-old James V. Carmichael.

Talmadge, whose political showmanship and unruly forelocks have become familiar to a generation of Georgians, was nominated in yesterday's primary apparently without the popular vote. Fri.

Earlier this month in Mississippi, Senator Theo (The Man) Bilbo and Representative John Rankin, like Talmadke, won on an issue of "white supremacy", but few negroes were qualified to vote there and even fewer voted.

100,000 Negroes Vote

But Talmadge, who advised "wise" nogroes to stay away from the polls, won in a primary in which an estimated 100,000 negroes voted for the first time, as well as thousands of 18-year-olds.

The incomplete returns gave Talmadge 226 county unit votes, 20 more than is necessary to nominate. Carmichael had only 128 unit votes. Ex-Governor E. D. Rivers, who ran a poor third, had 18. Hoke O'Kelley, the fourth man, had none.

The county unit vote is the only thing that counts in the Georgia Democratic primary. Carmichael, it appeared, would get the popular vote. The count stood: Carmichael 307,126; Talmadge 296,751; Rivers 67,196; O'Kelley, 11,520. 7-19-4

Besides the unit votes in counties which have completed tabulations, Talmadge was leading in seven counties with 14 unit votes, and Carmichael was leading in six counties with 24 unit votes.

No Comment From Arnall

The returns came from 1,599 of the state's 1,746 precincts.

As returns showed conclusively the result of the torrid primary, there came no comment from Arnall, who is prohibited by the state constitution from succeeding himself.

Exuberant in victory, Talmadge said: "I had to win for the good of the South and the nation. No negro will vote in Georgia for the next four years."

While negroes have voted recently in Deep South primaries there was nothing like so large a negro vote as there was in Georgia. There are negligible voting restrictions in Georgia and the poll tax was repealed in 1945.

The negro vote—135,000 negroes were registered against about 850,000 whites—went apparently almost solidly for Carmichael who had the blessing of dynamic young Governor Ellis Arnall.

Arnall, who four years ago handed 61-year-old Talmadge the bitterest defeat of his long career, sparked the fight in Georgia for lowering the voting age to 18 and repealing the poll tax.

The governor thwarted an abortive movement to circumvent the supreme court decision that negroes can vote in the South's Democratic primaries—real election in the one-party states.

Talmadge was elected on a platform calling for restoration of the "white primary" in Georgia. This he would do by repealing all laws relating to primaries and leave them regulated only by the Democratic party.

County Unit System Used

The county unit vote, rather than the popular vote, counts in Georgia. Based on population, counties have two, four or six unit votes. The candidate getting a majority in a county wins its unit votes.

The unique unit vote system, incidentally, provided a muddle in the most interesting of the state's congressional contests, involving Helen Douglas Mankin, the state's first regularly elected congresswoman.

Mrs. Mankin represents the Fifth district, which includes Atlanta (Fulton county) and two smaller counties, she was elected in a special election a few months ago, with the negro vote the balance of power.

Piles Up Popular Vote

For 14 years the popular vote had prevailed in the district.. But for yesterday's primary the lame duck Democratic committee decreed the unit system. Atlanta has far more population that the rest of the district. 7-19-46

Mrs. Mankin piled up an impressive popular vote over Judge James C. Davis, who led 8 to 6 in unit votes. Mrs. Mankin never recognized the old committee, appointed her own, and the state committee will probably have to decide whether the unit or popular vote will count.

The state's youngest congressional candidate, 30-year-old W. H. Wheeler, ex-army officer, led Representative John S. Gibson in the Eighth district. Representative Malcolm Tarver trailed Henderson Lanham in the Seventh district.

Negroes Ballot In First Primary

Thurs. 7-18-46

ATLANTA, July 17—(UP)—Eugene Talmadge, three times Governor of Georgia, and liberal James V. Carmichael, who represented forces that sent Talmadge into political retirement four years ago, battled it out tonight in a see-saw race for the governorship in a State primary marked by a record turnout of voters.

Returns from the first 70 of Georgia's 1,735 precincts gave Talmadge 53 unit votes to 19 for Carmichael and two for former Governor E. D. Rivers.

Carmichael had 5,509 popular votes, Talmadge, 5,181, and Rivers, 1,615.

ernor by incumbent Ellis Arnall, declared Negro voting was not an issue. He said, "Good, honest government" was the issue and that Talmadge introduced the racial question to make voters forget his record of "dictatorship."

To this, Talmadge retorted, "I didn't write the Supreme Court decisions about our time-tested white primary and against segregation on buses."

Also in the Governor's race were E. D. Rivers, former Governor, and Hoke O'Kelly, war veteran, of Logansville.

County Unit System

Nomination is under a county unit system, similar to the electoral college in a presidential election.

There are 159 counties. Eight of the larger counties have six unit votes, 30 have four, and the remainder two each. A plurality of the popular vote entitles a candidate to the county's unit vote. Thus, three small counties with a total unit vote of six and total population of around 7,000 or 8,000, can equal the vote of one six-unit county with 100,000 or more voters. Times 7-18-46

There are 410 unit votes and a majority is required for nomination for Governor. If one of the candidates fails to receive a majority, the two top men will enter a run-off on July 31. Polls closed at 6 P. M. (Eastern Standard Time), except in Fulton County (Atlanta), where the closing hour was 7 P. M. Due to the unprecedented registration of more than 1,000,000, it was expected the count in some centers would not be completed before tomorrow morning.

Georgian Visits New York

News & Courier Charleston, S.C.

Having been defeated by the voters of Georgia, with the help of a county unit system that implements the traditional American form of representative government, the Arnall faction is carrying its story to broader fields. The assistant attorney general of Georgia has been in New York, ostensibly to investigate Northern connections of the Georgia Ku Klux Klan. He discovered a convenient sounding board in Attorney General Nathaniel L. Goldstein of New York.

The New York newspapers are full of stories about the Klan, and The Herald Tribune publishes a three-column picture of the visiting Georgian with a display of documents alleged to show a connection between the Klan and the Nazis. Naturally, New York politicians welcome the Klan issue, especially when it comes up on a silver platter from the South. Sun 8-16-46

Mr. Goldstein, the New Yorker, reported that one of the "top three candidates" in the recent Georgia campaign for governor had come to New York State to seek funds from the New York Ku Klux Klan. Mr. Goldstein did not name the candidate, but it is not difficult to figure out whom he means. Now comes the emissary of Governor Ellis Arnall, allying with Mr. Goldstein, who later that same day addressed 1,000 negroes in convention on New York State's "Crusade against native Fascists". He described "the Bilbos and the Rankins and the Talmadges in our midst" as "thorns in the side of our democratic body politic", but never a word about the Marcantonios and the de Lacys.

The News and Courier has repeated to the point of boredom that it has no use for masked orders, but there are other thorns in the side of the body politic that need plucking more immediately if the republic is to survive as it was originally conceived.

Georgia's Electoral College

News and Courier

Not only the Left Wing press, which might have been expected to moan at the election of Eugene Talmadge as governor of Georgia, but the "conservative" New York Times and the New York Herald Tribune also are deploring "minority rule" in our neighboring Southern state. Georgia's county unit system which put Talmadge into office despite the lack of a popular majority is being treated as though it were something un-American. The Associated Press, supposedly without political bias, reported that "only in Georgia" could this have occurred.

Have our esteemed newspaper colleagues overlooked the electoral college which chooses not the governor of any state, but the president of all the states? Four times in United States history has "minority rule" chosen a president: Lincoln in 1860, Hayes in 1876, Cleveland in 1892 and Wilson in 1912. Charleston, S.C.

The system of checks and balances written into the constitution of the United States, and if it had not been so written the states would not have ratified it in the first place, deliberately throws out majority rule as the sole factor [illegible] government. Nevada with 110,000 po[illegible] has the same total of two senators as [illegible] York with 13,000,000. The object, as [illegible] Georgia, was to give rural dwellers a break in competition with the herded thousands in city wards. 7-23-46

Talmadge for the Georgians

News and Courier

Like their cousins in Mississippi, the Georgians have shown resentment at outside interference by reelecting a man who has been vilified and pilloried up and down the country. Without attempting comparison of Senator Bilbo and Governor Talmadge as individuals, we view the pressures exerted against them as coming from the same quarter and the Georgians have acted as any other freemen would in refusing to be pushed around. Friday

James V. Carmichael, a pleasant young man whom Ellis Arnall was backing against the gallus-snapping Talmadge, was quoted Wednesday night as counting on votes from the larger cities to pull him out of an early slump as returns were received. But Georgia's county unit system, a truly American conception of representative government, does not give as much numerical strength to the herded voters of the cities as democrats would demand. Charleston, S.C.

In a sense, though not literally, the battle lines in Georgia were drawn between country and small town folk on the one hand, whose language Talmadge speaks like a native, and the slicker ideas of the cities. Fortunately for Georgia, the big city does not yet dominate the state. Largest in area east of the Mississippi river, Georgia is a segment of the union well worthy of political study.

The triumph of Talmadge should be interpreted not so much as Georgian admiration for a demagogue as their devotion to a home-grown, indigenous and independent way of life, as it has been known in happier years of the past. With all his obvious faults, Gene Talmadge is a Georgian through and through, and the Georgians seem to like him. Who shall challenge their right to have him for their governor? C 7-19-46

AN UNSOUGHT EXPLANATION

Herald Tribune

We do not know just why Dr. Holley, (a man who made a substantial contribution to the educational and political outlook of Negroes when he left Georgia) made an explanation of his voting for Mr. Talmadge. Nor do we know who is interested in having an explanation from him. We cannot understand how any sensible person could expect Negroes or any other group to vote against themselves, against their future, against their own preservation. For the sake of their own self-respect, they could do nothing else than vote against a candidate who said over and over that he did not want their votes and who stated in unmistakable language that he intended to keep them from ever voting again. They simply voted for self preservation. We understand why Mr. Talmadge fears Negroes' voting en bloc, and we suggest a way to keep them from doing so as long as they have the right to vote: find some other issue than keeping them down—like equal opportunity for all people to enjoy basic human rights, equal opportunity to earn a decent living, equal educational opportunity, and equal opportunity to grow into the best citizens in accordance with their capacities and abilities.

The promises Dr. Holley speaks of, are inconsistent with the campaign promises, the governor elect made to his constituents, and Dr. Holley knows it. "Governor Talmadge is interested in helping the Negro take his place in the new South . . ." What place? This statement from the doctor is of the same piece with that of another Negro educator who says, "There is certainly a beautiful affection between the races in the South that right thinking folks hope and trust will never be lost." The trouble about these statements is, who and what will determine the Negro's place in the new South, and are all of the Negro's wants and wishes satisfied in just making a living. Sun. 9-25-46

GEORGIA IN THE LIMELIGHT

Herald Tribune

Mr. Eugene Talmadge was nominated in the primary for the governor-ship. In a one party system this is tantamount to election. We had hoped against hope that he would have been defeated. We are more hurt than disappointed: We are as a first reaction, sickened and inclined to be discouraged that the people of Georgia showed such apparently complete agreement with his attitude toward Negroes and their right and aspirations to participate in the government under which they live and which they are compelled to support. He magnified into an issue an ogre, a long delayed right confirmed by the highest court in the land. Aside from the abuse he leveled at them, a people who he knew could not answer back, he set up the awful picture of Negroes' voting en bloc as an immediate threat to white supremacy. He exaggerated the effect of the balance of power, ignoring entirely the working of the democratic process. His two previous administrations and his campaign promises as to what he intends to do, mean that the prospect for Negroes in the Empire State of the South are black indeed. They are not too rosy for white people who had hopes of seeing Georgia emerge from under the cloud which covered her prior to Mr. Arnall's administration. But gloomy as the prospect may be, there is yet hope as long as there are white people in this state, who believe that 1,084,000 human beings essentially law abiding, struggling to become citizens in fact, can be converted into a valuable asset to the state. Mr. Talmadge's threat to put the Negro "in his place," a place which he designs for him, can not be carried out without holding back the state's progress. Keeping Negroes in comparative ignorance, failing to provide equal health services, keeping him poverty stricken, means keeping the state backward. It is a truism that to keep a man down one must stay down with him. We have hope in the people who believe in justice and democracy, call them "carpetbaggers," "scalawags," or agents of Moscow as he will. Negroes will go down fighting with the best of their ability, to become citizens of the great state of Georgia. Georgia Is In The Lime Light.

[illegible]he wake of Georgia's primary, bo[illegible]old Editor J. B. Hardy sat down and penned a bitter editorial for his Thomaston Times: N.Y.

". . . In the country counties, where ignorance and prejudice rule, and there is a Negro problem, Ole Gene [Talmadge] got his big votes; but in the city counties, where education and enlightenment reign, [James] Carmichael piled up a huge vote."

That was strong talk in Hardy's own country county. The day after his paper came out, ten men called on Editor Hardy at his home. Unless he went down to the office and apologized, they said darkly, they could not be responsible for what might happen. He went along with them, found 100 angry men waiting outside the Times and decided to eat a bite of crow. He had not aimed that editorial at anybody in Upson County (it had voted for Carmichael), he said, and if he had hurt anybody's feelings, he was sorry. He would say so in the next issue.

But the more he mulled it over, the more Editor Hardy felt that it was he who had the apology coming. Last week he wrote another editorial. Its title: "Free-dom of the Press Cannot Be Displaced by Mob Rule." Its nub: ". . . It has always been our policy to discuss public men and issues as we saw them. . . . We . . . will not be intimidated by any threat, spoken or implied, of mob rule. . . ." News 8-5-46

Gene Stricken In Florida With Stomach Ailment

The Constitution
Atlanta, Ga. Sat 10-5-46

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 4—(UP)—Eugene Talmadge, colorful Georgia political leader and next Governor of the State, fought against illness Friday night in a Jacksonville hospital, where he was rushed early Friday in serious condition.

An old stomach ailment, aggravated by the grueling pace he set for himself in the recent Georgia Governor's race, put the 62-year-old Talmadge in bed less than a week before he was to officially accept the nomination to the State's highest office next Wednesday at the State Democratic Convention at Macon.

Talmadge was seized by stomach hemorrhages Thursday night at a hideaway on Jacksonville Beach, 18 miles from here, where he had gone to rest and build up his strength for the rigors of starting the new State Administration after his inauguration in January.

The illness cut short work he was doing on his speech to the Democratic Convention delegates, accepting the gubernatorial nomination. He had planned to reiterate the white supremacy theme that highlighted his campaign and call once more for the Legislature to change the laws so that Negroes can never again vote in a white primary in Georgia as they did in the one on July 17.

Talmadge was rushed to Sisters of Charity Hospital here by ambulance and put under the care of a surgeon and two physicians. He responded favorably to blood transfusions, and his condition late Friday was officially described as "favorable."

Talmadge's wife and son, Herman, who managed his father's political campaign, flew to his bedside. They said they may return to Georgia late Friday, but it was extremely doubtful if the Governor-Nominate would be permitted to leave for some time. Doctors said it would be four or five days before X-rays can be taken to determine the nature of his trouble.

News of Talmadge's sudden attack was a surprise, even to some of his close friends.

Early this week the Governor-Nominate, although appearing gaunt and tired, showed up at a fair in Atlanta to judge a cattle show and the next day appeared in the judge's stand for a horse show at his home in McRae, Ga.

Although making a great show of being in tip-top shape, Talmadge had begun to impress his close associates of late of being worried over his health.

He made a particular point during his recent campaign to impress the people with his continued vitality. But when the speaking was over, the often went to his hotel room and fell into bed in a state of near exhaustion. The day after he had won the nomination to the governorship for a fourth time, he admitted to reporters: "This race took 10 years of my life."

After the campaign, Talmadge began slipping away unannounced from his Atlanta law office on long junkets, trying to relax through travel. Once he showed up in California and a few weeks later flew to Mexico City.

Talmadge had not actually been ill since the summer of 1940 when he underwent an operation for hemorrhoids from which he completely recovered. The Constitution

Young Talmadge, interviewed in the hospital corridor, said his father's illness would not altar plans for next week's State Democratic Convention. Atlanta, Ga

"I don't know whether he will be able to make a speech accepting the nomination," he said. "But actually his presence is neither necessary nor required at the convention." Sat. 10-5-46

Eugene Talmadge Pinch-Hits Today

The Constitution
Atlanta, Ga. Sun 9-15-46

(Editor's Note: Ralph McGill is on vacation. His column today was written by Eugene Talmadge, Governor-nominate.)

On the 22d day of August, I left Atlanta, Georgia, at 2 o'clock in the morning for Mexico City, in Old Mexico. We went by a four-motored plane to Brownsville, Texas. I did a good deal of looking out the window after sunrise. The part of Texas I flew over looked quite different from Georgia. In the semi-arid country, I saw streaks of white sand which I was told were rivers, but had dried up. The Rio Grande did not look as large as the Oconee where I crossed.

We flew on to Mexico City. In looking out the window, I could see the snow-capped mountains about 100 miles south of Brownsville, Texas. Just before getting off the plane at Mexico City, I inquired as to the size of the city. I was surprised when they told me it had over 2,000,000 people. We arrived at Mexico City about 3 o'clock p. m. We drove from the airport to the hotel and was I scared. They have no traffic rules in Mexico City, the first one getting to the corner—all right. However, I saw less bent fenders than here in Atlanta. Pedestrians have no right-of-way on the streets. When they cross the streets, they must run. Old ladies get about hurriedly and old men, too, when they cross the streets. One member of our party made a clever remark. He said he had read in the Bible about the "quick and the dead," and he had at last seen it. If not quick in Mexico City, you were dead.

On my trip over, I met Louis Wagoner, who attended college at Auburn, Ala. Mr. Wagoner lives in Mexico City. His father was in the textile mill business. He could speak English and Spanish very fluently and offered his company and Packard car to carry us anywhere in the city. This was certainly a treat.

The next day after we arrived, we called Mr. Wagoner and went out about 15 miles from the city to see the canals with the canoes bedecked with flowers. The canoes were paddled along with oars and they would take you for a ride for one peso, or about 20 cents in American money. While riding along, other canoes would paddle up alongside us and the troubadours would serenade us. Others would sell us flowers and trinkets. The canoes were paddled and the selling conducted by full-blooded Aztec Indians, usually the old man, his wife and children down to 4 and 5 years old. It was nice, with plenty of green around us, and off in the distance, the snow-capped mountains. The weather was just about like we have here in Atlanta in the middle of October, just right for the ladies to show off their fur coats the year around. I noticed the men wore suits about like our fall clothes. In this particular section, I noticed they planted corn about like we would plant sorghum cane, in about three-foot rows with a good ear to every stalk. Upon inquiry, they told us they got two crops per year and sometimes three crops. One member of our party got out of the car and pulled an ear of corn. The ears were about roasting ear stage and were good-sized ears. I observed several hills of corn with four stalks of corn to each hill and good ears on every stalk. The hills were just a good width apart. All the labor was being done by Aztec Indians.

The next day, our friend, Mr. Wagoner, drove us to Puebla, 60 miles from Mexico City. In this section, the people were practically all full-blooded Aztec Indians. We could see them busy, working in the field, grazing their cattle, sheep, donkeys, goats and turkeys. I saw one man busy grazing five turkey gobblers. He kept them herded close together with a whip. This seemed to be his daily occupation. Then you would see another man, his wife and one or two children grazing two or three goats, two or three cows, or two or three donkeys. They would be accompanied by a dog. I saw no fences. The cattle ran loose and were guarded.

Walls But did I see plenty of walls? Every little house was surrounded by a wall about three feet thick and about eight feet high, and if they happened to be prosperous, there was a great, high iron fence on top of the wall. Building of walls has required a lot of labor, time and money in Mexico. I think they would be better off by building less walls and more fences.

We passed by a church in one Indian village where they were having their annual dance. We stopped and the road patrolman told us they would see the Indians about letting us visit the church and watch them dance. The Indians seemed honored and put on a dance for our entertainment. A few of the Indians spoke broken English. I was informed that at that time every year, they met and danced around that church for one week. A little farther from that Indian celebration, we reached Cholula, a city about the size of Jonesboro, but it had 365 churches within sight of each other. They are all Catholic. I asked why they had so many churches, and they said they had one for each day in the year. The Aztec Indians are a religious fanatic people. They all visit a church for a short time each day. The next day they visit a different church.

We went to the old cathedral that is built on top of a pyramid where the old Aztec Indians buried their dead. This pyramid seemed to have been built up to a very high level. We could not see where the dirt and rock came from, but it was immense—about three-fourths of a mile through the base and as high as 750 feet. On top of the pyramid was a great cathedral about two acres square. Inside was lined with solid gold. I put my hands on the gold and wondered how it had escaped the tyranny and robbery of bandits, but when I looked at those old Aztec Indians with their bolos, that knew the people at least a hundred miles in every direction, I realized that bandits would have a hard time getting a gold piece out even if they were lucky enough to take it from the walls of the church.

Puebla We drove on into Puebla, which is a modern city for Mexico, I saw aPckard cars in the show windows, advertised for so much cash, ready for the buyers who had enough money to drive them out. I also saw nylon hose for sale without OPA regulations. I did not see anything that you could not buy in Mexico and carry it home with you if you had the money. Plenty of meat and everything.

The following day we visited Chapultepec. This is on the outskirts of Mexico City and was a palace that was built for the Austrian Emperor who was sent over by Napoleon III to rule Mexico when the French took it over. This old palace is the last word in expensive architecture and grandeur. They have the old carriage that Maximilian rode in. This carriage is inlaid in solid gold. Maximilian was a blond and finally the Mexicans said it was not proper for a blond to rule over Mexico, a city of 99 percent decided brunettes. In Mexico, they developed a great civilization. We shall never this palace and government. Maximilian tried to escape, but sub-silently who or what they were, but you can see their eerily mitted to the fate of about 20 percent of all the rulers of Mexico and temples, and the motifs of their art are woven into the textiles and baked into the pottery that you can buy from and was killed. Sun. 9-15-46 the hands of their descendants." And another advertisement read-

I bought a rug and two jackets from the Aztec Indians. The rug that Mexico asked to do something. They adhere to the old customs of two cost about 280 pesos or about $70 in American money. I think it thousand years ago. I was interested in this from some of the literature would have sold for a great deal more than that in the States. It advertising Mexico. "Long years ago, bronzed men crossed the civilization is inlaid in solid gold. Maximilian rode in. This carriage bridge that has now disappeared, from Asia to America. is beautiful. All the merchants and salesmen on the road from He built well. Mexico still worships in 16th century cathedrals, Mexico City to Puebla are Indians. The Aztec Indians are a busy, whose ornate carvings are little changed with time. Mexico still happy, hospitable and friendly people. They go in a run when governs in the stone palaces of the Spaniards, and still lives in houses haunted by the ghosts of a fabled past.

No Uplifters Eighty percent of the people of Mexico are Aztec Indians. They live separately and entirely from the white people. They are happy. They are industrious. They are prosperous. Why? There are no uplifters in Mexico. The Aztec Indian is satisfied with his way of life. He is a contributor, not only in a material way, but in a spiritual and historical way, to the value of life. Where two separate races of people live together, I think the best policy is in Mexico. Some of our great uplifters here in the United States should take a trip, not in the poorest part of Mexico which is the Northern part where the races have mixed, but in the Southern part of Mexico, where they stay separate and pure.

Much obliged to Mr. Ralph McGill for asking me to space for him today. I hope he reads all of this.

TALMADGE FACTS 9-18-46

Editor Constitution:
In the Constituion of Sunday, Oct. 15, in the pinch-hitting Wed. column of Government Nominate Talmadge, sre some figures and comments on Mexico which will probably revolutionize the treatises of other statisticians sociologists, anthropologist and the like, Mr. Talmadge said:

"Eighty percent of the people of Mexico are Aztec Indians. They live separately and entirely from the white people. Constitution They are happy They are industrious. They are prosperous. Atlanta, Ga. Why? There are no uplifters in Mexico. 9-18-46-Wed. The Aztec Indian is satisfied with his way of life. Where two separate races of people live together, I think the best policy is in Mexico." Constitution

Of course, Mr. Talmadge's report on Mexico post dates the reports of other published accounts; for he has recently made an airplane excursion to Mexico City. Atlanta, Ga. To some, it may seem strange how statistics can change almost overnight, especially when formulated by one who is known to be "so competent" in such matters."

We find in La Poblacion indigena de America, desde 1492 hasta la actualidad, Institution Cultral Espanola Constitution Atlanta, Ga. 1945, the following figures concerning the population of Mexico:

		OF TOTAL POP.)
Indians	5,427,396	27.9%
Mestizos (Mixed Indians)	10,619,496	56. .6%
Negroes	80,000	.4%
Mulattoes	40,000	.2%
All other races	3,279,173	16 .9%

Atlanta, Ga. 9-18-46-Wed.

According to the Encyclopedia Britannica Year Book published in 1946, "approximately 55 percent of the population was Mextizo (Mixed Indian), 29 per cent Indian, 15 per cent white, with foreigners and others making up less than 1 per cent."

As to the prosperity of the Indians in Mexico, space here does not permit discussion. Suffice it to say, however, that the discrepancy between Talmadge judgement on this point and the judgements of authorities, hereto considered reliable, are very great indeed. 9-18-46-Wed.

Permit the writer to suggest that in the future we use the term "Talmadge Facts" instead of the usual word. The connotation of this suggested term is rapidly coming to be appreciated nationally if not internationally. Perhals the time is ripe for the introduction of a new, but very meaningful, term in our daily vocabulary.

Three-Judge Ruling Paves Way For Free Rein For Talmadge

Injunctions that would have invalidated the July 17th primary which saw Eugene Talmadge nominated as Governor of Georgia although he ran second to James V. Carmichael in popular votes, were denied Monday by a special three-judge tribunal in U. S. District Court here.

Plaintiffs immediately announced they would appeal the decisions The suit of an Emory University professor and an Atlanta woman civic leader had sought to have the suit system declared void and the nomination of Talmadge as governer canceled.

The judge ruling against the requested interlocutory injunction were circuit Judge Samuel H. Sibley and District Judges Frank M. Scarlett and Louis W. Strum.

The plaintiffs had claimed that the county unit system violated the equal rights provision of the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution. The judges ruled, however, that 'The amendments relating to abridging the right to vote on account of race, color, or sex are not involved here. The equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment is alone relied on.'

TO FILE APPEAL

An appeal in the decision will be filed "as soon as we have prepared the necessary papers, Charles S. Reid, Atlanta attorney and former attorney and former chief justice of the Georgia Supreme Court, said Monday. The appeal probably will be taken to the U. S. Supreme Court, Alex W. Smith, an attorney for the plaintiff in the congressional suit, said.

The court declined to interfere in the companion suit challenging the constitutionality of the congressional race in the Fifth Georgia District. Both names of Mrs. Helen Douglas Mankin, the incumbent who won the popular vote in the race, and Judge Jas. C. Davis, who won the unit vote race, will appear on the November general election ballot.

The court said, in the Talmadge decision, that "The Constitution of the United States has nothing to do with state elections, save as specially provided in certain of the amendments..... Our system of government, state and federal, has never sought nor demanded that each voter should have equal voting influence, though that might seem an ideal of democracy. In our Federal Government under its constitution each state has in the Senate, two 'unit votes,' wholly regardless of population, in the making of all laws, and in confirming treaties and appointments to federal office."

ELECTORAL COLLEGE

The decision pointed out that in the electoral college choice of a president, there have been presidents who did not receive a majority of the popular vote. It admitted that there is a glaring inequality between Chattahoochee County and Fulton County in representation in the Legislature and in applying the county unit rule to a primary.

The special tribunal opined that perhaps the remnant of Chattahochee County ought to merge in to an adjoining county and that perhaps Fulton County, which has absorbed Milton and Campbell Counties, ought to have the representation of these counties added to its own. The remedy for "these exceptional situations," the court said, "is to be sought through changes in the law, rather than by appeal to courts of equity to upset the law as unconstitutional because of a hardship that has arisen."

Further, the tribunal said it considered the case in its general aspects as one of party politics, that the courts 'should not meddle unless the duty to do so is plain' and that 'it would be going too far for a court of equity to undertake to prevent the secretary of state from performing his functions under laws confessedly valid or to interfere with his transmitting the returns of the general election to the legislature."

CANDIDATES ACCEPT

The judges pointed out that the candidates accepted the county unit rule and "none of them is complaining of its applications" and concluded that "we will briefly say that on the ultimate merit we do not think the State of Georgia has been shown to have deprived the plaintiffs of equal protection of the laws."

The suit of Dr. Cullen B. Gosnell, Emory University political science professor, and Mrs. Robert Lee Turman, former president of the Atlanta League of Women voters contended that a vote in a small county allotted two unit votes would have as much as 100 times the value of a vote in Fulton County, arbitrarily pegged at six unit votes. Governor - nominate Eugene Talmdage won the primary designation under the unit vote system, although he trailed James V. Carmichael, backed by Governor Ellis Arnall, by about 14,000 popular votes. Under the unit vote arrangement, Talmadge had in excess of the 206 votes required for nomination.

The companion suits were heard Friday, August 16, before a crowded courtroom.

Georgia's Salvation Is Its Own Affair

The Courier-Journal

IN REFUSING to upset Georgia's peculiar county unit voting system, the U. S. Supreme Court has left Georgia's salvation up to Georgians. And despite one's wishful hopes that an obviously inequitable voting law might have been expunged, and that EUGENE TALMADGE might not again be Governor of Georgia, the court's decision is not a complete surprise.

The fact that these suits were filed as an outgrowth of TALMADGE's victory under the unit system despite a minority of the popular vote, did not improve their prospects. Georgians have voted for many years under the unit system. TALMADGE won under that system. Georgians knew beforehand that unless JAMES V. CARMICHAEL, his principal opponent, commanded a majority of the unit votes, he would lose. And he did.

The county unit system is inequitable. It was designed to be. But it was established at a time when cities were smaller, to weigh the ballot in favor of rural voters. The obvious reason was a fear that the State's largest cities, should a popular vote determine, would perpetually elect the State's governor and control all its legislation. Tues. 10-29-46

Since then, however, populations have shifted. The cities are greater, and in some few cases, the rural populations are smaller. Meanwhile, the smallest counties still command two unit votes, and the largest counties, no more than six. The result is that inequity of the system has stretched out of all proportion. As pointed out in the suits, a single vote in one rural county has 106 times the weight of a vote in Atlanta. Tues.

So aside from the personalities motivating the suits which the Supreme Court has just thrown out, the county unit system ought to be abolished. At very least, it might be readjusted to a more sensible relationship to populations. But until enough Georgians, rural and urban alike, acknowledge the injustice in it, the system stands. And until enough Georgians get out and vote, the candidate who, like TALMADGE, possesses an army of wool hat boys in the back woods, will always win.

On Unit Vote

Tues. 11-26-46

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25—(AP) The Supreme Court has refused to reconsider a recent decision by which it rejected an effort by several Georgia residents to void the nomination of Eugene Talmadge as Governor.

The Court by the decision tossed out a complaint that rights of some voters were infringed by the nomination of Talmadge in Georgia's county unit election system. Talmadge won the nomination although he trailed James V. Carmichael in popular votes.

Reconsideration was asked by Dr. Cullen B. Gosnell and Mrs. Robert Lee Turman.

The Court dismissed the case without hearing arguments and wrote no opinion explaining the views of the six-judge majority.

The Court at the same time Monday declined to reconsider its dismissal of a parallel case brought by Earl P. Cook, a Georgia Tech student. Cook challenged the nomination of Judge James C. Davis in a contest with Rep. Helen Douglas Mankin for the Democratic nomination to Congress in the Fifth Georgia District.

Citizens Seek Rehearing Of Georgia Unit Vote

ATLANTA — A "strong" motion for a rehearing of the case against Georgia's county unit voting system was filed last week in the U. S. Supreme court by attorneys representing Mrs. Robert Lee Turman, and Dr. Cullen B. Gosnell of Emory university.

The original case sought to keep Eugene Talmadge off the ballot on the basis that he was nominated illegally. The motion for rehearing contends that the high court passed on the merits of the case without allowing the petitioners a hearing, and allowed an allegedly illegal election system to become a bad example for other states.

The motion contends the question is still moot, although denied by the Supreme court, because election results have not been turned over to the state legislature for recheck and final approval. It protested further, that the court disposed of one of the most important legal controversies in its history without giving litigants a hearing. The court, in a preliminary inquiry on its own jurisdiction determined the merits of the case involving grave constitutional issues without benefit of supporting briefs, it continued.

Two Points in Question

Two things are open for consideration, the motion pointed out. First, whether the results of an unconstitutional election, not yet consummated, but leaving official duties to be performed by one of the respondents should be upheld. Second, whether an injunction is issued against the respondent or not, a judgment should be given, condemning the law.

The motion, signed by Charles S. Reid, former chief justice of the Georgia Supreme court, and W. D. Thompson, Atlanta lawyer, came as a result of the Georgia primary election. In last July's balloting, Talmadge, runner up in the popular vote, was nominated over majority vote winner James V. Carmichael, because of the unit system.

The high court ruled against hearing the original petition by a six to three split decision. Truman appointees Fred M. Vinson and Burton voted against the hearing which was supported by Justices Black, Murphy, and Rutledge.

2 Georgians Ask Court To Bar Talmadge Race

Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.

Suit Wants County-Unit Vote Declared Illegal As Violation of 14th U. S. Amendment

Sat 8-4-46

By the Associated Press.

Brunswick, Ga., Aug. 2.—Two Georgia Democrats asked the Federal District Court here today to prevent Eugene Talmadge from being the Democratic Party nominee for Governor by declaring illegal the State's unique county-unit voting system.

Cullen B. Gosnell, an Emory University political science professor, and Mrs. Robert Lee Turman, a women's Democratic Party leader, asked the court to declare the county-unit law unconstitutional because it violated the 14th Amendment of the U. S. Constitution.

Popular Vote Trails.

Talmadge won the July 17 Democratic primary with 242 county-unit votes. He had 297,245 popular votes, less than his chief opponent, James V. Carmichael, who had 146 county-unit votes and 313,389 popular votes.

In a companion suit, along the same lines, Earl P. Cook, a Georgia Tech student, sought to set aside results of the Fifth District congressional race.

Mrs. Helen Douglas Mankin, the incumbent U. S. representative, topped her chief opponent, Judge James C. Davis, in popular votes, but trailed in unit votes. The State Democratic Executive Committee has ruled that both names will appear on the November general election ballot.

Injunctions Denied.

Sat 8-3-46

The suit specifically petitioned the court to enjoin Secretary of State Ben W. Fortson, Chairman Lon Duckworth of the State Democratic Committee and Miss Grace Cannington, committee secretary, from certifying nominees in the recent party primary.

Judge Frank M. Scarlett denied injunctions in both suits. However, he ordered the whole affair placed before a three-judge Federal Court in Atlanta August 16.

Talmadge said simply "No comment" when told of the suit.

The suit aimed at Talmadge and other State officials contended that the county-unit method of voting "deprived these plaintiffs of equal protection of their right to have their votes, as residents of more populous counties effective on the same or approximate basis as residents with far less population."

Votes Range From 2 to 6.

The county-unit plan provides that the candidate receiving a plurality of popular votes in a county will receive that county's unit vote. The unit votes range from 2 to 6. In case of a tie popular vote the two high men split the unit vote.

Attorneys filing the suit charged in the petition that the 14th Amendment of the U. S. Constitution.

Sat 8-3-46

(The 14th Amendment protects the rights of citizens to vote for electors for President and Vice-President of the United States, for Representatives in Congress, and for executive and judicial officers and members of the Legislature of a State.)

Too Hard on Georgia

Times-Dispatch

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

Your editorial of July 21 ("A Mockery of Popular Rule") is, I believe, too severe on our sister State, Georgia. The Democratic primary there was not an "election" in the sense in which your editorial quotes the United States Constitution. Georgia, in adopting a county unit vote has merely applied the principle underlying our Federal methods which use a unit system for States, as Georgia does for counties. It is close kin also to our Federal system which provides equal representation in the Senate regardless of the population of the several States.

Mon 7-22-46

In the old Reconstruction era we had the carpetbagger and the scalawag, the latter being a local white politician who, despairing of getting elected by the votes of white men, appealed to the carpetbagger to have the Negro place him in office. The new Reconstruction forces seem to be composed of the same basic elements, with the CIO needling Negro votes into a Georgia Democratic primary in support of "scalawag" white candidates who sensed their weakness among white voters and appealed to the Negro to place them in office.

A Georgian to Virginia

Times-Dispatch

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

During the past few weeks my State of Georgia has been the subject of bitter comment in the editorial columns and in the VOP of your paper.

Mon 8-5-46

Let me say that no one regrets the election of Gene Talmadge more than I do. Georgia's election has focused attention of the nation on our county unit system. We hear it screamed that the majority should rule and that it is unfair for a man to be elected unless he is the top man in the popular vote. (But not so in presidential elections—a candidate for President can have a popular majority and be defeated.)

Our county unit system has its good side, too. There has never been a machine in Georgia that could elect its own year in, year out. Talmadge has run for Governor five times and for the Senate twice. He has been beaten both times for the Senate and once for Governor. Not even "Ole Gene" can build up a successful machine under the county unit system.

Richmond

This is not so in a large number of our States, Southern or otherwise. The machine in Tennessee is unbeatable, because one man controls one city. Until Huey Long's death he ruled Louisiana with iron hand. And so it goes in Illinois, Missouri, New Jersey, Massachusetts, New York City, Minnesota, and, lo and behold, the Old Dominion itself!

Virginia

However, even ardent supporters of our county unit system will admit inequalities exist. For instance, Fulton County (Atlanta) should have more than a mere six votes when the smallest county in the State has two. Fulton should have 25 or 30 unit votes, and the other counties graded down accordingly. But even if this redistribution never occurs I should prefer our system to that of Tennessee or Virginia, which permits one man to select the officers of the State.

Mon. 8-5-46

Until the people of the Old Dominion prove their ability to see through their political haze and refuse enslavement to a machine which has controlled for a generation, we of Georgia feel they should not sit in judgment on us.

GEORGIA'S MISFORTUNE

New York Times

If Eugene Talmadge, the one-gallus friend of the common man, in such cases as the common man can prove himself to be of Anglo-Saxon origin, is the next Governor of Georgia it will not necessarily be because the majority of Georgians want him. Mr. Talmadge has lifted himself back into the Gubernatorial chair by virtue of a State law which sees to it that in close contests the majority does not have its way. In practically every State in the Union the electoral dice are loaded in favor of rural populations. Even in New York, upstate districts can outvote much more populous downstate districts. In many instances this happens because reapportionment cannot keep pace with the growth of cities. In Georgia it happens because the persons who decide such things there believe, or pretend to believe, that voters living on the land are wiser and purer than voters living in cities.

Fri. 7-19-46

Mr. Talmadge has won in the primary election, which in a one-party State determines the issue, because of Georgia's county unit voting system. Under this ingenious arrangement Fulton County, with about 400,000 population, can be outvoted by the four counties of Echols, Dawson, Glascock and Webster, whose total population is around 20,000. Under these circumstances we cannot call Georgia's primary results a trend. They are merely a bit of hard luck which the majority of Georgians share and in which they have our sympathy.

Constitutionality Of Unit System Attacked

Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

Sat. 8-3-46

BRUNSWICK, Ga. — (SNS) — An attempt through the courts to block the nomination of Eugene Talmadge for his fourth term as governor was begun Friday as a suit was filed in Federal District Court here. The suit attacks the constitutionality of Georgia's county unit system.

The suit was filed by Charles S. Reid, former chief justice of the Georgia Supreme Court and John L. Tye, Jr., Atlanta Attorney, on behalf of Mrs. Robert Lee Turman of Fulton County, and Cullen B. Gosnell of DeKalb County.

Mrs. Turman is a member of the League of Women Voters and Gosnell is head of the political science department at Emory University.

Talmadge was nominated under the county unit system in the July 17 primary, receiving a majority of the county unit votes, but trailing James V. Carmichael in the popular vote. Under Georgia's one-party system, nomination in the Democratic primary is tantamount to election.

VIOLATION CHARGED

Contending that the Georgia primary law, which uses the county unit system in the nomination of state officials, asked that Secretary of State Ben Fortson Chairman Lon Duckworth of the State Democratic Executive Committee and Miss Grace Cannington, secretary of the committee, be restrained from certifying the nominees of the July 17 primary.

Another suit and companion to the first to have the recent "gift" Congressional District race declared unconstitutional was filed by Attorney Alex W. Smith of Atlanta, former president of the State Bar Association, on behalf of Earl Cook, a student of Georgia Tech.

Mrs. Helen Douglas Mankin, incumbent, won the popular vote majority over her opponent Judge James C. Davis, who carried the county unit vote majority. The State Democratic Executive Committee, announced last week that both names would appear on the general election ballot.

The injunctions were denied in both suits, however, Judge Frank M. Scarlett issued a rule nisi requiring the defendants to appear before a three-man judge federal court in Atlanta August 16.

THREE JUDGES

With Judge Scarlett will be Circuit Court Judge Samuel H. Sibley, of New Orleans and District Judge Louie W. Strum, of Jacksonville. No Georgia judges were appointed because none was available to sit on the court, said Judge Scarlett.

Judge Scarlett ordered that the three defendants be served with the rule nisi and that Governor Arnall and Attorney General Eugene Cook also be served.

PRIMARY LAW

The Turman-Gosnell suit contended that the primary laws violated that clause of the fourteenth amendment which states:

"No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of the United States nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

It further charged that the authorization of the county unit votes is "a deliberate, express and unreasonable discrimination in varying degrees against all voters residing in any but the smallest counties."

Sat. 8-3-46

the suit only "on a purely professional basis. We are not engaged to participate in any political merit of the system."

Atlanta, Ga.

50 YEARS OF UNIT

The county unit system has been in effect in Georgia for more than 50 years in the election of all state officials and candidates for the United States Senate. Congressional committees are given the option of using either the county unit or the popular vote system, but the county unit system has prevailed in most districts

DISCRIMINATION CITED

Examples of discriminations against registered voters in the more populous counties follows:

In Fulton County (Atlanta) "it requires 106 plus votes to have the same value as one vote in Chattahoochee County.

"So it also requires 71 votes in Fulton County to have the same value as one vote in Chattahoochee County. The suit stated that 84,550 votes were cast in Fulton County in the recent primary and that 26,770 votes were cast in DeKalb County. In Chattahoochee County 265 votes were cast.

Fulton and DeKalb Counties have six unit votes, Chattahoochee has two. "thus making the vote of one person in Chattahoochee County, in Atlanta, said he equal to 160 plus votes in Fulton County and 33 plus in DeKalb County."

Talmadge in a statement said "no comment" on the suit.

"PURELY PROFESSIONAL BASIS"

Daily World

Attorney Reid said, in a formal statement that he was acting in

The system is based on membership in the House of Representatives, each county being allowed two delegates to the state convention for each representative in the Legislature. Under this system the eight heaviest populated counties in the state have six convention delegates each, the 30 next largest counties have four delegates each, and the other 121 counties have two delegates each. The designations are six unit votes four unit votes, and two unit votes, respectively. 8-3-46 Sat.

Since there are only 205 members of the House, and therefore 410 delegates in a state convention the 121 counties that have a two vote of 242, or much more than a majority of the 410 delegates making up a state convention. This, of course, gives the small rural and mountain counties complete control of party conventions.

Prior to 1916 the county unit system was just a habit of state executive committees and in 1866 it was changed to the popular vote system by a state committee appointed by the late Governor Hoke Smith. The change became an issue in the 1906 campaign and Governor Smith was defeated by a small popular vote majority.

In 1916 the late Cecil Neil, of Columbus, then president of the State Senate, redrafted all state primary laws into the Neill Act, which made the county unit system the law insofar as state offices are concerned.

TO CERTIFY NOMINEES

Lon Duckworth, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee said a suit filed in Federal Court in Brunswick challenging constitutionality of the county unit system would not affect his certification of Eugene Talmadge as the Democratic nominee for governor. Duckworth said he had not received official notice of the suit, but that he planned to have certificates for the general election ready for filing with the secretary of state by August 5.

Federal Suit Challenging Talmadge Begins; Violation of the Constitution Is Charged

Times, New York, N. Y. Sat. 8-17-46

By HAROLD B. HINTON

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 16—Eugene Talmadge heard in the Federal court here today arguments in a suit filed to prevent him from becoming Georgia's Governor next January. The suit sought invalidation of the Neil Act of 1917, which legalized the county-unit system of counting votes in primary elections.

Representative Helen Douglas Mankin, in a surprise move just before the court adjourned, intervened to ask it to dismiss a parallel suit, also attacking the county-unit system, filed in connection with her campaign against Judge James C. Davis. Mrs. Mankin intervened through her attorney, Houston White. She was not present in court.

The background of the two suits, in which the court is expected to hand down a decision in a few days, is that Mrs. Mankin, in the Fifth Congressional District race, and James V. Carmichael, in the campaign for Governor, received a plurality of popular votes and a minority of county-unit votes in the primary.

Individuals who voted for them brought actions to restrain Ben Fortson, Secretary of the State of Georgia, from certifying their rivals as Democratic nominees on the ground that their constitutional rights as citizens of the United States were abridged by the county-unit system of tallying.

Although the complainants in both suits alleged that their rights under the Fourteenth Amendment had been infringed by the State of Georgia, the arguments presented by counsel were based on different constitutional principles.

In the injunction case to keep Mr. Talmadge from taking office, O. D. Murphy, appearing for the State, argued that the right to vote in State elections does not originate in, and is not protected by the Federal Constitution.

He said that the complainants, Mrs. Robert Lee Turman, president of the League of Women Voters, and Cullen B. Gosnell of DeKalb County, had voted in the primary in full knowledge that the county-unit system would be employed to determine the victor, and that they were now suing merely because they were dissatisfied with the results.

"They want to change the rules after the game is over," he said, adding that they would have been better advised to seek aid from the Federal Government before the primary.

In the suit over the Congressional race, Croom Partridge, appearing for Earl P. Cook, a student at Georgia Tech who filed the complaint, contended that Article 1, Section 2, of the Constitution, by providing that members of the House of Representatives shall be elected by the electors qualified to vote for the members of the more numerous body of any State Legislature, was violated by applying county-unit evaluation to Congressional elections. Sat. 8-17-46

Judge Samuel H. Sibley, who presided over the court, of which other two members were Judge Frank M. Scarlett of the Southern District of Georgia, and Judge Louis A. Strum, of the Northern District of Florida, took the proposed intervention under advisement. Judge Sibley told Mr. White:

"I don't believe you have the right to intervene to stop somebody else's lawsuit." He pointed out that Mr. Cook, the complainant, alleged his own rights, not those of Mrs. Mankin, had been abridged.

In the Talmadge case, Mr. Murphy pleaded that the Federal Government, through its judiciary, refrain from interfering with the election of a Governor of Georgia.

As a practical matter, he told the judges that, should they declare the nomination of Mr. Talmadge unconstitutional, the situation would be obscure, as the 1945 State Constitution does not cover such a contingency.

The lawyer said he supposed that either Governor Ellis Arnall would carry on the duties of office until the General Assembly enacted appropriate legislation, or else the Lieutenant Governor, to be elected for the first time under the new constitution, would succeed to the governorship.

Charles S. Reid, former Chief Justice of the Georgia Supreme Court, headed the counsel seeking the Talmadge injunction. He told the court that plans of weighing votes in favor of rural areas had been invalidated by State courts in Tennessee and Kentucky.

Let Every Man's Vote Count Equally

SO FAR as the letter of the law runs, the United States district court in Atlanta may have been unexceptionally correct in upholding the Georgia unit vote system under which Jeeter Gene Talmadge was elected governor even though he received 14,000 votes less than his opponent. The real question, however, is not whether this system is legal, but whether it is fair. And if it is not fair, the law ought to be changed.

Under the Georgia plan, each county in the state is given from two to six so-called unit votes. Even though a candidate may fall far short of receiving a majority of the State-wide vote, he is declared elected if he gets a majority of these unit votes. What can be the purpose of such a system, if not to flim-flam the voters? It is an obvious device for getting a man into office even though the people do not want him there.

It will be all the worse if Talmadge succeeds in restoring the poll tax in Georgia—as he has threatened to do. Then, only a small minority of the citizens will be able to vote and, once again, a small minority of these will control the outcome of elections. The sending of senators and representatives to Washington under such a system is an insult to the citizens of New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois and the northern and western states in general. It will mean that a little handful of people in Georgia can elect two United States senators whose votes can offset those of the two senators from New York—even though the latter are elected by hundreds of thousands of votes. This makes a mockery of representative government. It gives a few bigoted bosses in the South a horribly disproportionate influence on the policies of the nation.

In our opinion, the appellate court in Atlanta did itself no honor when it undertook to defend the Georgia unit vote system by pointing to the Electoral College method of choosing our presidents. For that College itself has major weaknesses, among them precisely the danger that it can bring to office minority chief executives. It furnishes a precedent for the Georgia system, but it furnishes no logical argument for that system—or for itself.

It would have been far better if the three appellate judges in Atlanta had simply said that they could find no ground for upsetting the Georgia system, thus passing the question on to the United States Supreme Court. It may be that the Supreme Court also will find no legal justification for upsetting the unit plan. It is to be hoped, however, that it will not try to defend it by citing an anachronistic parallel.

If the court cannot touch so obvious a device for thwarting the popular will, Congress and the Georgia legislature ought to act. Perhaps there is not much to be expected from the legislature; certainly, if Congress tries to act, there will be a great hue and cry about violating the sanctity of the Constitution. Such protests, however, are sound and fury signifying nothing. Sun 9-1-46

After all, federal offices are involved in Georgia elections. If the Federal Government could stop vote frauds in Kansas City and if Congress can pass an anti-poll tax bill, then surely a way can be found for acting against an equally offensive interference with the democratic expression of the people's will.

Throughout this broad land of ours, one man's vote ought to count as much as another's. Our democracy will not even be mechanically perfect until it does.

GVMR The Constitution

Editor Constitution: Since its inception in late July, I have watched with keen interest the work of the Georgia Veterans for Majority Rule. Refusal of the U. S. Supreme Court even to hear their cases challenging the legality of the grossly unjust county unit system was a bitter disappointment to me and many others.

I understand that a motion for reconsideration has been filed, and I earnestly hope that Justice Rutledge's dissenting opinion on the original denial of a hearing will have enough influence with his brother justices to bring about the hearing of the suits. Atlanta, Ga.

It seems foolish to say that no constitutional guarantees are violated by a system which gives to some Georgia voters 106 times the voting strength of others. (This, of course, was the decision of the Federal District Court in Atlanta when the cases were heard here in August.) It is heartening to me to know that Justice Rutledge's opinion is apparently the same as mine. He said in a written opinion that the cases involved issues which "are obviously important." He said further, "In my judgment, they have not been conclusively adjudicated by prior decisions of this court."

I have been in the Navy for six years and am still in it. I put in a lot of combat duty in a war this country fought against Fascist countries where minority rule reduced the will of the people to nothingness. It was a sickening blow to me to come home and find somewhat the same situation in my own State of Georgia.

These lawsuits against the county unit system should be won, because they are right. It seems entirely clear and simple to me that the right of a voter to have his vote count is as fundamental as his right to cast that vote. The county unit system is bound to violate the U. S. Constitution, because there is obviously no "equal protection of the law" when one person in Chattahoochee County can outvote 106 in Fulton.

Georgia Veterans for Majority Rule is an organization which was formed to sponsor these suits. I hope that all Georgians who believe in the democracy which countless Americans gave their lives to preserve will send them generous contributions. They need money to defray the costs of an informational program on the county unit system and these lawsuits—which suits were brought on behalf of all Georgians. Contributions should be sent to 804 Forsyth Building. Sat. 11-9-46

American Political Issue

News-Courier

Comments of the "Liberal", or democratic, press, adverse, indignant and sometimes abusive, upon the election of Eugene Talmadge in the Georgia primary, most of them voices of great cities in the North and West, are directed against three features, or factors, in the contest and reveal the principal and antagonistic division among the Americans.

They denounce the "county unit plan", and, by necessary implication, turn against the American system upon which the republic was founded. They say that "the majority should rule", that everybody should have the "right" to vote. They do not object to Georgia's admission of the 18 year olds to the polls. They repudiate the principle of conferring upon a "unit", whether state or county, representation for senators, regardless of numbers of inhabitants, in conventions and in the Electoral College. They insist that Mr. Carmichael should be governor of Georgia because his majority over Mr. Talmadge was 11,000. Jul. 8-6-46

Of Mr. Carmichael's supporters, 100,000 were negroes, who voted as a "bloc". The "Liberal" critics are offended that the balance of power in Georgia's primaries has not been yielded to Georgia's negroes who voted as a Congo tribe would under orders of their chief. It sadly disappoints them.

The critics object, in the second place, to the Talmadge plan of repealing laws relating to the primary, by which any band or group of persons, Presbyterians, Free Masons, Roman Catholics, white-skinned or black-skinned persons, retreating from the decision of a packed court, might assemble, excluding other persons, and nominate candidates for ward alderman or governor. That is the South Carolina plan already adopted. The News and Courier holds it to be just, reasonable and inseparable from any conception of American liberty. We hold that Mr. Smith or Mr. Jones may, if he wish, invite 50 men and women to dine with him in his home and nominate candidates, that he has the right to shut his doors to persons not wanted. The South Carolina plan is no more than expansion of the principle and practice. White voters during certain hours on a certain day go to a room and cast ballots. Negroes are not invited and therefore are not admitted.

Charleston, S. C.

The "Liberal" critics insist that voters, inasmuch as they have the constitutional right to vote in general, legal elections, therefore have the right to break into nominating clubs, or primaries, and ground their criticism on the saying that voters in these clubs, or primaries, because they may have the majority of the electors, are holding the election that decides. In short, they contend that races, or sects, or persons of a political or religious creed, having a majority of the electors, are without right to exercise its power on the legal election day.

The third count in the indictment of Georgia is that in the cities, Atlanta among them, the votes for Mr. Carmichael were "largely centered" and that the small rural counties and their villages had advantage not arising from numbers. They had it, and that precisely is what The News and Courier commends in the county unit plan. Jul. 8-6-46

The pregnant and dangerous political issue, not yet clearly defined and understood by the American people but already joined is whether or not the United States shall be governed by the thronged and herdible voters of the great cities and industrial centers. Those, The News and Courier among them, who adhere to the Calhoun doctrine of government by the "concurrent" rather than the "numerical" majority, are called "reactionaries", and if reactionaries they and we be it is in the knowledge that the republic was organized by the acceptance of it.

Before Mr. Calhoun, Mr. Jefferson was a "Democrat", in the belief that the "yeoman farmer", the small landowner and homeowner, would be the ruling element in the country, as great cities and industrial communities were not then existing and not then foreseen.

The News and Courier is convinced that in South Carolina, security of all the people is fortified by Jasper county's equal representation in the state senate with that of Charleston and Spartanburg, and, without discussing the goodness of influence of the senator of Barnwell or the lack of it, it would not have Barnwell's voting weight in the senate reduced that the state might be relieved of it. So, in conventions, counties, large and small, rich and poor, have representation for their senators even as the state has representation for them in the Electoral College. That J. Q. Adams, Lincoln, Harrison and Wilson were elected presidents when democratic majorities were against them calls for no weeping and rending of garments.

The democrats, who call themselves "Liberals", are not sure that government by Great Cities will be perpetuated, and for that reason they cry out for Southern succor to be had by conferring the balance of power upon the negro voters in Southern states. In their Harlems they control it, they herd it, and they would extend their control of them to Georgia and the whole South. Jul. 8-6-46

To save themselves from this city mastery and dictation, not only Southern but all states of relatively small population throughout the country can have recourse to the Electoral College, and the day soon may dawn when so they will by choosing electors not slavish to the party lash.

The people of South Carolina have, politically, more in common with the peoples of Maine, Vermont, Colorado and Wyoming than they have with the peoples of New York, Illinois, Massachusetts and other city-ruled states.

Bills Would Prevent Minority Victories

The Constitution Atlanta Ga.
Wed. 7-24-46

As the discussion continues over Georgia's county unit system which saw the man who received the greatest number of votes for Governor in history defeated, some people are beginning to recall bills introduced by House Speaker Roy Harris in 1945 and Rep. Claude Pittman in 1946. Gubernatorial Candidate Jimmie Carmichael, who was defeated on the county unit basis while getting more popular votes than Eugene Talmadge, can, of course, have no complaint of the county unit system. He championed it in his campaign. Editor Ralph McGill recently observed that you have on the one hand Georgia's county unit system which gives too much power to the sparsely settled rural areas, and, on the other hand, Tennessee's popular vote system that permits a big city political boss to run the State. He suggested a revision of the county unit system to give the heavily populated areas a greater voice in government, while at the same time retaining the county unit system.

A bill to prevent a minority candidate from being elected to any Statehouse office was introduced by Harris in 1945. It was withdrawn a short time later, when Harris feared it looked like it was aimed at Talmadge, who always has run best in an open field. (Harris was not friendly to Talmadge at that time, but he didn't want to aim a bill at a particular person.) A year later, Pittman introduced virtually the same bill in the House. It got lost in the shuffle of a heavy docket in a short session.

This bill would retain the county unit system intact. But it would prevent a person without the popular votes from taking advantage of the county unit system.

The bill simply said that a candidate must get 51 percent of a county's popular votes before he could receive that county's unit vote. Under the present system, the candidate receiving the most votes in a county gets that county's unit vote. So, in a field of four gubernatorial candidates, a person can take the unit vote by receiving only 26 percent of the popular vote.

Would Be Runover Under this bill, Talmadge would not have received enough county unit votes in the recent primary to win the nomination. There would have been a runover. With the popular vote split chiefly among Carmichael and Rivers, Talmadge carried 21 counties in which he failed to receive 51 percent of the popular votes. These counties had a total of 90 unit vote. This would have left Carmichael with 90 unit votes instead of 148 that he received under the present plan. Ed Rivers would have dropped three counties and eight unit votes, to leave him with only 12 unit votes instead of 20. While O'Kelley received no unit votes under the present plan, his popular vote meant the difference in victory for the other three candidates in some counties.

However, Talmadge would have been knocked out of the nomination by this proposed system, while Carmichael would have lost more county unit votes than Talmadge under it. Because in The Counties Here are the counties carried by Talmadge without receiving 51 percent of the popular 19 counties with a unit vote of 58, he received less than 51 percent votes: Barrow, Brooks, Calhoun, Douglas, Grady, Gwinnett, Harris, Heard, Jenkins, Long, Meriwether, Murray, Oconee, Paulding, Rabun, Rockdale, Thomas, Tift, Union, Walton and Wilkes.

Carmichael carried the following counties without receiving 51 percent of the popular votes: Bartow, Butts, Camden, Carroll, Charlton, Chattooga, Floyd, Greene, Habersham, Hall, Jackson, Jasper, Muscogee, Stephens, Talbot, Walker, Ware, White and Whitfield.

Counties going into the Rivers column without 51 percent of the popular votes were Brantley, Cook and Lowndes.

Condolences To Georgia

Eugene Talmadge has been nominated for governor of Georgia, largely because of that state's county unit system which makes it possible for a candidate to win without leading in the total popular vote. At this writing Talmadge seems to be sure of 100 counties with a convention strength of 234 unit votes. But, by the same token, he is behind Carmichael to the tune of more than 25,000 ballots. Carmichael's support was in the big cities, while Talmadge is again the darling of the small rural counties. He used to brag about being the choice of communities without streetcars. He can still make that claim.

His election comes as no surprise to many observers in and out of Georgia. This was Talmadge's year, in view of the fact that a political straitjacket, together with other factors, were bound to work in his favor. He was beaten four years ago because he was up against a shrewd campaigner who used to a fare-thee-well all of Talmadge's past mistakes, and who could use them because the country was at war and Georgians, like most other Americans, were solicitous about national unity. Talmadge, the Negro-baiter; Talmadge, the Roosevelt-hater, was seriously handicapped by the climate of opinion in which he had to operate. The sins he had committed against the University of Georgia were still fresh in the public mind. It was simply not his time to make the required showing.

This year it was altogether different. He ran in circumstances infinitely more conducive to his success. Georgians, like the rest of us, have suffered a collapse of moral resolution. Postwar confusion and laxness have tended to make a man like Talmadge much more embraceable. If he was damaged four years ago by what he had done to higher education in his raking up of the race issue, he was helped this time by his defense of "white supremacy." Decisions of the Supreme Court and a large registration of Negroes implemented his demagogic appeals to likeminded or frightened voters in that great mass of small counties which have put themselves in his column.

He was opposed by Carmichael, who was a "good government" candidate, and by former Gov. Rivers, who was all for "expanded services." But the former was never able to overcome the fact that he started as an unknown, had too little affirmative to offer and largely confined himself to attacking Talmadge and all his works. As for Rivers, it is now plain that he undertook to stage his comeback too soon. Georgians have only average memories, but four years are too short a period in which to forget the stench of the Rivers administration. The truth of the matter is that, other things being equal, Talmadge was the only man in the race who dealt forthrightly enough with issues that struck a large body of voters as being immediate or relevant.

Interestingly enough, he divided with Carmichael the backing of vested interests with a political stake. That did not hurt him even in the hinterland which has reelected him. It did not hurt him elsewhere. The Georgia press was overwhelmingly against him, but at least one metropolitan newspaper long regarded as the mouthpiece of certain banking interests came out for him. It is not assuming too much to conclude that Talmadge had other "big money" backing. He prides himself on being the wearer of Tom Watson's mantle, but his populism is like his red galluses—merely a decorative detail which does not keep him from being persona grata with gentlemen who know where his heart is.

So Gene Talmadge is to be governor of Georgia for the fourth time, even though he is not the majority choice of the voters. Again the vicious county unit system has swept him into power—in the teeth of all that the embattled forces of intelligence and self-respect could do to the contrary. We in Alabama are hamstrung by a scheme of apportionment which makes a mockery of the democratic principle. But that injustice is small compared to the strangulation wrought by the county unit system of Georgia. Unless our neighbors get rid of that abomination, they will continue to be at the mercy of the Talmadges and their imitators.

Unit Vote

Editor, Constitution: Please inform John Couric that he made an error in his election story in saying that this is the first time that a candidate for Governor was elected without receiving a majority of the popular vote. It happened about 1932, when Talmadge received a majority of unit votes but lacked some 30,000 getting half the popular votes. Abit Nix was runner-up with six candidates in the race, and would have been Governor had popular vote majority been required. I will never be satisfied until we discard the undemocratic unit vote, and a considerable majority of our people with whom I have talked favor the popular vote plan.

Judges Hear Case Opposing Talmadge

ATLANTA, Aug. 16 — (AP) — A prediction that court interference with the election of Eugene Talmadge to his fourth term as Governor of Georgia would result in "political chaos" in the State was made in Federal Court today by one of his attorneys.

Attorney B. D. Murphy made the statement before a three-judge tribunal hearing a petition that the election of Talmadge be stopped by court order on grounds that the country unit system under which he was nominated in the Democratic primary violates the equal rights provision of the United States Constitution.

Under the county unit system which permits the State's 159 counties from two to six unit votes depending upon population, Talmadge was nominated over James V. Carmichael, backed by Governor Ellis Arnall, without receiving popular vote approval.

The suit was brought by Dr. Cullen B. Gosnell, Emory University political science professor, and Mrs. Robert Lee Turman, former president of the Atlanta League of Women Voters. They contended that as residents of populous Dekalb and Fulton Counties (Atlanta) which have six unit votes each, their ballots had many times less weight in nomination of the Governor than those of citizens of less populous two-vote counties.

Ballots Prepared

Secretary of State Ben W. Fortson, Jr., already has prepared the official ballot for the November general election and sent it to county ordinaries for printing. Talmadge is the only gubernatorial candidate on the ballot.

Attorney W. D. Thompson, representing the plaintiffs in the case, contended in court today, however, that the election of Talmadge still could be blocked. He said that from the time a voter dropped his ballot in the primary box until the State Legislature, acting upon certificates of the Secretary of State, declared the Governor elected, it was one continuous process, governed by State law, and stemming from an unconstitutional primary.

During Thompson's argument Circuit Judge Samuel H. Sibley, who with District Judges Frank M. Scarlett and Louie W. Strum made up the court, commented:

"It looks like if you're right we'd sort of be wrecking the general election."

There was no indication when a decision would be announced.

Fulton Distranchised

Editor Constitution: In the recent Democratic primary election for Governor, Chattahoochee County, with two unit votes, cast a total of 242 ballots. Echols County, with two unit votes, cast a total of 619 ballots. Towns County, with two unit votes, cast a total of 242 ballots.

In other words, the three above named counties with a total of six unit votes, cast a total of 1,102 ballots. Yet, Fulton County, with six unit votes, cast a total of 92,550 ballots.

By going a little further, in order to show a majority of unit votes, I will add Clay County, with two unit votes, which cast a total of 798 ballots. Thus, you see, four of the smallest counties in the State, with a total of eight unit votes and a total of 1,900 popular votes, had more power than all of Fulton County's 92,550 popular votes.

Can this, by any streetch of the imagination, be called democracy? Can it be called majority rule? Can it even be called just plain common sense?

The voters of Fulton County are virtually disfranchised when it comes to taking a part in a State-wide election.

R. H. CARPENTER.

Note to Fulton Voters

Editor Constitution: I notice that quite a few of your Fulton County voters are very much dissatisfied with the amount of weight which their votes carry under the county unit system.

Now, why do they not (since they value their vote so highly) move to Chattahoochee County, where their vote would be equivalent (according to their computation) to 382.2 votes per person?

Who knows? Perhaps it would not be long before Chattahoochee County, with such good citizens moving in, would become a very close rival to Fulton County.

Co-operative

Editor Constitution: It is normal for a game to be competitive. But a well-ordered government should be co-operative. A game represents its participants. A government represents its people, not alone those who vote, but all of its individuals.

Therefore, both the government of a State and the United States are obligated to declare as Governor and Lieutenant-Governor the two receiving the highest number of all the votes legally cast—and the same rule for President and Vice President.

Georgia's Unit-Vote System

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

Much has been said concerning the unit system used in the election of certain officials in Georgia and the way Talmadge used this system in winning nomination for Governor. The strange and seemingly unpublished part is that Talmadge won because of a unit system he had sought to destroy many times.

In each Georgia Legislature there is usually an attempt made to abolish the unit system. This measure was defeated only last year due chiefly to the influence of Governor Arnall, who favored the unit system. As a whole the people of Georgia favor the unit system, and it was not, as many seem to think, forced upon them by Talmadge.

Those who have branded the unit system undemocratic should remember that our President is elected in this manner, and it has happened once, as in Georgia, that the candidate receiving the largest popular vote lost the electoral college vote.

JESSE E. WIKLE.

Vote Supremacy

The 105 counties which nominated Talmadge have less than half of the State's citizens. Forty-five of them have decreased in population between the last two census reports. The 54 counties which repudiated Talmadge have considerably more than half the State's white citizens, and pay about three-fourths of the taxes. How long will they be willing for a minority group to dictate the spending of these taxes, the rules by which they live?

"Equal justice under law" can scarcely be expected from a nominee whose first statements have threatened wholesale abrogation of law, whose reckless irresponsibility has already precipitated racial conflict. Shall we dumbly submit to four years of this? Must it always be a disgrace to be a Georgian?

Fortunately the Federal Constitution, which apparently is not legal in our State, is still in force nationally. It states specifically that representatives to Congress shall be elected by the people in the States. Obviously it is unconstitutional for Fulton County's half million citizens to be arbitrarily disfranchised.

Let's establish vote supremacy in Georgia.

The Curmudgeon

Editor Constitution: In an article in the Atlanta Constitution, the curmudgeon, Ickes, complained about the Georgia County Unit system giving one voter more influence than another. Ickes is a voter of Illinois, whose legislature has not re-apportioned Congressional Districts since 1910 census. Accordingly, one district in Chicago suburbs has over 10 times as many voters as a rump district in Chicago's Loop section.

Last Spring the U. S. Supreme Court in a five to four decison decided that the judiciary had no right to interfere with such matters, as it was a matter for the Illinois legislature and the people who elects it. Why doesn't Mr. Ickes do something about his own state before condemning Georgia? His late wife was a member of the Illinois legislature during this period.

Georgians do not criticize Illinois because small district elects a Negro Congressman, as it is their business. Why has not Georgia man, who unlike the Negro has no power outside of the same right to elect a governor, Georgia?

Make It Hot for Gene

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

Violation of the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution has been cited in two suits challenging the validity of Georgia's primary law, which provides for the county unit system of nominating State officials.

The amendment provides that:

> No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States . . . nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

Sat. 8-10-46

Plaintiffs charge that the Georgia election laws violate this amendment because they "deprive them of the full and fair value of their votes" as compared with other votes.

While it is not likely that these suits will get to first base when heard in Atlanta's Federal Court on Aug. 16, we have hope that they will so focus attention upon this obsolete practice that eventually there will develop sufficient resentment to chuck it out.

It was because of the county unit system that Gene Talmadge was returned to power, although he failed to win the popular vote.

Speaking on a radio broadcast Friday night, old Gene insisted that he had won the popular vote as well as the unit vote since he did not count the nearly 100 thousand colored Georgians, all of whom, "but one," cast their ballots for Carmichael.

Naturally, we're in favor of anything that will make it hot for Gene.

Federal Court Tries Ga. Voting System

ATLANTA — Firing another volley against Klan efforts to capture political control of the state, Georgia liberals sought invalidation of the undemocratic county-unit voting system in Federal court hearings which began this week.

The suit seeks nullification of the Neil Act of 1917 legalizing the county-unit voting counting which defeated James V. Carmichael in the gubernatorial campaign and Representative Helen Douglas Mankin in the Fifth Congressional District. Both candidates were heavily supported by progressive labor and Negro voters.

Citizenship Abridged

Supporters of the two liberal candidates initiated court action to thwart certification of Talmadge and James C. Davis—rival of Mrs. Mankin—as Democratic nominees on the grounds that their full rights as citizens of the United States were abridged by the county-unit system.

In the suit to keep Talmadge from taking office next January, the complainants pointed out that their rights under the Fourteenth Amendment had been curbed by the State of Georgia. However, O. D. Murphy, arguing for the State, said that the right to vote does not originate in, and is not protected by the Federal Constitution.

Murphy attempted to show that the complainants Mrs. Robert Lee Thurman of the League of Women Voters and Cullen B. Gosnell of DeKalb County, were merely displeased with the results of the election rather than with the archaic voting system.

Violates Constitution

In the suit on the Congressional race, Croom Partridge, who appeared for Earl P. Cook, a Georgia Tech student who filed the complaint, argued that Article 1, Section 2, of the Constitution, was violated by applying county-unit evaluation to Congressional elections.

Representative Douglas intervened before the court adjourned to ask dismissal of her suit filed in connection with her campaign with Judge James C. Davis. Judge Samuel H. Sibley, who presided over the court told her attorney, Houston White, that he took the proposed intervention under advisement.

Georgia Citizens Sue To Oust Talmadge

Defender Chicago, Ill.

Sat. 8-17-46

BRUNSWICK, Ga. — Georgia progressives, forcing a stake into the heart of Southern reaction, this week filed suit in Federal court in a move to block another four years of Talmadge hate.

Filed in Brunswick, Ga., the suit challenges the constitutionality of the antiquated, unfair unit system by which red-galluses Eugene Talmadge won the Democratic nomination even though a majority of the State's voters rejected him.

Talmadge, scheduled to return to the State Capital Jan. 1, received 246 unit votes from Georgia's rural districts to 146 for Arnall-blessed James V. Carmichael, who swept the popular vote.

Blamed For Lynchings

"Gene's" white supremacy platform is blamed for the Walton county mass lynchings in which two Negro couples were killed by a white mob July 25.

The suit charges that the unit system is in conflict with the 14th Amendment, which stipulates that "no State shall make or enforce any laws which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States . . ."

Forces that backed Carmichael plan to carry the fight to the U. S. Supreme Court.

Georgia's election law, dating back to reconstruction days, stipulates that primary elections are to be decided on the unit vote basis. Each of the State's counties is allotted extra units up to a maximum of only six.

Carmichael swept densely populated areas such as industrial, metropolitan Fulton county, where he polled 58,193 popular votes but received credit for only six unit votes.

Chattahochee, a backwoods county, had only 265 votes, which counted for two full unit votes. It was charged that one vote in Chattahochee county equaled 106 votes in Fulton county. Most of these rural white counties rallied to Talmadge.

A companion suit asked that the Fifth Congressional District race also be declared unconstitutional. In this contest, Rep. Helen Douglas Mankin, liberal incumbent, carried the popular majority but Judge James C. Davis carried the county units.

Mrs. Mankin protested to the State Democratic Committee and it was decided to certify both Mrs. Mankin and Judge Davis as Democratic candidates in the November election, which is decided by popular vote.

The suit filed against Georgia's unit system is expected to have far-reaching significance. It is predicted that the U. S. Supreme Court will ultimately decide the issue.

Meanwhile, Talmadge, in Atlanta, said he had "no comment" to offer on the suit. He continues to deny that there were any lynchings in Georgia during his three previous terms as the State's chief executive despite conclusive proof offered by the NAACP of numerous instances of 14 mob murders in his state while he was in office.

OFFICIALS HEED BILBO'S ADVICE ON INTIMIDATION

Many Stay Away

Violence Was Pattern Late Reports Show

There were no reports of violence on election day, July 2, when Negro citizens voted in the Democratic primary for the first time in the history of the state, but beginning with the very next day following election day and almost daily since that time there have been increasing reports of intimidation, violence, brutality, and even death visited on Negro citizens on election day, facts which greatly reduced the number of Negro voters. 7-13-46

The intimidation, violence, brutality and death visited upon Negroes on election day, together with similar pre-election day incidents, followed the frantic urging of the white people of the state by Senator Theo. G. Bilbo to keep Negroes from voting at any price, by implication even the use of murder. 7-13-46

A candidate for reelection to the United States Senate, Bilbo was joined in his violent race baiting, but in a lesser degree, by the four other senatorial candidates, Ross A. Collins, former U. S. Congressman; Tom Q. Ellis, State Supreme Court clerk; Nelson Levings, World War II Navy Commander, and Frank (Peachtree) Harper, one time Peachtree salesman and South Mississippi farmer and small business man. 7-13-46

The results of the election show Bilbo with a majority of slightly over 3,000 votes over the combined total of his opponents. With a conservatively estimated 5,000 Negroes, including veterans qualified under a state law exempting them for paying poll tax, eligible to vote in the election had it not been for the actual violence and fear of violence on the part of Negro voters widespread over the state, it appears certain now that there would have to be a second senatorial primary.

Negroes Are Not Molested In Mississippi Vote

JACKSON, Miss., July — (AP) —Backed by a promise of Federal protection, negroes joined white persons today in voting in Mississippi's Democratic primary election.

They were not molested.

The issue of whether negroes could vote had been highpointed during the campaign by an appeal by Senator Theo G. Bilbo, who seeks re-nomination, to "every red-blooded Anglo-Saxon in Mississippi to use whatever means are necessary" to keep negroes from the polls.

Twenty-five negroes were among the first 45 persons to vote in the 31st precinct at Jackson. Across the street, in the 32nd precinct, one negro was among 30 early voters.

Negro voters had the assurance of Attorney General Tom Clark in Washington that the Justice Department would back up the Supreme Court's ruling which, he said, "leaves Federal law in this question clear."

Bilbo in campaign addresses has defied the Federal government to enforce negro voting rights and has offered his legal services to defend "anyone who gets in trougle" preventing negroes from cating ballots.

Rep. John E. Rankin, who also has often spoken for white supremacy, has urged "law-abiding negroes" to stay away from the polls. Rankin, chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Affairs is one of four representatives facing opposition in today's Democratic primary. The other three are unoprosed.

The Democratic primary is equivalent to an election in one-party Mississippi.

Second Primary

However, Bilbo's opponents all deny the incumbent will receive a majority today. Each admits Bilbo will lead the balloting, but each claims he will be in a second primary with the senator.

Running against Bilbo are former Representative Ross Collins, Tom Q. Ellis, lerk of the State Supreme Court, Naval veteran Nelson T. Levings, and former State Senator Frank Harper.

Rankin, who didn't bother to leave Washington during the campaign, is opposed by Claude F. Clayton and Charles G. Hamilton in the First District.

Rep. Arthur Winstead of the Fifth District faces his former campaign manager, J. O. Hollis. In the Sixth District, Rep. W. M. Colmer is opposed by Grover C. Doggette of Laurel. Rep. Dan R. McGehee of the Seventh District has three adversaries—Stewart C. Brown, C. A. Sullivan and John Bell Williams.

The polls close at 6 p. m., Central Time.

Miss. Mobs Whip Voters

Houston Chron

By JOHN E. ROUSSEAU, JR.

NEW ORLEANS — Mississippi's reign of terror, suggested and approved by United States Senator Theodore G. Bilbo during his recent campaign for re-election, burst with full fury on Negroes who sought to cast ballots last Tuesday in the Gulf Coast section of the state. And despite radio broadcasts and news stories published over the nation to the effect that Negroes voted peaceably in Mississippi's election on July 2, investigators sent into that state by the New Orleans Branch of the NAACP reported Friday that three Negro men and one woman who sought to vote were severely beaten at Gulfport, while scores were intimidated and refused the ballot at Pass Christian, Miss. Saturday 7-20-46

Details of the alleged violence committed by mobs of whites who "guarded" the polls and either frightened or assaulted Negroes who sought to vote have been sent to the national office of the NAACP by Daniel E. Byrd, executive secretary of the New Orleans branch NAACP; and to the Department of Justice by the Rev. Father George T. J. Strype, S. S. J., pastor of St. Philomena Catholic church at Pass Christian. 7-20-46

Information received by New Orleans NAACP investigators disclosed that V. R. Collier, 36-year-old war veteran; his wife, Mrs. Ernestine Collier, who is a school teacher; J. T. Hall, a prominent undertaker; and R. E. Daniel, 36-year-old war veteran, were brutally beaten on Tuesday when they attempted to vote in the Democratic primary, at Gulfport. All have resided in Gulfport for the better portion of their lives, it was learned.

It was learned from reliable source that the Gulfport incident was reported to the Federal Bureau of Investigation at Jackson, Mississippi, on the same day and protection was requested. The FBI agent is quoted as saying that it was his duty to "investigate, not protect."

A signed affidavit from twelve Negro veterans described how they had been denied the ballot at Pass Christian on Tuesday. This affidavit was notarized by C. R. Jones, a white justice of the peace residing at Pass Christian, and was signed by Eugene H. Roberts, Daniel C. Charlot, Jr., Edward Watson, Jr., Steve Hunter, Jr.; Joseph R. Venable, Thomas E. Guyot, Jr., Leon E Brady, Edward M. Benoitz, Godfrey W. Benoitz, John J. Cotton, Harock B. Labat, and Thomas Spencer.

The affidavit charged that the deponents had appeared at the City Hall in Pass Christian, Mississippi, to vote in the election for United States senator and sundry offices but were met at the doors by Eaton Gariga, the bailiff, who turned them away saying that no Negroes would be allowed to vote.

Concerning the Gulfport affair, it was learned that Collier and his wife went to the city hall between 12 and 1 p. m. on election day and attempted to cast their ballots. They were directed into the east wing of the building by a police officer, it was learned.

In the corridor about 15 unkempt white men were standing and when the couple approached, spread out fanwise to block them, NAACP investigator declared. "You people don't vote here today," the couple was told, "you come back tomorrow; that's your voting time."

Before Collier had chance to reply, he and his wife were set upon by the whites who began beating and kicking them, then finally dragged them to the porch from which they threw Collier to the street. The police officer stood by and made no attempt to stop the assault, the NAACP learned.

Other reports were to the effect that Collier was threatened by men who flashed long knives and that he and his wife were obliged to run in the effort to keep the mob from trailing them.

Interviewed the next day, Collier declined to make a statement but his face was swollen and one eye practically closed, NAACP investigators reported.

Hall, the undertaker, was also reportedly beaten for trying to vote and was later jailed after reporting the incident to the chief of police, approached by other white men who accompanied a policeman. Daniels He was charged with being drunk and disturbing the peace, it was learned.

Daniels, a veteran of 40 months in the army, is reported to have gone to the polls on July 2 and had been told to go to a side door. He entered and was asked if he had voted before and if he had voted the Democratic ticket before. When he answered in the affirmative, he was told to go to the ward school and vote.

As he started out of the building, he was approached by a group of white men who struck him and told him never to enter that building wearing his hat, reporters learned.

On leaving the building he was was placed under arrest, taken to Harrison county jail and beaten so severely about the head and face that his hearing may be permanently impaired, NAACP investigators reported.

He was beaten into unconsciousness then kept in jail until 11 p. m. and released on $250 bond, it was alleged. He is charged with being drunk and with disorderly conduct.

Hall and Daniels are to be tried on Saturday it was learned.

Supporting their stories, NAACP investigators submitted photographs of the beaten men, however, the investigators would not affirm or deny the report that they had been successful in taking photographs of the mobs, declaring that all evidence had been turned over to the Department of Justice.

Bilbo's Election Has Its Points, Says Carter

The News Birmingham, Ala. Sat 8-17-46

BOSTON, Aug. 17—(AP)—Hodding Carter, Greenville, Miss., publisher declared Friday night that Sen. Bilbo (D., Miss.) sits in the Senate "as a horrifying warning of what the combined forces of bigotry and anger and fear can produce in a democracy."

He added, however, in a radio broadcast:

"If you interpret the South only through its Bilbos you are doing the South a grave wrong . . . this thing which Bilbo today epitomizes in the nation's mind is not all Southern."

Carter continued: "As a citizen of Mississippi and of the United States I believe it may be a good thing that Bilbo has been returned to the Senate. He can do Mississippi less harm in Washington than he can at home.

"Surely, it is better for us that he should be ex-officio mayor of Washington than again governor of Mississippi."

Carter, publisher of The Greenville Delta Democrat-Times, and this year's winner of the Pulitzer prize for a series of editorials on racial, religious and economic tolerance, spoke in reply to a broadcast by Bilbo last week.

Referring to Bilbo's two terms as governor of Mississippi, Carter said, "he left it bankrupt . . . its university in disrepute and blacklisted . . . its institutions in political and moral chaos, its name a byword for political degradations."

Primary Season

Times N.Y. N.Y.

These are the days that try men's political chances: the season of the primaries is in full swing. By last week seventeen States had completed their primary elections. The week's big news came from Mississippi where Senator Theodore G. Bilbo on Tuesday won the Democratic nomination by a margin of more than 4,000 votes over the combined total cast for his four opponents. Thus he was assured of another six years in the Senate; in solidly Democratic Mississippi nomination means election. Sunday

Tomorrow a major primary election will be held in Minnesota, which will be in a sense a test of the strength of Harold E. Stassen, former Minnesota Governor, recently a Navy captain and now contender for the Republican Presidential nomination in 1948.

Last month, in Nebraska, Mr. Stassen received an indirect setback when his Senatorial nominee, Gov. Dwight Griswold, was defeated in the primary by isolationist Senator Hugh A. Butler. In the Minnesota campaign Mr. Stassen has backed Gov. Edward J. Thye, an advocate of international cooperation, for the Republican Senatorial nomination. Governor Thye's opponent is Senator Henrik Shipstead, a consistent isolationist. "The Man" Bilbo (so nicknamed because of his habit of referring to himself in the third person) campaigned with the battle-cry of "white supremacy." Many reasons were cited for his success at the polls. One was the apparent indifference of the white electorate. Of a large part of the total white population of more than 1,100,000 fewer than 200,000 voted. Of the total Negro population, of well over 1,000,000 the vote numbered only in the hundreds.

tion laws so as to keep Negroes from voting, took barbed verbal shots at his political opponents, and welcomed all voters "back into the fold."

Bilbo said the celebration was staged not "to crow," but to mark "the greatest victory of our lives because we have defeated our enemies outside of Mississippi — the enemies of the South and all the South stands for—the South's enemies from Maine to San Francisco, from the Great Lakes to the Gulf."

Bilbo said his election was a victory over "the Drew Pearsons, the Walter Winchells, Jim Dombrowskis, of the so-called Southern Conference for Human Welfare; Aubrey Williams, of the Southern Farmer; the PAC-CIO; the magazines Life, Saturday Evening Post, Time, Collier's The (Memphis) Commercial Appeal; The (New Orleans Times-Picayune; The St. Louis Post-Dispatch; The Philadelphia Record; Washington Post; The Chicago Defender; Pittsburgh Courier; Old Lady Roosevelt; Harold Ickes and Hank Wallace, together with all the Negroes, Communists, Negro lovers and advocates of social equality who poured out their slime and money in Mississippi."

BILBO THANKED his campaign workers and the laundry in Jackson which laundered his clothes during the campaign.

Turning to his proposal for a special session of the State Legislature, Bilbo said:

"I want to urge the governor of this state to immediately call a session of the Legislature to enact such laws as will not violate the decisions of the Supreme Court but at the same time will perpetuate the plans and purposes of the state constitution of 1890 that has kept the ballot box clean and white for 56 years."

Small Majority Is Indicated in Mississippi Senate Race, Thus Avoiding Run-Off

Thurs. 7-4-46

By HAROLD B. HINTON

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

JACKSON, Miss., July 3—By a narrow margin that will not be exactly known until the official canvass Saturday of yesterday's primary vote Senator Theodore G. Bilbo carried the field against the combined forces of his four opponents for his third Democratic nomination to the United States Senate. No run-off will be necessary, and his nomination amounts to election in this one-party State.

[Unofficial returns from 1,645 of 1,701 precincts reported by The Associated Press gave Senator Bilbo 96,395, Ross Collins 18,590, Tom Q. Ellis 57,288, Frank Harper 1,397 and Nelson T. Levings 15,333. On these figures Mr. Bilbo had a majority of 3,787.] Thurs. 7-4-46

Representative John E. Rankin, who, like Mr. Bilbo, was publicly outspoken against Negro voting in the Democratic primary, defeated two opponents, and no run-off will be necessary in his district.

The only incumbent in the Mississippi Congressional delegation who will have to contest a second time for the nomination is Representative Dan McGhee of Jackson, who failed to obtain a majority in his district. He has a slight plurality over his closest contender, John Bell Williams, a veteran who lost an arm in the second World War. They will race each other in a run-off on Aug. 27. Times Thurs 7-4

Despite the warnings by Mr. Bilbo and Mr. Rankin to Negroes to stay away from the polls, several hundred voted throughout the State and there was no disorder. They were mostly veterans who, by a new State law, were allowed to register and vote without payment of poll tax. New York, N.Y.

Anti-Bilbo Vote Split

Mr. Bilbo's closest rival was Tom Q. Ellis, former clerk of the State Supreme Court, who proved his State-wide vote-getting powers when he was elected to that post a few years ago. Former Representative Ross Collins, who has never shown much strength outside his own district, surrounding Meridian, was a poor third.

The votes cast for the four unsuccessful rivals were anti-Bilbo ballots, according to general opinion here. Mr. Ellis, who entered the race only at the last possible legal limit for filing, waged a carefully neutral campaign, avoiding even the mention of rivals' names. He denounced "intolerance and blasphemy" impersonally, and called for "constructive leadership" in the State. Thurs. 7-4-46

Mr. Collins made savage personal attacks on Mr. Bilbo, but Mr. Ellis seems to have been the beneficiary of many of the votes the former representative weaned away from the Bilbo standard. The fourth and fifth candidates were Nelson T. Levings, naval veteran of the Pacific campaign, and Frank Harpere, former State Senator.

Mr. Bilbo's strength with the Mississippi electorate, like that of Mr. Rankin, is hard to explain, even by his supporters. It seems to be based on a feeling of personal loyalty to him, which has descended from father to son during his long political life in the State.

Views of Opposing Voters

Watching the election returns last night were two elderly voters, one a veteran printer, the other an attorney and sometime county official. Being on opposite sides of the Bilbo fence, they engaged in an amiable argument over his political merits.

The printer, representing the pro-Bilbo side, said he had voted for him every time he has stood for office in Mississippi. As a result, he went on, "when I write Bilbo about something in Washington, I get action." He added that his five daughters, their husbands, and four grandchildren also voted for Senator Bilbo every time they got a chance. Thurs. 7-4-46

"If Bilbo went to Washington and stole the Capitol, I'd still be for him," the printer said by way of conclusion.

The attorney, on the contrary, has never voted for Mr. Bilbo. His reasons for this determined opposition were as nebulous as were those for the printer's partisanship. He protested that he had known Mr. Bilbo all his life and counted him as a friend. He mentioned a legal favor he had done for Mr. Bilbo once in his earlier career when the latter was under indictment "for some kind of devilment."

Pressed by the printer for his reasons for opposing the Senator, the attorney lodged a general charge that "Bilbo is always double-crossing his friends," and retired from the lists.

Bilbo in Martyr Role

The Senator's record as Governor seems to be an asset to him, although Mississippi Governors usually retire from that office in a deluge of unpopularity. Those who refer admiringly to his Gubernatorial record assert that he was thwarted by political opponents in the ambitious projects he attempted to get through the Legislature, but that succeeding Governors picked up his pioneering ideas and carried them to successful realization. Thurs 7-4-46

This kind of sentiment fits nicely into the reputation for martyrdom on which Mr. Bilbo thrives. A protege and political descendant of the late Senator James K. Vardaman (one of the "willful men" castigated by President Wilson for filibustering the armed merchant men bill just before the first World War) Mr. Bilbo has followed his mentor in cultivating the role of a man of the people.

He was elected to the Senate for the first time in 1934, over former Senator Hubert D. Stephens, as "the poor man's friend," a slogan that was highly popular during the depression. In 1940, he capitalized on the unpopularity his opponent in the run-off, former Governor Hugh L. White, carried with him out of the Governor's mansion.

It was not until the 1946 campaign that he raised the racial issue which has brought such national notice to the Mississippi primary in an off-year. While he has always been on the side of "white supremacy," as are all other successful political figures in this State, there has never been a question of Negroes voting in Democratic primary elections here since the reconstruction epoch.

Thus, as Eugene Talmadge is doing in Georgia, Senator Bilbo was able to threaten eventual Negro control of the State's political life as the possible penalty for voting for his opponents, although all four of them probably hold roughly the same ideas as he does about the Negro's place in southern life.

Mississippi's population is about evenly divided between Negroes and whites. It is almost entirely rural in character. Jackson, the largest population center in the State, lodges about 100,000 of the State's 2,000,000 inhabitants in its city limits and immediate environs. Thurs. 7-4-46

The influence of the "outside" criticism of Mr. Bilbo for his advocacy of preventing Negroes from voting in the primary is a matter of considerable debate among experienced political observers here today. They seem agreed that the charges of intolerance and bigotry leveled against him from the North did not alienate a single member of Mr. Bilbo's ardent personal following.

The point in dispute was whether this "northern interference" had helped to swell his vote, by attracting to his camp individuals resentful of out-of-State derogation of the Mississippi Senator. Nelson T. Levings, former commander in the Navy, who ran fourth in the race, expressed the view that enough extra votes were thrown to Mr. Bilbo in this manner to give him the narrow majority avoiding a second election, in which Mr. Levings believed Mr. Ellis could beat him.

"We could beat Bilbo if the newspapers outside the State would ignore him," said Mr. Levings.

HOW BILBO SQUEEZED THROUGH

Times New York, N.Y.

The population of the State of Mississippi in 1940 was 2,183,276. It is considerably more today. Of this 1940 population 1,074,578 was Negro. A few hundred Negroes voted in last Tuesday's primary elections. The results were determined by a white electorate drawn from a white population of more than 1,100,000. Of these fewer than 200,000 actually voted in the primaries in which Senator Theodore Gilmore Bilbo of Poplarville was a successful candidate to succeed himself. The Borough of Manhattan had in 1945 a population of about 1,900,000. Of these 453,936 cast their votes for Mayor last fall. That is to say, Manhattan, with at least 300,000 less than the population of Mississippi, cast about 250,000 more votes than Mississippi. On the Manhattan scale the white population alone in Mississippi should have produced about 300,000 votes, or about one-third more than it did produce. Tues. 7-5-46

The active voters of Mississippi evidently wished, in somewhat more than one case out of two, to be represented by Mr. Bilbo, and they will be. But Mr. Bilbo was actually chosen, not merely by a small minority of those who would have voted if voting conditions in Mississippi were what they are in New York City, but by a minority of the potential white voters of his State. Many Mississippians, doubtless accepted Bilbo because they resented "outside interference"—though they should bear in mind that a Senator is a Federal official and helps make laws for outsiders as well as insiders. We don't have to conclude, and this is a comfort, that a majority even of white Mississippians positively wanted him.

Who Elected Bilbo

The News and Courier

The Northern agitators who, by incessant interference forced the Mississippians to be on the defensive and to renominate Mr. Bilbo for United States senator, are now deeply concerned about what they have done and are undertaking to undo it. They demand investigation of the Mississippi primary. The investigators can make clear to the intelligent Americans the causes of the result in Mississippi by examining the files of the "Labor" and pinkish magazines published in Northern cities, the accounts of picketing Mr. Bilbo's home in Washington and the proceedings of the "Liberal" and C. I. O.-PAC organizations. The political pharisees in other states have made it impossible to elect a Lamar, a John Sharpe Williams or a Leroy Percy to the United States senate in Mississippi. Charleston, S.C. Wed. 9-11-46

Northerners Elected Bilbo

The News and Courier, Charleston

In the "one party states" of the South where nomination in the primary is "equivalent", it is almost unknown that a candidate is nominated, if there be two or more other candidates who are taken seriously, in the first primary. In the Mississippi primary T. G. Bilbo was renominated for United States senator, although three other candidates sought the nomination. Newspapers in the remote cities, New York for example, are deploring the result. They do not know it, but they are responsible for it. They forced the Mississippians to defend themselves against dictation. They chilled the opposition of men to whom Mr. Bilbo is not acceptable.

Were conditions reversed, were the South the powerful and populous section, if it had the national organs of publicity and the barrels of money, and undertook to "educate" the Pennsylvanians or the New Yorkers, they would elect and reelect their Bilbos. In truth some of these distant states have had and they have representatives in their public life no better than the Bilbos. Will The News and Courier name them? Certainly not. It is not a doctor to practice on New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Michigan and Illinois, and it confesses sorrowfully that its disinfectants are not sufficient for its South Carolina. Foreign doctoring is inseparable from quackery. Sun. 7-7-46

"Bilboism" On The Skids"

The Black Dispatch

A large number of liberals who fought against the re-election of "The Man" Bilbo are openly lamenting this week election returns from Mississippi, but few seem to observe the advances made in democratic thinking down in Dixie despite the re-election of this disgusting exponent of white supremacy. To our notion a lot of good news eminated from Mississippi last week that should be properly checked and evaluated. Oklahoma City, Okla.

For instance, Senator Bilbo actually received a total of 97,000 votes while his opponent received 93,000—a difference of only four thousand rests between the people down in Mississippi who believe in good government and brotherhood and the class of folk who think like Senator Bilbo thinks. It should be kept in mind that Senator Bilbo raised an issue down in his home state which the returns show is ceasing to be an issue. Senator Bilbo declared he was running on a "white supremacy" platform, and almost half of the citizens of that state indicate by their vote that this false issue does not impress them. Sat. 7-13-46

We doubt seriously that the whole picture of what is happening down in Mississippi, as its citizens drift towards right thinking, is reflected in the figures given above. It should be remembered that Mississippi has a total population, according to the U .S. Census, of 2,183,796, and that 1,077,469 are colored. All of the voters who cast ballots in last Tuesday's election, with the exception of a handful, were white. Disregarding how the Negroes would have voted had they been unmolested in their suffrage rights, it should be kept in mind that only 9 per cent of the total white electorate voted. How would the other 91 per cent of the white voters cast their ballots had they themselves not been disfranchised by poll tax laws? How much resentment rests in the hearts and souls of this 91 per cent white vote against laws that place the ballot in the hands of the rich and denies it to the poor?

Mississippi passed its existing restrictive suffrage legislation in 1890. It provides first of all that a two-dollar annual poll tax must be paid. It is cumulative. That is to say, the state does not forgive the tax year by year. Across a ten-year period a voter who has never voted would owe $20, and that is the basic reason why more than half a million whites in a state where the per capita income is the lowest in the nation, are unable to meet the vicious challenge of a cumulative poll tax on election day. It would be interesting to know what the "peckerwoods," as Senator Bilbo insultingly calls them, would do if the unrestricted use of the ballot were placed in their hands.

And then after using an economic club to disfranchise white people, and in the name of white supremacy, the ruling class Mississippians place another prohibition on Negro voting. They have a literacy test for the blacks. This fools many whites who cannot see that they are just as thoroughly disfranchised with an economic election tool (the poll tax) as the blacks with a literacy requirement for registration. On the literacy question the Mississippi law says:

> "A person shall not be registered unless he is able to read any section of the Constitution, or, in case he cannot read, unless he is able to understand any section thereof when read to him, or give a reasonable interpretation thereof."

Presentation of the poll tax receipt is a requirement when the elector appears and offers to vote, and thus the nuisance value of the poll tax is materially increased for the poor whites as the poor blacks who must move from plantation to plantation annually, are unable to preserve anything of value. With the almost total disfranchisement of the whites and the blacks, it is interesting to know that almost fifty per cent of the voters are slowly opening their eyes, and show by their votes that the old hue and cry about black domination has lost its charm. Sat. 7-13-46

Down in Dixie it is slowly dawning on the white masses that the backwardness of the South is closely related to restrictive suffrage laws. When the Committee of Editors and Writers of the South met in Atlanta December 21,-1944, it was clearly brought out that in the 13 southern states, bedridden with poll tax and other restrictive measures, only 27.9 per cent of the electorate cast their ballots, but that in the North, where every citizen has the untrammeled freedom to use his vote as he chooses, 61 per cent of the potential cast their ballots. Oklahoma, despite its early-day experience in disfranchisement, shows the highest average in voting strength of any commonwealth in the South, showing an average of around 55 per cent, while this year the record shows Mississippi, in its senatorial race, dropped down to 9 per cent.

There are those who argue that outside influences were responsible for the re-election of Senator Bilbo, and that if the state had been left to its own self-determination, "The Man" Bilbo would have gone down into defeat. We are not too deeply impressed with that sort of logic. The rich experiences of humanity teach that persuasion has efficacy and virtue. Of course, many people misnomer as force what we characterize as persuasion. The argument is made that people revolt against force, entirely forgetful that it was the application of force that brought about the independence of this nation, and it was the application of force that later brought about the freedom of the slaves.

How many Black Dispatch readers believe that England would voluntarily have released the American colonies from her clutches and that the slaveholders would have reacted similarly to freedom for the blacks without outside interference? How many religionists are impressed with the thought that Christianity can be advanced by withdrawal of missionaries from foreign missions? Sat. 7-13-46

Force is necessary in the life of humanity to compel men and women to sit down and contemplate upon truth. That's why organized society has created laws and penalties. An individual will not halt to think about personal excesses until nature penalizes his health. There's vision, understanding and virtue in force, and usually force has to arrive in the form of outside interference.

We think the South would not be looking critically at itself today, and Mississippi wou'd not have expressed itself last Tuesday as it did, had it not been for the outside interference of President Roosevelt, who a number of years ago caused an economic survey to be made of the resources down in Dixie which so exposed sectional improvidence and excesses that prominent citizens below the Mason and Dixon line started thinking soberly as they had never thought before since Appomattox.

The CIO is another outside influence that is going to be helpful to the Southland in its thinking. Of course there will be resentment, but resentment will provoke discussion, resulting in a trend of thought never before occurring in the South. The CIO is going to teach the southern poor-white that no workman, regardless of his race, can have security down in Dixie so long as a destitute black man stands outside the door of Dixie's industrial establishment. The CIO is going to bring outside vision in to prove that the man without work in actuality sets the salary norm of the man who works. Sat. 7-13-46

What most people fail to realize is that progress is a snail. The election returns from Mississippi last Tuesday prove that Senator Bilbo is on the way out. The Black Dispatch does not believe he can survive another election, for

BILBOISM AND DEMOCRACY

Now that the citizens of Mississippi, the white ones at least, have given Bilbo a vote of confidence and sent him back to the Senate, the time has come to explore the meaning of this election. However you look at it, there is one thing certain; too many Americans are embracing democracy with one hand and stabbing her in the back with the other. Further, as long as any man can get elected to the highest legislative body in the United States on the platform of Bilbo, our democracy is in grave danger.

We have read the editorials in many of the great daily newspapers and most of them hold that Bilbo's victory was "regrettable." Some like the New York Daily News seeks to "explain" away the shame of this election by pointing out that the South is still angry at Thaddeus Stevens and the Yankees who freed the slaves at the point of a musket. None of these newspapers, however, seem to be alarmed over Bilbo's victory nor do they seem to regard Bilboism as a menace to our democracy. Sat. 7-13-46

Here is a man with a live bomb in his hand threatening to throw it at the very foundation of our republic, and the great newspapers of our country dismiss him with a slap on the wrist. Frankly, we don't understand some of our good white folks. They talk democracy until they are blue in the face but they would not be caught dead practising it. They are ready to fight every nation on earth and all of them combined to defend democracy so they alone can have the exclusive privilege of kicking it to death. Detroit, Mich

Bilbo, Talmadge and their ilk have openly urged the citizenry to defy the laws of our government and the fundamental principles of our Constitution. And what is worst of all, this treasonable line is supported at the polls on election day. Further anyone who condemns these demagogues too loudly does so at the risk of becoming an outcast in our society. In other words, right makes wrong and wrong makes right.

This lying, double-crossing, treacherous, double-dealing, hypocritical, two-faced, immoral philosophy of preaching democracy while practicing fascism makes a sneak-thief like Joe Stalin look like Little Orphan Annie. Democracy is a way of life, not a way of talking. We in America have got to face the facts of life and the cross-eyed leadership which insists that democracy be limited to white folks must be denounced and opposed at every turn. Pat 7-13-46

Because Bilboism is aimed primarily at Negroes, there are some racial and religious minorities in America who may think they are escaping this evil. Just as sure as death and taxes, unless Bilboism is checked soon, every Catholic, Jew, and foreign-born person in America is going to become the object of persecution. It is the nature of the fascist term to attack that part of the body politic in which will meet the least resistance. Hating Negroes is popular in some quarters and there is a great "tolerance" for the Negro-baiter. The white-supremacy dictator finds an easy spring-board to power.

The Ku Klux Klan started out as an organization dedicated principally to the re-enslavement of Negroes. It was not long, however, before the burning crosses were planted in the front yards of Catholics, Jews and other groups. Hitler started out denouncing Jews but wound up putting Christian ministers in concentration camps and making slaves out of German children. Yes, Joe Stalin and his gang started out to give new freedoms to the Russian peasants and wound up dictating what they should read, say and write. Detroit, Mich

Shall we Americans whose forefathers started out on the premise that "all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness" prove unfaithful? Shall we give them the lie? This is the big question before us and our democracy hinges on the answer.

THE PHILIPPINES

Not even the braying of Senator Bilbo can drown out the cheers for freedom which rang out in the newest member of the family of nations on Independence Day. Our government acting in the great democratic tradition of the founders of our republic has fulfilled its promise of independence to the people of the Philippines. President Truman officially proclaimed the independence of the islands and hailed the birth of a new republic.

It is fitting that we should show the world that unlike Britain and Russia, we have no imperial designs on our neighbors nor have we any fears that impel us to seek protection through expanding frontiers. We shall rely upon the power and strength of genuine friendship and maintain the policy of the "good neighbor." We hold with President Manuel Roxas who declared: "Our two countries will be united by the unbreakable bonds of mutual respect and affection—bonds forged in the common struggle in peace and war for the greatest happiness and welfare of our two peoples."

Negroes Ignore Intimidations And Go to Polls

JACKSON, Miss.—(ANP)—Ignoring the declarations of Senator Theodore G. Bilbo that every "red-blooded Anglo-Saxon Mississippian will use every means possible to keep Negroes from voting" in Mississippi, white election officials here last week were described as "very cooperative" when Negroes voted in a Democratic primary for the first time since the Reconstruction. Ballots were refused, it was said, only in cases where the voter failed to comply with primary statutes.

Few disorders were reported, and even in Biloxi where a red-lettered sign in the business district warned, "Negroes, vote at your own risk," colored persons voted. In Meridian, only one Negro attempted to cast a ballot, and he was said to have failed to qualify. Call

According to the demands of liberal organizations that Negro voters be protected, federal authorities had served notice that action would be taken if qualified Negroes were denied the right to vote. As the voting proceeded in an orderly manner, despite tension engendered through pre-primary threats by Bilbo and his kind, federal intervention was unnecessary. 7-12-46

Heaviest Vote in Capital

The heaviest Negro voting took place here at the state capital, where the first person casting a ballot was Percy Green, editor of the Jackson Advocate and a local NAACP official. A Republican, Green's paper is the official organ of the State Republican committee. At precinct 30, Negroes voted in the Bilbo home.

"I don't see how any one could have been nicer," Green said of election officials: "There was no sign, no expression that anyone wanted to deny us the ballot. And there was no sign of any trickery or indication that our ballots might not be counted."

T. B. Wilson, real estate operator here and president of the recently formed Mississippi chapter of the Progressive Voters league, also seemed satisfied at the treatment of Negroes he observed at the polls.

Qualified electors in the all-Negro community of Mound Bayou, normally a Republican stronghold, also participated in the Democratic primary, although the sheriff challenged their right because of party irregularity. The three Negro judges overruled the county official's contention, and permitted Negroes to vote for the first time in the town's history in a Democratic primary. 7-12-46

Whites Also Challenged

The challenge, made to Mound Bayou, was also said to have been made to white voters who must "be in harmony with the party" as provided by a 1942 state statute.

Inconsistent with the general pattern of voting, Pass Christian, where 18 Negroes voted in a city election recently, denied the right to vote to them last week. There was no disorder, but an investigation will be made of an incident where four Negroes, approaching the polling booth, allegedly were refused entrance by an election official. An estimated 1,500 Negroes voted throughout the state.

Senator Bilbo, whose announced vote lead is challenged by other primary candidates, concluded that outside influences advocating social equality were attempting to tell Mississippians how to vote in an effort to break down racial barriers. He said while only a few would try to vote in this primary, that year by year the Negro vote would increase until "in years to come they will control Mississippi politics." Kansas City, Mo.

FEPC Chief Issue

Bilbo, who may have to undergo a run-off as he did in 1934 when the late Sen. Hubert D. Stephens was his opponent, used as a chief campaign issue his fight against the Fair Employment Practices committee. Call

Nelson T. Devings, of Gulfport, a defeated primary candidate, charged Bilbo with "stealing the election," and demanded a recount of the ballots.

"We have just begun to fight," Leavings said as he announced organization of a "last-ditch battle to prevent the re-seating of the tub-thumping advocate of 'white supremacy'." Friday 7-12-46

Although Bilbo carried 76 of 82 counties, he won by a slim majority, and it was thought he might be scheduled for the run-off.

An Editorial From The New York Herald Tribune

Like the cantankerous Old Man of the Sea perched on the shoulders of Sindbad the Sailor, Theodore G. (The Man) Bilbo is exceedingly hard to dislodge. The voters of Mississippi had an opportunity to terminate Mr. Bilbo's career in the Democratic primaries Tuesday, but through inertia, resentment or contrariness (perhaps all three) renominated him. Thus, despite the public indignation at his record, despite the considerable forces of tolerance and sanity arrayed in spirit against him, his re-election in November to another six-year term in the United States Senate is assured. Bilbo Stirred New Forces In His State

Courier Journal

THE worst was feared, and even expected, from Mississippi's primary election. Now that it has come in the renomination of THEODORE G. BILBO for the Senate, with more votes than his four opponents combined, there isn't much for Mississippi and the country generally to do except look for a silver lining.

Actually, one may be found. BILBO's strength is, in a way, a reflection of the weakness of his opposition. The most likely champions to unhorse him remained in their tents, for good or doubtful reasons. He won largely because he had created a vast, unwholesome excitement by raising the false issue of threatened Negro domination of politics and intrusion into social customs. As shrewd and talented a demagogue as lives today, he preyed on fear, prejudice and ignorance. And his opponents either sought to play his game, without his knack at indecency and hoodwinking, or dodged the issue entirely, and so were overwhelmed by the flood of emotion that he set loose. Louisville, Ky.

However, it became apparent toward the last of the campaign that truth and morality were gaining ground and moving up fast. BILBO's incitements of race and religious prejudice, his lawless proposal to keep Negroes from voting "by any means," were bringing rebukes within his own State. Negroes themselves, who had never voted in Mississippi in this century, began stirring restlessly, made conscious of race as never before, moved by intimations of dignity and power that had never occurred to them.

The few who braved his threats and voted were unmolested at the polls or in their homes, and this fact has given them a new sense of the security of democratic institutions. BILBO won, on a vicious yet deliberately contrived issue, but election day was none too soon for him. The reaction was setting in, the tide was rising, as every observer of the campaign has testified. BILBO won, but because the forces against him moved too little and too late. But they are there. 7-5-46

And this is the very gleam of the silver lining. BILBO has started something that looks to be bigger than he is. Circumstances helped him. There were court decisions on Negro voting that were too fresh to be absorbed into proper judgment. There was an excess of zeal by crusaders in other parts and by national publications that fairly screamed of his iniquity. They gave him a chance which he, of all men, is adept at seizing. It was another Yankee invasion. They are against BILBO, he would have his neighbors know, not because his name is BILBO, but because he has been tireless in defense of your traditions, my friends. Reconstruction and its carpetbaggers were conjured up with every breath. But those circumstances have run their course. An awareness has been stimulated that is certain to make pointless any attempt to revive them. The base of Mississippi's electorate will be broader in the future, and this is always bad for demagogues. Friday

The Tinkling Brass

Birmingham News

First press reports yesterday from Jackson, Miss., stated flatly that Negroes were voting, that the Democratic primary throughout the state was being conducted in peaceful fashion, except for Mr. Rankin's encounter with a photographer. True, Negroes were voting in small numbers. One report said that "not many were qualified."

Banner-led by Theodore Bilbo, ably seconded by John Rankin, what during the days before the election seemed to be a booming bass crescendo of protest and determination to keep Mississippi's Democratic primary "white," yesterday appeared to have been only tinkling brass—very flat, very stale brass. Wed. 7-3-46

Why did Bilbo do it? Perhaps "The Man" himself does not know clearly. Perhaps he was somewhat irritated by the fact that The Saturday Evening Post, Collier's and other publications focused a hot light on him; his irritation at that, however, may not have been purely an angry, dissenting irritation. He may have been "eating it up." Bilbo has never quailed before opposition.

Observers in the South who believe in a fair base of franchise for effective democracy and prosperity of the region yesterday could breathe a sigh of relief that no such demonstrations as had been feared had developed. Negroes were calmly, peacefully voting. One Negro editor said, "I don't see how anyone could have been nicer," when referring to the election officials. Wed. 7-3-46

Yet, while no fireworks were evident, it would be an error to assume that all is sweetness and light in Mississippi. The signs which emanated from the state—the great freedom with which Bilbo was able to carry on his disgusting spectacle—point out dangers. That those dangers are less than had been feared is a fact for thanksgiving.

Overcoming The Causes

Birmingham News

President Truman asked a group of educators who had called upon him to help "overcome those prejudices which cause wars—religious prejudices, economic prejudices, misunderstandings between races and people of different languages." It is a good cause, one in which not only educators but also all citizens should do their part. 7-18-46 Thursday

For prejudices are deep-rooted and of many sorts. There are many things happening in America today which tend to strengthen not only American prejudices but also prejudices against us. We are doing things which build in the minds of other peoples fears of our intentions.

What, for example, of the American attitude toward food? Millions of people in Europe and Asia are hungry. Death by starvation is a common thing. Diseases of malnutrition are widespread. Women stand in line for hours to get a loaf of bread or a little bit of rice. But in this country, garbage collections are heavier than ever. In two weeks of February, 1946, the Street Department of New York City collected 125,000 cubic yards more of waste than it did in the same period in 1945. Such facts as that encourage prejudices among cold and hungry people of other lands, despite our broad programs of relief.

And what about the election of politicians like Bilbo who batten on prejudices? When men of his sort are elected to office, can we go before the world with clean hands and plead our lack of prejudice? Can we contribute much toward tearing down the prejudices that divide nations when our internal prejudices are still so powerful?

The list is much longer. But perhaps enough has been indicated to suggest that if Americans would help toward reducing prejudices in the world, they have much need for beginning at home.

Victory for Mr. Bilbo Today

Atlanta Constitution

Harried Mississippi, with relatively few of her voters expected to go to the polls, will return Theodore Bilbo to the Senate today. Atlanta, Ga.

Bilbo recently was voted the worst man in the Senate; termed by Sen. Taft "our shame." Tues. July 8-2-46

Once a Mississippi Legislature said of him that he 'was not fit to sit in the company of decent men.' 7-2-46

He has campaigned against Jews, Negroes and Catholics. He has written insulting letters to Americans of Italian ancestry beginning: "Dear Dago." To Jews he has addressed letters beginning: "Dear Kike." Atlanta, Ga.

Mississippi is blackmailed by him and afraid of him. Sunday 7-2-46

His opposition is split four ways.

No candidate of strength has offered, fearing Bilbo's filth and wit.

So, he will be elected again.

It is well, in passing to remember that such a man, or any like him, answers something in the minds and prejudices of some Americans. That any thoughtful person should join in support saying: "Oh, of course he is crazy, but harmless," is profoundly disturbing. 7-2-46

Tomorrow he, or any other like him, might campaign against those of Greek descent, or of Syrian or Norwegian. Hitler was a clown in 1923 supported then by some Jews who thought him "harmless."

They come and go, these kind.

And they come with less frequency. Even Mississippi, ashamed and afraid, is showing signs of greater shame. Even though she votes him in, not even Bilbo can find much joy in the doing or the method of it. Sun 7-2-46

One-Armed Hero Of War, 27, Unseats Mississippi Veteran

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Wed. 7-28-46

JACKSON, MISS., Aug. 27.—(AP)—John Bell Williams, 27-year-old one-armed war veteran, ousted Dan R. McGehee today from the post McGehee has held for 12 years as representative from Mississippi's Seventh Congressional District.

Williams defeated the 61-year-old McGehee in a run-off Democratic primary, equivalent to election in Mississippi.

With his lead mounting at every count, Williams had 14,292 votes to McGehee's 11,352 in tabulations of returns from 191 of the sprawling district's 316 precincts.

McGehee had a slight lead of 855 to 804 in his home county of Franklin. Nearly everywhere else in the 15 county districts the Williams a large and growing margin.

Williams, a lieutenant and AAF pilot in the war, lost his arm in an air crash in British Guiana in which his four crew members were killed. They were on their way to North Africa.

Discharged from the service, he was appointed and later elected prosecuting attorney of Hinds county which includes the State capital of Jackson.

A $1,500,000 airport at Raymond, his home, has been named for him. Wed. 8-28-46

Eight weeks ago McGehee and Williams ran one-two in the first primary in which a field of five candidates participated. McGehee polled 15,186 votes and Williams drew 13,778 out of the 39,364 ballots cast.

Desultory at first, the run-off campaign warmed up in recent weeks with the burning of three fiery crosses in the Jackson area and a verbal battle

One Negro leader at Jackson said the crosses—sometimes the symbol of the Ku Klux Klan—were burned in an effort to "intimidate and cower" Negroes for their political activity.

But a number of Negroes cast ballots in a peaceful atmosphere today. The voting throughout the 15 counties was light. Polls closed at 6 p.m.

Bilbo Leads in Early Returns; Rankin, Cameraman Tangle

The News and Courier Charleston, S.C. Wed 7-15-46

Jackson, Miss., July 2.—(AP): Senator Theodore G. Bilbo long time champion of white supremacy, seeking another term in the senate, jumped into the lead tonight on early returns from Mississippi's first Democratic primary in which negroes were allowed to vote.

The count from 40 of the state's 1,713 precincts gave Bilbo 2,654 votes; State Supreme Court Clerk Tom Q. Ellis 2,004; former Representative Ross A. Collins 366; naval veteran Nelson T. Levings 277, and former State Senator Frank Harper 27.

Most negroes who could qualify were allowed to go peacefully to the polls, and no acts of violence were reported in connection with their balloting.

And Eaton Garriga, who served as a bailiff at Pass Christian where 18 negroes participated in a municipal primary several weeks ago, said that election commissioners there voted before the polls opened this morning to deny the ballot to negroes today.

But for the most part, reports indicated that registered negroes who sought to vote were challenged only for legal cause, such as non-payment of poll taxes or questioned adherence to the Democratic party. Only a thousand or so negro ballots were cast, in all, but the number represented a good proportion of the total registration.

Negro leaders at Jackson said they saw no indication of intimidation or trickery.

There was an altercation at Tupelo, where another outspoken advocate of white supremacy, Representative John E. Rankin, cast his vote.

Associated Press Photographer Allen W. Snipes attempted to make a picture of the 64-year-old, slightly-built Rankin outside of the polling place.

Rankin attacked Snipes, tearing off his shirt, scratching his neck and arms and snatching his camera. The considerably-larger Snipes did not attempt to strike the congressman.

Later, Rankin said that Snipes violated his rights by trying to make a picture of him and by photographing Mrs. Rankin in the act of voting. Wed. 7-3-46

The incident was given prominence in a radio appearance by Rankin's 37-year-old opponent, Claude F. Clayton, and Rankin went on the air with a reply. The third candidate in the First district is Charles G. Hamilton.

Each hoping to force Bilbo into a runoff primary, the senator's four opponents closed their campaigns with expressions of confidence. All conceded that Bilbo would be high man in the race, but all predicted that he would not obtain the outright majority needed for nomination in today's voting.

The Nation Today

BY JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON, July 5 — (AP) — Sen. Bilbo's reelection in Mississippi calls for fact-finding.

It's this: Does his racial prejudice represent the thinking of white Mississippians?

He pitched his campaign on "white supremacy" and told whites to keep Negroes from the polls.

This was all-out racial prejudice. He was elected. This was the third time he's been elected senator. After his victory he said:

"I made the same fight and have the same convictions that a great majority of Southerners have."

Did he? 7-5-46 Fri.

He certainly was the choice of the majority of Mississippians who actually voted.

They gave him 97,000 votes to a combined vote of 93,000 for his four opponents. The total vote cast, almost entirely white, was about 190,000.

But—the majority of white Mississippians who voted for him were only a small minority of the 500,000 white persons old enough to vote in Mississippi.

(About 500,000 Mississippi Negroes are old enough to vote, but only a handful did so in this election.)

B'ham Alabama

THE 97,000 VOTES BILBO GOT was 19½ per cent of the 500,000 potential white vote. His opponents 93,000 was 18½ per cent. So the total vote cast, 190,000, was only 38 per cent of the 500,000 potential vote.

(Some of those who stayed away from the voting booths may not have had the money to pay their poll tax, but the rest probably lacked enough interest in the issues to go to the polls.)

So it would seem Bilbo's racial-prejudice campaign got the results he wanted.

For his prejudicial talk during his years in Washington, Bilbo has been criticized by writers and commentators, particularly Northerners.

When the campaign started, some Mississippi opponents of Bilbo said in effect:

"Mississippians resent the Northern attacks on Bilbo. They resent outside intrusion. It turns them toward Bilbo. Fri. 7-5-46

"If the outsiders would lay off, we could handle the situation here and maybe defeat him."

That, to this writer, seems a negative approach. It overlooks, or sidesteps, three main points:

1. THE WHOLE COUNTRY has an interest in any senator, no matter who, since he can help or block legislation affecting the whole nation and the welfare of millions.

2. The cry—"Let us handle our own problems"—is the one always raised by Southern Democratic senators when they filibuster to death things like the anti-poll tax bill. The poll tax stays.

3. It is asking people who resent Bilbo's tactics to remain quiet in the simple hope that Mississippians—if they can forget Bilbo by not hearing of him—may vote against him some time.

Racial discrimination — the issue Bilbo raised—is a very real thing in the South where Jim Crow laws and racial segregation are the law of the land. B'ham, Ala.

In Mississippi, racial consciousness is acute since the population of 2,000,000 is roughly half white, half Negro.

White voters know the changes they could expect if Negroes, able to use their strength through the ballot, got power.

The problem of Negro voting will become more, not less, intense in the South, the more Negroes try to vote. Fri. 7-5-46

For those outsiders and Mississippians who shudder at racial prejudice, what's the answer?

It's an old problem, cutting deep, and probably will be long in solving. Better educational and economic chances for whites and Negroes would help.

Mississippi Muddle

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

The Port Gibson (Miss.) Reveille blames New York and Washington for the re-election of Bilbo and Rankin to the U.S. Congress because Northerners meddled in Southern elections. Sat. 7-27-46

Because of this Northern interference, it is argued, many voters cast ballots for Bilbo and Rankin who had never voted for them before.

That seems to us to be very poor reasoning. It would indicate that Mississippi voters pay more attention to the outside criticism than they do to their own obligations.

Mississippi newspapers ought to confess that Bilbo and Rankin won because they got the majority of the votes, of all of the people who can vote in Mississippi.

They ought to confess, too, that this majority in Mississippi is so backward, poor and unlettered that it chooses poor candidates rather than good ones. 7-27-46

Finally, the Mississippi newspapers ought to confess that the educated, decent and upstanding Mississippians are in such a minority that they have no control over the elections of their State.

Bilbo Appears Winner, But Has Some Regrets

Birmingham News Birmingham, Alabama

JACKSON, Miss., July 4—(AP)—Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo, Mississippi's vociferous exponent of white supremacy, who apparently was renominated for election in Tuesday's Democratic primary, is sorry that he wasn't in a Southwide election.

In a telephone interview from his Poplarville home, Bilbo, who made white supremacy the No. 1 issue during his campaign for renomination against four opponents, said:

"We have met the enemy and they are ours. We will now sing 'God Bless Mississippi.' The only regret I have is that I could not have been in a Southwide election because I made the same fight and have the same convictions that a great majority of Southerners have." Thursday

With only 43 of the state's 1,701 precincts missing, Bilbo, self-dubbed "The Man," held a 4,102 majority on the basis of unofficial returns from the Democratic primary in which Negroes voted for first time. 7-4-46

THE UNOFFICIAL RETURNS showed that Bilbo polled 96,847 votes; Tom Q. Ellis, State Supreme Court clerk, 57,336; former Congr. Ross Collins, 18,613; Nelson T. Levings, naval veteran, 15,396, and Frank Harper, Peachtree salesman, 1,397.

On the basis of the unofficial returns, only one of the four incumbent members of the National House of Representatives with opposition in the first primary faces a runoff. He is Rep. Dan R. McGehee, of the Seventh Mississippi District, who probably will tangle with John Bell Williams in the second primary. 7-4-46.

Apparently nominated and therefore reelected in one-party Mississippi are Reps. John E. Rankin, also an outspoken supporter of white supremacy, from the First District; Arthur Winstead, Fifth District, and William Colmer, in the Sixth.

Reps. Jamie L. Whitten, Second District; Will M. Whittington, Third, and Thomas G. Abernathy, Fourth, faced no opposition in the primary.

MISSISSIPPIANS FILE A COMPLAINT

AGAINST SENATOR BILBO

Declare His Election 'Tainted With Fraud and Duress'

JACKSON, (Miss.) Sept. 16 (UP).—The first complaint from within Mississippi against Senator Theodore Bilbo's recent re-nomination is in the mails en route to Washington, it was revealed tonight.

Some fifty white and negro qualified voters in Mississippi filed a sworn statement, charging that Bilbo's election was "tainted with fraud and duress and achieved by force and violence."

Percy Green, negro editor of the Jackson Advocate, said that among the signers was a white Methodist minister from McComb, Miss., the Rev. Joseph A. Smith, brother of "Strange Fruit" Authoress Lillian Smith.

The statement was filed jointly by the State Progressive Voters League and the Jackson branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. It was sent both to the congressional subcommittee investigating Bilbo's election, and to the Senate privileges and elections committee.

The sworn statement today is similar to the one filed ten days ago by the National Negro Council of New York, asking that Bilbo be denied his seat in the Senate.

At the time that the council representatives appeared before the Senate committee, Senator Allen Ellender, Democrat, Louisiana, a member, commented that all complaints against Bilbo seemed to come from out of Mississippi.

The brief en route to Washington tonight was the first action taken from within the state, following Bilbo's primary victory on a white supremacy platform. In Mississippi, a primary is tantamount to an election.

O'DWYER BACKS DRIVE TO ABOLISH 'BILBOISM'

The Times New York, N.Y.

Mayor O'Dwyer, in a message last night to guests at the "Unseat Bilbo" winner of the Civil Rights Congress at the Hotel Pennsylvania, warned against "dangers which lurk in the wake of Bilboish."

"I share with you the firm conviction that Bilboism, as a way of life, is inimical and offensive, not only to our history and traditions, but to the good sense and democratic disposition of our people," the Mayor wrote in a message that was read at the dinner. "It is important that support be rallied for your nation-wide drive on Bilboism." Fri. 10-18-46

Representative Helen Gahagan of California, here as a member of the United States delegation to the United Nations Assembly, asserted that the world body was meeting "under a charter whose very foundation stone rests on belief in the fundamental equality of men."

Other speakers were Hyman Blumberg, executive vice president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and State chairman of the American Labor party; Percy Greene, publisher and editor of The Jackson (Miss.) Advocate; Paul Robeson, actor; Dashiell Hammett, author, and Rabbi William F. Rosenblum. George Marshall, chairman of the board of Civil Rights Congress, welcomed the guests. Samuel Neuberger served as toastmaster.

THE Watchtower by ROY WILKINS

Chronicle

NO one who had any idea of the realities of the situation expected Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo to lose in the primaries in Mississippi July 2. The significant—really revolutionary—aspect of the election was the participation of Negroes in the hitherto White Democratic Primary. This was what made July 2, 1946, a red-letter day in Mississippi, and not the rantings of Bilbo.

Lit 7-13-46

Roy Wilkins

It seems reasonable to believe that in another six years when Bilbo's term is over, neither he nor any man like him could be elected to the United States Senate. Within that period both the Negroes and the whites will have learned something they only felt dimly last week. Either Bilbo will change his tune by 1952 or he will not be elected.

First estimates of the number of Negro voters range as low as 2,000 in the whole state, with some as high as 5,000. The number is really not important. The important thing is that in the face of threats and intimidations by Bilbo himself, Negroes went quietly about the business of registering and voting. Last week 2,000 were unafraid. Next year 20,000 will be unafraid, and soon Mississippi may join Georgia where 116,000 Negroes have registered to vote in the primaries July 17.

Didn't Much

A special writer for the New York Herald Tribune gave his personal observations on this quiet fearlessness in Jackson, the capital city. He says:

Sat. 7-13-46

"In view of Senator Bilbo's call to the red-blooded Anglo-Saxons of Mississippi to use any means whatever to prevent the Negroes from voting, it was ironical to see a line of 16 Negroes standing on the porch of the senator's former home in Jackson, waiting to vote at a polling place on the porch where the senator used to sit. The Negroes, some of them veterans and their wives, others white-haired men and women, formed a line before the tables. With politeness on both sides, their papers were examined and ballots were handed out, the Negroes signed the poll book, marked their ballots and dropped them in a box."

Mississippi is the last stronghold of disfranchisement of the Negro. Progress has been made everywhere in the South on this issue except here. But July 2 tells the story of the beginning of the end of a system of political slavery and exploitation. From now on, no matter what temporary setbacks, we go forward.

Senate Group May Deny Bilbo Seat

Opponent in Race Says He "Stole" Election

Shady Financial Deals Charged to Hate Artist

Sat. 7-13-46

WASHINGTON

Possibility that Sen. Theodore Bilbo, the nation's No. 1 hate peddler, who was re-elected by a narrow margin last Tuesday, may be barred from taking his Senate seat loomed this week.

Bilbo faced the prospect of being refused recognition in the upper house, because of a complaint which has been registered by another candidate that Bilbo had "stolen" the election.

Before the July 2 primary, Sen. Glen H. Taylor (Dem., Idaho), had demanded an investigation of Bilbo's campaign by the Senate Committee on Elections and Privileges.

Senator Taylor's charges of irregularities were referred to a special Senate committee to investigate expenditures and contributions of which Senator Edwin C. Johnson (Dem., Col.) is acting chairman in the absence of Senator Allen J. Ellender (Dem., La.).

Group Fails to Act

But the special committee failed to act, because no complaint had been received from any candidate or voter in Mississippi. But an opening was left for future action by Senator Johnson, who promised an investigation should any complaints come from Mississippi.

Charges against Bilbo were made Friday by Nelson T. Levings, former Navy commander, who polled 15,396 votes to Bilbo's 96,847. He flatly asserted that Bilbo had "stolen" the election.

Levings, who ran fourth in the race, revealed that he would demand a recount and called upon the Senate to "unseat him because of his nefarious and shady financial dealings with grafting war contractors."

The Afro-American

Should the special Senate committee decide to conduct a searching investigation into the election on the basis of Levings's complaint, Bilbo would be prevented from taking his seat in the Senate until the matter has been cleared up.

Baltimore, Md.

Another Protests

Another request from a Senatorial investigation of Bilbo's machinations in connection with the election was made on July 2, the day of the balloting by Ross A. Collins, who ran third in the Mississippi race.

Sat. 7-13-46

Collins, former congressman, wired Senator Theodore F. Green (Dem., R.I.) chairman of the Elections Committee, to investigate charges that Bilbo had received $25,000 from a Missisippi firm in "flagrant violation" of Federal and State laws.

Senator Green passed this request on to Senator Johnson of the special committee.

In his letter to Senator Green, Collins said Bilbo had failed during the campaign to explain satisfactorily the $25,000 payment which he charged was made by the contracting firm of Newton and Glenn of Hattiesburg, Miss.

Lays It On Doxey

He said Bilbo reportedly described the fund as a voluntary contribution to the unsuccessful Senate candidacy of Wall Doxey, present Senate sergeant-at-arms, but that Doxey's official statement of campaign expenditures showed contributions of only $543 and made no mention of the reported $25,000 fund.

Earlier demands that Bilbo be disqualified came from Clark Foreman, president of the Southern Conference of Human Welfare and from Emanuel Bloch, counsel for the Civil Rights Congress. Both of these were directed to the Senate Elections committee.

Bilbo avoided a runoff contest by the slim margin of 4064 majority over the total of his four opponents. Another of Mississippi's hate artists was sent back to Congress on July 2 when John Rankin was nominated, tatamount to election in most Southern States.

Bilbo Hanged in Effigy by 'Corner Boys' Group

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

Sat. 8-10-46

WASHINGTON

In protest of the outbreak of lynchings in Mississippi and Georgia during the past week, Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo was hanged in effigy from a tree in the vicinity of 24th St. and Benning Rd., N.E., last Wednesday evening.

An estimated 500 persons gathered to view the sham hanging, planned and executed by a young group which calls themselves the "Corner Boys."

For more than an hour, the spectre, labeled with slogans as "Here Hangs Bilbo," and Let's get him out of the Senate," swayed nearly 15 feet above the ground.

Police on Scene

Traffic slowed temporarily as pedestrians lingered to gaze on a replica of what the Time Magazine called the "Prince of Peckerwoods."

Two squad cars of policemen, one each from precincts 9 and 11, arrived on the scene.

With the help of a colored policeman, who secured a ladder from Langston Pharmacy, the white officers hauled down "The Man."

From a reliable resource came the report that no disorder reigned, and no persons were arrested which gave lie to earlier radio broadcasts.

The irony in the affair was that when the effigy was being removed, the song, 'Carry Me Back to Old Virginny," was going full swing in a nearby music shop.

Is U.S. Bigger than Bilbo?

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 7-6-46

As long as Theodore G. (The Man) Bilbo confined his activity to libeling minority groups in letters and in speeches on the Senate floor, it was possible to pass off his rantings as so much hogwash.

But when he openly defies the U.S. Government as he has done in Mississippi's primary election, he immediately becomes distasteful to Americans everywhere—a menace to human decency and good order.

Bilbo Election Violence Told In Mississippi

The Defender Chicago, Ill.

Sat. 7-20-46

JACKSON, Miss. — A deluge of reports have entered this city stating that Mississippi did use violence and intimidation during the July 2 primary as a means to keep Negroes away from Bilbo-ruled polls, despite early reports of peaceful voting.

Approximately 3,000 Negroes defied Bilbo, some by voting on his front porch, but evidence piling in each day since the election shows positively that at least 2,000 were kept away by Bilboesque public officials and self-appointed poll guards. A total of 5,000 Negroes were qualified to vote.

As reports streamed in, the National Lawyers guild at its annual convention in Louisville last week adopted a resolution calling for a federal investigation of the election, stating that Bilbo had "created an atmosphere of terror which induced the vast majority of qualified Negro voters to refrain from registering and voting."

Wire Senate Committee

At the same time New York Congressional Candidate Grant Reynolds, 22nd district, wired demands to Senator Edwin Johnson, calling for the Senate Privileges and Elections committee chairman to challenge the Mississippian's right to occupy a U. S. Senate seat.

With election day past, a survey shows:

—F. C. Fowler, Choctaw county citizen, was shot and killed on election day by the town marshal. The marshal says he killed Fowler because he tried to draw a gun.

—One Negro is believed dead and several others were beaten in Gulfport in an effort to keep them from the polls. J. T. Hall, wealthy undertaker, was arrested and jailed on election day.

—In Canton a Klan-trained white farmer stationed himself at one of the polling places armed with a club. When a Negro appeared to vote the white farmer clubbed him several times. As the news spread no other Negroes attempted to vote.

—In McComb a 77-year-old man was arrested as he approached the polls. Following the incident no other Negroes attempted to vote.

By inviting intimidation of prospective colored voters "at any cost," Bilbo is inciting to riot, and any blood shed in Mississippi will be upon his hands.

Americans have long reprobated any attempts to pervert elections, so much so that they have made their resistance to such attempts an important phase of their foreign policy.

Not only did they object to such attempts in Poland, but in Japan, U.S. troops stood by to see that "democracy" prevailed in the recent Japanese elections.

If our troops can be so used overseas, why can't they be used to protect the voting rights of colored persons in Mississippi? While it is true that the voters of Mississippi have in their hands the power to draw the curtain on Bilbo's political career, it is expecting too much also to leave in their hands the responsibility of protecting the constitutional rights of all citizens, regardless of race or color.

Here is an excellent opportunity for Attorney General Tom Clark to show that he means business when he talks of protecting the lives and liberties of all citizens. There doesn't seem to be any doubt about the need for it in Mississippi.

Open Letter To Senator Bilbo

I KNOW it will be a surprise and perhaps a shock to receive this letter of congratulations from a Negro on your re-election as United States senator from the state of Mississippi, whatever doubts there may be about the legality of your election. Sat. 1-27-46

It will undoubtedly be a shock to you to learn that there are some of us who are convinced that you are making one of the outstanding contributions in America towards decent racial relations. Your name has become so identified with the lowest form of bigotry that any race, creed, organization or individual you attack with your undoubted skill for filthy language, automatically becomes the object of sympathy and defense by decent human beings. You added a new word to the American language—the verb or noun, bilbo, which has come to mean the lowest form of ignorance, hate, frustration and filth below any other word in the English language. Variations of bilbo such as bilbodor (a smell more nauseating than any fertilizer factory or outhouse) or bilbored (as the ultimate in insane ranting and vulgarity) are destined to live long after you have passed on to your reward.

Doing Effective Work

THUS YOU have unwittingly and unwillingly made race hatred, your particular brand of ignorance, and everything else you stand for a thing of loathing and ridicule.

The re-election of yourself to the Senate and of your equally loathsome conferee in the House of Representatives, John Rankin, have served to make the state you profess to serve—Mississippi—even lower in the estimation of decent people South as well as North. We know that the hearts of decent Mississippians of both races—of whom there are many despite the fact that Mississippi has re-elected you and Rankin — are sickened that for the next six years their state will be held up to ridicule every time you open your mouth or Rankin speaks in the House of Representatives. We are truly sorry for them. But rant as you will the handwriting on the wall for you and your kind is crystal clear. The United States Supreme Court decision in Smith vs. Allwright means precisely what you, in a rare moment of intelligence, stated during the campaign —that a few Negroes will vote at this election, more at the next and more at each succeeding election.

Can't Get Away With It

This means that even if Mississippi continues to be apathetic or ignorant enough to re-elect men of your kind, candidates for public office are not going to be able to get away with denunciation of Negroes as their sole stock-in-trade. As more Negroes vote despite the cheap threats of men like yourself, the KKK and any others are going to keep their prejudice to themselves or else they are going to go back to the obscurity from which in an enlightened society they would never have emerged.

So keep on spewing hate against Negroes, Jews, Catholics, labor unions, damyankees and everybody else who does not agree with your views. Every time you do so you disgust decent human beings into becoming more articulate against your kind. It is tragic that the state of civilization in the United States is such that this kind of attainment of human decency is possible and perhaps even necessary. But maybe against your intentions or desire you will help to make America a more decent place in which to live.

AFRO's Story Telling How Students Voted in Recent Election Vexes Jackson Editor

JACKSON, Miss.—The Jackson Daily News has demanded a probe of Jackson Teachers' College as a result of a recent story in the AFRO-AMERICAN revealing how students participated in the recent election.

The Daily News, which wants Jackson College to remain a quiet denominational school and have nothing to do with politics, branded Ralph Matthews, AFRO reporter, who wrote the story, as a "somewhat noted racial agitator."

The editorial, "Headed for Trouble," said in part:

Matter for Trustees

"Here's a matter into which our board of trustees of higher learning and the State department of education should do some investigating.

Jackson College, formerly a colored denominational institution, located in the southwestern suburbs of Jackson, was purchased by the State and converted into a training school for colored teachers.

"As such, the school can and should serve a very useful purpose, but in recent weeks it has developed that a goodly amount of propaganda for political and social equality has had its origin within the walls of that institution.

"It was at Jackson College that two automobiles were loaded up with young colored people on the morning of July 2nd and driven to the former home of Senator Bilbo to be voted.

Writer Called Agitator

"An eye-witness story of the event was printed in the AFRO-AMERICAN, a colored newspaper, written by Ralph Matthews, a somewhat noted racial agitator. Matthews was sent here specifically for that purpose, and in his story he quotes one of the colored persons who voted as follows:

"The young men I met in Mississippi Monday night changed my mind. World War II veterans, attending Jackson College under the GI Bill of Rights, these young men have a vision that is inspiring.

"'We are going to remake Mississippi in our time. We have a long-range program,' they explained, 'but we fire the first shot tomorrow.

Vets' Courage

"'Bilbo has threatened us with violence if we attempt to vote.

"'One of our comrades has already been beaten up for attempting to register, but if they kill us all, we are going to vote against Bilbo tomorrow and we are going to vote at the polling place in his own house.

"'We agreed on an hour to meet and they all showed up on time, two carloads and they voted.

"'As they lined up for their ballots, a number of whites got in a huff and walked away mumbling something under their breaths about refusing to vote with n---rs. Nobody said a word as they stalked away.'

No Retreat for Them

"But the attitude of these young veterans is even more inspiring than their actions.

"'Friends of ours,' they explained, 'have given us the devil for coming back to Jackson College to continue our education.

"'This is a teachers' college and under the GI Bill we could have elected to be doctors or lawyers or have gone north to big white universities, but that would not fit into our plans.'"

"Jackson College is a training school for colored teachers and should not be converted into a hotbed of racial agitation. If present trends and policies are permitted to continue a veritable Pandora's box of troubles will be the result."

Bilbo Charged With Stealing Election; Recount Demanded

P.M. New York, N.Y.

Defeated Candidate Says Winchell, Pearson Responsible for Outcome

Sen. Theodore G. "The Man" Bilbo, apparently assured of renomination by virtue of Tuesday's victory in Mississippi's Democratic primaries, was charged today with "stealing the election."

The charge was made by Nelson T. Levings, former Navy commander, who polled 15,396 votes to Bilbo's 96,847, to run fourth in the race. He said he would demand a recount, and called on the Senate to "unseat him because of his nefarious and shady financial dealings with grafting war contractors." Levings made no further reference to this charge in his 500-word statement. PM 7-5-46

The former Navy officer further charged:

"Bilbo won by default. While our Winchells and Pearsons are directly responsible for Bilbo's re-election because they stirred our morons into action who re-elected Bilbo, there is no excuse for the apathy and lack of patriotism of our more intelligent people whose lack of political responsibility contributed heavily to Bilbo's victory."

All five candidates in the Senatorial contest had opposed "interference by Northerners." The reference to Winchell and Pearson, newspaper columnists and radio commentators, indicates the common sensitiveness to criticism from "damyankees."

Bilbo avoided a runoff contest by a slim 4064 majority over the total of the four other candidates. His closest opponent, Tom Q. Ellis, Mississippi Supreme Court clerk, polled 57,336 votes. Ellis said he would make no formal statement until the official tabulation is completed next week.

"The unofficial majority is small," he said. "I feel I owe it to my friends to await official tabulation."

Bilbo, in what amounted to a victory speech, said that he regretted it could not have been a South-wide election "because I made the same fight and have the same convictions that a great majority of Southerners have."

About 3000 Negroes cast ballots in the election despite threats and intimidations although there was doubt that many of the votes would be counted in the final tally. More than 300 of these ballots were impounded after being challenged on the grounds that the voters were not qualified Democratic registrants and would have supported a Republican candidate had there been one.

The State Democratic Executive Committee said that no recount request had been received from Levings. Earlier demands that Bilbo be disqualified came from Clark Foreman, president of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, and from Emanuel Bloch, counsel for the Civil Rights Congress. Both appealed to the Senate Elections Committee for action.

Rep. John E. Rankin also apparently was nominated, which is tantamount to re-election in one-party Mississippi. PM 7-5-46

Only one of the seven incumbent members of the House of Representatives faces a runoff. He is Rep. Dan R. McGhee, who probably will tangle with John Bell Williams in the 7th District.

Re-election of Bilbo And Rankin Confirmed By Canvass of Ballot

Sunday Star Washington, D.C.

JACKSON, Miss., July 6, (UP)—Sen. Theodore Bilbo's re-election for a third term was made official today with the announcement that he received a 3,834 majority over four opponents in Tuesday's Democratic primary.

That primary was tantamount to a general election.

The official election figures released today gave Bilbo 97,820 votes, Tom Ellis 58,005, Ross Collins 18,875, Nelson Levings 15,720 and Frank Harper 1,386.

The figures also showed a 1,808 majority for Rep. John Rankin, also re-elected. Rankin, in the First District, polled 13,513 against 10,074 for Claude Clayton and 1,631 for Charles G. Hamilton. Sun 7-7-46

Rep. Dan McGehee faces a runoff with John Bell Williams in the Seventh District. McGehee polled 15,186 to Williams' 13,778.

William Colmer was elected congressman in the Sixth District over Grover Doggett.

Immediately after the announcement of the official vote, Ellis and Collins conceded to Bilbo. Levings asked for a recount, but his request was denied for lack of cause.

Mississippi Voters (White) Choose Bilbo, Rankin Again

P. M. New York N.Y.

Thurs 7-4-46

Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo and Rep. John E. Rankin, ranting advocates of white supremacy, have been re-elected by the white Democratic constituents, but champions of democracy in Mississippi found signs of hope and progress in the primary results.

Almost complete returns gave Bilbo a lead of only 3787 over four opponents who failed by this narrow margin to gather enough votes to force "The Man" into a runoff primary.

¶ Rankin won in his north Mississippi district, but lost his home county by 33 votes to former Circuit Judge Claude F. Clayton.

¶ About 3000 Negroes cast ballots, despite threats and intimidation, although there was doubt that many of the Negro votes would be counted in the final tally.

The United Press reported that about 300 Negro ballots were challenged and impounded on the grounds that the voters were not qualified Democratic registrants and would have supported a Republican candidate had there been one to support.

As Bilbo trumpeted victory at his Pearl River mansion, he was assailed on at least two fronts:

¶ A demand that he be disqualified from serving in the Senate was made by Clark Foreman, president of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. Clark made his demand in a telegram to Sen. Edwin Johnson (D., Colo.), acting chairman of the Senate Elections Committee. Thurs 7-4-46

¶ Emanuel Bloch, counsel for the Civil Rights Congress, returned from Mississippi disclosing that he had found evidence of assaults on Negro veterans, of intimidation of Negroes by election officials and private citizens. The Congress sent telegrams to the Justice Dept. and the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections demanding an investigation, with FBI protection for any Negroes who might testify.

People & Issues

The Worker New York, New York

By Benjamin Davis, Jr.

IT WAS absolutely disgusting to see the way in which the commercial press—including some of the liberal newspapers—handled the Mississippi elections. Most of them carried front page stories with headings which stated: "Bilbo wins as Negroes vote in Mississippi."

This was a premeditated attempt to create the false impression that the elections in Mississippi were free, that Bilbo won fairly and that no one could kick because the Negroes, whom the Mississippi Hitler hates most, got a chance to vote. Under no circumstances should this lie be accepted as gospel truth. Sun 7-21-46

The fact—and the dominant fact—was that the Negro people were almost unanimously disfranchised. A further fact is that the state of Mississippi has about two million population with the Negroes comprising at least half, if not more. So we had a "free elections" in which more than half—or at least, 50 percent of the population—was utterly disfranchised. Neither does this take into account the disfranchisement of the majority of the poor white population of the state who are too poor to pay the poll tax. If such facts as these warrant the impression that the Mississippi elections were "free," then Bilbo is a saint.

BUT why at this particular moment did the papers play up the Mississippi elections in this manner? The reason is not hard to find. On the same day, the capitalist press was hurling charges at the lawful democratic government of Poland that the Polish elections were "fraudulent." Certainly, it was exceedingly embarrassing to the publishers of the Times and Tribune, and to the multi-millionaire owners of the Associated Press and the United Press, to charge a "fraudulent election in Poland" and not be able to say something good about the elections taking place simultaneously in the United States. The imperialist bandits, who run the press of America and who are squeezing the American people as one squeezes a sponge, are busy establishing so-called "democracy and free elections" all over the world . . . when there are about 10 states in the Union which haven't had real democracy or free elections since Reconstruction 85 years ago.

The Polish elections were the first free elections that the Polish people have had in the last half century. The Mississippi elections were absolutely the worst in the modern history of our country. While it is true that a few Negroes registered in Mississippi—it is estimated that less than 500 voted—the unexampled bravery and heroism of these few that voted cannot outweigh or dilute the stark fact that the Negroes as a people were denied the ballot.

THE further dominant fact about the Mississippi "free" elections is that a Senator of the United States, clothed in the political garb and authority of the federal government, actually incited—not once but several times—blatant, fascist lynch violence against Negroes who dared to go to the polls. His words were, "Use any means to keep them (the Negroes—B.D.) away from the polls and if, he went on, "you don't know what I'm talking about, you're not up on the most modern means of prevention." What further proof could there be that the system of lynch law, national oppression and "white supremacy" has its origin in the upper class, the state authorities themselves, rather than originating from the poor whites, although the latter are frequently beguiled into executing these policies against their own best interests!

There can be no doubt that Bilbo's defiance of the Supreme Court, his trampling of the Constitution, his attempt to subvert the government through force and violence did encourage all the Ku Klux rats in Mississippi to attempt wholesale terror against Negro citizens. Sun 7-21-46

The President of the United States did not see fit to do one thing—nor even say a word. His polltax attorney general, Tom Clark of Texas, issued a statement that if anything happened to deny Negroes their voting rights, his office would take notice. What more could have happened? Was he waiting for the whole Negro population to be exterminated? The Polish government has every moral right to send a note to Mr. Truman asking him about the "free elections" in Mississippi—or if it wants to get more personal, to write a letter to Byrnes about South Carolina.

Once more the Truman Administration betrayed the Negro people—when it was its plain duty to guarantee the enforcement of the Constitution in Mississippi. Once more the double-talking Republicans were allying themselves with the polltaxers—with this same Bilbo in the Senate—while Negroes were at the mercy of Bilboism. Sen. Glen Taylor properly raised the issue in the Committee on Rules and Privileges in the U. S. Senate, with precious little help, if any, from Mead or Wagner.

Bilbo should be refused a seat in the Senate. He should be jailed as a lynch inciter—as the criminal wretch he is.

INTIMIDATION, TERROR AND MURDER FEATURE MISSISSIPPI PRIMARY ELECTIONS LAST WEEK

Two Marshalls Slay Negro Voters; Negroes Beaten at Gulfport

45a

TRAGEDY AVERTED AT NATCHEZ

HOLLY SPRINGS, Miss.—There were no reports of violence on election day, July 2, when Negro citizens voted in the Democratic primary for the first time in the history of the state, but beginning with the very next day following election day and almost daily since that time there have been increasing reports of intimidation, violence, brutality and even death visited on Negro citizens on election day—facts which greatly reduced the number of Negro voters.

The intimidation, violence, brutality and death visited upon Negroes on election day, together with similar pre-election day incidents, followed the frantic urging of the white people of the state by Senator Theodore G. Bilbo to keep Negroes from voting at any price, by implicating even the use of murder. Sat. 7-20-46

A candidate for re-election to the United States Senate, Bilbo was joined in his violent race baiting, but in a lesser degree, by the four other senatorial candidates, Ross A. Collins, former U. S. congressmen; Tom Q. Ellis, state supreme court clerk; Nelson Levings, World War II navy commander, and Frank "Peachtree" Harper, one time peach tree salesman and South Mississippi farmer and small business man.

The results of the election shows Bilbo with a majority of slightly over 3,000 votes over the combined total of all his opponents. With a conservatively estimated 5,000 Negroes, including veterans qualified under a state law exempting them from paying poll tax, eligible to vote in the election had it not been for the actual violence and fear of violence on the part of Negro voters widespread over the state, it appears certain now that there would have to be a second senatorial primary.

The reports of election day violence began with an account of one of the state leading daily papers of the shooting to death of F. C. Fowler, a Chocton county Negro citizen. Fowler was shot to death an election day by the town marshal. The marshal said he shot and instantly killed Fowler when he stopped a car Fowler was driving and Fowler got out and started towards him like he was fixing to draw a weapon.

In Gulfport, leading city along the gulf coast section of the state, a number of Negroes were beaten and among Negroes there is fear that at least one Negro was killed. J. T. Hall, wealthy Negro undertaker, was arrested and lodged in jail on election day. Because of fear it is almost impossible to obtain information from any Negro regarding the election day incidents.

In Canton, just 25 miles from the state's capital city of Jackson, according to a well known farmer who is often deputized for law enforcement duties when anything happens involving Negroes, stationed himself at one of the polling places armed with a heavy club and when the first Negro appeared to vote, who was a well known Negro business man and property owner, he began beating him with the heavy club. The man managed to escape with only a few blows. When the news spread rapidly over the town, no other Negroes attempted to go to the polls and generally stayed in their homes and off the streets.

In McComb in the southern section of the state, much in the news in recent weeks following the reported decision of the Veterans Administration to locate an all-Negro veterans hospital there, a 77-year-old Negro, registered and qualified by exemption from poll tax, was the first to attempt to go to the polls. He was met by a group of men, one of whom after stopping and threatening him, had him arrested and charged with attempting to shove him off the sidewalk. Following the incident no other Negroes attempted to go to the polls. Sat. 7-20-46

At Prentiss, home of the Prentiss Normal and Industrial institute, patterned after famed Tuskegee institute and founded by one of its graduates, J. E. Johnson, protege of Booker T. Washington, after a few Negroes went to the ballot box the voting place was moved. At the new place all Negroes who came near were "advised" by a watchman not to go in.

In Natchez, bluff city by the Mississippi river in the southwest section of the state, a serious election day incident was narrowly averted due to a hurried meeting of white and Negro leaders. Here, according to reports, the near serious incident came about when Negroes going to the polls were told they could not vote. They were later allowed to vote, but all of their votes were challenged. It is doubted that the challenged votes were counted. According to newspaper reports, Adams county, of which Natchez is the principal town, had the largest number of qualified Negroes of any county in the state.

All of the Negro voters in Bolivar county were also challenged. Bolivar county is in the heart of the Mississippi delta and also had a large number of Negro citizens qualified in the election.

Thus is the general terror of a rapidly increasing number of post-election day reports from larger and small towns and communities from all sections of the state with a great many still unreported because of the blanket of fear that still hangs pall-like over the Negro citizens of the state. Sat. 7-20-46

In the meantime, reports say an increasing number of letters from Negroes, especially World War II veterans, who have been denied the right to vote and threatened and intimidated and beaten, are being secretly sent to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Wendell L. Willkie Memorial Bldg., 20 West 40th Street, N. Y.; to the Civil Rights Congress, 205 East 42nd Street, New York City., to Henry Lee Moon, Political Action Committee, 205 East 42nd St., N. Y.

The Mississippi Elections

Pittsburgh Courier
New Orleans Weekly
Sat. 7-20-46

THE war which ended in the atomizing of two Japanese cities was, we are led to believe, and do believe, we fought to put an end to fascism. Looking at the Mississippi elections, we begin to wonder if what we fought to an end is still very much alive right here in America. What is fascism? Have we killed it? Or does it still live within our own borders? Sat 7-20-46

The scholar, the student of government, would define fascism as a particular kind of government in which the state is the dominant influence on the lives of its subjects. The state, not specifically the government, not specifically the people, not the industry and resources, but a kind of combination of these which is actually widely separated from each, is supreme in every instance. Everything must be subordinate to it. That is fascism as the student defines it.

But would a philosopohy of government be enough to cause a war? Considering fascism as merely that, the world is full of it. Nations whose governments could easily be considered fascist fought at our side to lick the axis. A fascist government, defined as above, does not necessarily mean one in which all freedoms are lacking. It seems unlikely, then, that we fought the war not to end fascism as a philosophy of government; we fought it as an agency of intolerance, injustice, and world-wide crime. When our soldiers enlisted in the fight, they thought of fascism in terms of the deaths of the millions of Jews, of the beating and flogging of any person whom the German race theorists described as inferior. Sat. 7-20-46

The living definition of fascism, then, is aggression, horror, intolerance. That is clearly what we mean when we say we are opposed to fascism, or that fascism is evil, or that we fought a war to end fascism.

What happened in the Mississippi elections, then, is pure, unadulterated fascism. Although it is a domestic variety, it is just as virulent and just as dangerous as the German or Italian variety. It is aggressive, horrible, intolerant. It is evil. It was perpetrated by a member of our government, a man who makes our laws. If this man is allowed to remain in his seat as a Senator, what conclusions can we draw but that our government is fascistic or at least that it is warm to and endorses fascism?

Washington Calling

Times-Dispatch

WASHINGTON—All over the country there will be gloom at the outcome of Mississippi's election. "The Man" Bilbo is back for another six years after a primary campaign of exceptional demagogy on the explosive theme of white supremacy. Sat 7-6-46

One of Bilbo's chief assets was the series of attacks directed at him from outside the State. He told Mississippians time after time that the North was trying to dictate who should be Senator of the sovereign State of Mississippi.

To prove his case, he waved editions of national magazines carrying articles showing Bilbo's record. His listeners were not likely to read such articles. But they understood that outsiders were trying to interfere with their democratic rights. The carpetbag threat is still a bitter memory in the Deep South.

The other string that Bilbo twanged was the promise of Federal benefits—subsidies for farmers, bonuses for the veterans and so on down the line. Though the carpetbag rule ended many years ago, the truth is that Mississippi is an economic colony of the North, dependent on the favors of either big business or big government. Demagogues like Bilbo hold out the promise of crumbs from Washington or New York. Such demagogues are themselves the end-product of a system of colonial dependence.

IN ... an active and effective re-...med at this system. Governor Ellis Arnall, who has made himself the leader of the New South, wants to give his region an equal chance to develop industry and end the colonialism which decrees the South shall be a producer of raw materials. That is the meaning of Arnall's suit in the Supreme Court to compel an equalization of railroad freight rates.

At the same time, Arnall is fighting such ugly manifestations of frustration and fear as the Ku Klux Klan. Besides being an enormously shrewd politician—which you have to be in the South, where politics is really competitive—Arnall has courage and imagination.

This may be wishful thinking, but it's

The Pilgrim From Juniper Grove

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga. Sat. 12-21-46

There was quite a stir around the Golden Gate.

A thin, malarial-looking pilgrim was standing outside the gates, forlorn and silent.

The angels hovered about inside, looking at him.

St. Peter was missing, the gates being securely locked. Only Gabriel stood there, fingering his horn.

"What is wrong, Gabriel?" asked the reporter who got up the items which appear in the Daily Rainbow under the heading, "Nuggets From the Golden Streets."

"I don't know," he said. "All I know is that when he presented his credentials, St. Peter paled and locked the gates. He told him to wait and hurried off to the front office. It must be something pretty bad."

The angels buzzed, and even the Seraphs, who are not supposed to mention ordinary things and who frown on the "Nugget From the Golden Street column as frivolous, looked really interested.

The general opinion was that it must be pretty bad.

So they waited.

Juniper Grove Suddenly the columnist waved his gold pencil excitedly and said, "Here he comes."

And, sure enough, it was. It was St. Peter. He was walking very fast and his face was stern and fixed. His robe billowed about his knees and his harp banged at his shoulders.

They fell back to make room for him.

Glancing neither to the right or left, as was his wont, he walked up to the gate and handed the papers back through the bars to the discouraged-looking pilgrim.

"Just as I thought," he said, "your place is off limits."

"Off limits?"

"Yes. Didn't you serve in the Army? Off limits. Jehovah will go most any place to see how things are, but even He won't go near the Juniper Grove Church at Poplarville, Mississippi."

At that there was a gasp from the crowd about the gates.

The Man All but the two Seraphs seemed to know. The columnist leaned over and whispered, "That's the church Sen. Bilbo built with "gifts" from war contractors and holds a mortgage on. So the parsonage will revert to him."

"Oh," said the Seraphs, moving back from the gate, but peering intently at the pilgrim. "Oh, my, from THAT place. And THAT man!"

"He sure has got a nerve," said one of the newer angels, who promptly was rebuked by those who had been there long enough to know criticism was not allowed.

"Is there any appeal?" asked the pilgrim wearily.

"Well, I doubt it," said St. Peter. "Frankly, I don't think there is much chance of one, although I didn't go all the way to the top. I got this ruling from a new attorney general who hasn't been on the job very long, but so far he has not been reversed."

"I wish you'd try," said the pilgrim. "You see, Sen. Bilbo isn't there very much and, after all, we needed a church. We figured out if he was cutting himself in it would all come out in the wash—either in the Senate committee hearing or maybe before the court up here. We just wanted a church and most of us stayed at home when the Senator was around. He's pretty tiresome, you know."

Verdict "Well, I don't think there is a chance," began St. Peter. But even as he spoke he felt the movement and sound of the crowd behind him.

He turned and looked.

The attorney general was hurrying toward the gate. His face was red and he looked embarrassed.

"I've been overruled," he said apologetically. "I'm glad I got here in time. He looked over the papers and said I was wrong. He said that anybody who had had to be around Bilbo already had had his share of Satan and the bad world and deserved a rest and some good clean air. He also said the church was not off limits. It's a lucky church in that it has always before it the example of the man. It can know wrong fro right from sight. So let him in."

So, the gates swung open, and the pilgrim from Juniper Grove, Poplarville, Mississippi, entered. 12-21-46

Mississippi Contractor Tells of Giving Sum to Bilbo to Aid '42 Fight Against Eastland

By HAROLD B. HINTON

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13—The Senate War Investigating subcommittee's hearing today ended in an uproar after former Representative Ross Collins of Mississippi knocked a witness from the stand. Mr. Collins charged that the witness, Robert Gandy, an insurance agent of Jackson, Miss., was lying about him.

The subcommittee was trying to unravel the tortuous disposition of $25,000 allegedly given to Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, Democrat, of Mississippi, by F. T. Newton, a contractor of Hattiesburg, Miss. who was one of the four participants in the $14,000,000 contract to build the Keesler Army Air Field near Biloxi. Mr. Newton had previously testified that he handed Mr. Bilbo three bank drafts for $5,000 each and another for $10,000.

According to his testimony, Mr. Newton gave Senator Bilbo the drafts on Sept. 7, 1942, as a contribution to the campaign fund of Wall Doxey, who was defeated for the Senatorial nomination by Senator James O. Eastland. The drafts were endorsed by Senator Bilbo and then by Mr. Gandy.

Senator Homer Ferguson, Republican, of Michigan, who was doing the questioning for the subcommittee, called Mr. Gandy to the stand. For two hours, the members and the spectators were regaled by an hilarious picture of Mississippi political financing.

Run-Off Primary Involved

Mr. Gandy finally testified that part of the $25,000 went to take care of "operating deficits" of some candidates, defeated in the first primary, whose support Mr. Doxey desired in his run-off against Mr. Eastland. He brought up the name of Mr. Collins who, the witness said, had attended a conference with Mr. Bilbo and others.

While Mr. Gandy was talking of this conference, Mr. Collins had moved forward in the caucus room and was sitting only a few feet behind the witness. Senator Ferguson noticed Mr. Collins, and invited him to take a seat at the witness table so that he could hear better.

To get to the indicated seat, Mr. Collins had to push past Mr. Gandy. Mr. Gandy nodded and spoke to him. 12-14-46

"I wouldn't speak to a damned liar like you," Mr. Collins responded, taking his seat.

Mr. Ferguson had asked one or two additional questions, trying to find out how much money Mr. Gandy said that Mr. Collins had "received," when the 66-year-old former Representative jumped to his feet, taking Mr. Gandy by surprise, and knocked him and his chair to the floor. He tried to pummel and kick Mr. Gandy while the latter was floored, but Capitol police got to him before he did the witness any harm.

Wife Strikes Policeman

While the police were holding Mr. Collins, his wife rushed into the melee and beat one of the policemen on the back, demanding her husband's release. She is a frail, elderly woman. She shouted that Mr. Gandy was lying and knew he was lying. She said her husband took no money.

Mr. Mead hastily announced a recess until tomorrow morning. The police released Mr. Collins as soon as Mr. Gandy had regained his feet and walked to another part of the room.

"I have fought Bilbo for thirty-five years," Mr. Collins said when he regained his breath.

Mr. Newton, in his own testimony, said that he gave the drafts for $25,000 to Mr. Bilbo at the Doxey headquarters in the Royal Hotel in Jackson after what he called a "pep meeting" at which various speakers said the Doxey campaign was languishing for lack of funds. The only speaker Mr. Newton could remember was Fred Sullens, editor of The Jackson Daily News.

Taking up from there, Mr. Gandy told the subcommittee that Senator Bilbo endorsed the drafts the following morning and asked him to get them cashed. Mr. Gandy said he went to the Guaranty Bank and Trust Company in Jackson and made to the "committee" by Mayor Leland Speed of Jackson.

When he said that "other commitments" took up the rest, Mr. Ferguson wanted to know what they were. It was then that Mr. Gandy, after some fencing, said that these were to take care of the "operating deficits" of certain candidates, defeated in the first primary, whose support Senator Doxey desired in the run-off against Senator Eastland.

Finally, he said that the first $7,500 disbursed was used to pay a joint note which he and Mr. Jackson had given to cover a draft they had drawn on the First National Bank of Hattiesburg to obtain funds for the campaign. Another $1,000 was used to repay a loan made to Senator Bilbo and Forrest B. Jackson, Mr. Bilbo's lawyer, on behalf of Mr. Doxey. He said it contained only Senator Bilbo, Senator Ferguson then a record of money he had handled personally.

Senator Ferguson said he was reluctant to specify just what disbursements were made. He referred to a sort of cash book he had kept during the "unofficial campaign." $1,000 was used to repay a loan fessed not to understand this solicitude for the eliminated candidates' financial obligations, the witness replied:

"Senator, you haven't been down to Mississippi for an election."

After further pressure, Mr. Gandy said that $7,500 was paid to Roland Wall, one of the unsuccessful candidates, in installments running from August 31 to September 15. He would not agree to a hypothesis advanced by Senator James W. Mead, Democrat, of New York, chairman of the subcommittee, that the installment plan was used to make sure that Mr. Wall remained on Mr. Doxey's side.

Ferguson Is Insistent

Senator Ferguson then wanted to know what other defeated candidates received any of the money Mr. Gandy sparred for some time creating the impression that the information was being pulled from him.

"There are certain courtesies one is reluctant to discuss," he told the subcommittee.

After further persuasion from Senator Ferguson, developing into insistence, Mr. Gandy described of the "conference" which he said was held among Mr. Collins, Cecil Travis, Charles Snow and George Butler on one side, with himself, Mr. Jackson and Senator Bilbo on the other. The object, he said, was to get Mr. Collins, who had been dropped off in the first primary, to endorse Mr. Doxey in the run-off.

Asked to relate what happened when the group got together in the Robert E. Lee Hotel in Jackson (Mr. Collins said later that the meeting took place in his room there), Mr. Gandy said that Senator Bilbo and Mr. Collins "exchanged a greeting, such as it was," but that they got on friendlier terms as the conversation progressed.

"What made them get friendly?" Mr. Ferguson asked.

"I would say it was just proximity," Mr. Gandy answered.

It was shortly after this testimony when Mr. Collins sprang at Mr. Gandy. 12-14-46

Denies Endorsing Doxey

After the hearing Mr. Collins told newspapermen that he had never endorsed the candidacy of Mr. Doxey, who is now doorkeeper of the Senate. Mr. Collins insisted that he had remained neutral in the primary run-off and had already prepared, at the time of the meeting, a statement to that effect which he intended to issue to the newspapers of Mississippi.

He confirmed that it was he who presented the subcommittee with the charges of improper gratuities from war contractors which are now being heard. He used these same charges when he ran against Senator Bilbo for the Democratic Senatorial nomination last spring.

During the earlier part of today's hearing, the subcommittee heard from B. L. Knost, a contractor from Meridian who also took part in the Keesler Field contract, that he had handed Mr. Bilbo a check for $5,000 about June 12, 1942, for the Doxey campaign fund. He and Michael T. Morrissey, a small Vicksburg contractor who rented some construction machinery to the Government on some of the contracts in question, divided the contribution, he said.

Later, in looking over Mr. Gandy's cashbook, Senator Ferguson found that Senator Bilbo had apparently handed the check to Mr. Gandy to be cashed, but that Mr. Gandy had entered the amount of $5,000 on his records as a loan, not a contribution, to the campaign fund. Mr. Gandy could not remember why he had made this notation, saying it had no importance and that the amount was a bona fide contribution.

Senator James M. Tunnell, Democrat, of Delaware, the other member of the subcommittee, took little part in the questioning. At one point, however, after Mr. Newton had testified to contributing the $25,000 to the Doxey campaign fund, the Delaware Senator asked him if he had ever heard of the Hatch Act, limiting political contributions to $5,000.

"No, sir," Mr. Newton replied.

War Contractors Recite Stories Of How They Helped Feather Nest

He Owes A Little

Tues. 12-17-46

Former Long Lieutenant Recalls Matter Of Cash He Says He Gave Him

By WILLIAM T. PEACOCK

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—(AP)—War contractor friends of Senator Theodore G. Bilbo told today of giving him a Cadillac car, painting his "Dream House," digging him a lake and engaging in business deals with him to the tune of some $68,000 out of their pockets.

This was aside from $30,000 to $40,000 in cash they said they turned over to the Mississippi Democratic Senator or his associates for the use in an unsuccessful campaign to elect Bilbo's friend, Wall Doxey, to the Senate.

All these men were engaged at or about the time of the gifts in work on profitable war contracts in Mississippi. But they insisted to the Senate War Investigating Committee that Bilbo was not helping them get contracts.

And some said they were still carrying on their books, as debts owed by Bilbo, the amounts they paid out in his behalf.

The committee branched out from war contracts to get testimony also about a $3,000 loan Bilbo got in 1938 from Abe Shushan, New Orleans wholesale dry-goods merchant.

Money For Wife Trouble

At the time it was made, the government had an income tax case pending against Shushan.

J. P. Winchell, Chief Counsel for the Bureau of Internal Revenue, testified Bilbo called him "four or five times" about the Shushan case. He said the claim was for about $80,000 and that Bilbo suggested a settlement for about $40,000.

Eventually, the government took off a $7,000 item and settled the case, in combination with one against Mrs. Shushan, for about $120,000, Winchell said.

Shushan, once a powerful lieutenant of the late Huey P. Long, testified that as he recalled "I paid the whole thing."

The wholesale merchant said he lent the $3,000 to Bilbo as a favor to Grant Stewart of New Hebron, Miss., one of his customers. Stewart endorsed the Bilbo note. Tues 12-17-46

Shushan said he drove from New Orleans to Pearl River, Miss., and paid the $3,000 in cash to Bilbo who needed it, as he understood, "because he was having some trouble with his wife."

"The Man's" War Effort

These were the contractors who testified of dealings with Bilbo:

1. John R. Junkin of Natchez, Miss., who said Bilbo still owes him $1,194.70 for concrete work on a swimming pool at Bilbo's "Dream House" despite a bookkeeping transaction which resulted Bilbo's getting a receipted bill. Junkin had about $500,000 in contracts for work at Keesler Army Air Field, Biloxi, Miss.

2. M. T. Reed, Belzoni, Miss., who said he painted Bilbo's "dream house" at a cost of $1,790.79, never paid; gave Bilbo $3,500 toward construction of the Juniper Grove Baptist Church adjoining Bilbo's "dream house," and paid off a $517.92 note signed by Edward P. Terry, Bilbo's former secretary. Robert Gandy had testified earlier that the note, on which he was co-signer, was to pay for furniture for the dream house.

Reed said he had contracts at Greenville, Miss., amounting to five to six million dollars, a $3,400,000 contract at Jackson, Miss., about $5,000,000 worth at Camp Campbell, Miss., and around $25,000,000 at Gulfcoast Air Base.

3. Michael T. Morrissey, Vicksburg, who gave Bilbo the automobile and dug the lake. Morrissey said he took a loss of $48,000 operating Bilbo's farm. He was renting equipment to the government for use in construction of Keesler Field and received $115,302.38. The Advertiser

Bilbo, sitting near one end of the committee table, listened to the parade of witnesses without show of emotion, but frequently whispered suggestions to his attorney, Forrest B. Jackson.

Mississippi Hospitality

As the contractors told it, the things they did for Bilbo were usually at their own suggestion.

Reed said he was riding by "dream house" and noticed it looked shabby.

So he told Bilbo, "Senator, why don't you paint your house."

Bilbo replied that he couldn't afford to.

"So I said, Senator, I'll send down and have it painted for you." Montgomery, Ala.

Morrissey found Bilbo, with a man and two boys, clearing land and preparing to dig the lake. So he told him, he said, that he had power machinery not in use and took the job. Tues. 12-17-46

The completed lake was about 25 acres with an island in the middle where Bilbo has built a house. Sometimes the witnesses called this dwelling "dream house No. 2" and sometimes "dream house, junior."

Morrissey declared Bilbo could not have helped him get war contracts if he had tried.

"I have never been on a government contract at any time since 1929 that I didn't bid under competitive bids," he declared.

The Senate War Investigating Committee is investigating charges that Bilbo received gifts and cash from contractors who wanted his aid in getting war contracts.

Because of these and other charges, Republicans are organizing an effort to deny the Mississippi Democrat a Senate seat when the new Congress meets Jan. 3.

Terry Terrified

From other contractors, the committee has heard accounts of some $30,000 to $40,000 being turned over to Bilbo or associates as contributions to the 1942 Senate campaign of Wall Doxey.

Just what became of this money is a question still unanswered. The committee hopes to learn from Edward P. Terry, former secretary of Bilbo.

Terry was scheduled to testify last week but instead he wrote the committee he had received anonymous death threats against himself, his wife and his daughter if he testifies.

Terry was located in Mississippi. His attorneys said he plans to leave by train for Washington tomorrow to tell his story.

No Bilbo associates figured in Morrissey's story of "The Man" Bilbo and $61,000. Those were matters strictly between him and the Senator.

Here is Morrissey's account of where and how the money went:

1. He lost $48,000 operating Bilbo's 3,600-acre farm for four years, beginning in March, 1942, under an oral agreement whereby he was to pay the taxes and stand the losses, if any, and Bilbo was to get half the profits, if any.

2. He spent $3,672.90 constructing a lake on Bilbo's farm. A bill for this amount, sent to Bilbo, never has been paid.

The lake work began in May, 1941, which was a month before the Keesler Field contract was let. Morrissey acknowledged, in reply to questions from George Meader, committee counsel, that the lake cost would have figured $9,172.90 if machinery rent had been charged against the project at the same rate the government paid at Keesler Field.

3. He lent Bilbo $6,055 and holds a mortgage on 1,100 acres of Bilbo's land. The exact date of this loan was not developed; but Morrissey said the mortgage was recorded in 1943.

4. He gave Bilbo a Cadillac automobile costing $1,919 as a Christmas present in 1941.

5. He gave Bilbo $1,800 in various contributions for the Juniper Grove Baptist Church which Bilbo was constructing on the Bilbo lands. Some of this money dated back as far as 1928. Some of it came from friends who gave it to Morrissey when he told them "the Senator is having a hell of a time building his church."

A heavy-set figure in well-tailored tweeds, Morrissey had a ready reply for every question fired at him. If it called for a precise figure, John A. Bellan, his bookkeeper, was by his side to produce it from voluminous records.

As for his personal relations with Bilbo, Morrissey said they were long time friends.

On the farm operations, the income tax men have allowed all the claimed losses, he said.

He testified that the only permanent improvements he made during the process of losing $48,000 was 47 miles of terracing.

Beatings, Threats Elected Bilbo, Probe Told

By Mary Southard

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

JACKSON, Miss., Dec. 2.—Negroes testifying before the Senate campaign investigating committee today said Sen. Theodore Bilbo (D-Miss) used beatings and threats in white supremacy speeches to keep Negroes from the polls in the Democratic primary last summer. Tues. 12-3-46

Etoy Fletcher, 22-year-old Negro veteran, told the five-man committee he was beaten by seven white men near Brandon after he attempted to register June 12. Fletcher said he was whipped with a wire cable and told if he attempted to register again, he would be killed.

T. S. Wilson, Negro real estate man of Jackson and president of the Mississippi Progressive Voters League, testified that thousands of Negroes would have registered and voted in Jackson if they had not been intimidated by Bilbo's speeches. Only 414 Negro voters out of the 55,445 in Hinds County registered to vote in the July 5 primary.

Percy Green, editor of the leading Mississippi Negro newspaper, the Jackson Advocate, stated that work of the Progressive League and National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in Mississippi was almost suspended because of the state of fear inspired by Bilbo's campaign.

WITNESSES FRIGHTENED

Green said he could produce witnesses who could testify first hand about being refused registration, but they would have to be subpenaed because they were afraid to appear.

Committee chairman Allen J. Ellender, however, told Green to tell such persons that "the committee will protect him or any other witness who wants to testify." No decision on use of the subpena power was reached by the committee today.

Sen. Bilbo, with obvious intent to make the hearing just another showplace for his white supremacy sputterings, arrived yesterday with a battery of lawyers and claimed some 50 witnesses. Bilbo said charges against him had been prepared by a "bunch of N———s in New York" and were an "indictment against every white man and woman who believes in the white race."

He himself, he said, was "just an innocent bystander."

Hearings opened before a crowded court room with the entire Senate committee participating including Sens. Ellender, Maybank, Hickenlooper, Bridges and Thomas.

Nearly 200 Negroes turned up as the hearing opened. Others were in the courtroom audience, segregated on the last three rows from the whites.

Fletcher, a student at Jackson Negro college, said he went to the courthouse and applied for voters' registration with the county clerk. He said the clerk sent him to "a man who handles veterans."

The veterans' registrar threw a pamphlet containing the Constitution of the United States on the desk and asked him if he had read it, Fletcher said. When he said he hadn't read it, the registrar refused him the right to register.

When he left the courthouse, he said, a car drove up and told him to get in. They then drove him to the woods, forced him to disrobe and lie on the ground and then they lashed him with the cable, he testified.

Negro Veteran Tells Senate Probe Of Bilbo About Pre-election Flogging

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky. Tues. 12-3-46

White Witness Contradicts Him

From Wire Dispatches.

Jackson, Miss., Dec. 2.—Negro witnesses, including a minister, told the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee today that Senator Bilbo (D., Miss.) appealed for violence and intimidation in white-supremacy speeches to prevent Negroes from voting in last summer's state Democratic primary.

Etoy Fletcher, young Negro war veteran, testified that he was disrobed, lashed, and beaten by a group of six or seven white men because he attempted to register to vote.

Says Sheriff Cursed Him.

William Albert Bender, 60-year-old Negro Congregational pastor at Tougaloo College, scene of recent fiery-cross burnings about 15 miles from Jackson, told the five-man committee that a "deputy sheriff cursed me and prevented me from voting, although I was a registered voter and exempt from the poll tax because of my age."

Two other Negro witnesses, T. B. Wilson, Jackson real-estate agent, and Percy Green, Jackson publisher, charged that Bilbo's speeches had aggravated the white-supremacy feelings in the state and had contributed to the low Negro registration and voting.

Claims White Men Beat Him.

Testimony of the four highlighted the opening day of public hearings into charges that Bilbo, who won renomination in the July primary and subsequent reelection, had engaged in racial discrimination to prevent Negroes from voting.

Fletcher swore that he was flogged by white men, but a white chiropodist later testified that the man had said he was attacked by Negroes.

Fletcher, who told of serving overseas during the war, testified that he was refused registration in Brandon, Miss., because the described as "the man who

"man in the office" told him he had not read a pamphlet relating to the United States Constitution.

This man sent him to another vote in Rankin County and if I did not want to get into serious trouble I would leave the building."

On the street a few minutes later, Fletcher related, four white men forced him into an automobile, drove him to a wooded area, made him strip, and beat him on the legs with "a piece of car cable."

"They told me not to tell anything," Fletcher said, "but just to let anybody else who wanted to come try it," Fletcher declared.

Protests Put Davis' Name Back In Vote Machine

Daily Worker New York, N.Y. Wed. 11-6-46

An election board mechanic "overruled" the Court of Appeals yesterday and removed the name of Benjamin J. Davis, Communist candidate for attorney general, from a voting machine in the 14th E.D. of the Seventh Assembly District.

Davis' name was put back on the machine following five complaints and intervention of Lewis Isaacs of the Honest Ballot Association.

The mechanic was called to the Seventh A.D. polling place at 9:30 a.m., when voters complained the Davis lever was jammed. The lever over the name of Robert Thompson, Communist candidate for comptroller, however, was working.

On arrival, the mechanic examined the machine and then removed the Davis card, stating it wasn't supposed to be on the ballot. It took another complaint to police headquarters to get the machine in working order.

Voting machines were also declared not functioning in P.S. 113, in the 11th A.D. There the entire Row B, the Democratic row, was missing from the machines.

Names of candidates were badly scrambled on machines in the Hotel Edison, Manhattan. A similar situation was found in the Second E.D. of the 11th A.D. and in P.S. 21, White Plains Ave. and 225th St.

Bilbo Says He Didn't Get a Dollar

By HAROLD B. HINTON.
Special to The New York Times and The Courier-Journal.

Washington, Dec. 14.—Conflicting and often confusing testimony was heard today by the Senate war-investigating subcommittee trying to trace the disposition of $25,000 given to Senator Bilbo (D., Miss.) by a Mississippi war contractor. Little headway had been made when the hearing was recessed until Monday.

The Courier-Journal

In the past three days the subcommittee has heard concurring testimony that F. T. Newton, Hattiesburg, Miss., gave Bilbo $25,000 as a contribution to the campaign fund to win for former Senator Wall Doxey the senatorial nomination in 1942. The drafts were cashed and the proceeds, in $10 and $20 bills, were taken to a hotel room in Jackson, Miss., and given to Bilbo.

That is as far as the testimony has agreed. Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) interrogated witness after witness on the disposition of the money without success thus far. At one point today, where the testimony seemed to be hopelessly contradictory, he invited Bilbo to take the stand.

Louisville, Ky.

Politicians of both parties were lampooned at the annual winter dinner of the Gridiron Club in Washington last night. Story is on Page 3 of The Passing Show.

Sun. 12-15-46

"I will give you a written statement at the conclusion," Bilbo replied. "I will say now that I didn't get a damned dollar. That's the truth."

Mississippi political enmities, enduring as well as transient, tended to color the testimony. Robert Gandy, who was knocked from the witness stand yesterday by Ross Collins, former representative and unsuccessful candidate for the Senate both in 1942 and 1946, told the subcommittee that the Collins organization received $11,000 from him, Bilbo and Forrest B. Jackson, Bilbo's attorney, in return for supporting Doxey in the 1942 runoff primary.

Informed Setup Got Funds.

Gandy, along with Bilbo and Jackson, set up what he called an "informal committee" to back Doxey's candidacy in the runoff. This body had no connection with Doxey's authorized campaign committee of which Lee Hall was manager.

The "informal committee" received contributions which Jackson estimated at "less than $100,000," including the $25,000 from Newton. Gandy and Jackson said the money was spent, often faster than it came in, for what are considered legitimate campaign expenses in Mississippi. No over-all records were kept.

"We would like to keep Mississippi politics out of this and get the facts," Ferguson said at one time.

"They are inseparable," Gandy replied.

All Was Put In Pot.

He and Jackson testified seated side by side. Jackson said the $25,000 from Newton and the other contributions were all put into the pot and disbursed under the frenzied finance they represented as inevitable in Mississippi runoff primaries.

A good deal of it went, he told the subcommittee, to hire automobiles to transport Mississippi voters from the war projects on which they were working in such places as Gulfport, Meridian, and Laurel back to their homes to vote. He recalled that in 1942 automobiles and gasoline were scarce and the transportation problem was a serious political consideration. The Courier-Journal

Losers Were Paid Off.

The largest single expenses were devoted to swinging over supporters of the three losers in the first primary to vote for Doxey in the runoff. Gandy said that the Collins organization got $11,000 for this purpose and Roland J. Wall, another unsuccessful contender, $8,000.

On the stand yesterday Gandy had appeared about to say that Collins himself got the $11,000. Just before he got to that statement. Collins knocked him from the witness stand and broke up the hearing. Louisville, Ky.

This morning, Gandy made it clear that he had never meant to intimate that Collins got a single dollar. He hold the senators that he paid the money to Cecil F. Travis, Jackson lawyer and political supporter of Collins in five installments. Sun. 12-15-46

Travis, he said, had been designated by Collins to make the financial arrangements for covering the Collins "operating deficit" resulting from his unsuccessful campaign. Later in the day Collins denied that he had any deficit or that he had received any money from the Bilbo group.

(Edward Terry, former secretary to Bilbo, who had been sought by the F.B.I. since he disappeared when the committee wanted to subpoena him, was located in a Quitman, Miss., hospital. A summons was served. He had written the senators that he feared for his life and the safety of his family if he testified.)

Pleasant Remedies for Bilboism

PM Sun. 12-15-46

WASHINGTON

The outlook grows brighter daily that one or the other of the double-barrelled attacks on Theo "Dear Dago" Bilbo's eligibility for the Senate will prove successful. Current hearings before the Senate War Investigating Subcommitee, revealing connections between Bilbo and certain war contracts, is proceeding along solid evidentiary lines (story on Page 8). On Monday the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, which last week heard evidence in Jackson, Miss., that Bilbo's campaign was shot through with fraud and duress, will have the complete transcript of its hearings available and will decide upon its next step. New York, N.Y.

Glass Man

So on Jan. 3, when the new Republican-dominated Senate meets for the first time, Bilbo will step up to take his oath of office somewhat in the guise of one of those glass men, habitues of anatomical museums, whom everyone can see through. If the evidence warrants, the Senate will not have only a choice of reason for barring Bilbo, but a choice of method. It will be possible for the gentlemen to relieve Bilbo of his toga because of (a) his activities in war contract negotiations, or (b) the nature of the campaign preceding his 3600-vote victory in the Mississippi primary. And it will be possible to keep Bilbo from his toga by (a) refusing to swear him into the Senate in the first place, or (b) by swearing him in and then kicking him out.

It is not often that the Senate of the United States is afforded the opportunity for such a wide variety of action, all of them pleasurable.

I want, for a moment, to go back to last week's hearings at Jackson on Bilbo's primary election, during which it was revealed that fewer than 3000 of Mississippi's more than 1,000,000 Negroes were permitted to participate. These hearings were held before a committee dominated by Southern Democratic Bilbo protagonists, and it is almost a certainty that the subcommittee's majority report will be favorable to Bilbo. The only hope is that Sen. Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) will get a streak of evangelism and associate himself with the two Republican committee members, who are likely to turn in a minority opinion.

However, the report of a committee of the Senate is only advisory, and the Senate as a whole can take it or leave it. And, however much this particular committee may color the conclusions drawn from the facts, it will not be able to color the facts, which are irretrievably part of the Jackson record and need no committee to speak for them.

Senatorial Precedent

These facts show, that in the course of the campaign, Bilbo repeatedly made statements in violation of the constitutional guarantee that no person shall be deprived of the right to vote because of race, creed or previous condition of servitude. And I am indebted to careful studies by Charles LaFollette, ex-Congressman from Indiana, on this subject and of Senatorial precedent in barring or expelling Senators for the following statement, which constitutes a paraphrase of LaFollette's own conclusions:

It is not necessary to show a direct connection between Bilbo's statements and anti-Negro violence and/or fraud at the polls. Nor is it necessary to prove that this violence, intimidation and duress kept a sufficient number of Negroes away from the polls to have secured Bilbo's victory. It is only necessary to show that Bilbo made certain statements in open and wilful violation of the Constitution which he was sworn to uphold and that these statements were therefore "contrary to sound public policy . . . and taints with fraud and corruption the credentials for a seat in the Senate presented" by Bilbo.

Senate Resolution

That part of the above paragraph which is set off by quotation marks comes from a Senate resolution which barred Senator-Elect Frank L. Smith of Illinois from taking office in 1926. The first paragraph of this resolution reads in full as follows:

"Resolved, that acceptance and expenditure of the various sums of money aforesaid in behalf of the candidacy of the said Frank L. Smith is contrary to sound public policy, harmful to the dignity and honor of the Senate, dangerous to the perpetuity of free government, and taints with fraud and corruption the credentials for a seat presented by the said Frank L. Smith." Sun. 12-15-46

It had been charged against Smith, and admitted by him, that $450,000 had been spent on his behalf during his primary campaign. But it will be noted that the Senate resolution barring Smith did not specifically state that this $450,000, or any part of it, had been used in any illegal or criminal manner, such as bribery. Nor did the Senate trouble to find out whether it was the expenditure of this money that actually secured Smith's victory. It was the expenditure of so vast a sum in itself which the Senate found to be "contrary to sound public policy."

It will be up to the new Senate to decide whether Bilbo's public statements during his campaign, statements in open and wilful violation of the Constitution he was sworn to uphold, constitute an act of at least as "contrary to sound public policy" as the raising of a half-million-dollar campaign fund.

OFFICIALS CONFIRM NEGRO VOTE BLOCK

County Officers at the Bilbo Inquiry Say Obstructions Were at Registration

The Times

By HAROLD B. HINTON

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

JACKSON, Miss., Dec. 3—Five county officials from different parts of Mississippi confirmed to the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee here today varying degrees of obstruction of registration by Negroes and of "friendly advice" to Negroes not to vote in the Democratic primary of last July 2. They agreed, however, that these developments were not the result of campaign speeches by Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, but were merely the continuation of customs practiced in the State since 1890.

The four Circuit Clerks, who act as registrars in Mississippi in keeping lists of qualified voters, and the one Sheriff who testified today were before the committee in response to subpoenas. They had all been mentioned in testimony by Negro witnesses yesterday.

Testimony Is Denied

New York, N.Y.

Dave H. Gayden, Circuit Clerk of Rankin County, denied testimony yesterday by Etoy Fletcher, Negro veteran, that he had refused him registration. Fletcher told yesterday of being beaten with steel cable by four or five unknown white men after an unsuccessful effort to register last June. Mr. Gayden said he never heard of Fletcher until he saw a story of the alleged incident in a Jackson newspaper. Wed. 12-4-46

In response to questions from Senator Allen J. Ellender, Democrat, of Louisiana, chairman of the committee, Mr. Gayden said there are few Negro registrants in Rankin County now, but that he had registered quite a few "away back there, during the Republican Administration."

He aroused uncontrollable laughter among the spectators by recalling how "Old Sol" Ward, Negro Republican leader of Rankin County, used to bring in prospective Republicans, all Negroes, and asked that they become registered voters so as to buttress Ward's claims for Federal patronage from the State Republican Committee.

Part of Etoy Fletcher's testimony yesterday related that Mr. Gayden had sent him upstairs in the court house at Brandon to consult some unidentified adviser on veterans' affairs. Mr. Gayden said today this was impossible, because he did not know what offices there were upstairs, never having bothered to investigate.

"You know," he said to the appreciative committee, "they had offices for FHA, home economics and a lotta junk like that."

Vacant Offices Predicted

Sen. Styles Bridges, Republican, of New Hampshire, observed that some of those offices would be vacant after the Republicans organize the eightieth Congress in January. Mr. Ellender challenged him to say which of the Federal agencies the Republicans would abolish, but the colloquy ended there.

C. E. Cocke, Circuit Clerk of Greenville, conceded he told Negro applicants for registration last spring that they would have a hard time convincing him they were qualified. He agreed he asked Negroes difficult questions on governmental organization, as several witnesses testified yesterday.

Another circuit clerk who agreed he asked Negroes hard questions in order to qualify for registration was Wendell Holmes of Pike County. Senator Ellender asked him if he was a Bilbo supporter.

"I don't even tell my wife how I vote," the witness replied.

Sheriff W. E. (Bucky) Moore, former star football player at Loyola University, admitted "advising some Negroes not to attempt to vote at the Democratic primary of last July 2. He said he did this in the interest of preserving order, in the belief that Negro efforts to vote in the "white primary" might lead to mob violence. He explained that "it's my job to prevent trouble, not to create trouble."

Asked why he feared it might cause violence, he said he had been led to that belief by newspapers, magazines and radio commentators from the north. He added that these sources were "eggin' it on."

Clifford R. Fields, Circuit clerk of Natchez, was another who admitted more difficult requirements for Negro than white registrants. He gave details of the methods he used to determine qualifications. When Mr. Bridges asked if it is fair to impose unequal standards, Mr. Fields observed that "I think so."

The only one of the local authorities who came close to admitting he had been influenced by enator Bilbo's campaign oratory to increase discrimination against Negro registrants was Emmett E. Reynolds, of Winston County. He also admitted advising Negroes not to go to the polls. When asked if he had been influenced by Mr. Bilbo, he reflected a moment.

'Well, it didn't do me any good to hear those speeches," he replied.

The Rev. George T. J. Strype, pastor of St. Philomena's Church, a Roman Catholic Negro parish in Pass Christian, told the committee that a number of his parishoners, mostly veterans, had been refused the right to vote on July 2.

When he went to the polling place to ask the reason, he said that Lester Garrity, a friend and supporter of Senator Bilbo told him that 'no Negroes are going to vote in Pass Christian today unless they paint their faces white." Wed

A question sent up by Forrest Jackson, Mr. Bilbo's chief counsel, and asked by Mr. Ellender, elicited the information that Father Strype was born in Brooklyn and educated in Newburgh, N. Y. 12-4-46

REPORT ON BILBO IS CALLED 'TOUGH'

Draft Stresses Relations of Senator With Contractors, Says Inquiry Group Member

The Times

New York, N.Y.

Fri. 12-27-46

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26 (AP)—A member of the Senate War Investigating Committee said tonight that the subcommittee which investigated Senator Theodore G. Bilbo's relations with war contractors has drafted "a very tough" report.

It makes no direct recommendations, he told a reporter, but (1) lays down the evidence on Mr. Bilbo's connections with Mike Morrisey, A. B. Friend, F. T. Newton and others, and (2) emphasizes contentions by Senator Homer Ferguson, Republican, of Michigan, that donations were solicited from them.

These other items also went on the Bilbo bulletin board:

Strong doubt arose as to whether some Democratic members of the committee will sign or sanction the subcommittee report.

Taft Calls Meeting

Chairman Robert A. Taft, Republican, of Ohio, of the Senate Republican Steering Committee, called a meeting for tomorrow morning to discuss whether to try to bar Mr. Bilbo from the Senate.

Senator Elmer Thomas, Democrat, of Oklahoma, reported that Mr. Bilbo is dredging up some "embarrassing" questions for some of the Senators who want to throw him out. Mr. Thomas reported that the Mississippi Senator has "a bunch of people" looking into relations between other Senators and war contractors. In a mood to fight fire with fire, Mr. Thomas said, Mr. Bilbo is prepared to raise some embarrassing questions about those relations.

Repeatedly in the week-long subcommittee investigation of Bilbo's war contractor activities, he denied that he had done anything that other lawmakers had not done.

Mr. Bilbo was reported to have spent a quiet Christmas at his "dream house" on his Mississippi farm.

Senator James M. Mead, Democrat, of New York, subcommittee chairman, was reported late today to have decided to sign the report prepared by Senator Ferguson and members of the committee staff.

Tunnell Will Not Sign

However, Senator James M. Tunnell, Democrat, of Delaware, the third member of the subcommittee, was said to have decided against signing on the grounds that he was not able to attend all the hearings.

Before going home for Christ- dication whether they intend to mas, Mr. Ferguson told a colleague bow out of the Senate with what he did not believe either Mr. Mead might constitute a slap at a fellow- or Mr. Tunnell would agree to the report.

Both Mr. Tunnell and Mr. Mead will be out of office at noon next Friday, Jan. 3, when the Eightieth Congress convenes. There are two other Democratic lame ducks on the full committee—Briggs of Missouri and Mitchell of Washington. Neither was here during the Bilbo

The Senator who described the report as "very tough" inquiry. makes no direct recommendations but rather lays down the evidence in violation of Federal statute.

Senate Campaign Body Opens Hearings in Jackson Today —Few Volunteer to Speak

By HAROLD B. HINTON

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

JACKSON, Miss., Dec. 1—Most indications available today pointed to general public support in Mississippi for Senator Theodore G. Bilbo in the investigation he will face, starting tomorrow, on charges of inciting intimidation of Negroes during his campaign preceding the Democratic primary in July.

Here in the State capital, observers believe there was little actual intimidation, considering the fact it was the first time the Negroes have voted in a Democratic primary election since the reconstruction period.

There are a good number of Mississippians who would like to see the Senate refuse to seat Mr. Bilbo on Jan. 3, but they do not want it done on the charges to be investigated tomorrow by the Special Senate Campaign Investigating Committee. They are pinning their hopes on possible revelations before the War Investigating Committee, under Senator Harley M. Kilgore, Democrat, of West Virginia, regarding alleged improper payments to Mr. Bilbo by war contractors.

Ellender Holds Conference

Senator Allen J. Ellender, chairman of the campaign committee, arrived today and conferred with Riley W. Shanks, the committee's chief counsel, over plans for tomorrow's public hearings. Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, senior minority member, also discussed plans with Mr. Ellender.

The other members were scheduled to reach Jackson late tonight or early tomorrow morning.

Mr. Ellender said that the committee would stay here until Christmas, if necessary, to "get to the bottom of this and find out what the trouble is." On the other hand, he left no doubt that, in his opinion, thus far the charges against Mr. Bilbo rest on a frail foundation.

He said the committee's investigators had heard complaints from perhaps 500 witnesses, but that only about twenty-five had agreed to come before the committee and testify under oath.

"Quite a number of persons who live outside the state are clamoring to testify," Mr. Ellender said. "But if people in the state cannot establish a case—and I know Bilbo has a lot of enemies in the State—we ought not to have to go to New York or Washington ar anywhere else to find the evidence. It is people here who claim to have been injured."

Gibe at a New York Group

The chairman's principal target appeared to be the Civil Rights Congress of New York, which gathered the complaints where the committee will investigate. He took the position that if there were individual violations of Mississippi election laws the remedy lay in the State Courts.

"We have no jurisdiction and they ought to know that," he said. "We can only report to the Congress and recommend laws. We have no powers to punish."

Mr. Bridges expressed his own belief that the committee should issue subpoenas immediately to bring before it the witnesses it wants to hear. Mr. Ellender thinks that the hearings will proceed more rapidly if voluntary witnesses are heard.

Tom Q. Ellis, who ran second to Mr. Bilbo in the primary, has notified the committee that he has no complaints and no testimony to offer against his successful rival. Former Representative Ross Collins, another unsuccessful contestant, has not told the committee whether he has any testimony to offer. The other two candidates who lost to Mr. Bilbo are not expected to appear.

Mr. Bilbo himself is installed in Jackson with an imposing battery of lawyers to see that his interests are protected. He says that many more have volunteered to serve if needed.

He appears to be in good health and spirits.

He said today that he would be present when the hearings opened tomorrow morning, and that he expected to have the time of his life.

Bilbo Probers Quiz 2 Officers

PM New York, N.Y.

A secret Senate inquiry was under way today into charges that Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo (D., Miss.) accepted cash and other gifts from war contractors. Testimony by two Army officers on contracts at two Mississippi air bases — Keesler in Biloxi and Key in Meridian, was heard by the Senate War Investigating Committee.

Thurs. 11-21-46

The witnesses were ex-Col. Douglas I. McKay and Col. J. L. Person, both of the Engineer Corps. Testimony was not made public. Several Mississippi witnesses are expected to be heard today, also in secret.

Bilbo's right to take his seat when the 80th Congress convenes Jan. 3 is under study by the War Investigating Committee, the Campaign Investigating Committee, and the Senate Republican Conference.

War investigators are looking into three sets of charges against Bilbo.

The Campaign Investigating Committee is concerned chiefly with charges that Bilbo sought to prevent Negroes from voting in the Mississippi primary hearings on these charges will begin in Jackson, Miss., Dec. 2.

The Senate Republican Conference, which convenes Dec. 30, wants to look into Bilbo's general qualifications in the light of the frequent accusations.

Tax Burden Eased by Loss

It was a bad time for farming, Mr. Morrissey testified, because of the shortage of labor during the war, and he lost $48,000 on the four years he operated under the contract. He agreed with Senator Homer Ferguson, Republican, of Michigan, that this was not too serious, as he would have had to pay 80 per cent of it in income taxes if he had not lost it on the Bilbo farm.

Tues. 12-17-46

As a Christmas present in 1941, Mr. Morrissey gave Senator Bilbo a Cadillac automobile for which he paid $1,919.12, he told the subcommittee. This was a usual custom in Mississippi, he stated, as "we always elect poor folks in Mississippi." He said that a car had been given to the late Senator Pat Harrison and to various Governors by admiring friends without causing any adverse comment.

All in all, Mr. Morrissey testified, Mr. Bilbo now owned him $9,728.50.

"Bilbo has had a lot of hard luck with his health," he said. "I never have asked him for the money."

In reply to a question from Mr. Ferguson, the witness said that he has received $115,302.38 for rental of heavy equipment at Keesler Field, but he added that he had always been low bidder on the contracts he obtained. He testified that he had no cost-plus-fixed-fee contracts.

Sold Concrete at $500,000

John R. Junkins, a Natchez dealer in sand and gravel, said he sent a cement-mixer to Poplarville and poured the concrete for the swimming pool. Later, at Mr. Bilbo's request, he sent him a bill for $1,194.70, but instructed his secretary to mark it "paid" before it was mailed, Mr. Jenkins said.

"When Senator Bilbo gets able he'll pay me," he told the subcommittee, adding that he sold about $500,000 worth of ready-mixed concrete to Keesler Field after competitive bidding.

B. L. Knost, Meridian contractor, told of lending Mr. Bilbo $1,200 in Washington on Nov. 6, 1941, of which, he said, the Senator had paid back $750. Mr. Knost said he gave Edward P. Terry, Mr. Bilbo's former secretary, $3,750 for the Wall Doxey campaign in 1942, and now suspected it had not been used for

F. T. Newton, a Hattiesburg contractor, testified that he had also made a loan of $1,200 to Mr. Bilbo in Washington on Dec. 15, 1941. He did not intend to collect this money, he said, but Mr. Bilbo insisted and eventually paid it back in three installments. The witness stated that he contributed $750 to the Juniper Grove Baptist Church.

12-17-46

In reply to a question submitted by Forrest Jackson, Senator Bilbo's counsel Mr. Newton said that Mr. Terry asked him for money nearly every time they met. After about the third suggestion, Mr. Newton said he went to Senator Bilbo and asked him if it were necessary to give anybody around Wahington any money to get war contracts.

"Not a damned cent to anybody," he testified the Senator told him.

Loan to Terry is Reported

Mr. Knost was recalled to the stand and testified that he made a loan of $2,000 to Mr. Terry, which was still unpaid, but that he did not tell Senator Bilbo about it.

M. T. Reed, whose contracting firm has its headquarters in Belzoni, Miss., said he offered to have the "Dream House" painted in the spring of 1941, when Senator Bilbo told him, during a visit by the contractor to Poplarville, that he could not afford to do it. Later, he sent a bill for $1,709.79, a sum which he tried to write off at the end of the year as a bad debt. The claim was disallowed, he said, adding that "I think maybe some day he'll pay it—I hope so."

Mr. Reed contributed $3,500 to the Juniper Grove Church in April, 1943, he testified. He said he had also paid a note for $517.92 for Mr. Terry at a bank in Jackson, Miss., on Mr. Terry's request for financial help. He "understood" the money had been used to buy a Christmas present for Senator Bilbo.

A. B. Friend, an engineer and contractor of Sardis, Miss., managed Mr. Bilbo's successful campaigns for renomination in 1940 and in 1946. Under questioning by Mr. Ferguson, he related that he had obtained, possibly through Mr. Terry as an intermediary with Mr. Bilbo, a post with Pettigrew-Clark of Dallas, Tex., on a project to build a large, covered stadium in Washington.

He was to get 10 per cent of any fees the Dallas firm collected, he said. There was a joint Senate-House Stadium Commission to look into the project, and Senator Bilbo was chairman of the commission. The project came to nothing, the witness said, but he conceded that he had hoped to make $50,000 or $60,000 as his share of the fees if it had been completed.

An effort to connect a loan of $3,000 to Mr. Bilbo by Abraham L. Shushan, wholesale drygoods merchant of New Orleans, with alleged attempts on the Senator's part to influence a military fraud case against Mr. Shushan in 1940, appeared to fail at today's hearing. Miss Virginia Simmerman, a former "contact secretary" for Mr. Bilbo, said that Mr. Shushan came to the Bilbo office early in 1940 and that she understood he was threatening the Senator unless he paid the $3,000.

The charge the subcommittee is investigating is that the Mississippi Senator accepted gratuities from war contractors who profited from his intervention on their behalf in contracts awarded in Mississippi.

His friends who testified today, most of whom were contractors, put a different face on the matter, however.

They had all known Mr. Bilbo for many years, they told the subcommittee. They had known for fifteen years or more of his desire to leave a the "Dream House," "Dream House Junior" and its surrounding lake the church and parsonage, with the burying ground between them, as a memorial to his father and mother

Under these circumstances, they would always call on Mr. Bilbo when they were in the vicinity of Poplarville and ask how he was getting on. They would usually find him trying to accomplish, by his own manual labor and that of two or three boys, something that they could do much more easily and cheaply, by the construction machinery which they possessed.

For example, Michael Thomas Morrissey, a Vicksburg contractor drove by to see Senator Bilbo in the spring of 1941. He found the Senator working a mule trying to clear a roadway leading to a depression between two hills where he wanted to build a lake, Mr. Morrissey told the inquiring Senators today.

The Times

Mr. Morrissey had some dirt-moving equipment that was not in use at the moment. He told the Senator that, with this machinery, the excavation could be done in a fraction of the time he and his mule would require, and Mr. Morrissey moved his machinery to the spot.

New York, N.Y.

He said it took about six to eight weeks to dig out the space for the lake, leaving an island in the center on which "Dream House Junioh" was later built. While he had the machinery there, he also had a swimming pool excavated.

Tells of Faulty Bookkeeping

By a bookkeeper's error, he testified, the total cost of $3,672.91, for labor, fuel, moving the machinery and its rental, was charged to the construction account of Keesler Army Air Field, which he was then helping to construct. The charge was corrected, however, by a journal entry at the end of the year, and Senator Bilbo was billed for the amount, the witness said.

Subsequently, he made loans to Mr. Bilbo of $5,000 and of $1,000, secured by a publicly recorded mortgage on 1,100 acres of farm land, the witness added. He likewise contracted with Mr. Bilbo to operate the latter's entire farm of 3,600 acres for four years, starting in 1941. Under the arrangement, Mr. Morrissey was to pay all taxes and operating expenses and they would share the profits, if any.

How GOP Can Get Bilbo

The Afro-American

Now that the Republicans have gained control of Congress, one of the first things that they can do in behalf of progress is to block the seating of Senator Theodore (KKK) Bilbo come January.

The Mississippi Senator faces two charges: (1) intimidating colored voters in the recent State primary by inciting violence, and (2) accepting rake-offs from war contractors. Of the first one, there is not one scintilla of doubt, and it should not be overly difficult to prove the second.

However, we are not expecting too much of the public hearings which the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee will hold in Mississippi, beginning Dec. 12: first, because Senator Allen J. Ellender (Dem., La.) is chairman of the committee, and second, because none but residents of Mississippi will be permitted to testify. A whitewash is therefore in prospect. Baltimore, Md.

As to the war contracting charges, no date has been set for a hearing on these by the Senate War Investigating Committee. Sat. 11-23-46

Two GOP members of the Ellender committee—Senators Styles Bridges (N.H.) and Bourke B. Hickenlooper (Iowa)—have been instructed to report to the Senate Steering Committee with all of the facts disclosed at the Mississippi hearings. It is on the basis of such findings that the GOP can challenge Bilbo when he comes up on Jan. 3 to be seated. A simple majority vote can do the trick.

Republicans, who hold the upper hand in the Senate, will strengthen their position considerably by acting with finality to remove this scourge from American political life.

Accused Mississippian Insists, Meanwhile, That GOP Cannot Keep Him From Senate

By HAROLD B. HINTON

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15—Principal interest in the Bilbo hearings, which will be resumed tomorrow before the Senate War Investigating Subcommittee, will center on Edward P. Terry, former secretary to the senior Senator from Mississippi. He is the witness who asked the subcommittee to excuse him on the ground that his life would be endangered if he testified.

Senator James M. Mead, Democrat, of New York, expects Mr. Terry to take the stand early this week. After a search of several days, in which the assistance of the Federal Bureau of Investigation was enlisted, Mr. Terry received service of a committee summons in a hospital at Quitman, Miss., on Friday.

Mr. Terry's exact role in the disposition of the $25,000 given to Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, Democrat, of Mississippi, by F. T. Newton, a war contractor, purportedly to aid the campaign of Wall Doxey for the Senatorial nomination in 1942, has not been made clear. The subcommittee's immediate attention is focused on this one item of $25,000, although there are before it allegations of lesser gratuities to Mr. Bilbo by other war contractors.

Witness Spoke of Terry

Mr. Newton, the donor of the sum under inquiry, is the only witness so far who has mentioned any of Mr. Terry's alleged activities. He testified that, a few minutes after he had made the $25,000 donation to the Doxey campaign fund, he met Mr. Terry who told him that "If you had given me that money, I could do you a lot more good than Bilbo or Doxey."

"'Mr. Terry,'" the witness said he replied, "'I'm not looking for any good, I just don't want any harm.'"

Mr. Newton's idea of the negative virtue attaching to political contributions stemmed from an earlier experience, he told the subcommittee. He had tried to get a Government construction contract at Pascagoula, Miss., but the award had been made to another contractor on the recommendation, according to his testimony, of the late Senator Pat Harrison.

Apparently, Mr. Newton had not contributed to the Harrison campaign fund, and the experience taught him a lesson, it was said. He believed (incorrectly, as it turned out) that Mr. Harrison's successor, Senator Doxey, would beat James O. Eastland in the 1942 primary, the testimony revealed.

'Pep Meeting' Involved

For the first primary, in which there were five candidates, he contributed $2,500 directly to Mr. Doxey. During the campaign preceding the run-off primary, between Messrs. Eastland and Doxey, Mr. Newton attended what he called a "pep meeting" in Jackson, Miss., and heard an appeal for funds.

Feeling that he ought to help all he could in the election of a Senator who would not do him any harm, as he felt Senator Harrison had done, he agreed to donate $25,000 on the condition that Senator Bilbo accept it and see that it was usefully expended, Mr. Newton stated. Mon. 12-16

At the beginning of this year Mr. Terry and Mr. Bilbo broke Mr. Terry resigned as Clerk of the District of Columbia Committee of which Senator Bilbo is chairman, and went back to Mississippi to live. He has already appeared before an executive meeting of the War Investigating Committee, and it is presumed that his testimony at that time was one of the factors leading the committee to direct hearings by the subcommittee, on the ground that a prima facie case had been established against Mr. Bilbo. 12-16-46

Ellender Report Awaited

The War Investigating Committee's inquiry is one of two factors which may affect the question of permitting Mr. Bilbo to take his seat for his third term in the Senate. The other is a report to be rendered by the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee.

This body, under the chairmanship of Senator Allen J. Ellender, Democrat, of Louisiana, held hearings earlier this month in Jackson on charges that Mr. Bilbo's campaign speeches last spring incited white citizens of Mississippi to intimidate Negro voters and to keep them from registering and voting. This committee's report is expected to be favorable to the seating of Senator Bilbo, on the ground that his advocacy of the "white Democratic primary" was merely the reflection of prevailing opinion in Mississippi.

Senator Bilbo's political enemies in his home State pin their hopes of unseating him on an adverse report from the War Investigating Committee. They believe that a Republican Senate, sole judge of the qualifications of its members, might deny Mr. Bilbo his seat if it were established that he had received improper financial considerations from war contractors who profited from his intervention on their behalf.

After three days of hearings, however, the subcommittee has yet to hear any direct evidence that Senator Bilbo personally diverted for his own use any of the money said to have been donated to the Doxey campaign fund.

There are lesser allegations against him, including a similar campaign contribution of $5,000 by B. L. Knost, a Meridian contractor. Others of the kind include a donation of $500 to the Baptist Church of Poplarville, where Senator Bilbo lives, made by the J. A. Jones Construction Company of Charlotte, N. C., which had about $71,000,000 worth of war contracts in Mississippi.

"I didn't like the idea of being asked to give to something in which we had no personal interest," Edwin L. Jones, secretary-treasurer of the company, told the subcommittee, "but I thought that if we were to continue to do business in Mississippi it would be a good idea to give to this church."

He testified that the gift was solicited by Michael T. Morrissey, a friend of Senator Bilbo and a contractor who rented heavy equipment to the Government on some of the Mississippi projects. The church gift, however, was made some years after completion of the Keesler Army Air Field, near Gulfport, for which Senator Bilbo had recommended the firm.

Even if they get some Democratic votes or are aided by absences on the side, Mr. Bilbo's opponents fear they might lose some Republican votes. 12-16-46

One GOP Senator, who has been analyzing the strategy, mentioned that the Democrats, if they chose, could prevent the swearing in of any Republicans if Mr. Bilbo were not permitted to take the oath.

"Maybe we will give the Democrats a chance to put themselves

Even if they get some Republicans who haven't even got a scratch to twenty-nine following the Democratic primary, "They agreed, adding: death today of Senator Bailey, of North Carolina. If precedents are followed, new members will be sworn in alphabetically, my against me," he declared, alphabetically, "Besides, Republicans, who have been studying the situation, mond E. Baldwin, Republican, of Connecticut, first on the list. That would make the count thirty-nine, Democrats, of Louisiana, held hearings on charges that Mr. Bilbo's campaign speeches last spring incited white citizens of Mississippi to intimidate Negro voters and to keep them from registering and voting. Senator to Leave Mississippi Monday to Face Charges of Improper Financial Deals

JACKSON, Miss., Dec. 6—Senator Theodore G. Bilbo will leave Mississippi for Washington on Monday, he announced here today, to defend himself before the Senate War Investigating subcommittee against charges of improper financial dealings with war contracttors who built Army camps in the State. The hearings are scheduled to open on Dec. 2.1

Flushed with what he consideres his victory before the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee here yesterday, Mr. Bilbo left Jackson this afternoon to rest over the week-end at his "Dream House" near Poplarville, in the southern part of the State. He was asked about the statement issued last night by Emmanuel H. Bloch, counsel for the Civil Rights Congress of New York City, demanding that the hearings on charges of intimidating Negro voters during his primary campaign last spring be reopened in Washington.

"They're just like a fellow who's lost a murder cose," Mr. Bilbo commented. "Cussin' the judge and the jury. They know they're licked."

Beneath a surface air of confidence, Mr. Bilbo appeared today to be genuinely concerned about the charges before the Senate War Investigating Subcommittee, headed by Senator James M. Mead of New York. Friends who are helping him prepare his defense have been unable to find out the names of the individuals who preferred the charges, or whether these are sworn charges. The subcommittee has transmitted the charges themselves to Mr. Bilbo.

Senator's Enemies "Hopeful"

Mr. Bilbo's political enemies in Mississippi, whose number is not inconsiderable, profess to believe the Senate may unseat him as a result of the forthcoming hearings. They did not believe the intimidation charges would be upheld by the Campaign Investigating Committee, headed by Senator Allen J. Ellender, Democrat, of Louisiana, and they did not want those charges to stick.

The financial charges were brought into the open during the primary campaign by former Representative Ross Collins, who was running for the Senatorial nomination along with Mr. Bilbo and three other candidates. Mr. Collins finished third in the race, while Mr. Bilbo was nominated by a majority of about 3,800 votes over the combined total polled by his four opponents.

Speaking at Brandon on June 17, Mr. Collins charged that Mr. Bilbo had received a total of $25,000, in four checks, fro mthe firm of Newton & Glenn, contractors, of Hattiesburg.

Mr. Collins said that Mr. Bilbo paid only $72 in Federal income taxes during the last thirty-two years. He charged that Mr. Bilbo now valued his properties at $300,000, although the Senator had admitted he was close to bankruptcy in the mid-nineteen-thirties. Mr. Collins added that the real estate records of Pearl River County where Mr. Bilbo lives, showed that he acquired land for $26,310 in the three years from 1927 to 1930, when his sole ostensible income was a salary of $7,500 a year.

Gift of Automobile Alleged

Another candidate, Nelson T. Levings, a former commander in the Navy, charged in a speech on June 24 that Mr. Bilbo had received a new Cadillac automobile from unspecified "war-contractor friends."

Mr. Bilbo replied to the Collins charges in a speech at Purvis on June 19, in which he said that "I did not get one dollar of the money." He said that the $25,000 was a voluntary contribution by the Hattiesburg contractors to the campaign fund of Wall Doxey in his 1942 campaign for the Senatorial nomination.

A check for $5,000 which Mr. Collins displayed was endorsed by Mr. Bilbo, but bore a subsequent endorsement by Robert Gandy, an insurance agent in Jackson. It was Mr. Bilbo's contention that he had turned over the money to a Doxey campaign committee headed by Mr. Gandy. 12-7-46

Mr. Doxey disclaimed knowledge of the contribution, but Mr. Bilbo said that the committee headed by Mr. Gandy worked for Mr. Doxey's nomination independently and that the candidate need not necessarily have known all the details of its activity. Mr. Gandy has made no public statement in regard to the matter.

Thirty Witnesses Are Called

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6—Thirty witnesses have been called thus far "to testify concerning transactions between Senator Bilbo and certain war contractors" before the special subcommittee of the Senate War Investigating Committee, Senator James M. Mead, the chairman said today.

He Tells Of Death Threats; Now Perjury Charges Also Confront Witness

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18 —(AP)—Edward P. Terry, self-declared custodian of a $15,000 "Beat Bilbo" fund, refused to tell the Senate investigators what he did with it and was threatened with contempt and perjury prosecution.

His stand threw into an uproar a Senate War Investigating Committee hearing. It had been startled a few minutes earlier by an assertion from Terry that a physician told him Senator Theodore G. Bilbo accepted $1,500 to get a narcotics "prescription or license" for a constituent.

Terry is a former secretary to the Mississippi Democratic Senator and has been called as a key witness in the committee's inquiry into Bilbo's relations with war contractors.

Twitching nervously, he reiterated previous assertions that he had received warnings of death, if he told what he knew about Bilbo.

Then, under questioning, he told of favors done Bilbo by War contractors. He said Bilbo went "all out" to get contracts for Mississippi friends.

Terry said he never heard of any understanding that these contractors were to make any payments to Bilbo but he told of incidents where, he said, the Senator indicated anticipation that the contractors would do favors for him.

Terry's Rakeings

Terry testified that $15,000 was given him by Simon Liberman of Park Ave., New York, to be used in financing a campaign by some Mississippian who could oust Bilbo from the Senate.

He approached Gov. Tom Bailey about becoming a candidate against Bilbo, Terry related, but the governor would not commit himself because of poor health.

When Bailey finally decided against making the race, Terry went on, he approached Speaker Walter Sellers, of the Mississippi House, who also turned it down.

Terry said he held on to the fund with the intention of throwing it against Bilbo in the Mississippi run-off primary, but Bilbo won in the first primary and there was no run-off. So he said he took the money from the bank in cash and returned it to Liberman.

Liberman is now dead, Terry added.

Senator Ferguson, (R), Michigan) tore into Terry and said he had learned Liberman died in January, or five months before Terry withdrew the money from the bank.

Terry protested that "I returned it to where his estate would get it."

G-Men May Probe

Ferguson demanded that he say precisely what he did with it.

"I'm not going to involve other people," Terry replied.

He mumbled that sentence twice more as Ferguson pressed him.

"You refuse to answer the question?" Ferguson demanded.

"I do," Terry replied.

"Your own integrity is at stake," Chairman Mead (D), New York interjected.

Paul Dillon, St. Louis attorney representing Terry, protested that the matter was not pertinent to the investigation.

"Whether Mr. Terry took some money that did not belong to him is irrelevant to this inquiry," he declared. 12-19-46

But Ferguson and Mead insisted that the question must be answered and when Terry remained adamant announced they they would refer to the Justice Department the question of whether there was perjury and to the committee itself the question of contempt proceedings.

An hour after this uproar, Terry was recalled to the stand and given a second chance to reveal to whom he had repaid the money, but refused.

"Have you changed your mind?" Ferguson asked.

Terry then replied to a score of questions prepared in written form by Senator Bilbo's attorney. In these Terry denied any knowledge of "42 files from Senator Bilbo's office which disappeared about the time you (Terry) left."

Dope On The Dope

The story Terry told about narcotics was this The Advertiser

He said he was ill and under treatment by Dr. A. J. Pedesta, Vicksburg, Miss., and Pedesta told him of giving $1,500 to Bilbo for a man in Natchez.

Terry said the Natchez man wanted Bilbo to get him a "prescription" from "Dr. Anslinger of the Narcotics Bureau." When Ferguson questioned the term "prescription," Terry said it might have been a "license."

Terry went on to say that he recalled that Bilbo had him telephone Anslinger to come to the Senator's office and remembered Anslinger's being there.

H. J. Anslinger is head of the Narcotics Bureau of the Treasury Department. Committee members said he would be called as a witness. Forrest Jackson, attorney for Bilbo, asked that Doc-

Bilbo's Benefits

And again, Terry said, Bilbo told him about his plans to construct a lake on his Mississippi farm. He quoted the Senator as saying his friends would do it for him. Montgomery, Ala.

The committee has calculated that the lake job was worth over $9,000 based on the same scale as the charges Morrissey made

Bilbo Cost Him $60,000, Lake Builder Testifies

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16—(UP)—Michael T. Morrissey, Vicksburg, Miss., contractor who made one of Sen. Bilbo's dreams come true when he built him a lake with an island in it, disclosed Monday that his long friendship with the Senator has cost more than $60,000.

Tues. 12-17-46

He told the Senate War Investigating Subcommittee, which is inquiring into charges that Bilbo accepted money and other gifts from favored contractors, that these expenditures resulted from farm partnership losses, services, loans, donations and gifts.

Short and heavy-set and with a booming voice, Morrissey testified that his costs from dealings with the Mississippi Democrat included:

1. A loss of $48,000 from four years of operation of Bilbo's 3,600 acres at Poplarville, Miss., under an arrangement whereby he was to pay the taxes and split the profits, but bear all the losses.

2. A $6,000 loan to Bilbo secured by a mortgage on 1,100 acres of the farm.

3. $3,672 still due from Bilbo and representing the actual cost of building the 22-acre lake and island on Bilbo's property.

4. More than $1,900 for a Cadillac automobile given to Bilbo on Christmas, 1941.

5. Donations totaling $1,300 for construction of the Juniper Ridge Baptist Church and parsonage on Bilbo's land.

Morrissey testified after three other Mississippi contractors—B. L. Knost, F. T. Newton and Frank S. Glenn—added their chapters to the Bilbo story by telling of political donations, personal loans to Bilbo and attempts by his former secretary, Edward P. Terry, to borrow money from one contractor every time he visited the Senator's office.

Terry, who fled from Committee process servers after reporting that the lives of his wife, daughter and self had been threatened by an anonymous telephone caller if he testified against his old boss, will testify Wednesday.

Found late last week "resting" in a Quitman, Miss., hospital, Terry was to have testified Monday but physicians said he was still too nervous to appear on schedule.

Morrissey, Newton, Glenn and Knost were among the contractors who allegedly aided Bilbo because he helped them obtain contracts for Army Construction in Mississippi.

$1,200 in November, 1941, a[illegible] he loaned Bilbo [illegible] was paid back $750 on some fo[illegible] gotten date. He was certain t[illegible] Senator made this payment vo[illegible]untarily.

"I haven't done anything to collect the $450 remaining," he added. "When Sen. Bilbo is able to pay me, he will."

The contractors' testimony followed three lines of questioning—campaign contributions solicited by Bilbo's political group, to aid the runoff primary campaign for former Sen. Wall Doxey, of Mississippi; donations to the Juniper Grove Baptist Church and personal loans made to Bilbo or Terry. The testimony shaped this way:

The Constitution

On campaign contributions:

Knost gave Terry a check for $3,750 on Dec. 7, 1942, "as a campaign contribution" but has reason now to believe that the money had not been used to further Doxey's campaign. Terry, he added, never helped him get a war contract.

(Knost and Morrissey were disclosed earlier to have given $5,000 to Bilbo in June, 1941, for Doxey's use in the first primary.)

Glenn testified that he "never had approved or disapproved" of the $2,500 campaign contribution made by his partner, Newton, to the Doxey campaign. Newton wrote the check without Glenn's knowledge, he said.

On church donations:

Knost gave Bilbo $500 to $60[illegible] for the church, a project which Bilbo described in letters of solicitation as a "dream" which he couldn't finance alone. Glenn said he had given Bilbo $750 in 1942 for the church and "if Sen. Bilbo said this money was used for the church I believe that it was."

Morrissey said that in addition to his $1,300 donation he gave Bilbo $500 collected from friends on the gounds that "Bilbo is having a hell of a time getting his church built."

On loans: Atlanta, Ga.

Newton said he had loaned Bilbo $1,200 late in 1941, which had been paid back at the rate of $10[illegible] a month, although he did not press for payment and didn't intend to. Newton said "Sen: Bilbo wouldn't have this money as a gift."

He added that he was asked for money by Secretary Terry "practically every time I was in Mr. Terry's presence." But he never gave Terry any.

Glenn said Terry never approached him, but Knost disclosed that once he had loaned Terry $2,000 on a note which never has been repaid.

Newton recalled that in 1941 when he came to Washington to get Bilbo's aid in obtaining war contracts, Terry put the bite on him frequently for money.

"He would say to me," Newton said, "'I want some money, but I don't want Sen. Bilbo to know about it.' So I went in and asked Bilbo if it was necessary to give anybody any money and he told me, 'Not a damn cent to anybody.'"

Tues. 12-17-46

Newton was unable to recall how much money Terry wanted or for what purpose, but he did remember that he did not tell Blbo that his secretary was asking.

"How could Bilbo read your mind?" Sen. Ferguson, Republican, Michigan, inquired.

When Morrissey was called he brought with him John A. Bellan, his bookkeeper for 15 years. Identifying himself as an operator of the "Showboat" bar across the river in Louisiana, a farmer, and contractor, he told how he had taken over Bilbo's farm on a four-year partnership in March, 1942, and had lost his shirt on the deal.

His losses were almost $7,000 the first year; thereafter $23,000, $10,000 and $8,000 in the last year.

"When you saw you were losing money after the first year, why didn't you get out of the deal?" Ferguson asked.

"Senator, I made the agreement for four years and I was going to stick with it. Why, I lost $65,000 farming one year, sir."

Morrissey said he received $115,332.38 from the Government for rent on equipment used in building Keesler Air Field at Biloxi. But all of his contracts, war or otherwise, were the result of low bids.

"Did you get any help from Sen. Bilbo on war contracts?" he was asked.

"Sen. Bilbo couldn't help me make out my bids," he replied.

The construction of the lake and island—on which Bilbo has since built his "Dreamhouse No. 2"—resulted from his long friendship with the Senator, Morrissey said. He started the work in May or June, 1941, and finished it in six weeks.

"What did Bilbo want another house on the island for?" Ferguson asked.

"I guess that's just another one of his dreams, Sir," Morrissey replied. "It was a junior dreamhouse."

Questioning brought out that although Morrissey had listed this project on his books as if it were part of the Biloxi works, it was changed later and Bilbo was sent a bill for $3,672.

"What have you done to collect this debt?" Morrissey was asked.

"Nothing," he replied, "because the Senator has had a lot of bad luck. I knew that when he had some money, he'd pay me something."

12-17-46

He said he had given the Bilbo family two Candillacs; that such gifts were customary to Senators from his State because "We don't elect wealthy people in Mississippi."

BILBO PLAYS THE STAR ROLE IN COLORFUL CAPITAL DRAMA

'The Man' Is Cool Under Bitter Attack on His Fitness to Stay in Senate

The Times New York, N.Y. Sun. 12-22-46

By HAROLD B. HINTON

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21—Mississippi's political life was spread before the world in sordid, and sometimes amusing, detail during the Bilbo hearings this week. Although the cast of the drama enlarged as the Senate War Investigating subcommittee called additional witnesses, there was never any doubt that Theodore G. Bilbo was playing the star role.

"The Man," as he is called in his home State, sat through an embarrassing recital of his innermost financial secrets, his troubles with his former wife and the strange collection of political bedfellows he has gathered in his long public career.

Through it all he displayed what different spectators styled as great courage or thick-skinned cynicism, depending on their sympathies. At most of the worst passages he laughed with every appearance of enjoyment, making side remarks to the members of the committee or to friends sitting near him. On only a few occasions did he show evidences of indignation.

It was obvious he had come to the hearing prepared for just the ordeal he encountered. He and his attorney waived all rights and privileges and even encouraged the examination of witnesses they knew would try their hardest to damage him.

Confidence Itself

To appreciate his sang froid, it must be realized that Senator Bilbo considered himself on trial before the State of Mississippi, and not before the United States Senate. He appears to be supremely confident that the Senate will not refuse him a seat for his third term. Doubtless he is relying on the precedent of the Langer case, about ten years ago, in which the Senate Elections Committee ruled that the alleged facts were well known to the North Dakota voters at the time of the election, and that they had chosen the candidate despite them.

Practically everything brought out at the hearing regarding Mr. Bilbo's financial dealings with war contractors and his personal monetary habits was aired in the primary campaign last spring. Former Representative Ross Collins, one of his four rivals for the Democratic nomination, talked them up and down the length of Mississippi.

And yet, when the ballots were counted on the night of July 2, Theodore G. Bilbo had a few thousand votes more than his four opponents combined. For the first time in many years no run-off primary was needed to determine the nominee of the Democratic party of Mississippi for the United States Senate.

With only occasional lapses, Mr. Bilbo has been on the public payroll in one capacity or another, usually elective, for thirty-five years. He has been Governor of Mississippi twice. He has been Lieutenant Governor. He has served in the Legislature. Three times he has been elected to the Senate.

"Man of the People"

On that record, it cannot be said that Mr. Bilbo is ignorant of the kind of election and most of them would be considered a well-educated man anywhere, if he vote for Bilbo.

impression to get around.

not permitted to vote in the Democratic primaries, which are deter-mining, and the more prosperous impression on most casual newspaper readers in the North that he is practically illiterate. Actually, he attended Vanderbilt University and the kind of election and most of them vote for Bilbo.

Mississippi politics is just as devious as recent hearings have made it appear.

In 1933 Mr. Bilbo was in one of his transient political eclipses. The late Senator Pat Harrison heard, in Washington, that "the Man" was considering running for the Senate in 1934. He did not like it at the idea. Hastily Mr. Harrison got a Washington job for Mr. Bilbo in order to get him out of the State during the critical pre-primary maneuvering days. The job had something to do with sampling newspaper opinion for the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. In other words, he clipped newspapers, and one of his enemies in Mississippi dubbed him the "Pastemaker General."

His Press Conferences

Within a short time, however, Mr. Bilbo was holding press conferences, and Mr. Harrison decided Washington was not far enough from Mississippi. He got the offer of a post as sugar inspector in the Philippines, called Mr. Bilbo to his office and urged him to accept it in the interest of the public service. Mr. Bilbo said he would think over. Bare Bilbo Held Tight To 'Gift' for Church

Daily Worker

New York, N. Y. Wed. 12-18-46

By Fred Vast

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—Witnesses told a Senate War Investigating Subcommittee today Sen. Bilbo maintained exclusive control over the $27,500 collected for his church and that only $1,285 is still in the bank. In addition, the committee learned, Bilbo has refused to yield title to the elaborate church parsonage until he decides it is completed or he dies.

As the Senate group delved further into Bilbo's slush fund in the 1942 election, it learned hundreds of thousands of dollars could be spent by private groups without reporting to the State of Mississippi. Official campaign committees can spend up to $64,000 in one election, according to interpretations of the State law.

Practically no work has been done on the parsonage since Rev. Wade Smith became pastor of the Juniper Grove Baptist Church in 1944, the minister testified. He said his 2½-story home has eight bedrooms and five bathrooms and is far too expensive for a congregation of 560 persons. Church members pay him $2,600 a year.

Rev. Smith said he had built his own home in four months last year but only five weeks' work was done on the parsonage since he became pastor. He said he could not move into the parsonage because the house still needs plumbing.

BILBO REFUSED

Church members have offered to complete the building and furnish it but Bilbo has refused to let them do it, the pastor revealed.

A bank president and a loan association official testified Bilbo still owes their organizations $8,800 and $10,000 respectively on loans totaling $9,600 and $15,500.

Pres. Robert Newton of the Poplarville Bank of Commerce said his bank must pay $2,000 a year on the "uncollectable" loans, for which he had never asked collateral. Newton said he had never repaid for the $750 he advanced for paying the $3,000 note of Abe L. Shushan, New Orleans henchman of the late Huey Long. Shushan testified yesterday he loaned the money to Bilbo for the senator's alimony payments, which reportedly came to $21,000. Newton said he advanced the money to protect Bilbo's name in the 1940 election campaign.

Another heavy donor was Forrest Jackson, Bilbo's attorney, who gave $1,500 towards payment of the Shushan note to Edward Terry, Bilbo's former secretary. Jackson said he had also given Terry $1,100 to help defray expenses in the 1940 campaign. In addition he paid for Bilbo's "small items" ($40, $90, $400 etc.) over the years.

Jackson admitted he had been paid a $1,500 fee by the Volz Construction Co., war contractors, on the key airfield job, and another $440 for insurance fees. His law firm also got $1,200 in fees on other contractors' insurance.

Out of this money, he admitted, Bilbo's bills were paid. He said he had made contributions to the Senator's church.

In testimony on the 1942 election, in which Bilbo's formal committee spent thousands of dollars, Jackson said a candidate could spend as much as $64,000 under the Mississippi corrupt practices act.

He agreed with Sen. Homer Ferguson (R-Mich) hundreds of thousands of dollars could be spent by informal groups, such as Bilbo's without reporting to the state.

"That means the people can't find out how much has been spent in an election except through a congressional hearing?" Ferguson observed.

Jackson's claim that Terry was trying to avoid an appearance at the hearing by the excuse of death threats and incriminating evidence was refuted today by J. Marvin Quin, vice-president of the Jackson State National Bank, Quin told Ferguson and Sen. James Mead (D-NY) Terry made no such statement to him two weeks ago as alleged by Jackson at Thursday's session.

Terry, who has supplied the subcommittee detailed evidence on Bilbo's activity, told Quin he would not appear at this hearing because his life was threatened. He did not say it was an excuse or that his testimony would be incriminating, Quin said. 12-18-46

Quin showed records of Terry's bank accounts.

Terry, who left Mississippi today, is expected to testify tomorrow.

Cites Attack In Bilbo Vote Quiz

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga. Wed.

JACKSON, Miss., Dec. 3—(UP) A parade of Negro witnesses told a Senate Investigating Committee Tuesday that violence and intimidation accompanied the renomination of Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo, Democrat, Mississippi, last Summer.

The main witness was Richard E. Daniel, Gulfport, Miss., who showed the Committee a bloody cotton shirt and trousers. He said he wore those clothes when he tried to vote in the July primary and they were spattered with his blood when he was attacked by a Gulfport policeman.

Daniel accused a policeman named Williams of beating him and placing him in the Harrison County jail after he left a polling place. He had attempted unsuccessfully, he said, to vote.

Daniel charged he was knocked unconscious and held in jail until his family obtained a lawyer who arranged his release. Then he was charged with drunkenness and disorderly conduct and fined $10. He told the Committee he has an appeal pending because he contended he had been neither intoxicated nor disorderly.

Daniel, neatly dressed Tuesday, unfolded and displayed the blood-stained clothes at the request of Sen. Styles Bridges, Republican, New Hampshire. The Committee decided it would request the testimony of all principals named by the witness.

The Committee, headed by Sen. Allen J. Ellender, Democrat, Louisiana, kept witnesses moving speedily before it Tuesday and hoped to wind up the hearing on Thursday. On that day Bilbo, who has sat quietly in the Federal Courtroom for two days, is expected to defend himself against charges that his white supremacy speeches during the Primary campaign incited violence and prevented Negroes from voting.

However, the Committee was petitioned by a group of Negro leaders to broaden the scope and subpoena more witnesses.

Counsel for the National Association for Advancement of Colored People and the Civil Rights Congress joined with the President of the Mississippi State Progressive Voters League in a telegram to Ellender.

They asked for subpoena of all persons who signed the original complaint and who haven't testified voluntarily, and for the testimony of a group of Southern newspapermen. The Constitution

Bilbo's Ex-Aide Kept 'Mystery' Bank Account

Former Secretary Expected to Testify Today About Special Joint Fund Revealed By Banker

By HAROLD B. HINTON.

Special to The New York Times and The Courier-Journal.

Washington, Dec. 17. — A Mississippi banker told a Senate war-investigating subcommittee today of a mysterious special bank account carried by Edward P. Terry, former secretary to Senator Theodore G. Bilbo (D., Miss.).

Terry is expected to testify about it tomorrow and give details regarding his regular personal account.

The banker, J. M. Quinn, vice-president of the Jackson State National Bank, Jackson, Miss., testified that Terry opened a special account at his bank in 1937 with a deposit of $572.99. On April 8, 1940, after Terry had become Bilbo's secretary, he wrote Quinn that the funds in that account belonged to Bilbo, and authorized the senator to draw against them, according to testimony.

Largest Deposit Was $1,240.

The bank's records, which Quinn produced, showed that the account was closed and reopened several times between 1937 and 1944 and that only relatively small deposits had been made in it. The largest he mentioned was one of $1,240 on March 26, 1940.

Forrest B. Jackson, Bilbo's attorney, testified that Bilbo knew nothing about this account until about two weeks ago. Quinn said that to his knowledge the senator never had made any deposits in the account nor drawn any checks against it.

Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) then turned his attention to Terry's regular personal account at the samee bank. Jackson had testified earlier, as other witnesses had, that Terry had obtained money from him from time to time, perhaps as much as $3,000, for various purposes.

Tells of Paying Off Notes.

On one occasion, he said, his partner, D. Will Young, gave Terry $1,100 toward expenses of $1,800 Terry claimed to have incurred during Bilbo's 1940 campaign.

Jackson himself reimbursed Terry, he testified, an amount of $750 which Terry subscribed toward the $3,000 needed to pay off the note held against Bilbo by Abraham L. Shushan, wholesale-drygoods merchant of New Orleans. Jackson added that he might have given another $1,000 or more to the secretary at various times.

Turning to Quinn, Ferguson wanted to know how Terry's own bank account was faring during these periods of alleged financial stringency. The banker read sample balances from his records, the largest of which was $22,532.18 on September 8, 1945, about four months before Terry left Bilbo's employ.

Immunity Rights Waived.

When Jackson took the witness stand Ferguson asked him if he was prepared to waive all privilege in regard to questions that might concern his relationship as an attorney with Bilbo. Jackson said he was willing, but could not waive immunity for Bilbo.

Ferguson asked Bilbo the same question and Bilbo waived any rights he might have for Jackson to withhold testimony.

Ferguson asked why the "informal committee," consisting of Bilbo, Jackson, and Robert Gandy, had not declared its expenditure on behalf of Wall Doxey during the senatorial campaign of 1942. Jackson said the Mississippi Corrupt Practices Act only required "formal" campaign committees to file statements of expenditures.

Tells of Farm Mortgages.

"What good is a law like that?" Ferguson asked.

"It's no good," Jackson replied. "Just like the Hatch Act."

Jackson repeated much of his earlier testimony in regard to the deal, after the first primary in 1942, by which the "informal committee" tried to obtain support for Doxey—in the runoff—of the organization which unsuccessfully had backed former Representative Ross Collins.

Jackson removed any intimation his previous testimony might have carried that Collins himself asked for or obtained any of the $11,000 that subsequently was paid to Cecil Travis, a friend and supporter of Collins.

For the rest of the day the testimony centered around Bilbo's finances in Poplarville, where he lives, and Juniper Grove District Church, of which he is sponsor and patron. Herbert H. McLeod, a representative of the Federal Land Bank System, said the senator had carried mortgages since 1935 totaling $15,000 on two different farms and that the amount had now been reduced to about $10,000.

Many Contributed to Fund.

Robert M. Newton, president of the Bank of Commerce of Poplarville—no relation to F. T. Newton, the Hattiesburg contractor who contributed $25,000 to Bilbo for the 1942 Doxey campaign—said his bank held mortgages from Bilbo, reduced to about $8,800 from $9,500. He said State bank examiners were requiring the bank to write them off at the rate of $1,000 a year because of the slow reduction.

Newton was one of the four men who made up the $3,000 to pay the Shusman note in 1940. Newton described himself as an old friend of Bilbo. Ferguson asked how long Bilbo had been indebted to the bank.

"He isn't old enough to know," Bilbo said in an audible aside, pointing to Newton, a man of middle age.

Newton testified that the special account for the church, on which Bilbo alone can draw, has amounted to as much as $28,000 and now contains about $1,200. Most of Bilbo's friends have testified to contributing to this church fund, one contractor having given $3,500.

Bilbo Owns Parsonage Land.

The Rev. D. Wade Smith, former Army chaplain and now pastor of the church, told the subcommittee he hoped to move into the parsonage January 1. He said Bilbo told him, some two months before he was called to the pastorate in October, 1944, that he intended to build the finest and largest Baptist parsonage in the South.

The building, when completed, will contain eight bedrooms and five baths, Mr. Smith said. He conceded that this much room would not be needed by himself, his wife, and one daughter. Another daughter returns home from college for occasional visits. However, he said the congregation would insist that he move in as soon as it is finished.

The subcommittee's interest in the parsonage springs from the fact that the land on which it stands belongs to Bilbo. The senator brought in today the copy of a deed conveying the land to the church, but Jackson explained that the instrument was only deposited with the chancery clerk of Pearl River County in escrow by verbal arrangement to protect the church against creditors' seizing the property in the event of Bilbo's death.

Tempers Earlier Statements.

On completion of the parsonage, Jackson said, Bilbo intends to record the deed so that title will be vested legally in the congregation.

Mr. Smith tempered somewhat today the derogatory statements he is alleged to have made to an investigator for the subcommittee and another for the Bureau of Internal Revenue. They reported he complained that the parsonage was too large to be maintained by a preacher on a salary of $2,600 a year.

They also reported he said he was forced to build a house for himself, on going to Poplarville to live, because Bilbo would not permit the parsonage to be finished. Today he said he had built his own house because he always had wanted to have a home. He said he had used his veteran's priorities to get materials.

Flash Scares Witness; 'Thought It Was Collins'

The Courier-Journal

Washington, Dec. 17 (AP)—Banker J. M. Quinn drew a big laugh today at the Bilbo inquiry.

Quinn jumped from his chair in surprise when a photographer exploded a flash bulb near his face.

"I though it was Ross Collins," Quinn exclaimed.

He referred to former Representative Collins of Mississippi, who knocked witness Robert Gandy out of his chair at the hearing last week.

One Admits Giving Legislator 2 Cadillacs and Digging Lake; Unpaid Loans Are Disclosed

The Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.
Tues. 12-17-46

From Wire Dispatches.

Washington, Dec. 16.—War-contractor friends of Senator Theodore G. Bilbo told today of giving him a Cadillac, painting his "dream house," digging a lake for him, and engaging in business deals with him to the tune of some $68,000 out of their pockets.

This was aside from $30,000 to $40,000 in cash which they said they turned over to the Mississippi Democrat or his associates for use in an unsuccessful campaign to elect Bilbo's friend, Wall Doxey, to the Senate.

Some Still Carry Debts.

All these men were engaged, at or about the time of the gifts, in work on profitable war contracts in Mississippi. But they insisted to the Senate War-Investigating Committee that they had had an income-tax case pending against them.

Bilbo got in 1938 from Abe Shusman, New Orleans wholesale merchant. At the time the Bilbo loan was made, the Government had about $40,000.

Shusman said he drove from New Orleans to Pearl River, Miss., and paid the $3,000 in cash to Bilbo, who needed it, as he was having some trouble with his wife.

Shusman, once a powerful lieutenant of the late Huey P. Long, testified, "I paid the whole thing."

The wholesale merchant said he lent the $3,000 to Bilbo as a favor to Grant Stewart, New Hebron, Miss., one of his customers. Stewart indorsed Bilbo note.

Government Shusman said he drove from Pearl River, Miss., and paid the $3,000 in cash to Bilbo, who needed it, as he was having some trouble with his wife."

These were the contractors who testified of dealing with Bilbo:

Tues. 12-17-46

1. John R. Junkin, Natchez, Miss., who said Bilbo still owed him $1,194.70 for concrete work on a swimming pool at Bilbo's "dream house," despite a bookkeeping transaction which resulted in Bilbo's getting a receipted bill. Junkin had about $500,000 in contracts for work at Keesler Army Airfield, Biloxi

Bilbo Called.

Counsel Says Bilbo Called.

J. P. Winchell, chief counsel for the Bureau of Internal Revenue, testified that Bilbo called him "four or five times", about the Shushan case. He said the claim Bilbo suggested a settlement for about $80,000 and that Bilbo was not "the leaking roof of Shushan related.

Winchell said. Mrs. Shushan, for about $120,000.

Winchell said.

Miss.

2. M. T. Reed, Belzoni, Miss., who said he painted Bilbo's "dream house" at a cost of $1,790.79, never paid; gave Bilbo $3,500 toward construction of the Juniper Grove Baptist Church adjoining Bilbo's "dream house," and paid off a $517.92 note signed by Edward P. Terry, Bilbo's former secretary. Robert Gandy has testified that the note, on which he was cosigner, was to pay for furniture for the "dream house."

Had Contracts In Millions.

Reed said he had contracts at Greenville, Miss., amounting to five or to six million dollars; a $3,400,000 contract at Jackson, Miss.; about $5,000,000 worth at Camp Campbell, Miss., and about $25,000,000 at a Gulf Coast air base. The Courier-Journal

3. Michael T. Morrissey, Vicksburg, Miss., who gave Bilbo the automobile and dug the lake. Morrissey said he took a loss of $48,000 while operating Bilbo's farm. He was renting equipment to the Government for use in construction of Keesler Field and received $115,302.38.

4. B. L. Knost, F. T. Newton, and Frank S. Glenn—all Mississippi contractors—added their chapters to the Bilbo story by telling of political donations and personal loans to Bilbo.

Bilbo Is Unemotional.

Bilbo, sitting near one end of the committee table, listened to the parade of witnesses without show of emotion, but frequently whispered suggestions to his attorney, Forrest B. Jackson.

As the contractors told it, the things they did for Bilbo were usually at their own suggestion.

Reed said he was riding by the "dream house" and noticed it looked shabby.

So he asked Bilbo, "Senator, why don't you paint your house?"

Bilbo replied that he couldn't afford it.

"So I said, 'Senator, I'll send down and have it painted for you." Louisville, Ky.

Morrissey found Bilbo, with a man and two boys, clearing land and preparing to dig the lake. So he told him, he said, that he had surplus power machinery from an Army project and that it was not in use, and so took on the job for Bilbo. Tues. 12-17-46

Lake Covered 25 Acres.

The completed lake was about 25 acres, with an island in the middle where Bilbo has built a house. Sometimes the witnesses called this dwelling "Dream House No. 2" and sometimes "Dream House, Junior."

Morrissey declared Bilbo could not have helped him get war contracts if he had tried.

"I have never been on a Government contract at any time since 1929 that I didn't bid under competitive bids," he declared.

From still other contractors the committee has heard accounts of some $30,000 to $40,000 being turned over to Bilbo or associates as contributions to Doxey's 1942 campaign.

Just what became of this money is a question still unanswered. The committee hopes to learn from Edward P. Terry, former secretary of Bilbo, when he testifies Wednesday.

Lake Cost $3,672.90.

No Bilbo associates figured in Morrissey's story of "The Man" Bilbo and $61,000. Those were matters strictly between him and the senator.

Here is Morrissey's account of where and how the money went:

1. He lost $48,000 operating Bilbo's 3,600-acre farm for four years, beginning in March, 1942, under an oral agreement whereby he was to pay the taxes and stand the losses, if any, and Bilbo was to get half the profits, if any.

2. He spent $3,672.90 constructing the lake on Bilbo's farm. A bill for this amount, sent to Bilbo, never has been paid. The lake work began in May, 1941, a month before the Keesler Field contract was let. Morrissey acknowledged, in reply to questions from George Meader, committee counsel, that the lake cost would have been $9,172.90 if machinery rent had been charged against the project at the same rate the Government paid at Keesler Field.

Holds Bilbo's Mortgage.

3. He lent Bilbo $6,055 and holds a mortgage on 1,100 acres of Bilbo's land.

4. He gave Bilbo a Cadillac costing $1,919 as a Christmas present in 1941.

5. He gave Bilbo $1,800 in various contributions for the church Bilbo was constructing.

Associated Press Wirephoto.

B. L. Knost of Meridian, Miss., tells Senate War Investigating Committee that he did not know until now what became of his contribution to the Democratic campaign fund. He was first witness yesterday in probe of relations of Senator Bilbo with war contractors.

Some of this money dated back as far as 1928. Some of it came from friends who gave it to Morrissey when he told them, "The senator is having a hell of a time building his church."

A heavy-set man in well-tailored tweeds, Morrissey said he and Bilbo were old friends.

On the farm operations, the income-tax men have allowed all the claimed losses, he said.

Profited On Terracing.

He testified that the only permanent improvements he made during the process of losing $48,000 was 47 miles of terracing. And he said there was actually a profit out of this because the Government farm-benefit payments for the terracing work were greater than the cost. Morrissey's secretary said the cost of the lake work at first was charged against the account of the work the Morrissey organization was doing at Keesler Field. But he insisted that was just a "temporary entry," made because Morrissey was away, and the secretary did not know how it should be charged. Before the books were closed for the year, the secretary said, the charges were transferred to a Bilbo account and credits given the Keesler work.

Tells of 2 Gift Cadillacs.

Morrissey was asked by a committee member what he had done to collect the debt Bilbo owes him.

"Nothing," he replied, "because the senator has had a lot of hard luck. I knew that when he had some money he'd pay me something."

He said he had given the Bilbo family two Cadillacs, in fact. He said such gifts were customary to senators from his state because "We don't elect wealthy people in Mississippi."

Bilbo and Company

NASHVILLE.

The Senate Campaign Investigating Committee sitting at Jackson, Miss., now has seen the bloody shirt itself. It has heard from citizen after citizen how he was dissuaded from voting in the State's July primary by violence—of deed or threat. The charge is that this violence was fostered by Sen. Theo G. Bilbo's mad-dog racial slavering during the campaign. The charge is, of course, quite true.

Perry

But apart from the marvel of the courage of the Negro witnesses, the hearing will not produce much else for admiration. Sen. Bilbo may be hooked by other charges he soon must face before the Senate War Investigating Committee, but at Jackson he will not be seriously snagged.

Frankly, the only substantial profit democracy can hope for out of the Jackson hearing is the reaffirmation—in the simple fact that the hearing is being held—of the proper national concern in primary elections. Because of this hearing in Mississippi, South Carolina and Georgia will find it a little harder to get away with the mass electoral discrimination projected in the elimination of their primary laws.

The only proof that could be offered at Jackson that the Committee could not get around would be an admission by policemen and deputies that Bilbo's inflammatory utterances moved them to beat up would-be voters, or for others to testify that the Senator conspired with them to stage election-day terrors. This can not be expected.

When Bilbo himself faces the Committee's representatives, his colleagues—Sens. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire and Allen Ellender of Louisiana—he will not feel it necessary to be evasive. He will declaim that Mississippi always has been "white man's country (and I'm for white supremacy") and stand on his rights of free speech. He can say truly that he has said nothing in Mississippi he would not (and has not) said on the floor of the U. S. Senate without chastisement.

He'll say as he has said before: "I've done nothing wrong." And even if he concedes that his advice to his supporters to "see the niggers" the night before election kept some from the polls, he can insist that he didn't invent disfranchisement. He can point out that there are many modes of disfranchisement, and that a citizen prevented from voting by any other device than a stick or a gun is just as much deprived of his "American rights." He can ask his colleagues if they noted that very few of Mississippi's white citizens voted either. And he is just mean enough to ask them why.

The truth is that both Bridges and Ellender voted with Bilbo last Summer in the Senate cloture test that sealed off Federal legislation that was the only chance for the

Bilbo Should Be Heaved Out

THEODORE BILBO gets in deeper and deeper, the more testimony is heard concerning his fitness, if any, to sit in the Senate. The latest item relates to his alleged collection of $1,500 from a 66-year-old drug addict for whom he secured an ordinary narcotics permit at no cost to himself. It is claimed that the Senator took the man's life savings.

Admittedly there is contradictory testimony as to what BILBO got from this poor unfortunate citizen of Natchez. A Vicksburg physician testified before the Senate's War Investigating Subcommittee that he personally delivered 10 bills of $100 each to BILBO for the drug addict in the Walthall Hotel in Jackson during the Summer of 1945. EDWARD P. TERRY, BILBO's former secretary, said the amount BILBO got was $1,500. BILBO says if he got anything, it went to the Juniper Grove Baptist Church. No such donation could be found in the church records.

But whatever the truth concerning this particular episode, enough had been brought out already to convince any unbiased observer that this clown from the Mississippi cane-brakes is utterly without qualification to sit in the United States Senate. Any man who admits accepting as many favors from war contractors as he does automatically disqualifies himself. Times-Dispatch

He admits, for example, that one contractor paid him $25,000, but adds that he "did not get a damn cent." We are assured that this money all went to pay for the senatorial campaign of WALL DOXEY in 1942, although DOXEY, now door-keeper of the Senate, says he never heard of it until after the election. No proof is offered by BILBO in support of this allegation. He also admits that he received $5,000 from another contractor for a similar purpose. Richmond, Va.

BILBO concedes that he got $6,000 as a loan from still another contractor, as well as a 15-acre "dream lake"—in the middle of which is a "dream house"—and a Cadillac automobile. He hasn't paid back the loan, nor has he paid anything for the lake, and he accepted the automobile as a "gift," in accordance with what he termed "an old Southern custom." Sat. 12-21-46

On top of all this, BILBO had some curious dealings with the notorious ABE SHUSHAN, an ex-convict who was one of the band of light-fingered gentry with whom the late HUEY LONG surrounded himself. SHUSHAN got 30 months on Federal mail fraud charges for some shady business during the LONG administration. But BILBO borrowed $3,000 from him, and then tried to help him out of some income-tax difficulties with the Federal government. This loan was repaid to SHUSHAN, but not by BILBO.

The Juniper Grove Baptist Church, another edifice dreamed up by this notable dreamer, has been a long-time repository of funds donated to him—he says. But there are no records of receipts and disbursements which go back beyond 1943, so a great act of faith is required of those who accept "The Man's" statements on the point.

Finally, there is Section 61 M-1, Title 18, United States Code, which prohibits government contractors from making contributions to any political party or candidate, or to any person for political purposes, and prohibits any candidate from soliciting such contributions from a government contractor, at a time when the contractor is negotiating for a contract or engaged in performing a contract. Sat. 12-21-46

BILBO was visibly shaken when SENATOR FERGUSON, of Michigan, pointed to this 1940 statute, containing a penalty for violators of $5,000 fine, five years' imprisonment, or both. He contended that he was unaware of this statute, but SENATOR FERGUSON pointed out that he (BILBO) had voted against it when it was passed. The solon from Mississippi then contended that the law did not cover his case.

It is impossible at this distance to pass judgment on a legal question, such as this, or to appraise the week-long testimony concerning BILBO in all its aspects. But certainly the Senate will have a great deal to answer for if it takes the position that a Senator is justified in accepting admitted gifts and loans from war contractors; in getting a loan from a convicted crook, whom he later helped with income-tax difficulties, and in so mingling his private finances with his public duties that no one can tell where one ends and the other begins.

BILBO had disqualified himself already for the Senate with his well-nigh unprecedented displays of bigotry against members of several different racial or religious groups, but the more recent revelations concerning the long series of malodorous monetary transactions in which he has engaged are such as to damn him in the eyes of all good citizens. He should be heaved out of the Senate, and that without delay.

Separate Bilbo Issues

12-16-46

In the investigation of the right of Theodore Bilbo to a seat in the United States senate two questions, or issues, separate and unrelated, are under consideration.

One is whether he caused persons to be deprived of the voting privilege in Mississippi. The News and Courier believes that the charge against him is empty. Had 100,000 or 10,000 negroes in Mississippi really wished to vote in the general election they would have made the effort, nothing could have stopped them, and the time has long passed since civil war would have broken out in Mississippi on that account. The News and Courier

The other question is whether or not Mr. Bilbo has been improperly receiving money and countenancing its use to assist in his political campaigns. That question is more serious. The News and Courier insists that no partiality be shown him by the investigators or the senate and it wishes him a good deliverance. Charleston, S. C. Mon.

Dope Story Told

Red And Negro Groups Trying To Blacken Him, He Says, Shaking Fist

By WILLIAM T. PEAKCOCK

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—(AP)—A story of ten $100 bills sent to Senator Theodore G. Bilbo by a man wanting his help in getting narcotics was related to Senate investigators tonight and brought an immediate denial from the Mississippo Senator.

Bilbo also branded as "lies" or "hallucinations" the charges that he profited from relations with war contractors. These charges led to the inquiry by the Senate War Investigating Committee.

The matter of the narcotics came out piecemeal from four separate witnesses whose testimony conflicted at points. They were:

Edward Terry, Bilbo's former secretary. He said that Dr. A. J. Podesta, Vicksburg, Miss., told him he gave Bilbo $1,500 for a Natchez, Miss., man who wanted a permit for daily doses of narcotics.

Dr. Harry J. Anslinger, Federal Commissioner of Narcotics. He testified Bilbo called him to his office on Oct. 11, 1945, about a letter from Podesta with accompanying certificates that a Harry Carr of Natchez required a regular supply of drugs.

Holt Testifies

Harry Holt, Special Agent for the Treasury. He testified that Terry had informed the Treasury of the alleged payments and he (Holt) had investigated. He said that on April 30, 1946, he interviewed Podesta at Vicksburg.

Podesta told him, Holt related, that re sent the certificate to Bilbo and that Anslinger's office later approved narcotics for Carr, who was described as a sufferer from asthma and other ailments and as a long-time user of narcotics. Holt quoted Podesta as saying that still later Carr told him he wanted to "do something" for Bilbo, so the physician suggested a contribution for Bilbo's Juniper Grove Baptist Church project. Fri. 12-20-46

Podesta's story, as related by Holt, went on:

Carr gave him some money — it was his recollection it was $1,000—and it was turned over to Bilbo in a Jackson, Miss., hotel.

Holt said that the next day he interviewed in Natchez a man whom he called John Carr and got this account:

Paid Podesta

He had sought the narcotics permit through Podesta and Bilbo and in December, 1945, made a payment to Podesta. He was uncertain whether it was $1,500 or $1,000. Podesta told him he had to make the payment. Something was said about a church but "the contribution was made to Bilbo personally so far as he was converned and was in payment for services."

The $1,500 was all the money Carr had accumulated during his lifetime.

Bilbo, brought back to the stand, testified that Anslinger did come to his office where "I merely gave him" Podesta's letter. But he declared he did not know Carr and never received any money from him.

"Did Dr. Podesta give you any money?" Senator Ferguson (R), Michigan, pressed him.

"No, sir."

"How much did Podesta give you for the church?"

"I don't remember."

"Did he give you ten $100 bills?"

"Not that I remember."

Bilbo finally said Podesta might have given him money for the church at some time, but absolutely had not given him anything in connection with the narcotics matter.

In the midst of this examination, Terry, who was standing to the side of the committee room, staggered a few feet and collapsed in a chair. He left the room.

Ferguson demanded that Bilbo produce all records he has of church gifts. The Mississippi Senator said the committee could have them and all his personal files if they wanted them.

"I haven't anything to hide," Bilbo declared.

Bilbo, 69-year-old Mississippi Democrat, had been testifying for two and one-half hours, wisecracking and obviously feeling himself in control of the situation when Anslinger was suddenly put on the stand.

The Senator took the stand with a 42-page prepared statement in which he termed the narcotics matter, first mentioned yesterday by Terry, "a lie out of the whole cloth." The Advertiser

The narcotics story was first mentioned yesterday by Terry Bilbo's ex-secretary, who spoke of a sum of $1,500 said to have changed hands. Montgomery, Ala.

Denying all, Bilbo denounced his former aide. Fri. 12-20-46

"Christ had his Judas, Iscariot; Caesar had his Brutus; George Washington had his Benedict Arnold, but I claim to have had the greatest traitor of them all in my trusted secretary," he said.

Bilbo is primarily being investigated on allegations that he accepted money and other gifts from contractors whom he helped to get rich war contracts from the Government.

He denied today that he sought gifts or funds except possibly when he needed to borrow to settle alimony matters. He called it "an old Southern custom" to give presents to public servants.

Bilbo said of Negro and Communist-dominated groups who oppose his philosophy they want Bilbo destroyed and unseated because of my convictions and ideologies which are opposed to the great objectives of the all-out Negro groups and Communist groups in America," he argued.

Shaking his fist, Bilbo told his colleagues the "absurd charges" against him came from "irresponsible" persons and were fostered by groups which dislike his racial ideas.

He spoke of "my Sainted father," recalled his own religious training, and termed "particularly reprehensible" the "insinuations" that he had turned to his own use part of some $28,000 collected from friends—some of them war contractors—for the Juniper Grove Baptist Church.

Ferguson tried to pin down Bilbo to acknowledge that he telephoned from Washington and suggested names of war contractors who should attend a "pep meeting" to raise funds for the Doxey campaign.

"I don't remember," Bilbo replied. "I guess I did. There was nothing wrong about it."

Bilbo said it would be a "natural thing" to call his former campaign manager, A. B. Friend, and tell him to "blow the bugle and bring the boys in from the hills." 12-20-46

"Yes, and shake the bushes," Ferguson put in.

"I said I do not remember," Bilbo continued. "I did not give names."

"You did not say bring in the war contractors?" Ferguson asked, but Bilbo ignored this.

Ferguson wanted to know what was the most Bilbo ever lost in any one year in operating his farms.

"I would not remember that," Bilbo replied.

Ferguson suggested Bilbo check his income tax returns.

"I don't keep copies," Bilbo replied. "I'm afraid to."

"Why?" Ferguson asked.

"I hate to see the losses," Bilbo replied as the crowd laughed.

Bilbo said it was true that he had sought war contracts for Mississippi contractors.

But he contended it was his duty to look after his constituents and declared that what he had done was "no more than has been done by practically every member of the House of Representatives."

As for the Cadillac automobile He said he got one and his wife got one when he was elected Governor of Mississippi for the second time.

"It is just an old southern custom to politicians in Mississippi.

tom," he explained and the crowd packing the hearing room roared.

He called Collins "the most thoroughly, completely and everlastingly condemned, damned and repudiated man in the history" of Mississippi.

As for Terry, he said "I sometimes think that he has a mental illness of imaginary grandeur and impossible hallucinations."

In contending that the charges had been pressed and supported by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and by "Communist party members," Bilbo said: 12-20-46

"They know that I am not guilty of any acts involving moral turpitude. They know I have kept the record straight but they would unseat me because of my views and convictions on racial issues, all because I have been rather active and militant in insisting upon my convictions."

Chairman Mead (D), New York, told him the question of his ideologies was outside the committee's jurisdiction.

Senate Committee Attorneys Ask for Authority to Charge E. P. Terry With Contempt

Sun. 12-22-46

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21 (AP)—Attorneys for the Senate War Investigating Committee said today that they had asked for authority to file contempt charges against Edward P. Terry, former secretary of Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, Democrat, of Mississippi.

The action is based on Mr. Terry's refusal to tell the committee what became of $15,000 which he said a New Yorker gave him to use against Mr. Bilbo in the Mississippi election this year.

Committee counsel must obtain permission of President Pro Tem Kenneth McKellar, Democrat, of Tennessee, and then pass the contempt complaint along to the Federal District Attorney here for presentation to a grand jury.

Penalties for contempt of the Senate range up to a year in jail and $1,000 fine.

Senator James M. Mead, committee chairman, directed George Meader, counsel for the committee, also to push a perjury charge against Mr. Terry.

Mr. Terry testified that he got the $15,000 from Simon Liberman of New York to back any opponent who could defeat Mr. Bilbo this year.

Unable to find such an opponent, Mr. Terry said, he then was told to give the funds to anyone who opposed Mr. Bilbo in the runoff primary. But Mr. Bilbo mustered a majority over his four opponents in the first primary and there was no run-off. So, Mr. Terry said, he handed the cash back to Mr. Liberman.

Senator Homer Ferguson, Republican, of Michigan, declared this was impossible because Mr. Liberman died several months before Mr. Terry's bank accounts showed the money repaid. Mr. Terry said he was "confused" and declined to tell who received the funds.

Further Testimony Urged

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21 (U.P.)—Senator Ferguson renewed tonight his demand for further Senate testimony on a charge that a narcotics addict bought favors from Senator Bilbo.

The former Michigan judge said a Senate war investigating subcommittee which has been scrutinizing Mr. Bilbo's finances should not make its report due Dec. 30, until it has questioned Dr. A. J. Podesta of Vicksburg, Miss., and John R. Carr of Natchez, Miss.

"I am insisting that they be called," he told reporters.

A subcommittee agent is now in Mississippi re-checking with Dr. Podesta the story he is said to have told other investigators about the alleged narcotics deal.

Meanwhile, the Senate Republican steering committee headed by Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, planned to ask Mr. Ferguson for a special report on whether Bilbo should be ousted from the Senate. There was little doubt that Mr. Ferguson, a member of the investigating committee, would recommend ouster. 12-22-46

Mississippians Ready To See Senate Group Take Bilbo Testimony

News-Age-Herald
Birmingham, Ala.
Sun. 12-1-46

JACKSON, Miss., Nov. 30—(AP)—A small group of witnesses and a large conglomeration of spectators are expected to gather in the federal court room here Monday when the Senate campaign investigating committee looks into the political tactics of Sen. Theo G. Bilbo in last Summer's Democratic Primary.

"The man" is expected to be the leading man in what many Mississippians predict will be the biggest show in the state since the days when Bilbo was impeached in the State Legislature on a bribery charge, was tried by the Senate and won an acquittal by one vote.

For the committee, despite numerous pleas to the citizenry, has been able to find fewer than 25 voluntary witnesses.

RILEY W. SHANKS, general counsel for the committee, has urged all Mississippians to come forward and testify if they have any information to substantiate or refute charges that Bilbo's campaign speeches intimidated would-be voters.

But despite this plea and promises of committee protection from reprisals, the committee has encountered "a lack of cooperation" which Shanks termed "surprising and disappointing."

The Progressive Voters League, through its president, T. B. Wilson, Jackson Negro realtor, has asked the committee to use its power of subpoena to force witnesses to testify. But to date the committee has indicated an unwillingness to follow this procedure unless it is proven necessary.

FROM OUTSIDE THE STATE, Negro groups have asked Gov. Fielding Wright to call out the State Guard to protect Negroes who wish to appear against Bilbo. Wright replied that "Negroes have been testifying against white men in Mississippi for 50 years to my personal knowledge and I see no reason for them to be fearful now."

Meanwhile "the man" has quietly gone his way, visiting friends over the state, and gathering pecans on his farm near his Poplarville "dream house," apparently unperturbed by the investigation.

He has told newsmen he plans to attend the hearings but has not indicated whether he will present any witnesses.

THE SENATE COMMITTEE decided some weeks ago to hold hearings here after it received a petition, signed by about 50 Mississippians, most of them Negroes, that voters were intimidated during the campaign preceding the July 2 Democratic Primary in which Bilbo defeated four opponents.

But, Sen. Allen Ellender, (D., La.) chairman of the committee has said the hearings "do not constitute a trial of anyone" and are being held solely to let the committee know "what has been going on down here."

Other accusations against Bilbo to the effect that he accepted gratuities from war contractors are not involved in the hearing here.

Hearings on those charges are to open in Washington Dec. 12 before a Senate committee investigating conduct of the national defense program. Bilbo has advised that committee he will be unable to attend the Washington sessions because of a previous commitment to attend the hearings to be conducted here.

Senate Group Begins Drafting Bilbo Report

Daily Worker
New York, N.Y. Sat. 12-21-46

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—A Senate investigating subcommittee today began drafting its report on the Bilbo story but reserved space for an unfinished chapter dealing with allegations Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo the rotund Mississippian received $1,500 for helping a narcotics addict get morphine.

All but that phase of the subcommittee's inquiry into charges that gratuities from war contractors was completed Thursday night, along with Bilbo's denial of any wrongdoing.

Sen. Homer Ferguson (R-Mich.), left the door open for investigation of the narcotics charge when he asked the committee call, within the next 10 days, the two physicians and the addict himself to say whether Bilbo had received $1,000 or more for helping arrange the morphine prescription.

Dr. H. J. Anslinger, chief of the U.S. Narcotics Bureau, revealed, and Bilbo subsequently confirmed, that the Senator had been instrumental in getting the prescription for John R. Carr of Natchez, Miss., in October, 1945.

But the Senator disagreed vehemently with Anslinger's story that he was informed by an internal revenue agent that Bilbo had received $1,500 for this chore, representing Carr's life savings.

Ferguson said he was attempting to get committee agreement on resuming hearings Dec. 30, four days before the 80th Congress convenes. "It looks to me as if the Monday before New Year's is the best date," Ferguson said. 12-21-46

The Only Way To Embarrass Bilbo

The Constitution
Atlanta, Ga. Sat. 12-21-46

While some of the "revelations" brought out at the Bilbo probe seem highly suspect, enough irrefutable evidence of his unworthiness has been produced to shame any self-respecting person into resigning.

Unfortunately, reports of Bilbo's almost incredible callousness reflect not on himself alone but also on the South as a whole.

For while it is true that Sen. Bilbo is no more typical as a Southern solon than his counterpart of the kilocycles, Sen. Claghorn, the fact remains that the nation has come to associate him, rather than statesmen of Sen. George's stature, with the area from which they come. Nor has Sen. Bilbo done anything to dissipate the misconception with his defense, "It's an old Southern custom to give things to public servants."

Whether or not Bilbo is denied his seat in the Senate—and there still seems little chance that he will be, despite all the sickening details of his modus operandi presented at the hearing—it is the South which is suffering the brunt of the notoriety.

Moreover, protests that Bilbo is not typical, that he might just as well have been spawned in some of the political cesspools of the East or West, will be of no avail.

We can only strive to remove the stigma which Bilbo has placed upon us by missing no opportunity to defeat him and his kind at the polls.

'Lost' Bilbo Witness, Still Feeling 'Pretty Rough' Won't Testify Today

New York, N. Y.

Senator's Ex-Secretary to Play Star Role After Disappearance

Mon. 12-16-46

By United Press

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—Edward P. Terry, Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo's former secretary, who claims he was warned under pain of death not to testify, appeared to be the key figure today in the Senate War Investigating Committee's attempt to track down $25,000 allegedly paid to Bilbo by a war contractor.

Bilbo, a Mississippi Democrat, has been accused of accepting the money and other gifts in 1942-43 in exchange for his influence in obtaining lush war contracts. His answer is that he "didn't get a damn dollar" and that he'll prove it when all the evidence is in.

The right of his Senate seat may be at stake. Senate Republicans hope they can build a strong enough case to unseat Bilbo, but they concede privately the outlook is dubious. Only in instances where actual corruption has been shown has a Senator been refused his seat.

These Republicans, who wish to remain anonymous, acknowledge that to date it has not been proved that Bilbo pocketed any of the money.

Terry turned up in "a nervous state" in a Quitman, Miss., hospital last week while FBI agents were trying to ferret him out. He had been missing for several days.

He originally was scheduled to testify today along with J. Marvin Quin, Jackson, Miss., banker, to whom he revealed the anonymous death threat. Hospital authorities in Quitman, however, said that Terry was feeling "pretty rough" and that he would have to stay in the hospital at least until today.

They said that he will have to pass a physical examination before leaving by train for Washington. If Terry is unable to leave today, hospital officials said they had no idea when he would be able to do so.

The Committee directed Quin to produce records of his bank's financial dealings with the former Bilbo secretary.

Joining the parade to the witness stand will be A. L. Shushin, prominent New Orleans contractor, and supporter of the late Huey Long, who is supposed to have had dealings with Bilbo. Also on hand will be three Mississippi contractors—Michael Morrissey, M. T. and A. B. Friend—whose names have crept in and out of the testimony purporting to link Bilbo with political and financial manipulations.

Terry said from his hospital bed that his testimony will "strike a telling blow" and "have definite bearing on Bilbo's political future."

He quit Bilbo a year ago and also resigned as clerk of the Senate District of Columbia Committee which Bilbo heads. No reasons were given. Last week, soon after the Bilbo hearing started, the Senate probers were electrified by reports that Terry and his entire family had been threatened with death.

Terry took the anonymous telephone threats so seriously that he asked to be excused from testifying. Meantime he had disappeared from his Meridian, Miss., home and the investigation put the FBI on his trail. 12-16-46

Substance of testimony so far is that Bilbo got the $25,000 from Felix T. Newton, Hattiesburg, Miss., contractor, to aid the unsuccessful Senatorial campaign of Wall Doxey, who is now Senate sergeant-at-arms.

Perhaps the most surprised man at the hearing is Doxey who can't recall receiving such donations.

Bilbo Sees Luck Saving His Seat

Sen. Theodore Bilbo confidently told an AP reporter at Washington yesterday that he'll take his seat when the Senate convenes Jan. 3. "They haven't even got a scratch against me," he said. "Besides, alphabetically, my name is Bilbo."

Bilbo evidently is betting on the fact that Democrats will still be in control when the new senators are sworn in. Following the death yesterday of Sen. Josiah Bailey (D., S. C.), there are 30 Democratic holdovers against 29 Republicans.

If precedent is followed, new members will be sworn in alphabetically, with Sen.-elect Raymond E. Baldwin (R., Conn.) first on the list. That would make the count 30-to-30 when Bilbo comes up second.

Negroes Testify On Obstacles To Voting At Bilbo Hearing

The News, Birmingham, Ala.

JACKSON, Miss., Dec. 3—(AP)—Senatorial scrutiny of Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo's primary campaign was broadening today into an investigation of the handling of would-be Negro voters by Mississippi local officials. Tues. 12-3-46

The investigating senators under chairmanship of Sen. Ellender (D., La.) prepared to hear what several of these officials had to say about allegations that Negroes were systematically deprived of voting rights in the primary.

Officials in seven counties were mentioned yesterday in testimony by about 30 Negro witnesses. The Negroes' complaints fell into these categories:

Advice allegedly given, in some cases by officials, that persistent attempts to register or vote would bring "trouble."

Obstacles were said to be placed in the way of Negroes registering to vote—although several witnesses said they were registered when they persisted.

A Negro Congregationalist minister, the Rev. William Bender, of Tougaloo College, said a deputy sheriff in whose pocket he could see a pistol "dared" him to enter a polling place to vote.

Etoy Fletcher, a veteran, said he had been beaten after being denied registration in Brandon, Miss.

Bilbo himself, who attended most of the day's session apparently unperturbed and sporting his usual red tie and diamond stickpin, afterwards characterized the proceedings as "a flop."

Bilbo Petition Signers May Get Subpoenas For Hearing

The News, Birmingham, Ala.

JACKSON, Miss., Dec. 2—(AP)—Subpoenas probably will be issued for most of the signers of a petition questioning the right of Sen. Theo G. Bilbo (D., Miss.) to be seated in the Senate, Sen. Ellender (D., La.), chairman of a Senate investigating committee, said today.

Sen. Ellender said "I don't see how we can avoid using the subpoena to bring these witnesses in."

He said not more than "one or two" of the 48 signers of the petition had volunteered to testify.

"They are the ones who made the charges and they certainly should be interrogated," Ellender said, adding "there will be no difficulty getting them in if we issue the subpoenas."

The petition challenged the fairness of the Democratic primary in which Sen. Bilbo was nominated for a third term. It alleged among other things that Bilbo "advocated, counseled, inspired, encouraged, incited, aided and abetted the white population of Mississippi to commit acts of violence and intimidation . . . against the duly qualified Negro electors of Mississippi." Mon. 12-2-46

Ellender said he was informed all but two of the signers were Negroes.

Meanwhile Sen. Bilbo said he had plenty of legal assistants available—morethan the number of volunteer witnesses on hand.

The 69-qear-old senator, who left his Poplarville "dream house" Saturday and took up residence in a hotel here, said he has "two or three lawyers" on hand to represent him "if anything hot develops," and has available "about 50 more if I need them."

The first Congressional hearing held in the South since the days of the Reconstruction after the Civil War has just ended in Jackson, Miss. The hearing was very short; it lasted only four days. It was extremely hurried. Some of the five Senators who conducted it were obviously not interested in pressing their investigation too energetically or too far. Sun. 12-8-46

One would have to go far back in the history of Mississippi to find a precedent for it. Negroes stood up and publicly defended their right to vote . . . They spoke in a courtroom that was filled with the friends and professional followers of Theodore Bilbo. Perhaps, in the long run, whether Bilbo is unseated by his colleagues in the Senate, as a result of the findings in this investigation, will be less important than this simple fact: The Negroes of Mississippi stood up and spoke.

A girl witness from Natchez came to the hearing yesterday. Her name was Camille Thomas. She was a WAC lieutenant during the war. No one asked her to come to Jackson. She simply read about the hearing and decided it would be a good thing for her people if she came and testified. . . . Sen. Ellender propounded to her the same question that he put to nearly every Negro witness. This is how his question appears in my notes: "It is common knowledge, is it not, that the white folks of Mississippi have always considered the Democratic primary their own, and the colored people took it for granted they could not vote?" And the girl retorted: "It is common knowledge that the Negroes have never accepted that fact."

The committee chairman, Sen. Ellender, is prepared to give Bilbo a clear slate. At the end of the hearing yesterday, Sen. Ellender said that he would be disappointed if there is not a unanimous report by this committee.

BILBO HEARINGS TURN ON RIGHTS OF NEGROES

Witnesses Agree That the Democratic Primaries Are Closed to Them

By HAROLD B. HINTON

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

JACKSON, Miss., Dec. 7—It was difficult to tell here this week, during the hearings of the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee, just what was under scrutiny. Ostensibly, the committee was sitting to investigate charges of incitement to racial discrimination brought against Senator Theodore G. Bilbo by a number of citizens of Mississippi.

Actually, the scope of the testimony and the questioning by the committee brought under review the whole question of Negro political rights in the single-party States of the South. On this broad question, the hearings established pretty well that the white people in Mississippi do not like Senator Bilbo, but they like what he advocates in the way of special privileges and the other advantages which are summed up in the words "white supremacy."

Bilbo's Innuendos

What Mr. Bilbo did in his campaign for renomination at the Democratic primary last July 2 was to urge publicly and frequently that Negroes be kept from voting for a party nominee. By innuendo rather than by direct statement, he left the impression on the minds of his listeners that no harm would come to them, at the hands of a white Mississippi jury, if their zeal to preserve "white primary" led them to extra-legal tactics.

"THE MAN"

Senator Theodore G. Bilbo (Dem.), of Mississippi.

The senior Senator's opponents, who are numerous among Mississippi white citizens, reproach him for crudeness, not for principles. Of the four candidates who ran against him last spring, not a single one advocated voting by Negroes in the primary. Instead, they quietly passed the word among their supporters that Negro votes should be discouraged but without making any specific remarks about how to keep Negroes away from the polls.

Ellender's Attitude

The chairman of the investigating committe is Senator Allen J. Ellender of Louisiana. While he is not a close friend of Mr. Bilbo, they see eye to eye on the white primary issue.

Mr. Ellender took considerable trouble during the hearings to guide witnesses to say that the discriminations and obstructions operated against would-be Negro voters were not the result of any utterances by Mr. Bilbo. Most of the white witnesses needed little prompting to say it has been common knowledge for many years in Mississippi that Negroes are to be kept from voting in Democratic primaries. Sun. 12-8-46

Negro witnesses had to be prodded before they would agree that all white citizens in Mississippi take the stand Mr. Ellender suggested. Many of them seemed to cling to a perhaps wishful belief that some white men in the State are willing to see Negroes begin to take an active part in its political life.

Most of the Negroes who testified were veterans of World War II, and their combined testimony made a picture of steadily awakening political consciousness among them. While they were in the armed forces, their chaplains, their information and education officers, and the other morale media lectured them on their civic responsibilities when they returned to civilian life, and many of these young Mississippi Negroes took seriously what they heard. At least, several of them told the committee so, with dignity and often forcefully moving language.

Most of them seemed to have returned to Mississippi in late 1945 or early 1946. When they got home, they heard that the United States Supreme Court had decided that Negroes could vote in Democratic primaries under the protection of their constitutionally guaranteed rights.

Soon, it would appear, this controversial court decision became known to the Negroes as "the new law," and they often referred to it in that manner during this week's hearings. To add to the returning soldiers' naive belief that they were going to be allowed to vote effectively at last, their own Legislature in Mississippi passed a law in April exempting all veterans, without distinction of color, from poll tax for the requisite two years preceding the elections of 1946. Most of the Negro veterans apparently believed this meant they could vote.

Empty Voting Privilege

But it did not, as it turned out. The white men who passed the law meant only that the Negroes could still exercise the empty privilege of voting in Mississippi's general elections, where the Democratic nominee of the previous primary election is always the undisputed winner, and in certain minor local elections, as they have done for years.

Northern critics of the South are prone to attribute the closed-corporation aspects of the Democratic party in the South to arbitrary, sadistic cruelty on the part of the whites. It is far more fundamental than that.

The 1940 Federal census gave Mississippi, for the first time in more than a hundred years, more whites than Negroes—and the margin was only a few thousand. The population today is probably just about evenly split between the two races. This same situation exists, to a lesser degree, in the other Southern States.

And More Segregation

Under these conditions, the white people insist on maintaining the same political segregation of the races as they impose in the other aspects of life. Rightly or wrongly, they want the Negro to have his own political party, just as he has his own schools and churches. There is even a branch of the Republican party known as the "Lily Whites," although their strength is negligible. Sun. 12-8-46

The lesson for the nation seems to be that no solution can be imposed by fiat. Only slowly evolutionary educational processes, working on both white and Negroes, are likely to have any permanent effect.

'Innocent Bystander' Role Taken By Bilbo At Trial

The Adaptive Mirror, Jackson, Miss.

JACKSON, MISS., Nov. 30.—(AP)—Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo arrived here today to attend "as an innocent bystander" the Senate committee hearing that will open here Monday on complaints against his election campaign for last summer's democratic primary.

"I'm here as an innocent bystander, but of course if any-think hot develops, I have two or three lawyers who will give the matter proper attention," he said at a press conference.

He said he would be represented by attorney J. F. Barber of Yazoo City, John Burkett, of Jackson, Forest Jackson of Jackson "and about 50 more if I need them." Sun. 12-1-46

Bilbo said the committee, headed by Sen. Ellender (D), Louisiana, had forwarded him a copy of the complaint, which Bilbo described as an "indictment against every white man and woman who believes in the white race."

Only Racial Aspects Viewed

The committee, Bilbo continued, although known as the "campaign expenditures committee, is interested only in the racial aspects" of his election.

He said the "indictment" twc against him was drawn up by the Civil Rights Congress" and was signed by two white persons and 48 Negroes of Mississippi.

Expressing a hope that "all good people will cooperate with the committee in making this investigation" Bilbo said he did not believe Negroes would fail to offer testimony because of fear.

"Everyone who has sense enough to testify knows there's nothing to be investigated," he commented.

Bilbo predicted that the committee's investigation will leav the election issue "with a clea bill of health."

Few Witnesses

A small group of witnesses an a large congloneration of spectators are expected to gather in th Federal court room for the hearing and disappointing."

Other accustations against Bilbo to the effect that he accepted gratuities from war contractors are not involved in the hearing here.

"The man" is expected to be the leading man in what many Mississippians predict will be the biggest show in the state since the days when Bilbo was impeached in the State legislature to open in Washingtin Dec. 12 on a bridery charge, was tried by before a Senate committee investigating conduct of the national defense program. Bilbo has the Senate and won an acquittal advised that committee he will by one vote.

Declares He Is a Poor Man With 'Nothing to Hide': Brands Accusers As Liars

The Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky. Fri. 12-20-46
45a

From Wire Dispatches.

Washington, Dec. 19.—A story of ten $100 bills sent to Senator Theodore G. Bilbo by a man wanting his help in getting narcotics was related to Senate investigators tonight and brought an immediate denial from the Mississippi senator.

Bilbo also branded as "lies" or "hallucinations" the charges that he profited from relations with war contractors. These charges led to the inquiry by the Senate war-investigating subcommittee.

The matter of the narcotics came out piecemeal from four separate witnesses whose testimony conflicted at points.

Tells of Pay for Permit.

They were:

Edward Terry, Bilbo's former secretary. He said Dr. A. J. Podesta, Vicksburg, Miss., told him he gave Bilbo $1,500 for a Natchez, Miss., man who wanted a permit for daily doses of narcotics.

Dr. Harry J. Anslinger, federal commissioner of narcotics. He testified Bilbo called him to his office on October 11, 1945, about a letter from Podesta with accompanying certificates that a Harry Carr of Natchez required a regular supply of drugs.

Harry Holt, special agent for the Treasury. He testified that Terry had informed the Treasury of the alleged payments and he (Holt) had investigated. He said that on April 30, 1946, he interviewed Podesta at Vicksburg.

Narcotics Approved.

Podesta told him, Holt related, that he sent the certificate to Bilbo and that Anslinger's office later approved narcotics for Carr, who was described as a sufferer from asthma and other ailments and as a long-time user of narcotics. Holt quoted Podesta as saying that still later Carr told him he wanted to "do something" for Bilbo, so the physician suggested a contribution for Bilbo's Juniper Grove Baptist Church project.

Podesta's story, as related by Holt, went on:

Carr gave him some money—it was his recollection it was $1,000—and it was turned over to Bilbo in a Jackson, Miss., hotel.

Carr's Story Related.

Holt said that the next day he interviewed in Natchez a man whom he called John Carr and got this account:

He had sought the narcotics permit through Podesta and Bilbo and in December, 1945, made a payment to Podesta. He was uncertain whether it was $1,500 or $1,000. Podesta told him he had to make the payment. Something was said about a church, but "The contribution was made to Bilbo personally so far as he was concerned and was in payment for services."

The $1,500 was all the money Carr had accumulated during his lifetime.

W. H. Lane, an investigator for the committee, said he interviewed Podesta October 18, 1946, and the physician told him that after the narcotics arrangement was made Carr wanted to do something for Bilbo, and a church contribution was suggested. Podesta added, according to Lane, that Carr gave him 10 $100 bills, which were turned over to Bilbo.

Says He Gave Him Letter.

Bilbo, brought back to the stand, testified the Anslinger did come to his office, where "I merely gave him" Podesta's letter. But he declared he did not know Carr and never received any money from him.

"Did Dr. Podesta give you any money?" Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) pressed him.

"No, sir."

"How much did Podesta give you for the church?"

"I don't remember."

"Did he give you ten $100 bills?"

"Not that I remember."

Bilbo finally said Podesta might have given him money for the church at some time, but absolutely had not given him anything in connection with the narcotics matter.

Terry Collapses.

In the midst of this examination, Terry, who was standing to the side of the committee room, staggered a few feet and collapsed in a chair.

The committee granted him permission to leave and he left on the arm of his attorney, Paul Dillon.

Ferguson demanded that Bilbo produce all records he has of church gifts. The Mississippi senator said the committee could have them and all his personal files if they wanted them.

"I haven't anything to hide," Bilbo declared.

At that point the hearing was recessed indefinitely. The committee members will examine Bilbo's files in private and decide whether they will call Podesta and Carr as witnesses.

Testifies 2½ Hours.

Ferguson told reporters he expected that hearings would be resumed the Monday after Christmas. Chairman Mead (D., N.Y.) will fix the time.

Bilbo, 69-year-old Mississippi Democrat, had been testifying for 2½ hours, wisecracking and obviously feeling in control of the situation when Anslinger was suddenly put on the stand.

The senator took the stand with a 42-page prepared statement in which he termed the narcotics matter, first mentioned yesterday by Terry, "a lie out of the whole cloth."

First Mentioned By Terry.

The narcotics story was first mentioned yesterday by Terry, who spoke of a sum of $1,500 said to have changed hands.

He pleaded guilty to one charge adduced—that he had helped his constituents get war contracts, but, he added, "so did every other worth-while senator" and congressman.

Fri. 12-20-46

All the thousands of dollars that passed through his hands from war contractors represented either campaign contributions for a political ally, former Senator Wall Doxey (D., Miss.), or personal loans which Bilbo either has repaid or intends to.

"I never got a damned cent of it," he shouted through the loud speaker system in denying that any part of a $25,000 campaign contribution from F. T. Newton one of the contractors, had passed into his hands.

Tells Purpose of Inquiry.

"All you want to know," he said, "is how much money Bilbo got—that's the purpose of this investigation."

But he centered his ire on the two men who he said were responsible for the inquiry—his former secretary, Terry, and former Representative Ross Collins (D., Miss.). Collins once was a political buddy but now is the senator's bitter foe.

"Christ had his Judas Iscariot; Caesar had his Brutus; George Washington had his Benedict Arnold, but I claim to have had the greatest traitor of them all in my trusted secretary," he said of Terry.

"Because of Collins' campaign of lies and misrepresentations in making the charges upon which I am now being tried, and others, he has been the most thoroughly, completely and everlastingly condemned, damned and repudiated man in the history of the state."

Says Reds Pressed Charges.

Involved also in pressing the charges against him, Bilbo continued, were the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Communist Party members and others "closely identified with Communist-front activities."

Of the seven days of testimony, Bilbo said:

"All that the witnesses have been able to establish is that I am a very poor man and heavily involved in debt and that I received during all the periods that the investigation has covered but two Christmas gifts, one an automobile and the other living-room furniture consisting of a sofa, three floor lamps and two table lamps."

All Given Freely, He Says.

He said that every monetary "assistance or service rendered to me—and which I am obligated to repay"—was given voluntarily and without solicitation. The only exceptions would be, Bilbo said, the request he made for loans to help pay off $21,750 in alimony in 1943 for his ex-wife.

All the charges against him—with the exception of one that he accepted $1,500 to get the narcotics permit—were contained in a four-page election throwaway used in the 1946 campaign in behalf of Doxey's senatorial candidacy, Bilbo said.

Replies Point by Point.

Then he turned to a recital of the nine charges made against him, and replied to them, point by point, as follows:

1. "That I assisted various contractors in obtaining cost-plus-fixed-fee contracts for the construction of the Jackson Army Air Base . . . Key Field and Keesler Field" (all in Mississippi).

"To this charge I plead guilty," Bilbo said, adding that all the contracts awarded on his recommendation had been fulfilled to the satisfaction of the Army.

2. "That I received $26,200 from F. T. Newton, of the Newton-Glenn Construction Company."

That is correct, Bilbo conceded, adding that Newton had contributed the sum after a Doxey rally on September 7, 1942. But that money and other sums were spent to pay off the campaign expenses of defeated primary candidates, like Collins, and to gather their field forces behind Doxey for the run-off primary, Bilbo said.

Consisted of $26,200.

The Newton money consisted of $25,000 in checks for the campaign, and a $1,200 loan to Bilbo.

"So," the senator said, "the $25,000 was spent and I did not get a dollar or a penny of it. As to the $1,200; that was a personal loan . . . and has been repaid—not a cent of it is owing."

Ferguson tried to pin down Bilbo to acknowledging that he telephoned from Washington and suggested names of war contractors who should attend a "pep meeting" to raise funds for the Doxey campaign.

"I don't remember," Bilbo replied. "I guess I did. There was nothing wrong about it."

Bilbo said it would be a "natural thing" to call his former campaign manager, A. B. Friend and tell him to "blow the bugle and bring the boys in from the hills."

"Yes, and shake the bushes," Ferguson put in.

"I said I do not remember," Bilbo continued. "I did not give names."

Bilbo Ignores Question.

"You did not say, 'Bring in the war contractors'?" Ferguson asked, but Bilbo ignored this.

When Bilbo told of a $48,000 loss on operation of his farms by Mike T. Morrissey, war contractor, Ferguson wanted to know if these losses "were for income-tax purposes?"

"I would not say that," Bilbo replied.

He added that Morrissey was a "big operator" and had lost $65,000 on "another farm."

Ferguson wanted to know what was the most Bilbo ever lost in any one year in operating his farms.

"I would not remember that," Bilbo replied.

Ferguson suggested Bilbo check his income-tax returns.

"I don't keep copies," Bilbo replied. "I'm afraid to."

"Why?" Ferguson asked.

Hates to See His Losses.

"I hate to see the losses," Bilbo replied as the crowd laughed.

The crowd roared again when Bilbo testified that on the return of his farm from Morrissey "I had no hogs, one horse, two mules, one drake, one gobbler, one guinea, one gander, and one white rooster."

Ferguson noted that Bilbo had no "breeding stock."

"No, he did not match 'em up," Bilbo replied. "I had to start from scratch."

3. "That I received $6,200 from B. L. Knost of the Morrissey-Knost Construction Company.

"B. L. Knost made a check payable to me for $5,000 as a contribution to the Wall Doxey campaign fund. I indorsed the check to Robert Gandy (one of Bilbo's political lieutenants).

Intends to Repay $450.

"About the $1,200; in November, 1941, I needed some money and borrowed $1,200 from B. L. Knost . . . I have paid him $750, and owe him a balance of $450, which I intend to and will pay."

4. "That I received $6,000 from Mike T. Morrissey; that, without cost to me, he built a lake on my premises; that he gave me a Cadillac automobile; that he made certain improvements in my farm while operating it, which operation caused a total loss of approximately $48,000."

The $6,000, Bilbo said, comprised two notes, one for $5,000 money himself. No one had any part in building or furnishing Dream House No. 2—except the Christmas donors—he added.

5. "That a note for $3,000 contained in such allegation. He said he now was informed that Terry had received donations from friends, including three war contractors, more than $1,100 of the money lost likewise made no profit to the property sufficient to pay for the $500 worth of furniture entailed in the land, which was paid by individuals who later were reimbursed by war contractors.

Believes Terry Used Money.

But, he charged, Terry did not pay off a note for the furniture on this note nor reimburse the Government for the A.A.A.

6. "That $3,000 of Bilbo's farm for which Morrissey paid $1,100 was paid by war contractors.

While Morrissey lost $48,000 in operating Bilbo's farm for four years, Bilbo made no profit himself and paid $65,000 in taxes. Morrissey likewise made no improvements to the property except to terrace the land, which cost was paid for by the Government under the A.A.A.

"It is just an old Southern custom," he explained. The crowd roared again when Bilbo said he got one and his wife packing the hearing room.

For that matter, Bilbo said, he understood gifts of automobiles had been made to both President Truman and President Roosevelt.

"This is the third car I have had since I became governor of Mississippi for the second time.

"This is specifically the charges and the insinuations that has been given to me by friends. . . There are very good precedents for automobiles to be given to public officials. . ."

He said he got one and his wife

Says He Always Pays.

The lake is a 15-acre pond for which Morrissey sent a bill for $3,671.92 and which will be paid because "I may be slow to pay but I am sure to pay. I always pay."

"Yes, Mike Morrissey gave me the new Cadillac for a Christmas present in December, 1941," he continued. "This is the third car torney, Forrest Jackson, that this money had been borrowed from Shushan to help pay his ex-wife's alimony demands; that when Shushan threatened political reprisals, four friends had clubbed together to pay off the indebtedness in a hurry.

'This Alimony Nightmare.'

Bilbo said he had paid of. only one of the four, a $750 payment, and that "I still owe on this alimony nightmare" $2,250 and "there was no war contractor connected in the remotest degree with the Shushan note and its payment . . .

7. "That certain of my personal expenses incurred in my office at Washington, D. C., were eventually defrayed by war contractors.

"This charge I deny." Bilbo added that if certain of his expenses were paid by his friends, that was "without my knowledge, acquiescence or consent," and were done at Terry's solicitation.

8. "That a swimming pool was constructed on my premises without charge to me by the St. Catherine Gravel Company, Inc."

Done By 'Good Friends.'

He said this job was done by two "very good friends" who were not war contractors—John R. and William Junkin of Natchez. With the preliminary work already done, Bilbo said, one of the brothers offered to complete the job. He has been billed for the work, never has paid off, but will pay.

The swimming pool is not yet completed and "I am still 'doing my swimming' in Wolf River, which is four miles from my dream house," Bilbo said.

9. "That I received funds from various persons and deposited them in an account called 'Juniper Grove Baptist Church, special fund by Theo G. Bilbo' in the Bank of Commerce, Poplarville on which I alone could draw and which was principally to build a residence owned by me.

"I deny, resent, and detest the vile implications of this reprehensible charge, every cent I have ever received for the Juniper Grove Baptist Church fund which included funds collected to build the church building and funds collected to build the parsonage and to fence and beautify the grounds, has been spent on this worthy project except the balance of the funds now on deposit in the special fund account in the Bank of Commerce at Poplarville."

Tells of Collections.

He said he was carrying on the work begun by "my sainted father," that his community is poor and hence he began collecting funds for the group construction in 1928 "from anybody and everybody, at home and abroad."

"I have received funds from Methodists, Baptists, Catholics, Jews, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, saints, and sinners," he added. Fri. 12-20-46

He still holds legal title to the property, Bilbo conceded, but that is only a precaution against someone else's "butchering up" the job before completion.

"The money I had and the work I was doing was for the Lord and not for some individual," he said.

Promising to make formal delivery of the Juniper Grove Church by April 27, 1947, to its deacons, Bilbo asked that if the church dignitaries are "happy over the way I have handled the funds . . . then pray tell me why and how anybody on earth could object?"

F.B.I. Seeks Witness In Bilbo Investigation

The Courier Louisville, Ky.

Senator's Ex-Secretary Missing Since Telling Of Threats On His Life If He Testified

Fri. 12-13-46

From Wire Dispatches.

Washington, Dec. 12.—The F.B.I. has been asked to search for a missing former secretary of Senator Theodore G. Bilbo (D., Miss.) who disappeared after asserting that he, his wife, and daughter had been threatened with death if he testified about the senator's war-contract activities, was disclosed tonight.

The Senate War Investigating Committee, now hearing charges that Bilbo accepted gratuities from war contractors, disclosed the search for Edward P. Terry, on whom the committee has been unable to serve a subpoena. Terry has been reported variously this month in Florida, Washington, and New York. Now he is believed to be returning to his Meridian, Miss., home by automobile.

Army Officers Testify.

This disclosure highlighted the first day of hearings into charges that Bilbo profited, financially and materially, from his efforts to obtain war contracts for favored construction firms.

Before getting to the Terry matter, the committee had heard from Army officers and ex-officers:

1. That Bilbo on numerous occasions brought contractors to their offices to recommend them for construction jobs.

2. That Bilbo was extremely active in having construction of the Jackson (Miss.) air base placed under control of the Army engineer's office at Vicksburg, Miss., rather than the office at Mobile, Ala.

3. That his 1940 campaign manager, A. B. Friend, participated in a $1,731,029 contract at Key Field, Meridian, as one of four contractors in a pool or co-venture.

Letter to Mead Read.

4. That in at least two of three cases the Mississippi firms plugged by Bilbo were too small to handle the major contracts involved, and had to call in other firms, some from outside Mississippi to form combines.

5. A number of the Army engineers conceded that they would have had "Bilbo on our necks" if his contract recommendations had been ignored.

Terry until January was Bilbo's secretary and constant office associate, although he carried the title of clerk of the Senate Committee on District of Columbia Affairs.

Asked to Be Excused.

A letter was read into the record, addressed to Chairman Mead (D., N. Y.) and signed with Terry's name.

Dated December 2, it said an anonymous person telegraphed him at Meridian the night of November 26 and told him "that should I participate or take any part in connection with the investigation of Senator Bilbo that my wife and daughter would pay with their lives."

It said that on October 31 a likewise anonymous caller told him "I would pay with my life" if he had anything to do with an investigation of Bilbo then going o nin Mississippi.

In view of these facts "and especially the fact that the lives of my wife and daughter have been threatened," the letter asked that he not be called to testify.

The letter recalled that last April "I was, in the presence of witnesses, told that I would be killed if I gave out any information I might have detrimental to Senator Bilbo."

This instance, the letter said, was widely published. Committee Counsel George Meader said Terry was questioned November 26 in executive session.

Bilbo and his attorney, Forrest Jackson, asked that the committee subpoena not only Terry, but J. Marvin Quinn, executive vice-president of a Jackson, Miss., bank where Terry is said to have some accounts.

Jackson said Quinn had told him 10 days ago that Terry had confided he was going to use the alleged threats as an excuse not to testify, "because the evidence he would give would tend to incriminate him."

Bilbo's lawyer said Terry's account of the threats was "the same sort of statement he made during the campaign" last summer when Bilbo won renomination over four opponents.

Bilbo Answers.

When the morning session ended, the little Democratic senator told reporters:

"If it's wrong to recommend friends and constituents for jobs, then it disqualifies three fourths of the Senate and all of the House."

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

Wearing a diamond horseshoe stickpin in his red necktie, Bilbo maintained an air of jauntiness as two of his colleagues dug into allegations that he accepted more than $30,000, a furnished house and a big automobile from contractors for his work in getting them Government construction jobs.

Retired Maj. Gen. Thomas M. Robins, former assistant chief of Army engineers, called Friend the "promoter" and "front man" for the Key Field contracting pool. Fri. 12-13-46

Says he was threatened,

but that his presence among the contractors "did no harm."

(Bilbo commented to the press table that Friend certainly was "the brains of the organization."

("I know that," Bilbo said, "because he elected me twice.")

Douglas I. McKay, special assistant to the chief of engineers, testified that although he had no personal knowledge of the affair, he had heard "rumors" that Friend was to receive "a $5,000 cut" of the $63,175 fixed fee for the contractors on the Meridian job.

The combine which got the Meridian contract was made up of Friend, Volz Construction Company, Flint-Jordan Construction Company, and Rock City Construction Company. The last-named firm was from Tennessee, the others from Mississippi. It was Army policy to award contracts, when possible, to residents of the state where the work was to take place.

Project Was Expanded.

The original estimate of cost o the job was $1,515,090 plus the $63,175 fee. Eventually the Government paid $1,731,029 for the work.

That excess was minor, however, compared to the underestimate on the Jackson air base. There the estimate was $1,459,71(plus a $62,000 fee to the contractor, M. T. Reed. Final cost was $12,639,983, due principally, the engineers explained, to expansion of the project after it got under way.

Contracts under examination by the committee total $25,-932,36F.

Senator Mead (D., N. Y.) presided and Senator Ferguson (R., Mich) conducted much of the examination of witnesses. The third member of the subcommittee, Senator Tunnell (D., Del.), was not present at the opening session.

Mead Reads Statement.

Jackson inquired at the outset whether he would be allowed to crossexamine witnesses. Mead ruled that he could not, but said that if Jackson or Bilbo wanted to raise any points they could submit them in writing to the committee.

Mead read a statement asserting that the senators had not prejudged the case and that the investigation would be held to the subject of war contracts, with no regard for Bilbo's "political or ideological philosophies'.'

GI Says He Was Beaten to Balk Registration — Hearing Arouses Laughter of Audience

New York, N.Y.

By HAROLD B. HINTON

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

JACKSON, Miss., Dec. 2—More than twenty Negroes, including one war veteran wearing the lapel insignia of the Good Conduct Medal who said that he had been beaten with a steel cable by three white men for trying to register, testified before the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee here today. They told of alleged intimidations and obstructions used to keep them and other Negroes from voting in the Democratic primary last July 2. They blamed these occurrences on campaign speeches by Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, who won the nomination. Tues. 12-3-46

Mr. Bilbo, flanked by four lawyers, occupied a table in the center of the Federal Court room where the hearings are being held. He and his counsel asked questions of the witnesses by passing slips of paper to Senator Allen J. Ellender, Democrat, of Louisiana, chairman of the special committee. Mr. Bilbo seemed in high good humor and smiled broadly as the witnesses told of the scare his campaign oratory had thrown into the Negroes of Mississippi.

His enjoyment of the situation seemed to spread to committee members as the day wore on. He and Mr. Ellender began to exchange winks as questions were fired at witnesses.

Questions Asked by Bridges

Senator Styles Bridges, Republican, of New Hampshire, asked witness after witness for his party affiliations. The Times

Without exception, the Negroes claime dto be Democrats. The Rev. William Albert Bender, 60-year-old Congregational minister on the faculty of Tougaloo College near here, who said he had been forcibly prevented from voting in the primary by an armed deputy Sheriff, qualified his declaration by saying that "I tried to be a Democrat, but they wouldn't let me."

Mr. Bridges observed that he and Senator Boruke B. Hickenlooper, Republican, of Iowa, were getting lonely, as they had not seen a Republican since arriving in Mississippi yesterday. This and other senatorial witticisms kept the 300 spectattors in a gay mood all day, and the court attendants were frequently busy calling for order as laughter greeted the salies of the committee members.

Etoy Fletcher was the veteran who said he had been "whipped" after he tried to register at the courthouse in Brandon, about twelve miles from here, last June 12. As usual in such cases in the South, the witness could not identify any of the six or seven white men he said took him to the woods, ordered him to strip, and beat him about the legs with a double steel cable. New York, N.Y.

After the whipping, he testified, he was offered, and accepted, a lift back into Brandon. His assailants, he stated, told him he was free to come back to town at any time, but that if he tried to vote they would kill him. He said he took a bus into Jackson and reported the incident to the local unit of the American Veterans Committee, an officer of which prepared an affidavit for him to sign. Tues. 12-3-46

He then sought treatment for his legs, he stated, going to Howard's Foot Clinic here. He could not recall the name of the white doctor who attended him, but Mr. Bilbo's counsel produced Dr. E. J. Metranga, a chiropodist, who testified he had treated Fletcher for contusions above the knee on his right leg. 12-3-46

The doctor testified that Fletcher told him, at the time of the treatment, that he had been beaten by two Negroes whom he intended to "get" in his own way.

GOP Agrees With Bilbo That Effort To Bar Him Will Fail

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.
Mon. 12-16-46

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—(AP)—Senator Bilbo (D.), Mississippi, predicted confidently today the Republicans will be unable to bar him when the new senate convenes Jan. 3.

Republican strategists agreed privately that regardless of the outcome of a current inquiry by the Senate War Investigating Committee into what happened to $25,000 a war contractor gave Bilbo in 1942, the prediction probably is correct. But they vowed that if they are defeated in the first round, they will press further efforts to unseat the senator.

Bilbo told a reporter he is satisfied "they can't stop me at the door."

"They haven't even got a scratch aaginst me," he declared, adding:

"Besides, alphabetically, my name is Bilbo."

There, said Republicans who have been studying the situation, is the rub.

Still In Control

When the Senate meets to begin swearing in new members, the Democrats still will be in control, with Secretary Leslie Biffle in the chair. Holdover Democrats outnumber holdover Republicans 30 to 29 following the death today of Senator Bailey (D.), North Carolina.

If precedents are followed, new members will be sworn in alphabetically, with Senator-elect Raymond E. Baldwin (R.), Connecticut, first on the list. That would make the count 30 Democrats and 30 Republicans when Bilbo comes up second.

Even if they get some Democratic votes or are aided by absences on the side, Bilbo's opponents fear they might lose some Republican votes.

One GOP senator who has been analyzing the strategy mentioned that Democrats, if they choose, could prevent the swearing in of any Republicans if Bilbo is not permitted to take the oath.

Put On Spot?

"Maybe we will give the Democrats a chance to put themselves on that spot," this senator told a reporter.

In any event, he said, the Republicans have found that Bilbo could be ousted by a majority vote which sustained any charges they made against him directly bearing on the last election campaign. A report still is being awaited by an elections subcommittee which looked into such charges in Mississippi.

Any moral turpitude charges that might be brought against Bilbo would require a two-thirds vote for expulsion. But if the charges were broad enough to cover both categories, a majority vote was needed for ouster.

51 To 45

When they get all their senators seated, the Republicans will outnumber the Democrats 51 to 45. There seems little chance that they ever could muster a two-thirds vote to unseat the Mississippian. The Advertiser

Meanwhile, Chairman Mead (D.), New York said he expects Edward Terry, Bilbo's former secretary, to be available tomorrow to tell the War Investigating Subcommittee what he knows about the involved financial transactions the group is investigating. Montgomery, Ala.

Terry, who has been in a Quitman, Miss., hospital, has reported anonymous threats against his life if he testified in any manner against his former employer.

Terry reportedly already has given the committee a statement in closed session on the complaints it is investigating that Bilbo received $25,000 and some expensive gifts from various war contractors. Mon. 12-16-46

Bilbo contends he retained none of this money personally but used it in an unsuccessful campaign to elect Wall Doxey, now Senate sergeant-at-arms, in the 1942 runoff primary.

Lynching Not Denied or Alleged

The Times and Courier

In the absence of evidence that he was not set upon by three or more men in the morning hours of election day and wounded to his death in the 19th congressional district of New York, on the edge of Harlem's underworld", it cannot and is not affirmed by any newspaper or politician of the "Empire State" that Joseph Scottorigio, Esq., Republican political worker, was not lynched. SENATE GROUP TO HEAR HOME VIEWS ON BILBO

The Times New York, N.Y.

Inquiry This Week Opens the Fight To Exclude Him From the Senate

Sun. 12-1-46

By HAROLD B. HINTON

Special to THE N

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30—It may be expected that shrill cries of "outside interference" will be raised in Mississippi starting on Tuesday, when the special Senate Committee on Campaign Expenditures begins its hearings at Jackson on the nomination of Senator Theodore G. Bilbo in the Democratic primary last July. The committee, headed by Senator Allen J. Ellender of Louisiana, will undoubtedly be favorably compared to the carpetbaggers of eighty years ago by Bilbo partisans.

The committee will be trying to discover whether Mr. Bilbo is entitled to his seat in the Senate of the Eightieth Congress as having been duly and properly elected. Its title is deceptive, for no question has been raised about Mr. Bilbo's expenditures in the campaign. He stands charged, by citizens of his own State, with having incited intimidation of Negro voters in his campagn speeches.

His Financial Relations

Other charges, involving the allegations of improper financial relations with various contractors whom he is said to have helped to secure business, are pending before the Senate War Investigating Committee, of which Senator Harley M. Kilgore, Democrat, of West Virginia, is chairman. These charges will not figure in the hearings at Jackson next week.

His record in public life, which dates from 1912, leaves no doubt that Mr. Bilbo opposes Negro participation in the political life of the country. As a matter of fact, his favorite remedy for the racial problem in the South is the immediate deportation of all Negroes to Africa. When he first came to the Senate, in 1935, he was a fiery New Dealer, with reservations about the racial equalities advocated by some of his new political bedfellows.

During his second term, starting in 1941, his main claim to public attention has been his habit of filibustering, or threatening to do so, against anti-lynching bills and against the proposal for a Fair Employment Practices Commission.

He is an able parliamentarian and his threats to filibuster carry considerable weight in the Senate.

The senior Senator from Mississippi is not an unduly assiduous attendant at committee meetings, except for the District of Columbia Committee of which he is chairman until the Republicans organize the Senate. His career in that post has been devoted to opposing any kind of suffrage for residents of the District because of its large Negro population.

Call to 'Good White People'

The specific allegations against Mr. Bilbo are based on specimens of campaign oratory which were widely quoted during his campaign and which he never denied. One example was to the effect that "Mississippi's good white people should go to any means justifiable to maintain white supremacy at the polls, and if you don't know what I mean you're just plain dumb." Another went as follows:

"You know and I know what's best way to keep the nigger from voting. You do it the night before election. I don't have to tell you any more than that Red-blooded men know what I mean."

A few hundred Negroes did vote in the Democratic primary in July and there was no disorder. It was the first time since Reconstruction Days that members of their race had done so. However, they voted in large centers of population (mostly in Jackson, the State capital) and not in the rural areas.

Stand Is Predictable

Senator Bilbo has not indicated what tack he will take when he appears before the committee, but it is predictable. It is no secret that he, in agreement with Eugene E. Talmadge, Governor-elect of Georgia, the State law in South Carolina and thousands of persons in the rest of the South, believe that Negroes should be barred from membership in the Democratic party and hence should not be allowed to vote in Democratic primary elections. 12-1-46

This school of thought concedes the Negro's Constitutional right to vote at the general elections, although it does not approve it, and maintains that none of his civil rights is abrogated by excluding him from the deliberations of a political party which does not want him as a member. His rights are secured, following this line of reasoning, when he is permitted to put up candidates of his own and vote for them at the general elections.

THE BILBO INVESTIGATION

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

The Senate Committee on Campaign Expenditures, now holding an investigation of Senator Bilbo in his home State, complains at the "lack of cooperation being shown by citizens of the state." Committee counsel Riley W. Shanks says the number of Mississippians who have contacted the Committee to testify against the Senator is "practically nil." And unless the attitude of citizens changes considerably, Mr. Shanks says he will resort to the subpoena in an effort to secure testimony in the case.

It is a safe assumption, however, that the attitude of Mississippi citizens will not change, and recourse to the subpoena will be more or less a meaningless gesture toward appeasing certain vocal critics and elements north of the Line. No one has given the Committee credit for a serious desire to pry too closely into Senator Bilbo's record, and if it has such a desire, there is little likelihood that the Senator's recent campaign could be made to yield sufficient grounds for denying him his seat in the Senate. Mon. 12-2-46

A much more promsing field of action against Senator Bilbo is the charge of political misconduct in his relations with war contractors. Granting that a man should not be condemned until he has an opportunity to make his defense, there still is reason to believe Senator Bilbo is guilty of indiscretions which leave little question about his moral fitness to represent his state in the United States Senate. He has not denied charges of graft or charges that he is guilty of various indiscretions in "presssuring" nice contributions from many of those whom he admittedly "helped" to secure lucrative war contracts. Perhaps the Senator could not be denied a seat among his colleagues on the basis of such misconduct, but an investigation by the appropriate Senate Committee would show him up in true stature to his constituency.

On the other hand, prosecution of the charge against the Senator by the Committee now in Jackson will appear as "political prosecution" in the eyes of a good many voters and merely make Bilbo the Man of the Hour in Mississippi.

Attack on the South

The News and Courier

Refusal of the senate to seat Mr. Bilbo of Mississippi would be the beginning of unseatings of senators elected in Georgia, Alabama, South Carolina, Arkansas, other states in which negro voters are numerous. It would be effort to reestablish "Reconstruction" in the Southern states. The new campaign against the South would differ from that of 1867-1877 in that the party of the North calling itself "Democratic" would combine with Northern Republicans. The negro vote in Northern cities is courted by both "great parties" and that has caused desertion of the South by the directors of the Northern "Democrats." The white people of the South are not without allies in the North and West, but their allies are not in control of the great city machines that control 10 or 12 states. The unseating of Mr. Bilbo would be attack in advance upon the title of senators hereafter to be elected in South Carolina. Charleston, S. C. Sat. 12-7-46

Some Negroes Volunteered Not To Vote, Probers Told

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Thurs. 12-5-46

JACKSON, MISS., Dec. 4.—(AP)—Greenwood citizens told Senate investigators today a story of how Negroes in the Delta city were persuaded to remain away from the polls during the Mississippi Democratic primary election last July "to avoid trouble."

Their testimony was given at a hearing in which the Senate campaign committee in investigating charges that inflammatory speeches by Senator Theo G. Bilbo kept Negroes from voting.

Bilbo was nominated for a third term in the primary, the first in which more than a handful of Negroes ever voted in Missippi.

The senator was invited today to begin any testimony that he might want to introduce, but the committee later decided to wait until tomorrow after the last witnesses subpoenaed for the hearing have had their say.

Bilbo, who has listened attentively to the proceedings since they opened Monday, said he would leave it to his attorneys to decide whether he personally will testify.

Concern Over "Tough Element"

Shelby Steele, Greenwood insurance man, testified he and several other citizens became concerned about the possible reaction of "a pretty tough element in our population" to reports that large numbers of Negroes planned to vote in the primary.

He said they decided to call in "two colored citizens for whom we had the highest regard" to discuss the situation. Steele testified these Negroes, J. D. Collins and A. C. Montgomery, were told that "you have a perfect right to vote and we won't try to stop you, but there's a lot of unrest and we can't promise that you'll be protected if you try."

The Negroes readily agreed, he said, "to talk the situation over" with others of their race, and did so. Afterwards, Steele said, the white citizens gave each of the two $25 "as a present" and to reimburse them for the use of their automobiles in reaching the others. He said there was no previous agreement that they would be paid for their services, and that Collins at first refused reimbursement.

Negroes greatly outnumber white people in the county, he said.

Action Voluntary

Mayor Allen Saffold, of Greenwood, testified he attended the conference with the two Negroes, and that the action the Negroes took was strictly voluntary.

Collins said he had spoken to 32 Negroes as a result of the conference and that they had decided "for peace's sake not to try to vote."

Collins said the white men felt that speeches by Bilbo had created "a lot of disturbance" and that there might be trouble if the Negroes went to the polls.

Steele, however, testified the name of Bilbo was not mentioned, and that he felt the situation would have been the same no matter who was running—in fact that "if Bilbo had kept quiet, he would have received 10,000 more votes."

Montgomery corroborated Collins' testimony. advertiser

Two officials of McComb, Miss., Police Chief E. R. Sanders and Mayor A. B. Williams, testified that police officers there had been instructed to preserve order, but not to try to keep anyone, white or Negro, from voting.

Williams said he did not think Senator Bilbo's speeches had had any effect in discouraging Negroes from voting, and that the principal police problem during any election was keeping white persons of different factions "from getting together." Montgomery Ala.

Committee Counsel Louis Wyman said records showed no Negroes had voted in the county.

Arthur Franklin, Negro student at Tougaloo College, said campaign speeches by Senator Bilbo had "created a fear of being beaten or something of that nature," so that many Negroes had not attempted to register or vote.

Bilbo Profited From War Contracts

WASHINGTON—Gnarled, knotty-faced Sen. Theodore Bilbo, of Mississippi, long has been known as the No. 1 rabble-rouser of the U. S. A. Few, however, have realized that he was also the No. 1 gouger of war contractors and had stacked up a neat little pile for himself as a result.

In the early days of war preparation Sen. Bilbo seemed to know his way around the War Department and was instrumental in getting several lucrative contracts for Mississippi friends—including Key Field at Meridian and Keesler Field at Biloxi. The Mississippi contractors who profited were chiefly Newton-Glenn, of Hattiesburg, and Morrissy-Knost, of Pass Christian.

Sat. 10-26-46

The latter firm got war contracts totaling $3,527,268.39 in 1943. Both firms were in on the Keesler Field construction at a total cost of $11,748,620. Their fixed-fee profit out of this was $265,000, part of it shared with the J. A. Jones Company, of Charlotte, N. C.

What these gentlemen from Mississippi promised the senator from Mississippi in return for his help in getting lush contracts is their secret. However, whatever they promised, they delivered a lot. And this column is now able to set forth in detail what they ponied up—some of it apparently in violation of criminal statutes which say that a member of Congress cannot receive a fee for lobbying on any matter pertaining to the federal government.

tractors ponied up for Sen. Bilbo was an artificial lake, with an island in the middle and a nice house built on the island. These were built by F. T. Newton, of the Newton-Glenn Company; and by Michael T. Morrissy, of Morrissy-Knost, both profiting from Keesler Field at Biloxi.

Newton and Morrissy dug out Bilbo's lake originally at a cost to the U. S. taxpayer of $3,672.91. Reason the U. S. taxpayer was to be out of pocket was that Morrissy charged the expense of the lake up to one of his war contracts. Lafer, however, he changed it to an account receivable from Bilbo. Bilbo has never paid him, however, so perhaps it will be deducted from income taxes as a bad debt, which means the taxpayer will foot most of the bill just the same.

Cost of Bilbo's house on the island, now called "Dream House No. 2," has not been ascertained. The men and equipment employed in digging the lake were being used on a war contract at that time.

Having fixed up the lake, island and dream house, Newton and Morrissy even went so far as to give their benefactor the furniture to equip his house. This was presented on Christmas Eve, 1941, the furniture costing $1,000. On top of this, Morrissy gave Bilbo a $1,912 Cadillac.

Originally, Morrissy deducted the cost of the car from his 1941 income tax return as a contribution, but later filed an amended return omitting this deduction.

Pony No. 2—In addition to the lake, dream house, automobile and furniture, the two contractors also ponied up $2,400 to Sen. Bilbo on Nov. 7, 1941. The money was split in two parts. F. T. Newton gave Bilbo $1,200, while D. L. Knost, of the Morrissy-Knost Company, also gave him $1,200. The money was handed over in Bilbo's office in Washington.

Pony No. 3—This was the biggest Bilbo windfall of all, totaling $25,000. It was paid under interesting if not peculiar circumstances. The highly profitable Keesler Field contract at Biloxi had been awarded to Bilbo's friends on June 13, 1941. Their various other cash payments and dream-house favors had come in the latter part of 1941. But meanwhile other war contracts were in the offing.

So, about one year later, on Sept. 7, 1942, in the Royal Hotel in Jackson, Miss., F. T. Newton, of the Newton-Glenn Company, handed benefactor Bilbo four checks totaling $25,000.

Three checks were for $5,000 each, with one for $10,000, all of them checks of the Newton-Glenn Company, but drawn against four different banks where the company kept accounts. On its books the company charged this $25,000 expense to the cost of the war contracts which Sen. Bilbo had assisted the company in obtaining.

Later, however, the war contractors apparently got scared and changed their books. Twenty thousand dollars was charged to the drawing accounts of the two partners, Newton and F. S. Glenn, as a debt to Bilbo. The remaining $5,000, however, was charged directly to the cost of a government contract.

This in itself would appear to be evidence that Bilbo had violated the statute making it a crime for a senator to obtain money in connection with any federal government matter.

When internal revenue agents questioned Mr. Newton about this, he refused to make any statement. His partner Glenn, however, said he had no knowledge of the payment until about two months after it was made, when Newton told him it was a contribution to the Wall Doxey senatorial campaign. However, it is also illegal for a corporation to contribute to any political campaign.

Because of the $25,000 payment to Bilbo, Glenn later demanded dissolution of his partnership with Newton.

After the checks for $25,000 were handed to Bilbo in the Royal Hotel in Jackson, Robert Gandy, one of Bilbo's henchmen, went out and cashed them, giving the senator the $25,000 in currency. Later Gandy said he thought the money was spent in Doxey's primary campaign. However, both Doxey and his campaign manager, Lee D. Hall, together with Leland Speed, a member of Doxey's campaign finance committee, all said no such amount was expended.

Bilbo was operating separate headquarters for Doxey, but Ed Terry, Bilbo's former secretary, and A. B. Friend, who had charge of these headquarters, state that not more than $1,500 was expended through that headquarters.

This would leave more than $20,000 to be accounted for.

The war-contract activities of the senator from Mississippi were so multitudinous and so varied that not all can be told here. All of it goes to show that the man who hurled foul names at minority Americans and who stymied important legislation by prolonged filibusters, might better belong in jail than in the august Senate of the United States.—©

Repenting in the North?

The News and Courier Charleston, S. C.

The citizen of New York who asked the supreme court of the United States to bar Mr. Bilbo from the United States senate was a mild and considerate person or he would have included in his petition that the court expel Mississippi from the union. Reading the lamentations about Southern states and denunciations of them by the Liberalite and Harlemite speakers, politicians and publications, one is driven to conclude that these people are repentant that their grandfathers (if they had American grandfathers) supported President Lincoln in his war to prevent Southern states getting out of the republic.

Fight Predicted If Senate Attempts to Bar Bilbo

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky

Sat. 11-16-46

Washington, Nov. 15 (UP) — A Democratic-Republican coalition appeared to be forming tonight to try to oust Mississippi's apostle of white supremacy—Theodore G. Bilbo—from the U. S. Senate.

But, as the interparty lines were being drawn, a prominent Southern Democrat warned anonymously that any attempt to unseat Bilbo would be met by an onslaught on Republicans, particularly those who won election by narrow margins.

The Senate Campaign Investigating Committee will meet tomorrow to talk once more about charges that Bilbo won re-election by denying Negroes the right to vote. Other charges of racial discrimination also are on file against the stocky little Southerner who takes keen delight in being called "The Man."

G.O.P. Called "Hell-Bent."

A Democrat, who also wanted his name kept out of the post-election controversy, predicted that public hearings would be held on Bilbo, although Senate Committee Chairman Ellender (D., La.) has said repeatedly that information thus far assembled doesn't warrant a full-scale inquiry.

This Democratic source said that since Republicans appear to be "hell-bent" on investigating Bilbo, "why not give it to them now?"

Ellender Opposes Ouster.

Ellender claimed the Republican plan was sponsored by "a bunch of pressure groups who want to castigate Bilbo and won't be satisfied unless he is hanged." He reiterated that the committee had not attempted to duck the charges, but was continuing its inquiry. Then he added:

"It looks as if representative government has gone by the wayside."

Although it isn't easy to keep an elected senator from occupying the place voted him by his constituents, Republicans and some Democrats believe they can keep Bilbo out of the Capitol. They contend that his primary-election campaign was marked by threats against Negroes in an attempt to keep them from the polls.

Some senators privately expressed the opinion that Republicans, with help from a scattering of Northern Democrats, were out on a limb in the Bilbo case. But no one wanted to be quoted.

Oust Bilbo Group Hit by Sen. Ellender

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga.

Sat. 11-16-46

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15—(AP)—Sen. Ellender, Democrat, Louisiana, asserted Friday that current moves to deny Sen. Bilbo, Democrat, Mississippi, a seat originate with a "number of well-meaning Republicans who want to capture the Negro vote in the next election."

Interviewed by a group of reporters in a corridor of the Senate Office Building, the Chairman of the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee declared that some of the people opposing Bilbo "won't be satisfied unless he is hanged."

Taking notice of reports that the Republican Steering Committee has decided informally to back efforts to stop Bilbo at the Senate door, Ellender said.

"It is not the Republican Steering Committee that has spoke; it is a bunch of pressure groups who want to castigate Bilbo and won't be satisfied unless he is hanged."

When the Steering Committee recessed a few minutes later, Chairman Taft, Republican, Ohio, told reporters that the Bilbo case still was under discussion with no formal decision.

However, he disclosed that Sen. Millikin, Republican, Colorado, has been named "to study procedural questions which would arise if such a move were taken."

The Campaign Investigating Committee has scheduled a meeting for 9:30 (EST) Saturday morning with indications that the Democratic members will agree to an open hearing in Mississippi on charges that Bilbo tried to intimidate Negroes from voting.

Ellender noted that the Senate War Investigating Committee has publicized an inquiry into alleged relations between Bilbo and a group of war contractors. He said he did not know whether the Committee would be able to substantiate the publicized reports and added "I don't believe in treating any man that way."

Ellender said he hoped the Committee would be able to "clear the decks" of all pending cases Saturday.

Election Day Assaults

The News and Courier

To The News and Courier:

In the paper I noticed that Representative L. Mendel Rivers demanded that Mr. Clark, attorney general of the United States, investigate the election day assault case in New York.

Sat. 11-16-46

Is that being done to get even with the Northern Liberals who from time to time asked an investigation for things that happen in the South?

Charleston, S. C.

In Mississippi in the recent primary there was a number of just such cases. To date I have not heard of anyone asking for an investigation. Is it justice we want? If so, why not ask for it for both races? I neglected to say in the beginning of the preceding paragraph that the people that were mistreated in Mississippi were negroes.

The Anti-Bilbo Campaign

Daily Worker New York, N. Y.

Editor, New York:

You will be glad to know that the Civil Rights Congres campaign to Oust Bilbo is getting terific response in New York.

CRC lawyers and investigators laid the legal basis for booting Bilbo out of the Senate. Fifty heroic Mississippians filed the formal petition with the Senate. Our job now is to back them up by getting a million signatures in our nationwide campaign.

The campaign work has jumped away beyond the capacity of the meager staff of CRCNY. We need volunteers to do all sorts of technical work. It is organized and waiting to be done. CRCNY is at 112 E. 19 St., Room 402, and is open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. every day and until 10 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays.

If any of your readers wish to volunteer for this work, will they telephone me at Orchard 4-5260.

Speakers Demand Bilbo Expulsion

The Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.
Sat. 9-14-46

WASHINGTON, D. C.—That man from Mississippi, who missed being kicked out of the State Senate by the margin of one vote in 1910, and served a short jail term for contempt of court in 1923, is now in the middle of another political scandal. A fearless and impartial investigation by the Senate Campaign Committee of U. S. Senator Bilbo's recent primary victory has been promised by Chairman Allen J. Ellender of Louisiana.

Announcement of the probe was made Friday, and it came just two weeks after The Pittsburgh Courier launched its all-out campaign to unseat the man whose "Bilbonic plague" has long proved a sore spot to the entire Nation.

Chief complaint against Bilbo, which prompted the Senate committee to probe the Mississippi primary campaign of "The Man," was made by Edgar G. Brown, director of the National Negro Council.

DEMANDS EXPULSION

Declaring that he was speaking for one million signers of a petition circulated by the council, Mr. Brown demanded the "expulsion of Senator Bilbo for disorderly behavior under Article 1, Section 5 of the United States Constitution; for membership in the Ku Klux Klan and espousal of white supremacy and Hitler tactics in appeals during his campaign for re-election to the U. S. Senate."

Citing one unlawful act, Mr. Brown pointed to the Dixie Senator's "widely circulated appeal for violence and terrorism published and broadcast thousands of times urging all red-blooded Anglo-Saxons of Mississippi to resort to any means to keep Negroes from voting in the July 2 primary of Mississippi."

HELD UP BY MAYBANK

Mr. Brown pointed out that the council called on the Senate Privileges and Elections Committee to take action long before the primary election was conducted in Mississippi. He said the Council request was turned over to the Senate Campaign Committee but no action was taken because of the negative stand taken by Senator Maybank of South Carolina. Senator Ellender was in the Philippines at the time.

At the same time the committee agreed to probe the Mississippi election it decided to investigate the Tennessee Democratic primary. Irregularities in campaign funds have been charged against Tennessee's Senator Kenneth D. McKellar.

CAPABLE MEN SOUGHT

Senator Ellender said investigators will be sent into these two States as soon as capable men can be found to do the jobs.

Mr. Brown backed up his accusations with sworn affidavits.

The committee also received an anti-Bilbo blast from Dr. James L. P. Rumble of New York City, as chairman of the Citizens' National League, Inc., and a letter from Ross Collins, defeated by Bilbo in the recent primary. Mr. Collins accused the Senator of accepting $25,000 from a war contractor in 1941.

DOUBTS JURISDICTION

Senator Ellender said he thought the Brown and Rumble protests should properly go to the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections since they did not involve campaign expenditures. He doubted the committee's jurisdiction on the Collins complaint, pointing out that it alleged a transaction almost six years ago rather than as a part of the 1946 primary. Nevertheless, he said, the committee intends to go ahead with a look into the Mississippi primary.

The Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

All of the complaints demand that the Senate deny a seat to Bilbo.

N. Y. DEMS BLAST BILBO

In New York last week the State Democratic party denounced Bilbo and Bilboism and agreed to support measures legally to eliminate Bilbo from Federal office and influence. This statement apparently pledged ex-Governor Herbert H. Lehman, as candidate for the U. S. Senate, to support the Senate move to refuse to seat the Mississippi Senator.

Sat. 9-14-46

U. S. Attorney Tom C. Clark is investigating incidents involving abridgement of civil rights in Mississippi. One case under investigation involves Etoy Fletcher, a veteran of Puckett, Miss., who said he was flogged by four white men after he attempted to register in Brandon, Miss.

Other members of the Senate Investigation Committee are Senator Burnet R. Maybank of South Carolina and Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma, Democrats, and Senators Styles Bridges of New Hampshire and Bourke B. Hickenlooper of Iowa, Republicans.

Bilbo

PM New York, N.Y.

Bilbo and the Web: The Supreme Court ruled yesterday that it cannot unseat Sen. Bilbo from his Senate seat because each House must be the judge of the qualifications of its own members. No doubt the Court is right. If the Kilgore Committee should now find the charges against Bilbo on the score of war graft backed up by the evidence, the Senate will have the problem of what to do about its own integrity. The curious fact is that a man like Bilbo can talk open fascist racism with impunity, yet would be vulnerable if money corruption should be shown. One wonders what could possibly be worse in Bilbo's undisclosed record than the words of inhumanity the whole nation knows about? We shall not have a civilized America until racist incitement is held to be as maggoty a crime as money bribery.

By All Means, Investigate Bilbo

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga.
Sun. 11-3-46

There should not be the slightest hesitancy on the part of the Senate War Investigating Committee in looking into charges that Mississippi's Theodore G. Bilbo received cash and costly favors from war contractors who profited by his influence.

The fact that Mr. Bilbo is a member of the Senate should only speed Committee action in launching a searching, full-scale investigation into the facts of the matter. If he is guilty, the nation's highest legislative body should immediately be purged of his influence. And, if he is innocent, both he and the Senate are entitled to be freed promptly from suspicion.

Utterly ridiculous, of course, are intimations that the charges stem from politics. Sen. Bilbo, having the Democratic nomination, would be elected on Tuesday even had he been convicted, party loyalty being what it is in Mississippi. And, on the national level, Sen. Bilbo's antics have long since embarrassed his party as much as they conceivably could.

By all means, let Sen. Bilbo's alleged malfeasances be investigated. And without the many delays which made a fiasco out of the probe of similar charges against Kentucky's Rep. May.

"BILBOISM" ON TRIAL

The Times New York, N.Y.
Sun. 11-17-46

It is now assured that Senator Theodore G. Bilbo of Mississippi will not take his seat in the next Senate without a full-dress investigation of his qualifications to serve. There is widespread impression that he has none, but it will be necessary to demonstrate this by legal means. More than Bilbo, the Man, will be on trial. The real issue is what has come to be known as "Bilboism," a combination of racial hatred, Ku Klux Klannery, intimidation at the polls and a narrow parochialism to which all national interests are subordinate.

In a long and checkered career Senator Bilbo has always thriven on martyrdom. It is his contention that northern "Yankee" interference in affairs which are strictly the concern of the South animates the general opposition he has aroused. Waving the banner of "white supremacy" has benefited him politically and he will doubtless capitalize on it once more in the coming inquiry. This time, fortunately, the specific complaint against him comes from citizens of his own State. It is charged that in the recent primary campaign, which he won by a scant margin of 4,000 votes, he publicly urged "every red-blooded white Anglo Saxon in Mississippi" to use any means to keep Negroes from voting, adding for good measure, "The time to see the nigger is the night before election." It is charged that this was incitement to violence and intimidation. Campaign contributions said to have been made by certain war contractors are also under investigation, and the Senator's admission that he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan will be duly noted.

There is no doubt that the citizens of any State have the right to send to the Senate anybody they please, even a demagogue like Bilbo. There is no doubt that once accepted by that august body a Senator has the right to say whatever he pleases, no matter how blatantly, and even though, as Speaker Reed once put it, "he never opens his mouth without subtracting from the sum of human knowledge." But the right to judge the process by which a Senator reaches office is reserved to the Senate itself. Its members can vote as they see fit to seat him or refuse to seat him. Senator Bilbo will have a fair hearing. The chairman of the investigating committee is himself a Southern Senator from a neighboring State. The hearings should be highly instructive to a public now thoroughly fed up with "Bilboism."

IVES CALLS BILBO SENATE 'DISGRACE'

The Times New York, N.Y.

Hopes He Can Be Legally Kept From Seat—Also Looks to End of 'Un-American' Filibuster

Thurs. 11-21-46

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ALBANY, Nov. 20 — Senator-elect Irving M. Ives said today that he would support "any constitutional process" by which Sen. Theodore Bilbo of Mississippi could be prevented from taking his seat in January.

Pointing out that this could be done by a simple majority vote whereas unseating would require two-thirds, he expressed the belief that the Senate was approaching the matter in "the sound way."

"I think Bilbo is a disgrace to the United States Senate and I think it is a disgrace that a man like that is in any office," he said. "I am unqualifiedly opposed to Bilbo.

"I don's think Bilbo represents the people of Mississippi. I don't think he could represent any part of the United States today.

"He is a menace, that fellow. I dread the thought of sitting in the Senate with him. We have never had anything like that in our Legislature."

Mr. Ives visited the Capitol today for the first time since his election and met newspaper men in the office which he occupied during his tene years as majority leader of the State Assembly.

Stating that he would go to Washington next month, he said that he had not requested any committee assignments and that he would devote the first few months to "getting my feet on the ground."

He expressed hope that something could be done to abolish the filibuster, which he described as "unDemocratic and un-American."

He felt that rent control was "one of the things that will have to be kept a while," at least until the serious housing shortage in the urban areas had been met.

Mr. Ives will hold his position as dean of the State School of Industrial and Labor Relations at Cornell unttil the Board of Trustees can choose his successor. Since his appointment last July, he has received no pay, although the post carries an annual salary of $10,000.

NEGRO LEADERS ASK REJECTION OF BILBO

Washington, Aug. 30.—(U.P.)—Four Negro spokesmen demanded here that the 80th Congress refuse to seat Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo, D., Minn., in January because of his acknowledged membership in the Ku Klux Klan and his efforts to block Negro suffrage in the South.

Bilbo, victor in Mississippi's recent Democratic primaries, took a 15-minute verbal hiding from the four Negro leaders, who were allotted radio time by the Mutual Broadcasting System to answer a broadcast he made over the same network on Aug. 9.

His critics were Dr. Joseph L. Johnson, dean of Howard University School of Medicine; Dr. Max Yergan, president of the Council of African Affairs; Thomas Richardson, international vice-president of the United Public Workers of America (CIO), and Charles H. Houston, chairman of the legal committee of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The speakers urged the Senate to refuse to seat "the man," despite his reelection, arguing that membership in the Klan automatically disqualifies him from taking the oath as a Senator.

Bilbo said in his Aug. 9 broadcast that he was a member of Klan No. 40 in Mississippi.

THE Facts IN OUR NEWS

BY HORACE WHITE

Chronicle

BILBO

The daily press got very disturbed over the recent efforts of Senator Bilbo from Mississippi to get himself reelected. The Senators of the United States became concerned about the tactics Senator Bilbo used to influence some of the electorate of the state of Mississippi.

Horace White

Senator Bilbo was so desperate to hold his seat in the Senate that he preached from platform and pulpit "white supremacy," although his own actions were an indication of white inferiority. Sat-7-13-46

Mr. Bilbo has always preached "white supremacy" from the time he first took his seat in the Senate. That has been his tune and he has stuck to it persistently. He went one step further this time, than he has ever gone before—he urged the white electors of the state of Mississippi to keep black electors from the polls by violence if necessary.

Once it has been stated that a man who is a Senator of the United States of America has used such tactics to gain election, the issue becomes greater than whether or not Mr. Bilbo was the man who did it. Mr. Bilbo removes the fight from himself and throws his type of campaign into the laps of the American people. Detroit

The Senate has the constitutional right to judge the qualifications of any member of the Senate to sit in the Senate. By all rules judging qualifications of a person to sit as a member of the United States Senate, Senator Bilbo has disqualified himself. Therefore, the Senate of the United States, in order to remain the highest legislative body with respect of the electors in the United States, must disqualify Senator Bilbo.

What Senator Bilbo may say about a race of people in his asinine ravings may be unimportant to the Senate, although it should not be, but when a man stoops to the level of disavowing his belief in the Constitution of the United States and seeks openly to thwart the operations of the Constitution of the United States, such a man has disqualified himself for a place of honor in the American government. Mr. Bilbo certainly has disqualified himself, but if the Senate does act on his disqualification, then the Senate gradually disqualifies itself to represent the people

Let us take for example that a very wealthy Senator spent millions of dollars to get himself elected, and such spending by the Senator was public knowledge, and said Senator boasted about the fact. The Senate would immediately start an investigation to disqualify the said Senator from taking his seat. Why? Not because he spent the money, foolish though that was, but because the Senator used the money to thwart and to hinder free election. Tues

Is it not logical and reasonable that the Senate should be as persistent in the disqualification of Mr. Bilbo, who has used words to exhort people in the state of Mississippi, which state is a member of the Union and supposedly adheres to the Constitution of the United States, to flaunt the Constitution of the United States and the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States? Sat. 7-13-46

If the Senate does not disqualify Mr. Bilbo, then we must stop talking about what Mr. Bilbo says and begin to criticize long and loud the things that our honorable Senates does not do to protect its right to respectfully legislate for the people. If the Senate of the United States permits, Mr. Bilbo to take his seat after his open defiance of the sacred authority of the Constitution of the United States, then the Senate loses the right to be our highest legislative body. The Senate then becomes a party to Mr. Bilbo's opposition to the Constitution, except where the Constitution is convenient. To use the Constitution as a convenient instrument is the first step in the destruction of our democracy. If Mr. Bilbo is seated in the Senate after all he has done, then history can say the first blow that was struck at the integrity of the Senate was struck by the Senators themselves.

Senate Group Calls Meeting To Consider Probe of Bilbo

Richmond Va. Times Dispatch

WASHINGTON, June 27—(UP)—The Senate Privileges and Elections Committee tonight scheduled a special Saturday meeting to look into reports that Senator Theodore G. Bilbo (D-Miss.), has urged "red-blooded Mississippians" to keep Negroes from voting in the State's July 2 primary election.

Chairman Theodore Francis Green (D-R. I.), called the meeting to consider a formal request for a full-scale Senate investigation made by one of Bilbo's colleagues, Senator Glen H. Taylor (D-Idaho).

Taylor, who has accused Bilbo of borrowing "Hitler's tactics" in an effort to obtain re-election to the Senate, will appear before the committee.

Taylor urged in a letter to Green "take immediate steps to investigate this matter, so that Senator Bilbo's name may be cleared if he is innocent, and so that no citizens of the United States will be discriminated against in his right to vote because of color." Fri 6-28-46

Senator H. Alexander Smith, (R-N. J.), called on the Justice Department to supply him with all the information it has on the Bilbo incident. Smith is a member of the Privileges and Elections Committee. He described the Bilbo remark as "a terrible thing if it's true," and added:

"If it's true we'll have to move in on it."

He said an investigation of a Senate colleague would be "embarrassing" to all involved, but that an inquiry should be conducted because of "the principle of the thing."

Attorney-General Tom C. Clark announced earlier this week that the Justice Department was checking into alleged anti-Negro activities in connection with the election. Fri 6-28-46

His statement followed filing of an affidavit by the Association for the Advancement of Colored People charging that a Negro war veteran had been beaten and threatened because he tried to register for the primary.

WILL Bilbo wear his KKK robes when he takes his seat in the Senate? Friday

Wouldn't put it past him.

So far no one in the Administration has uttered a peep on the spectacle of a Senator admittedly operating in an outfit dedicated to murder and violence defiance of the 14th, 15th and 16th amendments. Daily Worker

It seems that it's OK to defy the Constitution so long as that defiance is in the interest of landlords and exploiters of the people. New York, N.Y.

Of course, there's an ugly suspicion that many of Bilbo's more respectable colleagues privately share his views. Even if they don't, they know that the Bilbos are useful in maintaining their class privileges. But public opinion cannot tolerate Bilboism either in Mississippi or in Washington. Kick Bilbo out of the Senate. The Senate is on trial.

Negro Leaders Answer Bilbo

Daily Worker Washington Bureau Daily Worker New York N.Y.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—The entire nation has a moral responsibility to see that Sen. Bilbo is not seated in the 80th Congress, Charles H. Houston, NAACP attorney, said in a round-table radio discussion broadcast by 212 Mutual stations tonight.

Others who participated in the round table were Dr. Joseph L. Johnson, Southern Conference for Human Welfare, moderator; Dr. Max Yergan, executive director of the National Negro Congress, and Thomas Richardson, vice-president of the United Public Workers, CIO. Mutual made time available to the four Negro leaders to answer Bilbo's views on white supremacy, expressed by the Senator on the "Meet the Press" program Aug. 9 Fri 8-30-46

SOUTHERN WHITE WOMANHOOD HAS BEEN saved again. The cause is worthy but the price is high: six more years of Bilbo and two of Rankin. We have no patience with Northern fuddy-duddies who insist that Bilbo was elected because we Yankees were not polite enough to mind our business. Far from having been elected by a commonwealth outraged at "outside interference," Bilbo was not elected by Mississippi at all. He can be regarded as the choice of his state only in the sense that Hamilton Fish might be regarded as the choice of New York in a balloting confined to the Union League Club. Mississippi has roughly 1,250,000 potential voters, but fewer than 200,000—16 to 17 per cent—showed up at the polls. (New York usually reports something like 77 per cent in a Senatorial campaign.) Of more than a half-million potential Negro voters, not more than two thousand thought it wise to put in an appearance at the election booths. Their reluctance was due in part to the poll tax. In larger part it was due to Senator Bilbo's loud and insistent advice to Mississippi whites to keep their black fellow-citizens from voting by types of persuasion that go with night-riding and misused sheets. Bilbo's ugly threats were a probable violation of law and entitle him to immediate attention from the Department of Justice. Even pending such action, there is no need for the United States: Gentlemen, you know as well as all of America the advice given by one Bilbo, of Mississippi, to his henchmen, what to do to keep Negroes from voting. Kill them if necessary, is my understanding, anything to keep them from the polls.

This is the Fourth of July. It is the grand day that our forefathers' blood made possible for liberty and Americanism. But did it? Not while Bilbos sit in Congress and make our laws. His conduct is nothing short of crime and open rebellion against the Constitution. I want to live in a republic that gives safety to all its inhabitants. That will not be the case if you administer the oath of a high office to one who openly advocates treasonable disfranchisement

Wants Bilbo Impeached

The Louisville Courier-Journal, Ky.

To the Editor of The Courier-Journal:

The following is an open letter to the Senate of the United States:

Gentlemen, you know as well as all of America that "each House shall be the judge of the elections, returns and qualifications of its own members." It should have no trouble proving Theodore G. Bilbo unfit for membership on all three counts to American citizens.

I think the American people should demand the impeachment of Bilbo and all such rabble-rousers. It is your duty as elected representatives of the people of this great country no longer to allow this tyrant to pose as an honorable member of the Senate of this great country. You, gentlemen, are on trial if you continue this man in office. His own utterances, in which he gloats, make him a stench in the nostrils of all liberty-loving people.

KKK in the Senate

New York Daily Worker New York

WILL the U.S. Senate impeach Sen. Bilbo now that he has admitted to being a member of the Ku Klux Klan?

Bilbo has publicly stated not only his theories of "white supremacy," akin to the Nazi theories; he has also stated his contempt for the 14th, 15th and 16th amendments of the U.S. Constitution which say that no man shall be deprived of his rights because of race, color or creed. Mon 8-9-46

Will the Senate impeach Bilbo?

We doubt it, unless public opinion gets up on its hind legs and kicks good and hard.

The U.S. Senate is no sacred place, above the struggle of classes and economic interests. It is the stage where such struggles are waged. Only it happens to be loaded overwhelmingly with gents who love Wall Street, the trusts and the Big Money. There are some fighting liberals in it, though one hand could tally them off and leave a few fingers still uncounted. Mon 8-9-46

It goes without saying that there is not a single member of the Senate who believes in a new social system to replace the present rule of private capitalist property over the majority of the American working people.

Nevertheless, even this Senate is supposed to uphold democratic rights. And it is up to the progressive forces of the country to see that it acts to oust the Mississippi fuehrer who claims he was "elected" but who was "elected" by about 7 percent of the adult voting population.

It is a laugh to see Bilbo picking Sen. Taft as his foe, even red-baiting the cold-eyed Ohio money-grubber as "courting the Reds." Taft's game is to get a little free publicity as a "liberal" to take the curse off his murder of price control. It would be a great day for the country if both Taft and Bilbo were kicked out of office.

Will the Senate impeach its KKK member?

Plenty Of Precedent Exists For Purging Bilbo From Senate

A nation-wide campaign has been undertaken to exclude the Bilbo man of Mississippi from the United States Senate. (Bilbo also means "fetter".) The curtain raising will be at a dinner tomorrow night at the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York City with George Marshal, Paul Robeson, Dashiell Hammett, Quentin Reynolds, Vincent Sheean, William Jay Schieffelin and others taking the lead. Bilbo should have been regurgitated long before this. But an emetic will not now be necessary. The Senate is in a position to do an act of self-purging that would be greatly becoming. If, as alleged, this product from the cane-brakes of Mississippi was elected Senator by "fraud and violence" and other unconstitutional methods, he can simply be denied the right to take the oath of office.

Bilbo's Fat Fee

The acceptance of money by members of Congress for influence brought to bear in obtaining contracts does not seem to worry some members of Congress even when caught. To what extent this immoral practice has been going on no one knows for sure. But there has been enough nauseating gas escaping to arouse suspicion in the minds of many. So far as "Chanticleer" Bilbo is concerned, the charge has been made that he accepted $25,000 for obtaining a contract for a constituent. This allegation was openly made by Ross A. Collins, for many years a respected and reputable member of the House. On the authority of Mr. Collins and the Clarksdale Daily Press I have made this accusation in my column. Apparently Senator Bilbo regards the charge as too trivial for his attention.

And yet I remember that William Lorimer of Illinois, even after he had taken his seat in the United States Senate, was expelled when it was proved that he had been elected by corrupt means. I remember that, subsequently, Frank L. Smith of Illinois was not allowed to take his seat because of an improper sluicing of money in his behalf, particularly by Samuel Insull, the corrupt and corrupting private uility magnate. I remember that a man by the name of Newberry, of Michigan, who spent more money than was permissible under the law, was persuaded to resign from the exclusive club that now takes pride in Bilbo and O'Daniel and McCarran and Tydings. William S. Vare of Pennsylvania also found the Senate door shut in his face by a vote of 58 to 22 for corrupt practices.

Now these four men were Republicans who were sternly frowned upon by a Republican Senate. I wonder if a Democratic Senate wants to go down in history as having fewer scruples and lower moral standards than was the case with a Republican Senate? This is no time for the Senate merely to yawn before turning over on its other side and going soundly to sleep again.

Inflammation of the Mouth

During his primary campaign Bilbo, apparently beginning already to show symptoms of that "inflammation of the mouth" for which he later summitted to medical treatment, went up and down the State of Mississippi intimidating Negroes and shouting that whatever means might be necessary should be adopted to keep them from voting. He had no rival in his stirring up of base race passions except former Governor Talmadge of Georgia. Bilboism and Talmadgism are both responsible for the brutal race riots that have broken out in some parts of the South since election day. Certain types of whites, who themselves live on the ragged edge of an economic system that does not "pass prosperity around" cannot be altogether blamed if they take their cue from a Bilbo or Talmadge.

Probably it would have a more salutory effect on the country if Bilbo were denied his seat in the United States Senate because of his scornful flouting of the rights guaranteed to Negroes under the Constitution of the United States. Of course a Bilbo could do this without a qualm of his atrophied conscience nut certainly no man even a little higher up in the scale of civilization could raise his right hand as a United States Senator and swear with his tongue in his cheek to uphold and defend the laws and the Constitution of the United States when he would not be there at all if he had not flouted the laws and Constitution of the United States. Perhaps it is better to raise the issue against Bilbo on this clear Constitutional and moral issue. However, it should not be overlooked that previous Republican Senates excluded Republican moral misfits from membership in that body on account of the illegal and immoral use of money, damaging charges with respect to which have also been brought against Senator Bilbo.

Bilbo Faces Senate Inquiry

PM New York, N.Y. Tues. 10-15-46

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Francis D. Flanagan, assistant counsel of the Senate War Investigating Committee yesterday said the Committee was investigating allegations that Sen. Theodore Bilbo (D., Miss.) received a $25,000 campaign contribution from a war contractor.

Sen. Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), a member of the Senate group, previously had said an inquiry was under way, but did not disclose its nature.

Flanagan did not supply details in telling a reporter about the investigation.

Ross Collins, who unsuccessfully opposed Bilbo in the Mississippi Democratic Senatorial primary, had charged during the campaign that Bilbo accepted $25,000 from a war contractor.

Meanwhile the Supreme Court rejected a request that it bar Bilbo from his Senate seat.

The request was made by James L. P. Rumble, of New York City.

BILBO ON THE SENATORIAL CARPET

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

The latest word from Washington is that the Senate War Investigations Committee will take over the inquiry into the record of Mississippi's Senator Theodore G. Bilbo. The Campaign Expenditures Committee recently declined to bother itself about the Bilbo record or activities, and thus to all practical purposes gave the Mississippi Senator a clean bill of political health for his third term in the Senate.

Wed. 11-6-46

But a special force of committee investigators apparently uncovered enough evidence of questionable conduct on the part of the Mississippi Senator in connection with certain war contractors to warrant a scrutiny by the War Investigating Committee. The evidence is so incriminating that the acting counsel to the Committee feels safe in giving publicity to some of the charges against Senator Bilbo, among which is the charge that the Senator accepted $33,750 in checks from a couple of war contractors who found the senatorial influence of Mr. Bilbo profitable.

Another "chief charge" to be investigated by the Senate committee is one having to do with Bilbo's "dream house number 2," built by war contractors whom Mr. Bilbo had "befriended" in the matter of war contracts. Still another charge toward which the Committee has turned its inquisitorial eye is the allegation that Senator Bilbo used funds "pressured" from minor contractors on the pretense that they would be used to erect a parsonage near the Senator's Poplarville estate.

If the investigation pans out, the Bilbo scandal could make the Andrew J. May revelations look anemic. But that will be the end of it—the War Investigations Committee lacks the power to discipline members of the Senate, as does the Campaign Expenditures Committee which refused to review the campaign conduct of the Mississippi Senator. It is, therefore, difficult to see why the former Mead Committee has scheduled the Bilbo investigation "sometime before the new Congress meets."

It is just possible that the Senate Committee may hope to force the Bilbo matter before the entire Senate for action. The Senate is supposedly a little more sensitive of its reputation than the lower House, and if the scheduled investigation reveals the Mississippi Senator in a bad enough light, there is a possibility that the Senate may refuse to seat the solon from Poplarville, Mississippi. But remembering the case of Congressman May of Kentucky, and the indifference of the Senate Committee on Campaign Expenditures, there is little ground for optimism.

Responsible for Bilbos

"Liberals" are responsible for the Bilbos in congress and spokesmen of them know it, Wed. The New York politicians to shut up too. To be sure, it is not difficult for them about the Bilbos it is likely that Southern to fool the boobs to whom a Curley is a another kind than Bilbo. These Northern states would send to the United States senate saint.

Kilgore Group to Hear Evidence In Private

By ALEXANDER H. UHL
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—Despite his blustering denials that he has been up to anything wrong, Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo (D., Miss.), of "Dear Dago" memory, now faces a double-barreled investigation into his anti-Negro campaign provocations and his relations with war contractors.

The Kilgore War Investigation Committee yesterday voted to begin closed hearings on Wednesday on charges that Bilbo accepted money and other gifts from Mississippi contractors during the past four years. A subcommittee was set up under the chairmanship of Sen. James M. Mead (D., N. Y.). The other members are Sens. James M. Tunnell (D., Del) and Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.).

The committee action was taken after hearing an outline of the charges against Bilbo by Francis D. Flanagan, assistant committee counsel who also assisted in preparation of the hearings on the war contract charges against Rep. Andrew J. May (D., Ky.) who was defeated in the elections. It is certain that Bilbo will be invited to appear and tell his side of the story.

The Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee voted Saturday to start public hearings at Jackson, Mich., on Dec. 2, into charges that Bilbo urged the intimidation of Negro voters. The fact that the hearings are to be held in Mississippi has brought protests from Negro organizations, which fear that witnesses will be threatened with death.

Edgar G. Brown, director of the National Negro Council, said:

"There is no question in any rational person's mind," he said, "that Negro witnesses who told the truth in Mississippi would not live to return home from the courtroom."

However, the committee takes the position that the witnesses in Mississippi should be given priority. There can be no doubt that the Jackson hearings will be held in an atmosphere highly congenial to Bilbo.

But the Kilgore hearings are quite another story. They will deal

For several weeks prior to June 17, 1946, I worked trying to get Negro citizens registered to vote, especially veterans. No threats were made to me personally, but all the Negroes had read in the papers the statement by Senator Bilbo telling white people to use any means to keep Negroes from voting and the statement by Congressman Rankin telling Negroes not to try to vote. Many were afraid to try to register or vote because of these statements.

This affidavit was signed by a Holly Springs, Miss., man. It and others are in the hands of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, which will start hearings next month.

I went up the walk toward the door and as I got close to these three men one of them got up and came toward me. As he did so, the officer turned his back and went in the door. The man said to me: "Where are you going?" I showed him my poll tax receipts. He swung at me with his fist, but I dodged and the blow missed.

Here is what happened when a Negro citizen of Gulfport tried to vote in the July 2, 1946, primary.

I went to the Pike County Court House in Magnolia that morning and asked for the certificate. They asked me what I wanted it for and I told them to vote. A white man in the office said: "What kind of flowers do you like, old man?" [illegible]

The signer of this affidavit is a 78-year-old Negro resident of McComb.

SILENCE IMPOSED ON BILBO INQUIRY

The Times New York, N.Y.

But Closed Session of Mead Group Is Said to Bare No Link to War Contracts

Thurs. 11-21-46

By C. P. TRUSSELL

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20 — In sharp contrast with the ballyhoo preceding the Congressional elections, the investigation of Senator Theodore G. Bilbo of Mississippi by a special Senate subcommittee began and was quickly put under wraps today.

The silence was unusual even for this group, composed of Senators James M. Mead of New York, chairman, James M. Tunnell, Democrat of Delaware, and Homer Ferguson, Republican of Michigan. Planning and decisions on hearings were left to them in the assignment by the parent Senate Investigating Committee.

Another hearing may be held tomorrow if witnesses arrive from Mississippi and it also will be closed. It was emphasized that public hearings were unlikely until witnesses had been heard first in private, a procedure that was followed in the committee's investigations into military and war production matters.

It has been explained that this investigation is distinct from that undertaken by the special Senate Committee on Campaign Expenditures, also inquiring into Senator Bilbo's fitness to be seated for a third term, which is concentrating on the campaign expenditures in the 1946 primary election.

Army Engineers Testify

The day's ninety-minute session of the Mead group, it was learned, was focused on contracts for the building of two air fields in Mississippi, Keesler at Biloxi and Key at Meridian.

Advance statements concerning investigators' reports have indicated that Senator Bilbo was influential in the awarding of the contracts and had accepted "campaign contributions" and other material favors from the successful contractors in 1942.

Called to supply orientation on the airfield projects, the witnesses were Col. J. L. Person of the Corps of Engineers and Douglas I. McKay, a retired colonel now in a civilian post with the engineers.

When Senator Mead emerged from the hearing room, he put a finger to his lips and emitted a loud "Sh-h-h-h!" Then he announced that it had been agreed that no information from the Army Engineers would be revealed. This, he added, was "a strictly executive session."

It was indicated later in an authoritative quarter, however, that nothing had been entered in the record that had definitely associated the Bilbo influence with the $20,000,000 to $35,000,000 of contracts for Mississippi airfield construction.

The subcommittee was said to have decided to recall the War Department representatives for further questioning later, also in closed session.

Meanwhile, the campaign investigating group continued preparations for hearings in Mississippi. The first will be held early next month at Jackson, principally into allegations that Mr. Bilbo so conducted his campaign as to incite intimidation of prospective Negro voters.

Committee Ratios Studied

Aside from investigations, Senate Republicans indicated today that their control over at least four key committees in the new Congress might be expanded beyond the narrow ratio indicated by the election returns.

The committees on which the Republicans particularly wish to avoid the general seven-to-six ratio in membership, prescribed by the Reorganization Act, are the Appropriations, Labor, Banking and Currency and the new Armed Services Committees.

While the Reorganization Act limits the number of Senate committees to fifteen, it is pointed out, the election left only forty-five Democrats in the Senate.

With the general ratio of fifty-one Republicans to forty-five Democrats, seven Republicans and six Democrats could be put on four-teen committees, leaving an eleven-to-ten margin for the oversized Appropriations body.

But the Reorganization Act also provides that no minority Senator may have more than two committee memberships. Hence places would be available for only ninety-four committee memberships.

Senators Studying Charges on War Contracts Call for Open Testimony in Capital

New York, N.Y. Sun. 11-24-46

By JOHN D. MORRIS

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23—A Senate War Investigating subcommittee announced today that hearings on alleged financial dealings with war contractors by Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, Democrat, of Mississippi, would be opened to the public on Dec. 12.

PUBLIC HEARINGS ORDERED ON BILBO

The Times

The subcommittee, headed by Senator James M. Mead, Democrat, of New York, has been holding secret hearings on the matter for the last four days.

The decision to take testimony in public was announced following another secret meeting today at which Wall Doxey, Senate Sergeant-at-Arms, was a witness. Mr. Doxey was defeated for renomination to the Senate in 1942, the year in which Senator Bilbo is alleged to have accepted $33,750 in contributions from two war contractors whom he is charged with having aided to get big construction jobs, according to the charges.

Francis D. Flanagan, assistant chief counsel of the Senate War Investigating Committee, said on Oct. 31 that it was indicated these funds were used by Senator Bilbo not for himself but for another Senatorial candidate.

Maintaining a policy of silence adopted when the secret hearings began, members and attachés of the committee would not discuss what had transpired at today's meeting beyond the fact that it had been decided to hold open hearings. Mr. Doxey likewise refused to comment.

The hearings will be held in Washington while the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee is taking testimony in Mississippi, beginning Dec. 2, on charges that Senator Bilbo incited the intimidation of Negroes in last summer's Democratic primary and was renominated because many Negroes stayed away from the polls.

Mr. Flanagan said today that Senator Bilbo had been invited to appear or send representatives to the Washington hearings. There was no evidence, however, that the subcommittee would attempt to force him to testify, as the full committee did last July in the case of Representative Andrew J. May, Democrat, of Kentucky.

Senator Bilbo has informed the Mead subcommittee that he would be unable to attend hearings in Washington. He has accepted the Campaign Investigating Committee's invitation to testify at the Mississippi hearings.

In a letter declining the former invitation Mr. Bilbo asked:

"How can I properly defend myself against a charge unless I know what it is in advance?"

The chief charges, Mr. Flanagan told a press conference on Oct. 31 before adoption by the committee of a post-election policy of secrecy, were that Mr. Bilbo accepted money and other favors from war contractors in return for "influence" exerted in obtaining Government contracts for $20 to $35 million of airfield construction in Mississippi.

The favors, according to Mr. Flanagan, included construction of an artificial lake, with "Dream House No. 2" in its center, on Mr. Bilbo's Poplarville (Miss.) estate.

Another phase of the investigation, according to the assistant counsel, anvolves a parsonage built during the war for the Juniper Grove Baptist Church, which adjoins the estate.

BILBO CAN BE OUSTED

by Max Gordon

REGARDLESS OF WHO TRIES to claim the credit, the ouster of Sen. Bilbo of Mississippi from the Senate would be a terrific victory for progress and democracy.

The people want him out. They have said so loud and long. That includes Negroes, Italians, Jews, Catholics and just plain lovers of democracy of all religions and nationalities, all of whom have good reason to hate his guts.

Because of this popular hatred for the Mississippi Ku Kluxer and all he represents, the Republicans in the Senate have taken up the issue. It would be a serious mistake, though, to depend on the GOP Senate leaders to do the job on him.

LAST WEEK, the Republican steering committee, headed by Sen. Robert A. Taft, announced it would try to prevent Bilbo from taking his oath of office in January, when the new Congress meets. This would automatically bar him from his seat.

Only a simple majority is needed for this. The Republicans have that majority. Besides, there are several northern Democratic Senators who would gladly join in. So it would seem that everything is set for getting rid of the arrogant, swaggering fascist.

Sled. 11-20-46

But it turns out there is a little gimmick in the Republican plan. For after announcing the Republican steering committee decision, Taft said he did not at all mean that the Republicans were going to vote against seating Bilbo. What he meant, he said, was that they would do it if it should be shown that Bilbo had done wrong.

Who is to show that Bilbo had done wrong?

TWO COMMITTEES are surveying his conduct. One is the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, headed by polltaxer Allen J. Ellender of Louisiana. This committee is investigating the reports that Bilbo, in the course of the primary campaign against him, had threatened violence against Negroes who dared to vote. Large numbers were thus kept from the polls. Bilbo won out by a narrow 4,000 margin.

The second committee is the Committee On War Production, headed by Sen. Kilgore of W. Virginia, which is scheduled to investigate reports that Bilbo took bribes in return for getting war contracts.

The most important accusations against Bilbo, those on which the real case against him is based, are those before the Ellender Committee.

The committee consists of two polltaxers (Ellender and Sen. Maybank of South Carolina), a reactionary Democrat (Johnson of Colorado), and two reactionary Republicans (Bridges of New Hampshire and Hickenlooper of Iowa). Ellender has said bluntly he believes the case against Bilbo is bunk.

He has, however, granted public hearings with the idea of riddling the evidence, which has been gathered by the Civil Rights Congress.

HE HAS SCHEDULED the hearings in Mississippi and has ruled tentatively that only native Mississippians can testify. The Civil Rights Congress is demanding that hearings also be held in Washington and that others besides Mississippians be allowed to testify.

It fears that if the hearings are to be held only in Mississippi, Negro and other witnesses it has lined up will be intimidated.

There is considerable danger that the committee hearings will end in a whitewash unless public intervention prevents it. This will allow the Republicans to slip out from under on the plea that there is no case against Bilbo. They will doubtless try to make capital of the fact that a Democratic-dominated committee was responsible for clearing him. But Bilbo will remain in the Senate.

TO PREVENT THIS, Anti-Bilbo sentiment in the country needs to be organized at once and directed at the committee. The people should insist, among other things, that open hearings also be held by the committee in Washington.

Even if the committee is compelled to find against Bilbo, there is a fear that many Republicans, whose policies closely resembles Bilbo's, will not go through with voting against him. Hence, public pressure has to be developed at the same time against the entire Senate.

2 Army Officers Testify In Investigation of Bilbo

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky. Thurs. 11-21-46

Washington, Nov. 20 (AP) — Secrecy veiled the first session today of a three-man Senate subcommittee inquiring into the relations between Senator Bilbo (D., Miss.) and a group of contractors who built Army airfields in his home state.

Further Hearings Planned.

Col. Douglas McKay, retired, and Col. J. L. Person, both from the office of the Chief of Army Engineers, spent an hour and a half behind closed doors with the war investigating subcommittee headed by Senator Mead (D., N. Y.).

They told reporters they were present to testify about the building of Keesler Field at Biloxi, Miss., and Key Field, at Meridian during the war. Neither had any comment on leaving the chamber.

Mead and other committee members, Senators Ferguson (R., Mich.) and Tunnell (D., Del.) declined comment other than to say that additional closed hearings would be held when more witnesses are available. Committee Counsel George Meader said the next session probably would be held tomorrow. Some Mississippi witnesses slated to testify today were reported delayed by poor flying weather.

The inquiry, described by committee members as uncontrolled with a parallel probe of Bilbo authorized by the special campaign investigating committee, centers on what they describe as allegations that Bilbo received money from war contractors and used the funds in an unsuccessful attempt to elect Wall Doxey to the Senate in 1942. Doxey, now Senate sergeant-at-arms, denied knowledge of any such expenditures.

Government contractors are forbidden to contribute to political campaigns.

Mead's Decision Makes It Possible For the Senate to Unseat Bilbo

PM New York, N. Y. Sun. 11-3-46

By I. F. Stone
Washington Editor

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—That "Dear Dago" letter to a New Yorker may yet cost Bilbo his seat. Thanks largely to Sen. James Mead of New York, the Bilbo case will be the curtain-raiser when the new Senate convenes in January, and the chances are better than ordinarily realized that the Mississippi demagogue may be barred.

Bilbo was safe as long as the Mississippi investigation was the exclusive property of the special Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee under Sen. Allen J. Ellender of Louisiana. With Sens. Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma and Burnet R. Maybank of South Carolina, the Southern Democrats have a majority of three on this committee. It has two Northern Republican members, Sens. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire and Bourke B. Hickenlooper of Iowa. Neither progressives.

But when Mead resigned as Chairman of the Senate Committee to investigate the national defense program, he kept his place on the special subcommittee that body set up for its own inquiry into the Mississippi primaries. The committee is in a strong position because five of its members, Mead, Tom Connally (D., Tex.), James M. Tunnell (D., Del.), Harley M. Kilgore (D., W. Va.), and Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) are also members of the Senate Privileges and Elections Committee, which will decide whether to place the Bilbo case before the Senate.

The anti-Bilbo forces here figure that it will take only one other Republican vote on the 16-man Privileges and Elections Committee to refer the case to the Senate.

The Chairman, Theodore Green (D., R. I.), Carl A. Hatch (D., N. M.), Abe Murdock (D., Utah) and Charles Gossett (D., Ida.) are expected to vote with Mead, Tunnell, Kilgore and Ferguson for submitting the case to the Senate. There are, beside Ferguson five other Republican members of the committee: Bridges (N. H.), E. H. Moore (Okla.), George A. Wilson (Ia.), H. Alexander Smith (N. J.), and Homer E. Capehart (Ind.). The anti-Bilbo forces count at least on Smith, which would give them a 9-7 majority.

The procedure will be for the special Mead subcommittee to hold hearings after the election and to make a report to the Senate Privileges and Election Committee before the end of the year. The hope is to have the case ready for submission when the Senate convenes. The Senate can refuse to seat Bilbo by majority vote, but once sworn in, it would take a two-thirds vote to unseat him.

Should the Mead subcommittee prove its charges, Bilbo would face the possibility of legal prosecution. This is the legal case involved in the allegations made public Thursday by Francis D. Flanagan, assistant committee counsel.

Pending bankruptcy proceedings by two war contractors in the U. S. District Court at Hattiesburg, Miss., brought to light a ledger item: "Doubtful accounts, Theo. G. Bilbo, $20,000," and a $5000 check to Bilbo by one of the contractors.

Should it be proved that these two payments totaling $25,000 were made to Bilbo for helping the contractors obtain war contracts, he would be liable under the U. S. Code, Section 202, Title 18. This makes it a crime punishable with disqualification from office, a $10,000 fine and two years in jail.

Bilbo in 1942 entered into a contract with Mike T. Morrissey, another contractor, to farm Bilbo's lands in Pearl River County for five years. The latter built an artificial lake with "a dreamhouse" on it for Bilbo, furnished the house and gave Bilbo a Cadillac. Morrissey had a contract at the Jackson Army Base at the time of the partnership agreement and later, allegedly with Bilbo's aid, got a contract at Kessler Field, Biloxi, Miss.

Should it be proved that the favorable terms accorded Bilbo in the partnership, the artificial lake, the house and the Cadillac were given to Bilbo for aid in obtaining a contract, he would be subject to the same penalties of disqualification, $10,000 fine and two years in jail.

In April, 1943, a check was deposited in the name of the "Juniper Grove Baptist Church Special Fund . . . by Sen. Bilbo." The check was from the M. T. Reed Construction Co., and the Mead investigation committee has a photostat of the check.

Bilbo is alleged to have solicited this and other contributions for the church and then retained control of the funds. If proved, this would subject him to a fine of $5000 or five years in jail.

The Mead committee confined itself to these charges (1) because as a war-contracts investigating committee, this is the extent of its jurisdiction, and (2) because, from the standpoint of political strategy, these charges may be more effective than those submitted to the Ellender committee.

These complaints have grown out of Bilbo's blatant admission that he is a Klansman and his interference with the right of Negroes to vote in the Mississippi primary. These complaints involve violations of the Hatch Act and the Civil Rights Act passed to enforce the 15th Amendment.

The Ellender committee investigators are checking the facts and the primary election. The record shows that there were 500,000 Negroes qualified to vote, but only 3000 dared cast their ballots after Bilbo's tirade calling on "red-blooded, Anglo-Saxon men of Mississippi to resort to any means" to keep Negroes from the polls, and "if you don't know what that means, you are just plain dumb." Bilbo won by a margin of 4000 votes.

Most often quoted in the complaints is Bilbo's statement on June 28 that the "best way to keep the Negro from voting is to see him the night before." The Hatch Act, Section 1, makes it unlawful "to intimidate, threaten or coerce . . . any other person for the purpose of interfering with the right of such person to vote . . ." The penalty is one year in jail, $1000 fine or both.

Bilbo's notorious letter saying "thousands of Negroes . . . especially Negro soldiers . . . are registering for the purpose of voting . . . in our Democratic primary. This these Negroes have no right to do and they must and should not be permitted to do," may be a violation of the Civil Rights Act, but the Ellender committee, with a majority of three Southern Democrats, is not likely to do much about it.

By United Press

POPLARVILLE, Miss., Nov. 2.—Sen. Bilbo cheerfully refused yesterday to comment on complaints that he had received gratuities from war contractors other than "I ain't done nothing and I ain't got nothing to say."

A Command Performance On Bilbo's Schedule

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

THEODORE BILBO always found it easy to convince his spellbound constituents of his virtue, even when it took an occasional airy dismissal of facts. But there are many people in the country who are thinking that he will not find the KILGORE Committee so gullible. Wed. 10-16-46

The committee is the lineal descendant of the famous TRUMAN Committee for investigation of war production. It is looking into charges of funny business in BILBO's conduct and his relations with war contractors.

In course of the recent primary campaign in Mississippi, Senator BILBO's opponents waved from every hustings the documentary evidence concerning a check for $25,000 which the Senator received from a contractor. "The Man's" explanations varied in tone from the injured to the defiant. To judge from his majority over four opponents combined, he had a right to think he had talked himself out of that one. But now the KILGORE Committee is going to ask the questions; and not only about the check but also about a subject much dearer to his heart—namely, his Dream House at Poplarville.

According to those who have seen the BILBO retreat, magnificent is a mildly descriptive word for it. Its opulence—and the splendor of one or two other items of the BILBO estate—has frequently been measured against the modest income of the BILBO who ten years ago was a newspaper clipper in the Department of Agriculture. It has been a source of wonder that one who subsisted thereafter on the notoriously inadequate salary of a Senator could have managed so handsome an establishment. And then there are those who remember that charges of the opposition to the effect that the Senator never paid more than $72 income tax in all the years of his public service put together, was a subject which called for much circumlocution by the Senator on the stump.

The KILGORE Committee, it is said, may want to know some of the answers. It is just too bad the members were not down in Mississippi last June, to hear the story as it was told to the voters. It was quite touching.

Full Probe Of Bilbo Sought

Sun. 11-3-46

WASHINGTON — One of the last things done by Sen. Jim Mead before leaving Washington for his New York gubernatorial campaign was to fly in the face of the time-honored Senate rule that no senator attacks a colleague.

The colleague in this case was rabble-rousing Sen. Bilbo, of Mississippi, a fellow Democrat, and he is going to be attacked. Sen. Mead, with the cooperation of Sen. Kilgore, of West Virginia, who succeeds Mead as chairman of the old Truman committee, launched an important investigation of Bilbo which violates all the self-protection ethics of the United States Senate. They struck pay dirt.

Back in 1939 when O. John Rogge, now fired from the Justice Department, investigated the old Huey Long gang, he indicted A. B. Shushan, of New Orleans, for income tax evasion. Shushan, frantic to stop prosecution, approached Sen. Bilbo for help. Bilbo undertook to see if he could call off the Justice Department dogs and accepted $3,000 from Shushan, giving Shushan a note for that amount.

However, Bilbo was unsuccessful. John Rogge refused to drop the income tax case, whereupon Shushan demanded his money back.

Bilbo, however, didn't have the money, so $750 each was donated by Bilbo's secretary, Ed Terry, together with Grant Stewart, Robert Newton and Forrest B. Jackson, to pay off Bilbo's note to Shushan.

For about a year these men remained out of pocket. In 1941, however, Sen. Bilbo helped A. B. Friend and the Volz Construction Company get a contract to build Key Field in Meridian, Miss., at the cost of $1,515,090 with a fixed fee to the contractors of $62,175.

Whereupon A. B. Friend dug up the $3,000 previously advanced by Bilbo's secretary and friends, and finally paid off the money Bilbo had received from Shushan.

These are just a few of Sen. Bilbo's interesting operations now being investigated by his senatorial colleagues of the Mead-Kilgore committee.

Investigating Sen. Bilbo

The News Birmingham, Ala.

There are encouraging signs from Washington that the Senate, long scandalized by Sen. Bilbo, may take some action against this mouthpiece of racial prejudice and hate.

Members of two committees have pledged full and impartial inquiries of charges made against Bilbo in recent weeks.

The special committee to investigate expenditures of 1946 senatorial candidates has before it a charge made by a primary opponent that Bilbo received $25,000 from a Mississippi firm in "flagrant" violation of federal and state laws. Sen. Bridges, of New Hampshire, has termed the charges "extremely serious." Sens. Ellender, of Louisiana, and Hickenlooper, of Iowa, have joined Bridges in pledging a complete inquiry. The three make up a majority of the committee.

Sens. Bridges and Ferguson, of Michigan, have promised that the regular senatorial committee on privileges and elections will look into complaints that Bilbo's "white supremacy" campaign intimidated Negroes into staying away from the polls. Tues.

It is this committee that is concerned with over-all qualifications of men elected to the Senate. It has authority to start the proceedings to refuse a Senate seat to a man deemed disqualified. 10-29-46

Counseling the violation of the constitutional rights of American citizens to vote would certainly seem to merit the most complete investigation, with such disqualification in mind.

The Senate, of course, is traditionally reluctant to upset the choice of the voters of any state. Only in a few cases of flagrant violation of election laws has it ever disqualified a senator. So it is undoubtedly too much to hope that drastic action against Bilbo would follow, even with full disclosure of the facts.

Any investigation of his campaign tactics, however, is all to the good. It may further serve to place him in his true light as a man representing what is unhealthful in a democracy, rather than healthful.—Milwaukee Journal.

Civil Rights Congress Demands U. S. Senate Probe of Bilbo Fraud

Daily Worker New York, N. Y.

Thurs 7-4-46

The Civil Rights Congress renewed its charge yesterday that the primary race of Sen. Bilbo (D-Miss) was permeated by fraud. It issued a demand through its counsel, Emanuel Bloch, that the Department of Justice and the Senate Privileges and Election Committee immediately begin separate probes of the charges.

United Press reported that Bilbo held a slender majority over four opponents last night. It also reported that Negro votes were not being counted. Returns from all but 121 of the 1,713 precincts gave Bilbo 97,464 votes—a figure of only 2,857 more than the total of his four opponents. In Mississippi failure of one candidate to obtain a majority means a runoff primary.

Bloch, just returned from Mississippi where he had made an on-the-scene investigation, declared "the largest available reports on the outcome of the senatorial primary race make a thorough-going investigation imperative."

"The techniques used to intimidate Negro voters," Bloch asserted, "consisted of actual assaults on Negro veterans and admonition to leading Negro citizens to keep all Negro voters away from registration and from the polls and finally, continuous threats by public officials and private citizens that Negroes seeking to exercise their right of franchise would be subject to bodily harm."

Bloch asserted that investigation will confirm "that state and federal laws were willfully violated." The CRC also urged U.S. Attorney General Tom Clark to launch "immediate investigation with sufficient safeguards thrown around it to protect Negro citizens who are ready to testify and give evidence." It urged the Senate Privileges and Elections Committee to conduct a separate investigation by a distinguished group of public citizens.

The votes of Negro citizens, UP reported, were chiefly challenged in Bolivar County, which contains the all-Negro Mound Bayou community and Adams County, home of Natchez and its large Negro population. UP estimates were that 3,000 of the 5,000 registered Negro voters cast ballots and the majority were included in the count. Many polling stations impounded several hundred ballots of Negro voters on the ground that they would have supported a Republican candidate had there been one. Thurs 7-4-46

William H. Anderson, chairman of the state Democratic executive committee, said the challenged votes would be ruled by the individual county election committees with regard for the effect they would have on the statewide count. Bilbo trumpeted victory calls that the people of Mississippi had overwhelmingly approved his platform of invectives against Negroes and northern "N——r lovers."

Ross Collins, a candidate, charged Bilbo illegally received $25,000 from a contracting firm and asked a Senate investigation.

Rep. John Rankin was renominated.

Bilbo Ouster Is Imminent

Atlanta, Ga.

Thurs. 10-17-46

A nationwide campaign has been undertaken to exclude the Bilbo man of Mississippi from the United States Senate. (Bilbo also means "fetter.") The curtain-raising will be at a dinner tomorrow night at the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York City with George Marshall, Paul Robeson, Dashiell Hammett, Quentin Reynolds, Vincent Sheean, William Jay Schieffelin and others taking the lead.

Bilbo should have been regurgitated long before this. But an emetic will not now be necessary. The Senate is in a position to do an act of self-purging that would be greatly becoming. If, as alleged, this product from the canebrakes of Mississippi was elected Senator by "fraud and violence" and other unconstitutional methods, he can simply be denied the right to take the oath of office.

THE ACCEPTANCE of money by members of Congress for influence brought to bear in obtaining contracts does not seem to worry some members of Congress even when they are caught. To what extent this immoral practice has been going on no one knows for sure. But there has been enough nauseating gas escaping to arouse suspicion in the minds of many. So far as "Chanticleer" Bilbo is concerned, the charge has been made that he accepted $25,000 for obtaining a contract for a constituent. This allegation was openly made by Ross A. Collins, for many years a respected and reputable member of the House. On the authority of Mr. Collins and Clarksdale Daily Press I have made this accusation in my column. Apparently Sen. Bilbo regards the charge as too trivial for his attention.

And yet I remember that William Lorimer, of Illinois, even after he had taken his seat in the United States Senate, was expelled when it was proved that he had been elected by corrupt means. I remember that, subsequently, Frank L. Smith, of Illinois, was not allowed to take his seat because of an improper sluicing of money in his behalf, particularly by Samuel Insull, the corrupt and corrupting private utility magnate.

I REMEMBER THAT a man by the name of Newberry, of Michigan, who spent more money than was permissible under the law, was persuaded to resign from the exclusive club that now takes pride in Bilbo and O'Daniel and McCarran and Tydings. William S. Vare, of Pennsylvania, also found the Senate door shut in his face by a vote of 58 to 22 for corrupt practices.

Now these four men were Republicans who were sternly frowned upon by a Republican Senate. I wonder if a Democratic Senate wants to go down in history as having fewer scruples and lower moral standards than was the case with a Republican Senate? This is no time for the Senate merely to yawn before turning over on its other side and going soundly to sleep again.

DURING HIS PRIMARY campaign, Bilbo, apparently beginning already to show symptoms of that "inflammation of the mouth" for which he later submitted to medical treatment, went up and down the state of Mississippi intimidating Negroes and shouting that whatever means might be necessary should be adopted to keep them from voting. He had no rival in his stirring up of base race passions except former Gov. Talmadge of Georgia. Bilboism and Talmadgeism are both responsible for the brutal race riots that have broken out in some parts of the South since election day.

Certain types of whites, who themselves live on the ragged edge of an economic system that does not "pass prosperity around" cannot be altogether blamed if they take their cue from a Bilbo or a Talmadge.

PROBABLY IT WOULD have a more salutary effect on the country if Bilbo were denied his seat in the United States Senate because of his scornful flouting of the rights guaranteed to Negroes under the Constitution of the United States. Of course, a Bilbo could do this without a qualm of his atrophied conscience but certainly no man even a little higher up in the scale of civilization could raise his right hand as a United States Senator and swear with his tongue in his cheek to uphold and defend the laws and the Constitution of the United States when he would not be there at all if he had not flouted the laws and Constitution of the United States. Perhaps it is better to raise the issue against Bilbo on this clear Constitutional and moral issue. However, it should not be overlooked that previous Republican Senates excluded Republican moral misfits from membership in that body on account of the illegal and immoral use of money, damaging charges with respect to which have also been brought against Sen. Bilbo.

BILBO FACES INQUIRY BEFORE HE IS SEATED

Senate War Body Counsel Says Charges Involve Contractors' Checks, Mansion, Church

Fri. 11-1-46

By C. P. TRUSSELL

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31—Senator Theodore G. Bilbo will face hearings concerning his relations with war contractors, Francis D. Flanagan, acting chief counsel to the Senate War Investigating Committee said today.

The hearing will be held before Mr. Bilbo is due to take his seat for a third term, the committee counsel stated.

Mr. Flanagan, in a news conference he called, detailed "chief charges" against the Mississippian, as indicated from material in committee files. He disclosed that additional investigators had been sent to Mississippi in September when the Bilbo case "was put high on the agenda" of the committee.

On an election-minded Capitol Hill this development took on political significance in some quarters. The timing of the announcement was viewed as possibly being linked with thhe concededly tough fights faced by the committee's present chairman, Senator Harley M. Kilgore of West Virginia, and Senator James M. Mead of New York, who was chairman until September.

Mr. Kilgore is seeking re-election and Mr. Mead is the Democratic nominee for the Governorship of New York. There has been much pressure for action on the Bilbo case, by one Congressional committee or another.

Mr. Flanagan said that he called the news conference "on my own" in response to many inquiries. He would not say whether he had consulted any members o fthe committee.

The counsel said the committee had received numerous complaints in June, as the Mississippi primary grew warm, but had found that for a large part investigation of them was not within its jurisdiction. Such complaints, he said, were forwarded to the Committee on Privileges and Elections, headed by Senator Theodore Francis Green of Rhode Island. The Times

Allegations which involved war contracts, however, were studied, Mr. Flanagan said, and investigators were dispatched to Mississippi. By September, he said, much information was at hand. A memorandum was prepared and considered at the Sept. 25 meeting at which Senator Mead resigned the chairmanship, he said.

"It was agreed to send more investigators," he continued, "and they are still there. Senator Mead suggested that the record of the committee, when completed, be sent to the Committee on Privileges for consideration when dealing with the eligibility of members of the Senate to take their seats."

"Dream House" Under Scrutiny

New York, N. Y.

Mr. Flanagan gave details of three major charges which he said would be presented at the hearings. One concerned checks totaling $33,750 which Senator Bilbo was alleged to have accepted in 1942 from two war contractors he had aided in getting big construction contracts. Mr. Flanagan said it was indicated that Senator Bilbo used these funds, not for his own use but in the interests of another Senatorial candidate.

A second "chief charge" involved "Dream House No. 2," a dwelling erected in 1941 on an island in an eight-acre artificial lake on Senator Bilbo's estate at Poplarville Miss. Two war contractors involved in the committee investigation are alleged to have built the house, Mr. Flanagan said. A third is said to have created the lake. This charge, the committee counsel added, also involves the furnishing of the house and a high-priced automobile.

The third of the charges concerns a parsonage built during the war for the Juniper Grove Baptist Church, which adjoins the Bilbo estate. This inquiry, Mr. Flanagan said, would focus upon the collection of funds for building the parsonage, the property on which it was erected, whether it was intended and its status as to title.

"There are other allegations which involve the Senator Bilbo, Mr. Flanagan said.

Mississippi Financier States Secretary Wrote Funds in One Belonging to Senator

New York, N. Y.

By HAROLD B. HINTON

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17—A Mississippi banker told the Senate War Investigating Subcommittee today of a mysterious special bank account carried by Edward P. Terry, former secretary to Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, Democrat, of Mississippi. Mr. Terry is expected to testify about it tomorrow and to give details regarding his regular personal account.

The banker, J. M. Quinn, vice president of the Jackson State National Bank, at Jackson, Miss., testified that Mr. Terry opened a special account at his bank in 1937 with a deposit of $572.99. On April 8, 1940, after he had become Mr. Bilbo's secretary, he wrote Mr. Quinn that the funds in that account belonged to Senator Bilbo, and authorized the Senator to draw against them, according to testimony. Wed. 12-18-46

Account Closed and Reopened

The bank's records, which Mr. Quinn produced, showed that the account was closed and reopened several times between 1937 and 1944, and that only relatively small deposits had been made to it. The largest he mentioned was one of $1,240 on March 26, 1940.

Forrest B. Jackson, Senator Bilbo's attorney, testified that Mr. Bilbo knew nothing whatever about this account until about two weeks ago. Mr. Quinn said that the Senator had never, to his knowledge, made any deposits to the account or drawn any checks against it.

Senator Homer Ferguson, Republican, of Michigan, then turned his attention to Mr. Terry's regular personal account at the same bank. Mr. Jackson had testified earlier, as other witnesses did yesterday, that Mr. Terry had obtained money from him from time to time, perhaps as much as $3,000, for various alleged purposes.

On one occasion, he said, his partner, D. Will Young, gave Mr. Terry $1,100 toward expenses of $1,800 Mr. Terry claimed to have incurred during Senator Bilbo's 1940 campaign. Mr. Jackson himself reimbursed Mr. Terry, he testified, for $750 which Mr. Terry subscribed toward the $3,000 needed to pay off a note held against Senator Bilbo by Abraham L. Shushan, wholesale drygoods merchant of New Orleans. He added that he might have given another $1,000 or more to the secretary at various times. The Times

Secretary's Balances Read

Turning to Mr. Quinn, Senator Ferguson wanted to know how Mr. Terry's own bank account was faring during these periods of alleged financial stringency. The banker read sample balances from his records, the largest of which was $22,532.18 on Sept. 8, 1945, about four months before he left Mr. Bilbo's employ.

When Mr. Jackson took the witness stand, Senator Ferguson asked him if he was prepared to waive all privileges in regard to questions that might be asked him which might concern his relationship as attorney with Mr. Bilbo. He said he was willing. Senator Bilbo waived any rights he might have for Mr. Jackson to withhold testimony. New York, N. Y.

Senator Ferguson asked why the "informal committee," consisting of Senator Bilbo, Mr. Jackson and Robert Gandy, had not declared its expenditures on behalf of Wall Doxey during the Senatorial campaign of 1942. Wed. 12-18-46

Mr. Jackson replied that the Mississippi Corrupt Practices Act only required "formal" campaign committees to file statements of expenditures.

"What good is a law like that?" asked Mr. Ferguson.

"It's no good," Mr. Jackson replied, "just like the Hatch Act."

Senator's Finances Examined

Mr. Jackson repeated much of his previous testimony in regard to the deal, after the primary in 1942, by which the "informal committee" tried to obtain the support for Mr. Doxey in the run-off of the organization which had unsuccessfully backed former Representative Ross Collins.

The attorney removed any intimation that his previous testimony might have carried that Mr. Collins himself asked for, or obtained, any of the $11,000 that was subsequently paid to Cecil Travis, a friend and supporter of Collins.

For the rest of the day the testimony centered around Senator Bilbo's finances in Poplarville, where he lives, and the Juniper Grove Baptist Church, of which he is sponsor and patron. Herbert H. McLeod, a representative of the Federal Land Bank system, said that the Senator had carried mortgages since 1935 totaling $15,000 on two different farms, and that the amount had now been reduced to about $10,000.

Robert M. Newton, president of the Bank of Commerce of Poplarville, and no relation to F. T. Newton, the Hattiesburg contractor who contributed $25,000 to Mr. Bilbo for the 1942 Doxey campaign, said his bank held mortgages from Mr. Bilbo, reduced to about $8,800 from $9,500.

Mr. Newton was one of the four men who made up the $3,000 to pay the Shushan note in 1940, and described himself as an old friend of the Senator. Mr. Ferguson asked how long Mr. Bilbo had been indebted to the bank.

"He isn't old enough to know," Mr. Bilbo said in an audible aside, pointing to Mr. Newton, who is a man of middle age.

Church Account Now $1,200

Mr. Newton testified that the special account for the Juniper Grove Baptist Church, on which Mr. Bilbo alone can draw, had amounted to as much as $28,000, and was now at a level around $1,200. Most of Mr. Bilbo's friends have testified to contributing to this church fund, one contractor having given $3,500.

The subcommittee's interest in the parsonage springs from the fact that the land on which it stands belongs to Senator Bilbo. The Senator brought in today the copy of a deed conveying the land to the church, but Mr. Jackson explained that the instrument was only deposited with the chancery clerk of Pearlriver County in escrow by verbal arrangement to protect the church against creditors seizing the property in the event of Mr. Bilbo's death.

Upon completion of the parsonage, Mr. Jackson said, it is the intention of Senator Bilbo to record the deed so that title would be legally vested in the congregation of the church.

The Rev. D. Wade Smith, former Army chaplain and now pastor of the church testifying today, tempered derogatory statements he is alleged to have made to an investigator for the subcommittee and another for the Bureau of Internal Revenue. They reported him as complaining that the parsonage was too large to be maintained by a preacher on a salary of $2,600 a year.

They also reported that he said he was forced to build a house for himself, upon going to Poplarville to live, because Senator Bilbo would not permit the parsonage to be finished. 12-18-46

Today the Rev. Mr. Smith said he had built his own house because he had always wanted to have a home, and had used his veteran's priorities to get materials.

Bilbo Confident All Is Well; Gets Ready For New Investigation

The Times

Birmingham, Ala.

Fri. 12-6-46

JACKSON, Miss., Dec. 6—(AP)—Mississippi's uninhibited Sen. Theo G. Bilbo, confident that "everything is lovely—righteousness will prevail," prepared today to leave for Washington and a second bout of Senate committee investigation.

To one committee which spent four days investigating assertions that his campaign speeches incited violence and disfranchisement of Negroes, Bilbo yesterday said he had "no apology" for his advocacy of white supremacy and control, but he denied counselling violence or illegal acts in last Summer's Democratic primary.

"THE MAN'S" new engagement is with another committee investigating his alleged relations with war contractors. Bilbo said he would be there when the hearings opened Dec. 12, and expected "fine sailing."

Sen. Ellender (D., La.), chairman of the committee which conducted the hearings here, said he expected a unanimous report from that group, commenting that "the record gives just about the line of testimony I anticipated."

He said a preliminary report would be ready Dec. 16 and the final version in time for the convening of Congress.

Taking the stand in his own behalf before the committee yesterday, Bilbo testified in an approximation of his stump-speaking manner. A crowd that packed the federal courtroom broke into frequent laughter despite the pounding and shouting of attendants.

THE SENATOR SAID that when he recommended visiting Negroes the night before an election, he was not suggesting intimidation but merely that they should be reasoned with to avoid trouble.

He never counselled violence against Negroes, he said.

His position on Negro voting, he added was that Mississippi Negroes were Republicans and therefore legally disqualified from participation in Democratic primaries.

Bilbo denounced "outside enterference" by the CIO, "the Communists," "Time," "Colliers," commentators and various organizations which opposed him.

He grinned and agreed that he had said, "Claire Booth Luce is the greatest Nigger lover in the North except Old Lady Eleanor Roosevelt."

During its four-day session, the committee heard testimony from many Negroes about alleged beatings, intimidation and discrimination in registration and voting, and some contradicting testimony from officials and white citizens.

customary alphabetical system to take his oath. At that point in the proceedings the holdover membership would find the Democrats still in the majority.

Some Republicans agreed privately that it may be necessary to delay the Bilbo test until he and all others are actually sworn and seated. At that time the Democrats will be outnumbered, 51 to 45.

Hearings On Bilbo Are Ended

The Call
Kansas City, Mo.

Committee Likely To Recommend Denial of Seat

Fri. 12-13-46

JACKSON, Miss.— (NNPA) — Chairman Allen J. Ellender of the Senate campaign investigating committee at the close of hearings here Thursday wished for a unanimous report absolving Senator Theodore G. (The Man) Bilbo of responsibility for denial to colored people of the right to vote in the July 2 Mississippi Democratic primary.

Ellender, who hails from the neighboring state of Louisiana where methods similar to those used in Mississippi are employed to suppress the colored vote apparently is not likely to get his wish.

Guilt Well Established

Bilbo's guilt appears to be sufficiently established by the evidence given the committee to warrant Senators Styles Bridges, of New Hampshire, and Bourke B. Hickenlooper, of Iowa, Republican members of the five-man committee, in recommending that he be denied the oath of office for a third term beginning January 3. They were instructed to submit recommendations to the Republican conference called for December 30.

A preliminary committee report is expected to be ready by December 16 and the final report in time for the convening of Congress.

Meanwhile, another hearing by the Senate war investigating committee was scheduled to begin in Washington, December 12 into charges that Bilbo accepted gratuities from Mississippi war contractors. The outcome of these hearings also are expected to have a bearing on his fitness to sit in the Senate as a member of the 80th Congress.

50 Witnesses Heard

During the four-day hearing the committee heard more than 50 witnesses testify that they were prevented from registering or voting either by force, intimidation or persuasion, or had been afraid to attempt to register or vote.

The hearings ended Thursday with Bilbo vigorously denying he incited violence or intimidation, but admitting that he did not believe that colored people generally were qualified to vote in the Mississippi Democratic primary.

In his statement to the committee Bilbo said:

"Please let me call your attention to the fact that this is the first Democratic primary held in Mississippi in 56 years where the Negro ctizens of the state have offered or attempted to vote, and you can readily appreciate the keen interest that was aroused throughout the state among the white Democratic voters as well as the great opposition such attempt aroused in the minds of all people. It is true that heretofore a great many of our Negro citizens have registered, qualified and voted in our general elections, but not since 1890 has there been any attempt on the part of the Negroes to participate in the Democratic primaries in Mississippi.

"It has been my contention and the contention of practically all of the Democratic voters of Mississippi that no Negro was qualified to vote in a Democratic primary even if qualified to vote in a general election.

Bilbo declared: "If I am to be censured and condemned and denied a seat in the U. S. Senate because of my views and convictions honestly entertained, I do not hesitate to say that every Senator, Congressman, Governor and State official in Mississippi for 56 years must likewise be censured and condemned." All, he asserted, have entertained the same views on the exercise of the franchise by colored people.

Ignoring so-called senatorial courtesy, Senator Hickenlooper cross-questioned Bilbo when he finished his prepared statement.

"Did you tell an audience that Clare Boothe Luce (retiring Republican representative from Connecticut) was 'the greatest n—— lover in the North except for Old Lady Eleanor Roosevelt,'" he asked.

Grinning crookedly, Bilbo retorted: "I sure did; it's true, you know."

Asked if he had advised horsewhipping certain colored persons, he squirmed: "No, what I advocated was ridin' 'em out of town on a rail," and it wasn't true, he added, that he had proposed "atomically bombing and exterminating the Negro Progressive Voters' League."

"The Man" conceded that he had urged the whites to "see the n—— the night before election" if any of them indicated an intention to vote in the Democratic primary. But he insisted that he meant vocal, not physical violence.

Blaming all the trouble on "outside meddlers like the CIO, PAC, Walter Winchell, Drew Pearson, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and the Civil Rights Committee," Bilbo lisped:

"Sidney Hillman didn't give a damn about the Negro or his family down here when he sent in money. He was just after political control. That kind of organizer oughta be rode out of town on a rail—and tar-and-feathered, too."

He admitted that he "advised every red-blooded man in Mississippi" to resort to any means—but he said he specified "legal means"—to keep colored people from the polls last July.

Insisting that colored people could qualify to vote in the Democratic primary, Bilbo said there were "two whole wings" of the Republican Party from which they could choose.

After Bilbo completed his testimony, Forrest Jackson, his counsel, called several white political leaders, most of whom said they were political opponents of the Senator. They all testified that Bilbo had not incited any violence or denial of civil rights, and that his views on the "white primary" for the Democrats of Mississippi agreed with theirs.

Camille Thomas of Natchez, a former WAC lieutenant, said her right to vote was challenged at the polls and that she had been "very much frightened" by Bilbo speeches.

"Isn't it common knowledge that for years there has been a feeling in Mississippi and other states that only white people should vote in primaries," asked Senator Ellender.

"It may be common knowledge, but it has never been accepted by Negroes," she answered. The witness recited inflammatory portions of Bilbo's speeches, in which the senator called "on every red blooded white man" to keep the colored people away from the polls.

Another witness, Samuel K. Phillips of Holly Springs, said he was stopped from voting in the Democratic primary on the ground that he actually was a Republican which he denied. He advocated that colored Mississippians be permitted to form their own party.

Several witnesses related delays and excuses given them by the officials which made it impossible to register. The Rev. R. S. Bostick, Grenada, said the sheriff warned him to stay away from the polls lest trouble develop and that, as a result, other colored people didn't even try to vote.

Emanuel P. Bloch, counsel for the Civil Rights Congress of New York City, said after the hearings closed that his organization would demand additional public hearings in Washington.

"Senator Ellender's conduct as chairman of the investigating committee was shocking," he said. "In his zealousness to act as special pleader for Senator Bilbo, Senator Ellender violated every tenet of ethics and propriety, and overlooked the fact that he was sitting as an impartial judge sifting the evidence."

Two witnesses from Greenwood told the committee last Wednesday that they were paid $25 each by white citizens to advise 32 registered colored war veterans not to vote.

J. D. Collins, a well-to-do shoe repairman, testified the white men "asked" him to circulate their advice among the colored veterans.

The other, A. C. Montgomery, a taxicab owner, said that the white men "told" them to keep the colored veterans from voting.

Both witnesses agreed that the white men told them they feared trouble if the colored veterans voted in the primary because of a speech Bilbo had made in an adjoining county in which he urged that all means be employed to keep colored people away from the polls.

Shelby Steel, white insurance agent, and Mayor Allen Stafford confirmed the witnesses' statements except that both denied testimony by Collins that they told him Bilbo's speeches "had stirred up a lotta hell."

Policeman Robert L. Williams of Gulfport, subpenaed by the senators, said that he arrested Richard E. Daniel outside the Gulfport city hall on election day. Daniel testified last Wednesday that Williams had beaten him insensible in the jail after he tried unsuccessfully to vote and that he had created no disturbance. Williams said Daniel had been arrested for creating a disturbance outside the city hall.

The policeman, who is 6 feet 6 inches tall, said he was called to help a deputy sheriff handle Daniel after the latter began "cursing and cutting up." Daniel resisted a routine search at the jail, Williams said, and the officer struck him "two or three times with my open hand in the mouth." Under questioning as to why force was needed to subdue Daniel, a short and slender man, Williams said the deputy sheriff "could not handle him without creating a lot of disturbance around some ladies who were there." Shown some stained clothing Daniel had produced as evidence, Williams said Daniel had bled from a cut lip and the stains might have resulted from this blow.

Dr. M. S. Love, Gulfport physician told of treating injuries to Daniel and Barnado Collier, who testified of being assaulted there. Dr. Love testified that he did not vote, that colored people generally are afraid to vote in Mississippi, and that their fear may have been increased by Bilbo's speeches.

Mighty Is The Man, But Truth Prevails

The Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky. Wed. 12-18-46

If Theodore G. Bilbo is not to be barred from his seat in the Senate, it is safe to say that his influence in that body has been destroyed for good and all. The shoddy record of his continued, shameless exploitation of high office, his avidity to accept financial favors from one and all, if you want to call his transactions that, has become nauseating. And this time he won't be able to shout it all away as the lying emanation of damyankees and Communistic plotters against Mississippi's Anglo-Saxon purity. He isn't, in short, standing on the pine-scented hustings and talking to a crowd of infatuated or inflamed constituents.

The weight of testimony to the effect of Bilbo's moral unfitness is getting to be just about overwhelming. Cadillac cars and an artificial lake, a Dream House and loans passing hands in furtive meetings, promissory notes taken by gentlemen who sought business from the Government or required influence to escape legal jams—they are piling up on the debit side of the Senator's ledger. The lake goes dry. The dream wavers into a nightmare.

Those who are acquainted with the folklore of a Bilbo know exactly what to expect. "The Man," we don't doubt, is quite likely to admit it all. To do so has always been his brazen technique. But we shall hear him blithely asserting that there was nothing like a shakedown in any of it. There was nothing, we shall be asked to believe, except the kindly purposes of great-hearted friends, nature's noblemen, indeed, showing tributes of affection, or perhaps volunteering unsought assistance to a temporarily embarrassed chum. What, the Senator will thunder (if his lack of a lower plate permits such tones), is wrong about that? And then will come the Scriptural injunctions.

But we are greatly mistaken if the country fails to discern the shocking portrait of a senator as a fixer—for a price. And even the camaraderie and the prerogative of the most indulgent logrolling club on earth will hardly be stout enough to stand against that, we guess. The twilight of The Bilbo descends. It isn't funny.

Bilbo Again

The Times
New York, N.Y.

Having apparently weathered one Congressional investigation, Senator Theodore G. Bilbo of Mississippi last week was undergoing another. Ten days ago a special Senate Campaign Investigating Committee concluded hearings in Mississippi's capital city of Jackson of charges that Mr. Bilbo had incited intimidation of Negroes to keep them from voting in the State Democratic primary last July. There were indications that he would be cleared. Last week another matter was being probed. In Washington the Senate's War Investigating subcommittee delved into Mr. Bilbo's alleged financial relations with war contractors in Mississippi.

One charge was that in 1942 the Senator had accepted $25,000 from F. H. Newton, a contractor of Hattiesburg, Miss., and had used the money to help pay campaign expenses of some of his friends. Yesterday Mr. Bilbo, without taking the witness stand, told the committee that he "didn't get a damn dollar" of the money.

Sun.

The committee hearings were stormy. At one point former Representative Ross Collins of Mississippi, one of the instigators of the present investigation, resented a witness' implications that said: "I have fought Bilbo for thirty-he had been friendly with Senator five years." 12-15-46

United States Senate—Not Bilbo—Is On Trial In Current Hearings

Montgomery, Ala.

A Senate subcommittee has been weighing Senator Bilbo's right to his seat. Witnesses have told, under oath, that the Negroes, who are approximately equal in number to the whites in Mississippi, did not go to the polls because of intimidation. Other evidence has been to the effect that Bilbo has accepted money and other gifts in such amounts and in such circumstances as to raise a grave question as to his legal or moral right to continue in the Senate. Mon. 12-30-46

Many believe that Senator Bilbo is on trial. This is not the fact. It is the Senate of the United States that is on trial.

Some who like to speculate, have concluded that the Democrats will out-maneuver the Republicans, who will constitute a majority in the next Senate, with the result that Senator Bilbo will be given the oath of office. In other words, they are persuaded that moral and constitutional doubts with reference to Bilbo will be decided on the basis of cynical politics. I do not share such a low opinion of the Democratic senators as to believe that they will vote for Bilbo just because he is a Democrat, because he is much else besides. Moreover, I cannot think of anything that would do the Democratic party more harm than for it to wallow in that disgusting political putrefaction that goes under the name of Bilboism.

Plenty Of Precedent

A majority of the Senate can deny Bilbo the right to take the oath of office, whereas it would require a two-thirds majority to expel him. In 1926 Frank L. Smith, of Illinois, and William S. Vare, of Pennsylvania, both Republicans, were denied the right to take the oath of office by a Senate that contained a Republican majority. Both Smith and Vare were charged with spending too much money in the primary elections of that year. In the case of Smith, the resolution denying him the right of membership was on the ground that the expenditure of excessive sums of money was "contrary to sound public policy, harmful to the dignity of the Senate, dangerous to the perpetuity of the free government, and tainted with fraud and corruption."

The campaigns of Frank L. Smith and William S. Vare were snowwhite when compared with that of Theodore G. Bilbo. Will the Senate find that the money and other gifts accepted by Bilbo were less "harmful to the dignity and honor of the Senate" than anything that was done by either Smith or Vare? William Lorimer of Illinois was seated as a Republican and subsequently expelled (again by a Republican Senate) and Truman H. Newberry of Michigan, another Republican resigned at the suggestion of the Republican leadership, rather than run the risk of expulsion. Has the Democratic leadership advised Bilbo to resign?

"To Protect and Defend"

Evidence has been produced to show that Senator Bilbo was guilty also of accepting money for the exercise of senatorial influence in a drug addict case. He besought war contracts for constituents and friends from whom he received cash and other presents. He intimidated the Negro voters of his state, incited to violence, and insisted upon a denial of constitutional rights.

In a column released as of Oct. 16, I called attention to the Smith and Vare cases and suggested that when Bilbo presented himself to take the oath of office, he should be denied that privilege. It would be a ghastly farce for this man to raise his right hand and swear to protect and defend the Constitution of the United States, after having openly flouted that Constitution. Nor would those senators who might stultify themselves and make a mock of our institutions by voting for Bilbo fail to be regarded, in public estimation, as standing on the same level with Bilbo himself. It would be difficult to respect a Senate that would admit Bilbo on the record that he himself has tailored. Mon. 12-30-46

And so, I say that it is the Senate that is on trial. It has the power and the constitutional right, it may even be suggested that it has the moral obligation to bar the doors of the Senate to a political pariah. As a senator, Bilbo would only degrade the Senate as he has disgraced his party by flaunting his contempt for the Constitution that he has sworn, over and over again, to uphold and defend.

The United States Senate cannot afford to become an accessory after the fact in political high crimes and misdemeanors that would make a mockery of public morality and strike at the heart of our institutions.

The Yardstick for Bilbo

Jennings Perry

PM New York, N.Y.

JACKSON, TENN.

Will they seat The Man next week? I'm afraid they will, and it will be a pity for many reasons, one being simply that the world would be a brighter place without a Theo. G. Bilbo in the U. S. Senate. It could help the pursuit of happiness along.

Will the Democrats back Bilbo at the showdown? I'm afraid they will—all or almost all. Some will vote to seat him out of "party loyalty," though it should be apparent to any Democrat that Bilbo is one of the party's greatest liabilities; that to allow him to claim sanctuary under the party name will be a stupidity even more costly than the attempt to pull through Rep. Andrew J. May of Kentucky at the general election.

Perry

Most of the Democrats, even the Southern ones, will have to hold their noses to give the highball for Bilbo. But some of the Democrats, especially the Southern ones, will vote to seat The Man, because they feel they must in deference to and in defense of the system under which they themselves win elections.

It has been pointed out by several excellent wits that the coming test is not upon the fitness of the nasty little Mississippian but actually upon the quality of the whole Senate membership, since the "most exclusive club" is the sole judge of the qualifications of its members. But to me this is too neat a pinning of the blame. Certainly for so great a nation, seeking to live in order under the law, some stouter safeguard should have been erected long ago.

There was, it seems to me—and now, if ever, it seems to me, is the time it should be taken down and dusted off and put to the use for which it was intended. I mean the constitutional requirement that the representation of any state in Congress shall be reduced proportionately as the state may trangress upon the right of its citizens to vote. Mon. 12-30-46

The Bilbo question cried for surgery. But why should the august Senate probe around with nutpicks for some minor wen on Bilbo's record that could "justify" a severance of his claim upon a Senate seat? Why open up his festering race phobia already so well known? Why pick at his inglorious relations with war contractors, with narcotic addicts, with un-American prejudice groups in his own and other states? Why not seize the scalpel specially and wisely provided in the surgical chest of the Constitution itself and cut out the malignant condition of which Bilbo is not the cause but the result?

The only excuse that will or can be given by those Senators who will vote to seat Bilbo is that, repulsive though he may be, he was elected by the people of his state. But this is a most transparent fiction and an exceedingly shoddy one. Everybody knows that Bilbo has never in his life had to face a free election: that only a fringe of the population of Mississippi still has the vote; that the vast majority of the people of Mississippi continually and systematically is excluded from the ballot box. 12-30-46

The intent of the Constitution toward this situation is quite clear. To bar Bilbo from the Senate next Friday it would be sufficient for the sergeant-at-arms to read aloud the plain language that fits his case, the Constitutional requirement that he be barred.

The "people" of Mississippi did not elect Bilbo; a handful of Mississippi people did. But a state is all of its people, not a privileged coterie, and it no more can be said that "Mississippi spoke" in Bilbo's election than that Bilbo now should have the right to speak for Mississippi in the national legislature. The crime lies less at the man's door than at the door of the wretched electoral system that produced him. The Senate may, if it chooses, bar him on the grounds that he is personally obnoxious; but what is obnoxious to our form of government, and pointedly made punishable in our basic charter, is the state of oliliarchy that exists behind him.

I don't expect the Senate to remember this or to act upon it, and its failure to do so will be, I am sure, the gravest pity of all.

Minority Leaders Hold Constitutional Violations Supersede Fees for Contract

WASHINGTON

One of the most important lessons brought out by the probe into the financial activities of Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo (Dem., Miss.), now in progress in the Senate Office Building is that intolerance and dishonesty go hand in hand.

It seems like poetic justice that, so far, the only two officeholders exposed for helping to mulct Uncle Sam out of millions for the benefit of their friends were also the most vociferous champions of white supremacy.

Constitutional Issue

However, there is another point of view subscribed to by most race leaders and endorsed by both Charles H. Houston, NAACP counsel, and Edgar G. Brown, who pushed the ouster petition campaign.

These opine that all other methods should be secondary to the constitutional issue of preventing colored citizens from voting.

Mr. Houston contends that the main objective is not to get Bilbo. The Man, but to render a death blow to Bilboism, a fascist philosophy of racial superiority that is spreading.

If Bilbo can be ousted on the white primary issue, a precedent can be established to unseat other Dixie solons who owe their hold on Congress, and hence the nation, to the same political system which makes Bilbo almost invincible.

Ouster Debated

At present, there are two schools of thought on efforts to oust Bilbo from the Senate. One group around Capitol Hill would consider it a victory to rid the ducting the Bilbo probe in Mississippi in the interest of the nation, sought in reality to whitewash Bilbo. Sat. 12-21-46

Instead of pressing the probe, he assumed the role of Bilbo's defense attorney and tried to discredit and intimidate witnesses who appeared against him.

Important Brief Ready

One of the best jobs done on the Bilbo case so far is a 90-page brief drawn up by Congressman Charles Lafolette of Indiana, which is being used as a guide in the Senate ouster proceedings.

Mr. Lafolette spent several months searching Congressional records for precedents to be used.

He, too, insists that no issue other than the one involved in the denial of the right to vote to colored citizens should be used.

Old Maryland Case

He has cited numerous cases covering more than 50 years to show how Senators-elect and Congressmen have been denied their seats.

One of the most interesting is the case of Phillip F. Thomas of Maryland, who was denied his seat in the 40th Congress in 1867. The Marylander was accused of giving his own son a gift of $100 and his blessing when he went off to join the Confederacy.

This was considered sufficient to make him unfit to sit in the Senate of the United States and he was not permitted to take the oath of office.

Bilbo has repeatedly expressed opinions and ideas which show a contempt for the Constitution of the United States by flaunting the 13th, 14th and 15th Amendments. His opponents contend that contempt for any portion of the Constitution is contempt for the whole.

'The Man' Gives Testimony Advocating White Supremacy

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Fri. 12-6-46

By EDMOND Le BRETON

JACKSON, MISS., Dec. 5—(AP)—Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo, "The Man," of Mississippi, stood pat on his advocacy of "white supremacy and white control" but denied flatly to investigating senators today that he had advocated violence or illegal acts against Negroes during his primary campaign.

The unruffled senator, his diamond horseshoe stickpin sparkling in the glare of camera flashes and newsreel floodlights, slipped into his stump speaking manner as he reviewed the campaign last Summer in which he was nominated for a third term in the Senate.

He declared that when he said organizers should be "ridden out of town on a rail" and when "I suggested taking some tar and feathers along and not forgetting a match," he was talking about CIO men trying to organize Negroes—not about the Negroes themselves.

Bilbo told the Senate committee, which came to Jackson to look into a petition seeking to have the senator refused his seat, that he had violated no laws when he asserted Negroes should be kept from voting in the primary. He complained that newspapers misquoting him by omitting the phrase "by any lawful means." Mississippi Negroes are Republicans, Bilbo asserted, and therefore ineligible to vote in Democratic primaries.

The senator's personal appearance, in a Federal courtroom packed to the last inch of standing space by both white persons and Negroes, was the climax to the closing session of the four-day hearing.

Evidence received earlier from more than 50 witnesses included statements, often contradicted, that Negroes had been beaten, struck, taken to jail for disturbing the peace, and otherwise prevented from registering or voting during the campaign.

Sen. Hickenlooper (R), Iowa, questioned the Mississippian at length on newspaper accounts of his campaign, and Bilbo frequently turned the examination into a crackling interchange of quips.

Asked about a reported statement that "Clare Booth Luce is the greatest nigger lover in the North except old lady Eleanor Roosevelt," Bilbo grinned and answered, "I said that."

His enunciation impared by a recent mouth operation, Bilbo paused occasionally to speak distinctly.

He listened to another reported quotation, "the people of Mississippi are sitting on a volcano. There is a nationwide effort to integrate niggers into the social life of the country."

"I subscribe to that," Bilbo said. "If I didn't say it, I wish I had."

But he denied saying that anyone should be horsewhipped, that Negroes trying to vote should have gasoline poured on them, or that the leaders of the Mississippi Progressive Voters League, one of the organizations opposing him, should be "atomically bombed and exterminated from the surface of the earth."

The committee, headed by Senator Ellender (D), Louisiana, planned to return to Washington immediately to begin work on a report for presentation at the beginning of the new session of Congress in January. The report may make a recommendation as to whether Bilbo should be seated, or may merely summarize the evidence, attaches said. The committee gave no hint.

Another hearing, on Bilbo's alleged relations with war contractors is scheduled by a different group in Washington, Dec. 12.

Drop Bar to Bilbo In Favor of Boot

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27—(AP)—Republicans Friday dropped plans to try to bar Sen. Bilbo, Democrat, Mississippi, from taking his seat Jan. 3 in favor of a campaign designed to oust him later.

The strategy was considered at a closed-door session of the Republican Steering Committee but a final decision was postponed pending the meeting Monday of the entire Republican Senate delegation. Sat. 12-28-46

A Senator who attended Friday's committee meeting reported the anti-Bilbo strategists have decided that he can be ousted by majority vote after the new members have been sworn in and the Republicans attain their 51-to-49 majority.

Only 59 men will have taken the oath and be fully qualified Senators when the eightieth Congress convenes at noon Jan. 3. Of these, 31 are Democrats and 28 Republicans. Thus, if voting followed party lines, the Republicans would be better off to wait. New and re-elected members are sworn in four at a time in alphabetical order and Bilbo would be in the first batch.

The effort to oust the 69-year-old Mississippian probably will be based on one or more of three allegations looked into by investigating committees:

1. That he solicited contributions from war contractors.

2. That he received money from a narcotics addict after getting the Narcotics Bureau to waive objections to supplying the addict with a daily morphine ration.

3. That he tried to intimidate Negroes to keep them from voting in last Summer's primary when he was renominated over four opponents.

Sen. Ferguson, of Michigan, the lone Republican on the War Investigating Subcommittee which looked into Bilbo's relations with war contractors, telegraphed Chairman Mead, Democrat, New York, Friday asking that the hearing be reopened Monday on the narcotics phase.

Ferguson said he wants to get direct testimony on the narcotics angle from two doctors—A. J. Podesta, of Vicksburg, Miss., and James Logan, of Natchez — and from John Carr, of Natchez, described in previous testimony as a narcotics addict.

Dr. Harry J. Anslinger, head of the Federal Narcotics Bureau, testified that after a conference with Bilbo over a letter Bilbo had received from Podesta, he wrote that the Narcotics Bureau had no objection to Logan prescribing two grains of morphine a day for Carr. Anslinger explained that the narcotic law permits such a ration for addicts whose lives would be in danger without it.

Later, Anslinger testified, he was told by a Federal agent that Carr sent Bilbo $1,500 through Podesta.

Bilbo denied receiving any money for such a service although he said he did receive a contribution from Podesta for a church parsonage fund he was collecting.

Parliamentary experts said Bilbo would continue to draw pay as a Senator until such time as the Senate might declare his seat vacant. If he were ousted, the Senate would adopt a resolution declaring his seat vacant and notify the Governor of Mississippi.

BULLETIN

NEW YORK—In his Sunday night broadcast, Walter Winchell, noted radio commentator and news columnist, said a big scandal was in the making over the recent probe of Bilbo's anti-Negro activities in Mississippi during his campaign for re-election. He charged that Senator Ellender of Louisiana, chairman of the senate committee, and the committee's attorney, with being "unfaithful in the proceedings," saying they acted as defense counsel for the Mississippi senator. He also charged that Ellender had made financial contributions to Bilbo's successful campaign.

Sat. 12-14-46

WASHINGTON—As members of the Senate committee probing charges that Sen. Theodore Bilbo has been instrumental in denying the vote to Negroes in Mississippi during his recent campaign for reelection reconvened here to draw up their report a sharp division of opinion became evident.

Committee Chairman Ellender, Louisiana Democrat, predicted as the hearing terminated in Jackson that Bilbo would be cleared by a unanimous decision of the committee.

This statement was promptly challenged by Sen. Hickenlooper, Republican of Iowa, who announced publicly that he had not yet made up his mind. Hickenlooper and other Republican members of the investigating committee have been directed by their party steering committee to direct the opposition to the seating of Bilbo when the 80th Congress convenes on Jan. 3.

The committee was meeting early this week to prepare a preliminary report. Its final report, Ellender said, would be ready for the opening of Congress.

Meanwhile preparations were under way for the opening early this week of another investigation by a Senate committee into the campaign expenditures of the Mississippi demagogue. It is charged that Bilbo accepted gratuities from Mississippi war contractors to the tune of $30,000, some of which were used to finance his campaign of last summer.

Chairman Mead, New York Democrat, promised that the committee would study all relevant facts. Thirty witnesses have already been summoned to appear before the committee which is holding its hearings in the nation's capital.

Meanwhile, Bilbo, arrogant and assured, announced that if he is unseated, he will be a candidate again in a special election which must be held 90 days after a vacancy occurs according to Mississippi law.

Hickenlooper's statement in reference to the recent hearings was regarded as significant here. Until he spoke there was widespread belief that Bilbo was to be white-washed on the charges brought against him by Negroes.

Hickenlooper declared, "Republicans are not engaged in any plot" to either retain or reject Bilbo. "The question," he said, "is not a partisan political issue but rests entirely upon the propriety of the individual, regardless of what party he belongs to."

Negroes, displaying a courage few whites suspected, converted the Mississippi hearings from a routine inquiry into a first class probe by appearing in scores to testify against methods employed by Bilbo to garner white votes in his last campaign.

Sat. 12-14-46

Without being summoned several hundred indicated a desire to testify, and if all had been heard, the hearings would have continued for several weeks.

Ellender cut the hearings short with the statement that the testimony was repetitious and added nothing more to the evidence supporting charges that Bilbo had been responsible for intimidating Negro voters.

In a face-saving act, Bilbo himself, admitted statements ascribed to him but said that everyone, including news reporters, had overlooked a phrase he had always used in talking about keeping Negroes from the polls.

This phrase, he said, was one urging whites to stay within the law.

Hickenlooper questioned Bilbo at length on newspaper accounts of his campaign, and Bilbo frequently turned the examination into a crackling interchange of quips.

Hickenlooper asked whether the sum total of Senator Bilbo's campaign remarks were designed to keep the Negroes from the polls." Bilbo turned the question back by replying: "No, I didn't want the Negroes to vote. Would you, if you knew they would vote against you?"

He listened to another reported quotation, "The people of Mississippi are sitting on a volcano. There is a nation-wide effort to integrate niggers into the social life of the country."

"I subscribe to that," Bilbo said. "If I didn't say it, I wish I had."

He denied saying that anyone should be horsewhipped, that Negroes trying to vote should have gasoline poured on them, or that the leaders of the Mississippi Progressive Voters' League, one of the organizations opposing him, should be "atomically bombed and exterminated from the surface of the earth."

Bilbo was on the stand an hour and 35 minutes. He was followed by a group of white attorneys, many of them his political opponents, who agreed that his racial creed was in keeping with Mississippi tradition.

Bilbo spoke with difficulty because of a recent oral operation which prevented him from wearing his lower plates, but he answered back sharply under Hickenlooper's questioning.

Bilbo Highlights

JACKSON, Miss. — No decision was announced and no further hearings will be held in the Bilbo case, Senator Ellender stated here Thursday after four days of testimony before the Senate Investigating Committee.

The committee meets in Washington on Dec. 16, to render what Ellender said he hopes will be "a unanimous report."

Houston's Presence Felt

Although his application for permission to file a brief prepared by the NAACP was denied, Charles H. Houston, prominent Washington attorney, made his presence felt here as a behind-the-scenes advisor to witnesses and people interested in the investigation.

The Afro-American

When Mr. Houston left Thursday morning, Thurgood Marshall, NAACP chief special counsel, arrived to take up where he left off.

A taxi driver told me, "No colored driver in Jackson will haul a white person. Why? Well, when whites get out of the cab they give the driver whatever they feel like—and the driver has to take it."

During the course of the hearing five charges of violence were heard—and in every case the Bilbo attorneys produced some official to testify that the accusers were "drunk and disorderly."

Typical was the case of Richard E. Daniel of Gulfport, who testified that a policeman named Williams sent him to a side when he went to the polling place.

There, two white men beat him about the face and neck. Later, he was arrested and fined $10 on a charge of being drunk and disorderly.

Baltimore, Md.

Accept Pay From Bigots

One of the sensations of the hearing came when J. D. Collins of Greenwood, chairman of the Progressive Voters' League, testified that he and a friend named Montgomery were given $25 each to "go around and advise 32 colored people not to vote."

Collins said the money was given to him and Montgomery by Shelby Steele, white insurance man, at a meeting between Steele, Means Johnson, attorney, and Mayor A. D. Safford of Greenwood.

Sat. 12-14-46

'Expression of Appreciation'

On the stand, Steele admitted he had given Collins and Montgomery the money but said it was only an expression of appreciation for their help in preventing trouble on election day.

Mayor Safford merely denied the charge and added that "there isn't a citizen in Greenwood who has more colored friends than I do."

Joseph Parham, 72, of McComb, said he was shoved off the sidewalk while en route to the voting place on July 2, by Emmett Sauls, city marshal. He was then arrested and taken before the chief of police, but later released.

Bilbo, when pinned down by Senator Hickenlooper (Rep. Iowa) as to whether his speeches had not actually been intended to keep colored from the polls, made the following classic answer:

"No, I didn't want the n—rs to vote. Would you want anyone to vote who was going to vote against you?"

From a local white paper: ". . . The five senators serving on the investigating committee down at the Federal building no doubt realize that they have been listening to a lot of bare-faced lying by colored witnesses during the past few days — witnesses who have been crudely coached in the perjured testimony offered."

"Senator Ellender's conduct of this investigation was shocking," stated E. H. Block, attorney for the Civil Rights Congress, here Friday.

"In his zealousness to act as a special pleader for Senator Bilbo, he has violated every standard of ethics and decency, and completely forgot that he was supposed to be acting as an impartial judge," added Block.

Bilbo Hearing Top Show In Capital Last Week

The News Birmingham, Ala.

BY SCOTT MORTON

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23—(NANA)—The best show in Washington this past week was the Bilbo hearing. It had tragedy, drama, comedy, suspense and colorful characters. It had received excellent stage direction from publicity-minded producers, Sens. Mead, Ferguson & Co., and it attracted a big audience, comprised largely of the press. Bilbo was starred. But, except for a few asides, he did not take a cigar in it.

Inherently the situation was anything but amusing. A United States senator was virtually on trial on charges of having accepted thousands of dollars from war contractors.

Yet much of the testimony was amusing. Superficially so at least. Michigan's Ferguson has an acid skill at turning a witness's witless testimony back upon him, making him appear a fool, and, in this hearing, Ferguson was not hard pressed. Thus there were humorous moments; the world enjoys seeing some one else play the fool.

The drama went deeper than its

Liveliest manifestation, which came at the moment when a witness, a former congressman, knocked another witness over backward in his chair. This was outward show of bitter conflict; the reputation of more than one man had been furled for all to see.

THE TESTIMONY THAT various candidates for sale in 1942 price. Accusations, denials, confessions of a sort were shouted to the high, marble ceiling of the Senate caucus room. This was only politics in Mississippi, they said. If you are defeated in the primaries you allow a winning candidate to pay what the Mississippi boys call "operating deficit" of your campaign. As simple as that!

Nor did the men who made political campaigns and expensive gifts to Bilbo. The senator's house needed painting; a contractor wanted a swimming pool; a hearing room and some committees refuse to use it. Reason: You can't hear in it.

Why spectators ever attend is mysterious.

Because his lower dental plate is loose, Bilbo was particularly difficult to understand.

12-23-46

He got one of the biggest laughs of the session when, in explaining why he was having accepted contributions from war contractors, he said the other day, it that there was nothing questionable in his having accepted contributions from war contractors. Actually, it is a most unsatisfactory third contractor built it. In addition, they lent him large sums of money.

The room in which the hearing was held, in the Senate Office Building, is large and magnificent. —marble walls, marble pillars and four stunning crystal chandeliers; a crimson carpet on the floor. As someone said the other day, it would make a fine ballroom. Actually, all 22 acres. The senator's swimming pool, a hearing room and some committees to understand.

THE DOES NOT LOOK THE PART HE PLAYS. this man from Mississippi. His personal appearance is unimpressive. He looks like any slight old man whom age has shrunken and turned to a parled brown. His face is pinched, the skin is tight across the bones, his mouth is a thin, hard line and a great part of the time he holds a pensive automobile from a contractor, he said: "It is just an old Southern custom."

Post Says Bilbo Hearing Sickening

Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—The Washington Post, in an editorial which appeared in last Friday's edition under the caption, "Bilboism," said:

Wed. 12-11-46

"It is impossible to read the reports of the Bilbo investigation in Mississippi without a sense of sickness. Witness after witness has appeared before the Senate Campaign Expenditure Committee to tell of threats, of crynical denials of the right to vote, of outright brutality. And, according to Mary Spargo, who is covering the hearings for The Post, Bilbo's attorneys and supporters sit listening to this testimony "with broad grins." Public officials, as well as private citizens, callously acknowledge the most flagrant disregard of constitutional rights—and defend this disregard with a shrug of the shoulders and a sneering assertion that that's the way things are in Mississippi.

"In such an atmosphere, it took courage for Negroes to appear before the Senate Committee. It took courage for a Jewish rabbi and Catholic priest to support the stories of violence and coercion which the Negroes told; they were among the few white men to testify against Bilbo. In Jackson, Mississippi, where the hearings are being held, the Jackson Daily News recently printed an editorial attacking Percy Green, editor of the Jackson Advocate, a Negro weekly, who has assumed leadership in bringing charges against Senator Bilbo. Mr. Green had attended a [illegible] protest lynching and, according to the Daily News, "discussed racial tensions in his state." The Daily News editorial then observed: 'One of these days Green is destined to learn a great deal more about racial tensions than he now knows.'

"The Senate committee has been told that out of 350,000 Negroes in Mississippi eligible for registration, only 2,500 were actually registered; and it is estimated that the State has about 30,000 Negro veterans who are exempted by law from payment of the poll tax. The statistics at least suggest very strongly that some influence other than indifference was at work in Mississippi. They suggest, too, that men who have the courage to expose this situation deserve and need the shield of the Federal Government's protection. They should be called before the committee by subpena—those who wish to come as well as those who are reluctant—so the authority of the United States may be asserted in an area where it is now commonly held in contempt.

"It is clear, we think, that Senator Bilbo is not without direct responsibility for the situation that exists in Mississippi. He speaks there with a certain authority derived from his membership in the Senate of the United States. He preaches doctrines of hate and violence and crime—doctrines which, taken together, make him the author of the system which can best be called Bilboism now prevalent in Mississippi. Whether it is the system or the senator himself that kept Negroes from the polls is not of primary importance. Bilbo's guilt in either case is inescapable."

Election System, Not Bilbo, Will Be Blamed, Thomas Says

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

Washington, Dec. 22 (AP)—Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) predicted today Democratic members of an investigating committee will hold next week that the Mississippi election system and not Senator Bilbo (D., Miss) prevented Negroes from voting there.

Mon. 12-23-46

Thomas told a reporter that as a member of the Senate elections subcommittee which held hearings on the ground, he is convinced that "Bilbo did nothing that almost every other politician in Mississippi hasn't done" in this year's primary campaign.

Bilbo was accused of preventing Negroes from voting in the Democratic primary in which he won renomination. Republicans looked to this charge as a possible ground for efforts to unseat him.

Thomas said he regards the Mississippi primary system as being in the process of an evolution that eventually will lead to voting by Negroes in increased numbers.

Thomas' prediction on the findings of the Democratic majority found Republicans still apparently undecided what they will do about a minority report at a December 30 meeting of the group. Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) said he does not know yet what, if anything, the minority will have to say about Bilbo.

I'm A Poor Man, Bilbo Says, Never Sought Gifts, Funds

The News Birmingham, Ala.

Thurs. 12-19-46

Only Got One Auto, Furniture, Senator Tells Investigators

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19—(AP)—Sen. Bilbo (D., Miss.) declared at his war contracts investigation today that he never had sought gifts or funds "with the possible exception of the money that I borrowed to make a property settlement with my ex-wife."

Taking the stand with a 10,000-word prepared statement, Bilbo said that evidence to date showed "that I am a very poor man and heavily involved in debt and that I received during all the period that the investigation has covered but two Christmas gifts, one an automobile and the other living room furniture consists of a sofa, three floor lamps and two table lamps."

BILBO BEGAN READING HIS STATEMENT after a brief discussion with the Senate war investigating subcommittee as to whether interruptions should be allowed in his testimony.

The Mississippi senator said he preferred to read it straight through, as he had made an effort to prepare it in "an orderly, sequential way."

Sen. Ferguson (R., Mich.) protested that the committee had not had a chance to peruse it and should be allowed to question Bilbo at any point it chose.

Speaking somewhat indistinctly because he is unable to wear his lower dental plate Bilbo said "it will take about an hour" to read the statement.

THE STOCKY LITTLE SENATOR took the stand after a tumultuous week of testimony regarding thousands of dollars in campaign contributions, alimony payments, and gifts of an expensive automobile, a new home, an artificial lake, and an elaborate Baptist church parsonage on his Mississippi plantation.

Bilbo said all the charges against him had been raised by Ross A. Collins, former Mississippi congressman, and his ex-secretary, Edward P. Terry.

All the charges, he said, were fully discussed in the recent Mississippi election, in which he emerged victorious over four primary opponents.

THE ISSUES WERE RAISED in his state by two groups, he went on, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and an "oust Bilbo committee" in New York City.

"One of them is an all-Negro group, which is headed by a man about whom I think it is fair to say that most recognized Negro leaders in America believe can be justly charged with expediency on the basis of past performance," the senator said. "The other group includes Communist Party members and quite a few other people who have been closly identified with Communist-front activities."

Reviewing his political and financial careers, he said he learned early in life that he must buy all the land he could on credit.

As a result, Bilbo said he now owes two banks about $22,500 on mortgages. All went well until he had to settle $21,750 for alimony in 1938, the senator said, for which "I borrowed every dollar."

The News

OF HIS FORMER SECRETARY, Bilbo said Terry "has been so free with his wild, hazy, vicious and traiterous hallucinations."

Terry yesterday told of being threatened with death if he testified a gaiinst his former boss. Continuig, Bilbo said:

"They want Bilbo destroyed and unseated because of my convictions and ideologies which are opposed to the great objectives of posed to the great o bjectives of the all-out Negro groups and Communist groups in America."

Bilbo said that Terry and Collins had joined forces in producing an anti-Bilbo circular "which I have read and analyzed" and in which I find at least 25 seperate, distinct, contemptable, pusillanious and limicolous lies."

(Limicolous: "living in mud").

Bilbo poured out contempt for Collins and cited the primary election results in Mississippi to show the former Congressman was unable to carry his home county in this year's Senate race.

He said Collins "has been the most thoroughly, completely and everlastingly condemed, damed, and repudiated man in the history of the state." Birmingham, Ala.

The 69-year-old veteran of many a political battle was unperturbed as he waited his summons to the witness stand to be queried by members of the war investigating committee concerning his dealing with war contractors.

"They have not shown a thing except that I got an automobile and I owe a lot of debts," was Bilbo's comment to a reporter on the progress of the hearing.

He referred to a full week of testimony regarding thousands of dollars in campaign contributions, alimony payments, and gifts of an expensive automobile, a new home, an artificial lake, and an elaborate Baptist Church parsonage.

BILBO'S TURN CAME after Edward P. Terry, his former secretary, was summarily dismissed as a witness late yesterday for refusing to answer questions regarding the disposition of $15,000 he obtained to find and finance a Mississippi opponent to "beat Bilbo."

Chairman Mead (D., N. Y.) and Sen. Ferguson (R., Mich.) ordered charges of "perjury" and "contempt of the Senate" brought against Terry. He had been looked upon earlier by opponents of Bilbo, as a "star witness" in their efforts to keep the Mississippi senator from taking his seat next month.

Terry, jittery and haggard, occupied most of yesterday's sessions telling freely of the relations he and the senator had had with various war contractors and Bilbo supporters.

Thurs. 12-19-46

But he closed up when Ferguson pressed him for full details on the $15,000 he said he obtained last year in New York City, while still Bilbo's secretary, to use to defeat his boss.

At first Terry had testified reluctantly that the $15,000 was given him by a "Simon Liberman, of New York City." Then he told the committee that when he was unable to find a Mississippi candidate to oppose Bilbo this year he returned the money to Liberman.

DURING A RECESS Ferguson discovered that Liberman had died five months before the date Terry said he paid back the funds. He confronted Terry with this information when the latter returned to the stand.

Terry, pleading that he had been "confused," then testified that he had returned the $15,000 to where Liberman's "estate would get it." He declined to elaborate, asserting that to do so would ruin his credit and that the incident was not involved in Bilbo's relations with war contractors.

After he twice refused to tell the "whole story," Mead and Ferguson instructed attorneys for the investigating group to push both perjury and contempt actions against Terry.

PM New York, N.Y.

He Mortgaged Juniper Grove Baptist Property, Too – Until Recently

45a

Wed. 12-18-46

By Victor H. Bernstein
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.–Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo's frenzied financing, in which it would take a Ponzi to distinguish a gift from a loan or a political contribution from a personal gift, yesterday was embellished by a Bilbo deed which was supposed to have conveyed a church building and five-bathroom parsonage to the board of deacons of the Juniper Grove Baptist Church, but in reality conveyed nothing but Bilbo's promises—if that much.

The Juniper Grove institution has been in a building on Bilbo's plantation in Poplarville, Miss., for many years. The church itself is practically completed, but the parsonage is not yet liveable.

Despite repeated testimony of many witnesses during the last five days before the Senate War Investigating Sub-committee, that practically every war contractor who had a nodding acquaintance with Bilbo gave a contribution to the church-building fund, the faucets in the five bathrooms still yawn for water.

And the church's present parson, Rev. D. Wade Smith, is living two miles from the parsonage in a house he built for himself only last year, evidently having tired of waiting for the water to run.

Title to the church, the parsonage and the land on which they stand have always remained in Bilbo's hands. But three days before the current hearings opened, the Senator executed a deed turning all this property over to the board of deacons on consideration of $1.

But some weeks earlier—and also since the beginning of the Senate investigation into Bilbo's finances and their relation to war contracts—the Mississippian had put into escrow in a local bank a deed which in effect turned the property over to the church deacons only upon the owner's death.

Questioned yesterday by Sen. Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), Bilbo's own attorney, Forrest Jackson, admitted from the witness stand that he believed "title is still in escrow" and that his client's grand gesture made on the eve of the hearings "didn't have any legal effect on ownership of the property."

Bilbo had collected some $27,000 in a special Juniper Grove Church account to which he alone had access. Bilbo had mortgaged the church property along with most of the rest of his plantation.

Yesterday he produced documents to show that in the last few weeks his mortgagors – the Farm Land Bank and the Bank of Poplarville—had relieved the church property from their mortgages and left it free and clear.

Rev. Smith testified he had been called to the church as pastor in October, 1944, with the understanding that the parsonage would be available to him. Evidence was introduced to show that some months ago he had told a Senate committee investigator that he had been "forced to build my own house because Sen. Bilbo wouldn't let me move into the parsonage" and that "attempts to find out about Sen. Bilbo's special church account were thwarted by the bank clerk, who always changed the subject when asked about it."

But on the stand yesterday, Rev. Smith tried to soften his earlier testimony and denied he had ever attempted to inquire into the special church account or that Bilbo wouldn't let him into the parsonage. "It simply wasn't liveable," he said, and added that he thought five bathrooms might be too much for his family, which includes a wife and two daughters, one of whom is in college. 12-18-46

Odds on Bilbo: 60-40 And Take Your Pick

PM New York, N.Y.

Wed. 12-18-46

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.–Reporters covering the Bilbo hearings here seem fairly divided on whether the Senate will permit The Man to retain his seat, with a slight advantage in Bilbo's favor.

PM yesterday polled 17 newsmen, more than half of those present in the hearings room. Nine thought Bilbo would keep his seat; eight thought he'd lose it. 12-18-46

On betting odds, however, Bilbo came out definitely the winner. One Southern reporter quoted odds of five to one that the Mississippian would keep his seat, while the highest odds quoted the other way were 65-35, cited by a New Yorker.

Favorite odds quoted were 60 40 and take your pick.

Dem Group Expected To Whitewash Bilbo

PM New York, N.Y. Mon. 12-23-46

Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo seemed sure today of a whitewash report on at least one count of the double-barreled investigation into his alleged intimidation of Negro voters and his relations with Mississippi war contractors.

Sen. Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.), predicted last night that he and two other Democratic members of the committee which investigated the vote charge will hold this week that the Mississippi election system and not Bilbo kept Negroes from the polls.

Thomas himself is convinced, he told an AP reporter, that "Bilbo did nothing that almost every other politician in Mississippi hasn't done" in the state's recent primary. "Sen. Bilbo's views on this question are well known. As far as I can see, he didn't say anything in Mississippi that he hasn't said on the Senate floor."

Thomas maintained that the Mississippi primary system was in the process of an evolution that eventually will lead to voting by Negroes in increased numbers.

"I watched the same thing happen in Oklahoma," he said, "where there is now no question about Negroes voting so long as they are qualified voters."

There is still the possibility of a dissenting report by the two Republican members of the committee. Sen. Bourke Hickenlooper (R., Ia.), said last night he did not yet know what, if anything, the GOP faction would do. The other Republican member is Sen. Styles Bridges (N. H.)

Chairman Allen J. Ellender (D., La.) was spectacularly friendly toward Bilbo during the public hearings at Jackson, Miss., and the third committee Democrat is Sen. Burnet Maybank (S. C.).

The new GOP-controlled Senate is slated to get at least one unfavorable report on Bilbo. Sen. Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) is already working on a report of the War Investigating Committee's probe into dealings between "The Man" and Mississippi war contractors. At hearings in Washington, Bilbo acknowledged receiving funds from them, maintained they were used to finance the unsuccessful Senatorial primary campaign of Wall Doxey in 1942. 12-23-46

Saying Howdy to Bilbo is Costly

PM New York, N.Y.

Tues. 12-17-46

By Victor H. Bernstein
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.–One of Mississippi's most expensive pastimes, apparently, is to drop in to say hello to Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo (D., Miss.). For instance:

Item: Mike Morrissey, testifying yesterday before the Senate subcommittee investigating Bilbo's connections with war contractors, said he was passing through the Senator's Paplarville estate one day, saw some of the Senator's men chopping down trees, and thought maybe a lake would look good on the estate.

So he built the lake at a cash outlay to himself of $3,672, leaving an island in the middle for the construction o fa "dream house" for Bilbo, and while he was at it he also excavated ground enough outside the lake for a swimming pool.

Morrissey said the money he spent on the lake was entered originally on his books as an expense on a hole in the ground big enough for a swimming pool, and some sand and gravel and a cement mixer nearby, and said, "Why, Senator I could pour that cement for you cheaper than anybody."

So Junkin poured the cement at a net material and labor cost to himself of $1194.42, made up a bill for this amount, marked it "paid in full" and sent it along to Bilbo.

P.S. Junkin was a sub contractor on the eslser Field project, having done about a half million dollars worth of business on it.

Item: M. T. Reed, contractor, testified he happened to drop in to see Bilbo one day and told the Senator, "Why, Theo, your house needs painting." So he engaged E. C. Daniel, painting contractor, to paint the house at a cost to himself of $1790.79, and then wrote off this amount on his books as a "bad debt."

(cost: $1912). 12-17-46

But what was expected to be fireworks sort of sputtered out. Abe Shushan, one of Huey Long's henchmen who got a 30-month sentence for mail frauds in Louisiana in 1940, was expected to testify that he had "loaned" Bilbo $3000 with the expectation that the Senator would try to do something for him.

Shushan admitted the loan, but insisted it was made on behalf of G. R. Stewart, a Mississippi merchant and good friend, who had intervened with him on Bilbo's behalf "because he was having trouble with Mrs. Bilbo."

Reed testified further that on another occasion, while enroute to New Orleans, he dropped in to see the Senator and said:

"Why, Theo, I hear your collections for building that lovely Juniper Grove Baptist Church and parsonage on your property are going pretty slow. Would $3,500 help?" So he made out a check to the Juniper Grove Church for $3,500.

P.S. Reed's Mississippi war contracts ran into tens of millions of dollars.

Item: Robert Gandy, church deacon and member of the "informal" committee to elect Wall Doxey as Senator in 1940, was called back to the stand and testified he met Ed Terry, formerly Bilbo's secretary, on the street in Jackson just before Christmas in 1941, and Terry said to him, "Say, we ought to get the Senator a Christmas gift. How about furniture for his dream house on the island?"

Gandy said he thought that was a fine idea, so Terry borrowed $500 from a local bank, gave in exchange a note which was endorsed by Gandy. Contractor Reed made good on the note.

These are just a few items from a day of complicated evidence which indicated also that Bilbo got several loans – some of which were either not paid at all, or only partially repaid—and also received a dandy new Cadillac from Contractor Morrissey for Christmas in 1941

They Can Take Some Credit From GOP for Denying Him Seat

PM New York, N.Y. Thurs. 12-26-46

WANTED: Five Democratic Senators who do NOT want to yield the country's Negro vote to the Republicans in 1948. If the five, in addition to practical political sense, also have a feeling for justice, democracy and the dignity of the U. S. Senate, all the better. Applicants will kindly apply to the President pro tem of the Senate on Jan. 3 by voting NO on admission of Theo. G. Bilbo to that august body.

By VICTOR BERNSTEIN

The vote of five Democratic Senators may be enough to keep Bilbo out of the Senate when that body convenes on Jan. 3. Some extreme optimists say three may be enough.

The calculation is based upon the fact that only 60 Senators—30 Republicans and 30 Democrats—will be eligible to vote at the moment that Bilbo's right to take his oath of office is challenged.

These 60 comprise 59 hold-overs from the old Senate plus Sen. Baldwin (R., Conn.), the only new Senator who will have been sworn in by the time Bilbo's name is called (swearing in is traditionally done by alphabetical order). All other new Senators, as well as those re-elected last November, will have no vote on the Bilbo issue, for they will not yet have been sworn into office.

An informal poll taken by a Republican Senator who has been identified with various recent investigations into Bilbo's shenanigans, indicates that 28 of the 30 holdover Republicans are prepared to bar the Mississippian.

Inasmuch as 31 votes are necessary to stop Bilbo from being sworn in, the Democrats will have to provide at least three votes. But cautious calculators, who believe profoundly in the maxim that there's many a slip between the cup and the lip, are figuring on the need for at least five to offset a couple of possible last-moment Republican fainthearts.

All this is predicated, of course, on the supposition that the Bilbo issue will be solved squarely along political lines, with the Republicans voting more or less en bloc against Bilbo with an eye to the Negro vote, and the States' rights Democrats voting for Bilbo with an eye to the Southern white vote. But if some of the Democrats should assure Bilbo's ouster by voting with the GOP, they could also take some of the credit politically.

Where, then, will the five anti-Bilbo Democratic votes come from?

Possibilities most frequently mentioned include Robert Wagner (N. Y.), who by his record can be counted upon as a certainty; Scott Lucas, Ill., and Francis Myers, Pa., both of whom have large Negro constituencies; and Morton Downey, Calif., John Murray, Mont., and Glen Taylor, Ida., who have

PROSECUTION – NOT WHITEWASH FOR BILBO

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

By Benjamin Davis, Jr.

Tues. 12-31-46

Enough evidence has been piled up against the fascist Bilbo not only to unseat him, but to raise the question of a Federal prosecution. Yet, it is as plain as Pike's Peak certain members of the two committees which held hearings upon him are planning a whitewash for this revolting Ku Kluxer. What a nice way to begin the new year.

DAVIS

The activities of this man over the years, particularly in the recent period when he became even more brazen — together with the limited birdseye view of him before the two Senate Committees—are a stench in the nostrils of every decent American.

Although the capitalist press depicted him in the most ludicrous poses, pretending he was merely an annoying clown, Bilbo represents a serious fascist danger in our country. He will be laughed off only at the peril of embattled democracy in America.

To perceive the full menace of Bilbo, one has to consider simultaneously the drive against organized labor by the big monopolies, through the GOP-polltax majority in the 80th Congress and through the insidious anti-labor program of the National Association of Manufacturers.

NO DOUBT

It has been proved beyond a shadow of doubt that:

1. Bilbo is a Ku Kluxer. This he brazenly admitted over a nationwide radio hook-up.

2. Bilbo incited violence against Negroes seeking to vote in the recent elections. His statement over the radio that Negroes should be kept from the polls at all costs using any and every means was not even denied by Bilbo.

Instead he defiantly admitted it, under circumstances where everyone knew that he was giving orders to his fellow Ku Kluxers in his acknowledged "Bilbo post" of the KKK. Moreover, these orders were carried out against countless Negro citizens, and veterans especially.

3. The charges Bilbo accepted war contract bribes, aided a drug addict and generally violated the principle of free elections beggar description.

POINTED OUT

What the Communists have repeatedly pointed out is, namely, that when one finds a public official who thrives on Negro, Jew, labor, or red-baiting, he runs the whole gamut of political corruption and reaction. Bilbo is the shining example for all who might have considered his "white supremacy" views as "naughty peculiarities."

In Mississippi, it wasn't the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, which brought out the evidence against Bilbo. The credit for this goes to the courageous Negro veterans who braved the murderous terror of Bilbo's fellow Klansmen, after the Senate Committee held the hearings in Mississippi for with the obvious and sinister hope that Negroes would be afraid to testify.

The evidence which came out during the hearings of the Senate War Investigating Committee was clear, in spite of certain members of the committee. For at one point, although it was Bilbo on trial, yet the committee cited for contempt one of the witnesses testifying against Bilbo!

ENOUGH EVIDENCE

Be that as it may, it is clear that there is enough evidence to place before a Federal Grand Jury. Unseating him is the least of the penalties for this would-be Hitler.

One senator has declared in advance that it isn't Bilbo who is at fault, it's the system. (Although one cannot agree on Bilbo, one could agree if he meant the capitalist system.) This argument is ridiculous. One might as well say of a murderer who shot his victim to death that it wasn't the murderer, it was the pistol.

Another, Sen. Thomas, says that if action is taken against Bilbo, all the other senators may be embarrassed by Bilbo's digging up their skeletons. No doubt there are others in the Senate who have unsavory records, and they ought to be exposed. But this is not an excuse, this is an expression of cowardice at best. But, in any event, he certainly gives an excellent reason why a new third people's party is needed in this country, if for no other reason than to get a few clean officeholders in the highest legislative body of America, who will stand up against a fascist.

Bilbo must be denied a seat on Jan. 3. Thereafter it will be much more difficult to dislodge him. For on Jan. 3 only a majority of the senators are necessary to deny him a seat. After Jan. 3, a two-thirds majority of the Senate is necessary. The Negro people—ther labor-progressive supporters—will watch the action of every single senator Jan. 3.

Every labor and people's organization in the country should send a representative on the delegation to Washington to unseat Bilbo Jan. 2, under the auspices of the American Crusade to End Lynching. 12-31-46

No whitewash for Bilbo! No seat for Bilbo! Indict Bilbo!

Vindicates White House in Case Bilbo Is Cleared

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 12-14-46

Tobias Opposed; Probe Held Victory for Brown;

By RALPH MATTHEWS

WASHINGTON

There is a lot of behind-the-scenes speculation over the timing of the announcement of President Truman's Civil Liberties Committee.

The Executive Order naming this committee is very similar to President Roosevelt's action in naming the Fair Employment Practices Committee but without the scope or power of the former.

The timing, however, was significant, coming right after the Republican resurrection and in the middle of the Bilbo probe.

Jumping the Gun

By taking this step, the President cleared his skirts and put the White House on high ground in case the Senate Investigating Committee, headed by Louisiana's Allen Ellender, exonerates Mississippi colleague.

With the Republicans taking the credit for pushing the Bilbo probe and thereby lining up a flock of grateful colored votes, Truman resorted to an old FDR trick of jumping the gun by taking the edge off of his opponents' issue with a counter move.

Most of the appointments to the 15-man committee met with general approval. Mrs. Sadie M. Alexander of Philadelphia and Dr. Channing H. Tobias of New York are the only non-white members.

Many Washington leaders, however, expressed disappointment over the Tobias appointment.

Conciliation Feared

Some think that his work as a YMCA executive and his connections with the Phelps-Stokes Fund and his many other affiliations will not only occupy much of his time, but to the individual efforts of Edgar G. Brown.

In the face of ridicule, insult and actual physical danger, he has devoted his entire efforts toward rousing sentiment against the Mississippi bigot.

In Los Angeles, Brown was actually beaten up while distributing his oust-Bilbo petitions to the American Legion and, of all things, by colored legionnaires who objected to his injecting the race issue into what they called "peaceful interracial convention."

Persistent Lobbyist

He has one million names on a petition to be presented to Congress demanding Bilbo's ouster when that body reconvenes.

Moreover, it was he who hung around the Senate Office Building both day and night egging the Republicans on to the probe when they were in their first flush of victory.

Many were willing to accept the padded report of the Ellender Committee, made by white investigators. This report showed that no colored person in Mississippi could be found who actually had been prevented from voting.

This report gave the impression that all of the witnesses would give hearsay testimony, much of which could not be pinned down.

It was Brown who persuaded Senator Taft and company to carry their own probe direct to Mississippi and not trust the Ellender report.

White Also Attacked

"After we finish with Bilbo," declared Howard, "we want to start on our side of the Congress on our side of the Congress demanding Bilbo's ouster putting rid of Channing Tobias and Walter White as group around the Senate Office Building

Howard is sore with both of these men because they have refused to see any good in the Republicans.

BOASTFUL SENATOR STILL CONFIDENT HE'LL RETAIN SEAT

The Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

WASHINGTON—The mill is grinding slowly but exceedingly fine. Democratic America, slow to anger, and even slower in cleaning out despots within her midst, has turned her full wrath upon defiant Theodore G. Bilbo whose sordid story now encompasses threats of death against those courageous enough to testify against him.

From editorial page to picture magazine to radio microphone to public platforms comes a persistent, ever-loudening demand: Bilbo Must Go! Sat. 12-21-46

This week, immediately on the heels of hearings by the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee in Jackson, Miss., where Negro witness after witness related the sickening story of how they were beaten and otherwise intimidated to prevent them from voting, it now turns up that Bilbo mistreats white people, too. Not "damyankees," but his fellow Mississippians for whom he professes so much love.

This not-so-surprising revelation came during hearings before a Senate War Investigating Committee on charges that he received "gratuities" from war contractors whom he helped to obtain Army contracts. Sessions were characterized by rowdiness, disorder and fisticuffs between Robert Gandy, a Jackson insurance agent, and Ross Collins, former Mississippi Congressman.

However, Bilbo still does not believe the Republicans will be able to bar him when the new Senate convenes Jan. 3. He has announced: "They can't stop me at the door."

SEEK OTHER WAYS TO UNSEAT HIM

But Republican strategists have vowed that regardless of the outcome of current hearings, they will seek other ways to unseat him.

Technical rules will make it difficult to deny Bilbo his seat on opening day, said GOP sources, but they have found that he could be ousted by a majority vote which sustained any charges made against him.

Expulsion by a moral turpitude charge would require a two-thirds vote. If the charges are so broad that both categories are covered a majority then could decide whether only a majority vote was needed to get rid of him.

In the meantime, another key figure in the case, Edward P. Terry, Bilbo's erstwhile secretary, has turned up "in a nervous state" in a Quitman (Miss.) hospital while FBI agents were looking for him. Terry claims he was warned under threat of death not to testify, but the War Investigating Committee will hear his story this week.

"PRETTY ROUGH"

He was originally scheduled to testify Monday, but hospital authorities said he was feeling "pretty rough' and would have to stay put a bit longer.

J. Marvin Quinn, Jackson (Miss.) banker to whom Terry revealed the anonymous death threat, has also been served a subpoena. The committee ordered him to produce records of his bank's financial dealings with Terry.

MISSISSIPPI CONTRACTORS

Also on hand to join the parade to the witness stand will be A. L. Shuhan, prominent New Orleans contractor and supporter of the late Huey Long who is supposed to have had some queer dealings with Bilbo. He will be followed by three Mississippi contractors — Michael Morrissey, M. T. Reed and A. B. Friend. All these names have crept in and out of testimony linking Bilbo with mysterious political and financial manipulations.

A letter from Terry to Chairman Mead of the War Investigating Committee was read into the record last week-end. Dated Nov. 2, it said that an anonymous person telephoned him at Meridian, Miss., on Nov. 26 and told him "that should he participate or take any part in connection with the investigation of Senator Bilbo, my wife and daughter would pay with their lives."

The letter also said that on Oct. 31 another anonymous caller told him "you would pay with your life if you had anything to do with an investigation of Bilbo then going on in Mississippi."

The letter also recalled that last April "I was, in presence of witness told that I would be killed if I gave out any information might have detrimental to Senator Bilbo." The Courier

As the committee's case shaped up last Friday's session was enlivened by the fight between Collins and Gandy. Testimony showed that Bilbo had received a total of $35,000 from Mississippi war contractors whom he had aided in securing Army contracts. One contractor, Francis T. Newton, of Hattiesburg, Miss., had testified earlier in the day that on Sept. 7, 1942, he had given Bilbo four checks totaling $25,000. Pittsburgh, Pa.

CASHED FOUR CHECKS

Bilbo, earlier testimony established, had helped the Newton-Glenn Construction Company to get the contract to build the $13,967,005 Keesler Field at Biloxi, Miss., as a co-venture with other contractors.

Under a withering examination by Senator Homer Ferguson, Rep., Mich., Gandy said he had cashed the four checks for Bilbo and taken the money to Bilbo in a hotel room.

Pressed by Senator Ferguson to tell what had become of the money after it had been turned over to Bilbo as the chairman of an "informal committee" to aid the candidacy of Wall Doxey, now Senate sergeant-at-arms, against Senator James M. Eastland, Gandy explained that after the regular white Democratic primary in Mississippi in 1942 it was necessary to carry on certain "maneuvers" to get "eliminated" candidates to support Doxey.

Senator Ferguson inferred from Gandy's testimony that the eliminated candidates had to be paid for their support of the candidates who were in the run-off primary.

Gandy said he wouldn't put it that way. He labeled the payment to eliminated candidates as "an operating deficit."

HAS HIS SYMPATHY

Senator Ferguson wanted to know whether a man in Mississippi could make more money by losing in a campaign than by winning. Gandy replied that the loser in the run-off primary had his sympathy because he had to bear his own "operating deficit."

Gandy described a conference with Mr. Collins, another "eliminated candidate" for the purpose of getting a statement supporting Mr. Doxey. As Gandy told his story Collins moved forward and was invited by Senator Mead to sit closer where he could hear the witness.

Gandy testified that Collins had designated Cecil F. Travis as his representative to discuss his "operating deficit" and went on to give his version of an argument between Collins and Bilbo over Collins' refusal to allow the latter to see, prior to publication, a statement he had prepared supporting Doxey.

HITS THE FLOOR

Suddenly, Collins swung from a sitting-down position. Gandy hit the floor. Collins was on top of him and began to pound and kick him when Capitol police intervened and stopped the fight. In the commotion, Senator Mead adjourned the hearing and Capitol police shooed the audience out of the room. Sat, 12-21-46

The hearings are enlightening. They explain the difficulty colored construction contractors encounter in getting Government contracts, although under War Department procedure it was possible for Mississippi contractors who had had no construction experience and were considered incapable of performing the work, to get a contract by joining in with a reputable out-of-State contractor.

Other stories were told of the affairs in Mississippi money transactions, enough for the committee to recommend that "Bilbo must go" if it desires to do so.

Some say, however, that with even all this damaging evidence there is a definite move on foot to "whitewash" the man and give him a clean bill of health.

But notwithstanding, the effort to unseat Bilbo will go on.

SENATOR'S USE OF DEROGATORY TERMS HIGHLIGHTS HEARING

The Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa. Sat. 12-14-46

By LUCIUS JONES, Staff Correspondent

JACKSON, Miss.—"I have no apology for my belief that Democratic primaries should be controlled by whites and that white supremacy should govern." That was the bold and defiant climax by U. S. Senator Theodore G. (The Man) Bilbo of an hour and fifty minutes of testimony here Thursday afternoon before a U. S. Senate Investigating Committee headed by Senator Allen J. Ellender, Houma, La., Democrat, and also composed of Senators Styles Bridges, New Hampshire Republican; Elmer Thomas, Oklahoma Democrat; Bourke B. Hickenlooper, Iowa Republican, and Burnet R. Maybank, South Carolina Democrat.

BLAMES "OUTSIDE INFLUENCES"

Senator Bilbo, answering a question from Senator Ellender as to whether most of the controversy over the Mississippi Democratic Senatorial campaign July 2 was caused by outside influences, replied: The Courier

"Without a doubt the outsiders are not interested in the welfare of the n——rs; they only want political control. I think all of them ought to be ridden out of town on a rail."

"ISOLATED" AND "SPORADIC" CASES

As the testimony of Senator Bilbo and several later witnesses, all pioneer figures in Mississippi politics, rolled on, it became evident that the strategy of all Bilbo supporters was (1) to attribute the July 2 terrorism and brutality to racial tension caused by "outside influence"; (2) to characterize the disturbances as "isolated and sporadic happenings" rather than general cases typical of most of the State on election day; (3) to try to establish in the minds of the Senate investigators that Negroes are "traditional Republicans" but merely turned to the Democratic primary for the first time this year because of the alleged "outside influence," and (4) to try to establish the fact that for fifty-six years Negroes in Mississippi have been politically inactive, and that their laxity July 2 was due to this same "traditional inactivity" rather than to violence and intimidation fomented by the speeches of Bilbo.

JACKSON, Miss.—A verdict on the Bilbo election contest will be rendered in about ten days, Senator Allen J. Ellender, chairman of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, said here last week. The committee will meet in Washington the week of Dec. 16, to render its decision.

One of the Bilbo witnesses used the term "d——ies" three times in reference to would-be Negro voters.

The four-day public hearings, which began Monday and ended Thursday in Federal District Court, located in the U. S. Post Office Building at the corner of Capitol and West Streets here, were conducted in morning sessions which began at 10 o'clock, with an hour open for lunch, and afternoon sessions that started at 1 o'clock and lasted until 6 o'clock, except for Thursday, the final day, when all deliberations were terminated and the hearings were closed at 4:45.

hope and prayer that the committee, in all justice, will deny this petition in toto and give me the exoneration that the record both justifies and requires, and my full confidence in the membership of this committee leads me to believe that will be done promptly."

PETITION FILED BY MIXED GROUP

The petition preferring charges that Bilbo's speeches created fear among Negroes and frightened them from the polls in sufficient numbers to have affected his third-term election was filed—with the aid of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the Civil Rights Congress—by forty-eight colored and two white Mississippians.

But Thursday, Bilbo, without the usual bravado and swagger which has been typical of his political demeanor when preaching his doctrine of white supremacy, denied in total "deflation" that he had "exhorted, agitated and made any inflammatory appeals to the passions and prejudices of the white population of Mississippi to foster, stimulate, inspire, create and intensify a state of acute and aggravated tension between white and Negro races in the State of Missis-

When he had finished reading the long, prepared statement, Senator Bilbo said, "Democratic primaries have been limited to 'white citizens.'

"In all my speeches," Bilbo said, "I urged them (white citizens) to take whatever legal and lawful steps were deemed necessary to see that n——rs did not vote in the primary."

BILBO "EATS UP" WORDS

On the witness stand, Bilbo, the storm center of Mississippi politics, denied he sought to incite violence between the races.

"I urged citizens to prevent Negroes from voting by 'any means at their disposal,' contending that the Democratic primaries have been limited to the white citizens."

sippi."

PUSHED BILBO PROBE—Percy J. Greene, militant editor of the Jackson (Miss.) Advocate, was one of the first to call for an investigation into biased campaign tactics used by Senator Theodore Bilbo in the last State primary election. The fearless editor testified last week before the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee.

DENIES NEGRO QUALIFICATION

Bilbo charged that most of the electors who signed the petition against him are not qualified to participate in the Democratic primary in which he was nominated under the constitution and laws of Mississippi—let alone the approximately 3,000 who did vote in the July 2 primary and other Negroes who claimed a right to vote but were not registered or did not cast a ballot.

Senator Bilbo said his opposition to Negroes voting in the Democratic primary in Mississippi is based upon State statutes requiring the person to agree to support the candicate declared the nominee of the party in the general election, and the act requiring them to have been in accord with such party in the primary of which he offers to vote for the past two years.

CALLS NEGROES TRADITIONAL REPUBLICANS

"It has been the general understanding for fifty-six years in Mississippi that the n——r race has almost without exception been affiliated throughout all that time with the Republican party. I have always admitted that a n——r is not denied his right to vote in Mississippi, provided he met the qualifications as set out by the constitution and the election laws."

Asked how many parties there were in Mississippi, Senator Bilbo answer kippantly, "Three. You see, we have two Republican parties in Mississippi—the Black and Tans, headed by a n——r doctor named Sidney D. Redmond, and the Lily-Whites."

The Mississippi solon took time out to get off his chest this statement:

"I still contend that outside influences should not be permitted to dictate the internal laws and policies of any State—and especially Mississippi, where such influences emanate from such sources as the CIO Political Action Committee, Walter Winchell, Drew Pearson, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Civil Rights Congress, and such."

It was in this connection that, earlier in his discourse, Senator Bilbo had admitted to the Senate Committee questioner that he was quoted correctly in a statement in which he said Clare Booth Luce is the biggest n——r lover in the North, except Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt.

Senator Bilbo, now 69 years old and admittedly active in Mississippi politics the forty-six years since he ran for a county office at the age of 23, confessed that he once belonged to the Ku Klux Klan, but that that was twenty-five years ago and he was never active in the organization. He summarized his position on the matter by saying:

"I am no more a member of the Ku Klux Klan than Justice Hugo Black or Gov. Ellis Arnall."

SAYS NEWSPAPERS MISQUOTED HIM

Although the Associated Press, United Press, the Negro Press, Time magazine, the local dailies of Mississippi, and every other source of quiz material the Senate investigators had on hand, all quoted Senator Bilbo similarly, he categorically denied that he had urged the white citizens of Mississippi to resort to any means at their disposal to keep Negroes from voting. He said these reputable publications twisted his meaning and omitted the phrase, "by any lawful and peaceful means."

The script used by Mr. Bilbo in a radio interview, later answered by outstanding Negro leaders over the same network, was cited, and the Senator then admitted saying the best way to keep a Negro from voting is to see him the night before, but, with great diligence, Mr. Bilbo then explained that he didn't mean that violence should be used, but rather persuasive advice.

Signing off, after nearly two hours, during which he virtually lisped due to some mouth ailment, Senator Bilbo, The Man, The Mighty Monarch of White Supremacy, threw in—as if for good measure—the confession that all that he had said were his views, honestly expressed, as a United States Senator. Then he concluded by saying that if it were left to him, personally, not a single Negro would ever vote in the State of Mississippi—for the simple raeson that not a single Mississippi Negro is qualified under the constitution and the election laws of the State.

Didn't Get A Dime, Says Bilbo; Collins Ditto; Terry Turns Up

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Sun. 12-15-46

By EDWIN B. HAAKINSON

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Senators trying doggedly to discover what became of a $25,000 campaign contribution by a war contractor in checks drawn to Senator Bilbo (D.), Mississippi heard from Bilbo himself today that "I never did get a damn dollar of it."

They heard from former Rep. Ross Collins, who knocked down a witness for saying he got about half of it, that he was paid nothing.

They heard from Roland Wall, another politician said by witnesses to have shared in the pot, that he was promised $8,000 and collected $6,000.

And they never did establish where all the money went when the Senate War Investigating Subcommittee recessed until Monday.

Then they hope to learn more from a key witness who had been missing until he turned up in a hospital at Quitman, Miss., last night. He is Edward Terry, former secretary of Bilbo, who wrote the committee he had been threatened with death if he should testify.

Collins and Wall were low men in a four-way Senate primary in 1942. The top men, James O. Eastland, who subsequently won, and Wall Doxey, entered a run-off. Witnesses testified contributions were made toward the campaign "deficits" of Collins and Wall in the interest of gaining their support for Doxey, who was backed by Bilbo. The testimony was that $11,000 to $14,000 for Collins was paid to Cecil Travis, a campaign aide of his.

"That statement was wholly untrue," Collins insisted.

Denials also came from witnesses Collins had called to his hotel room when he learned Bilbo was coming for a conference with him, and from Miss Lura Harrison, a stenographer Collins had hidden behind a bedroom door.

Miss Harrison said she had destroyed her stenographic notes but recalled what was said because Collins and Bilbo did most of the talking and the conference lasted "not more than five minutes."

Collins said when he learned that Bilbo was coming he hurried out and "collected all the witnesses I could get."

"I did this because I knew Bilbo," Collins said.

Senator Ferguson (R.), Michigan, asked what the witness meant.

"Well, I'd known that individual for about 35 years in politics," Collins replied.

"I could not retain my self respect and support any one he was for," Collins continued.

Wall told the committee he did not know about the contractor's $25,000 contribution during the campaign. He said that if he had, he would have pressed a whole lot harder for the $2,000 he claims is still owed him.

He added, amidst a roar of laughter from the spectators, that he told some friends en route to Washington he might ask the Senate Committee to help him collect it.

Asked by Chairman Mead (D.), New York, whether it was customary for a defeated candidate to have his campaign expenses paid if he threw his support later to the victor, Wall said it was in Mississippi.

He added, incidentally, that he had lived in Mississippi only 25 years and that because he was a North Carolinian by birth some of his opponents had tried to make out "that I was a Republican."

Doxey, who has been senate sergeant-at-arms for several years, entertained for an hour as a witness telling about his surprise at learning—after he lost the election—of the $25,000 contribution. He said he had been told that most of it was paid to two of his opponents defeated in the first primary to get their support in the run-off.

"I didn't have the heart to ask Senator Bilbo what he did with the rest of it," Doxey said, adding that unpaid bills from that losing campaign had bothered him for several years.

The invitation to Bilbo to testify about the $25,000 from a war contractor came from Senator Ferguson (R.), Michigan, after other witnesses had lapses of memory or incomplete records about various phases.

Without arising from his chair, Bilbo said he would be "glad to testify" but wanted to "make my statement at the conclusion after all the evidence has been presented and in written form."

But as to the $25,000:

"I'll say now I never did get a damn dollar of it."

Meanwhile an apology and a subpoena appeared to have cleared up two other startling angles of the inquiry.

Ross Collins, former Mississippi congressman, who brought yesterday's session to a sudden halt by a flying attack with fists and feet upon a witness, filed a written "sincere and humble apology" and appeared today as a smiling spectator.

Edward Terry, former secretary and political lieutenant of Bilbo, was located in a hospital at Quitman, Mass. Terry disappeared last Thursday when he was to testify and informed the committee by letter that he feared for his life and the safety of his family.

Chairman Mead (D), New York, announced a subponea had been served on Terry and the key missing witness would "appear forthwith."

The FBI and other government agencies had been on the trail of Terry until a business associate reported last night that he had entered the Quitman hospital in a "highly nervous state."

There, wearing blue pajamas and chain-smoking cigarettes, Terry told reporters that "my testimony will have a definite effect on Bilbo's political future" but gave no details. He added that his testimony "can be verified from the written records of one or more parties."

After hearing Collins' letter of apology, Mead assured that the subcommittee would give everyone a chance to answer any and all charges. No further action on the attack was planned by the committee or the principals themselves.

Robert Gandy, middle-aged Baptist church deacon and insurance man from Jackson, Miss., who was sent sprawling to the floor by Collins yesterday, resumed the stand to tell about handling the $25,000 and disbursing part of it.

Gandy was quizzed by senators and then attorneys trying to learn what "payment" or "consideration," went to Collins in the Doxey runoff campaign.

"You had a pretty good memory until this morning," Ferguson observed.

Finally the witness recalled that he took the checks endorsed by Bilbo to a bank, got $25,000 cash and then "deposited it on a bed."

After a conference of Bilbo and other Doxey supporters with Collins and his backers, Gandy related, he paid $11,000 in cash to meet the "operating deficit of Ross Collins" in the first primary.

He said this money went to Cecil Travis and declared Travis had been designated by Collins to receive it.

Earlier Gandy said a similar "operating deficit" payment went to Roland Wall, another loser in the first primary, in order to win Wall's support for Doxey.

"You see, this was a Mississippi political campaign," Gandy remarked.

Ferguson demanded "facts" instead of politics.

"They are inseparable," Gandy replied. "I don't want to testify upon any of this but I'm trying to give the committee what it wants."

Forrest Jackson, attorney from Jackson, Miss., who is both a witness and Bilbo's personal attorney, then took up the trail of the $25,000 cash.

He confirmed much of Gandy's account but could not give exact details on payment of the $25,000.

"I knew that all the $25,000 went into the pot," Jackson said. "We spent the money, and we still owe money."

Jackson and others testified much of the money went for radio broadcasts, newspaper advertising, sound-trucks and transportation of defense workers to their homes to vote.

Senators wanted to know how much more than $25,000 was spent on the campaign. Jackson declined "to guess" but said it was above $25,000 and under $75,000.

Let Bilbo Tell All If He Has Something

Atlanta, Ga.

WASHINGTON—Sen. Bilbo cried out "Yankee interference," "Communists," and so on in his primary election campaign in Mississippi last Summer because some people outside the State had some feelings about his re-election and spoke out. A number of people in Mississippi felt about the Senator as did many beyond her borders, judging from the election returns. Sun. 12-29-46

NOW SEN. BILBO, in a desperate attempt to save his Senate seat, is resorting to a species of blackmail. He is letting it be known that he is digging into the relationships of other Senators with war contractors. His own record has been thorougly aired.

This, Sen. Thomas, Democrat, Oklahoma, now says "may produce the most embarrassing debate in the history of the Senate."

So what?

Personal "embarrassment" now joins other specious issues in the Bilbo matter. There is either a case against him or there isn't, and the Senate is likely to find itself challenged by the public to determine that clearly and act accordingly, without confusing basic issues with all sort of extraneous matters, including a personal fright and fear complex.

THE ISSUES are two:

His threats and intimidation of Negro voters in the primary.

The alleged gifts and contributions from war contractors.

Reports of the public hearings by the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee in Mississippi several days ago seemed ample proof of charges that Sen. Bilbo had tried to intimidate Negro voters, and were especially convincing to this writer who is familiar with Southern politics and political methods.

This is a basic issue in our Democracy, going directly to the right of franchise. The public is entitled to consideration of this issue by the Senate, and it hardly seems possible for that body to duck it if it regards itself as a protector of the essential liberties of our people. 12-29-46

BEYOND THAT is the other, and unrelated, war contract issue which will form the basis soon of a report by the War Investigating Committee following its exhaustive public hearings.

It is doubtful if the public will understand any attempt in the Senate to duck that. Now that it has come out that Sen. Bilbo is going into the records of other Senators, it would seem only fair, and better for the Senate, that the Mississippian say whatever "embarrassing" things he has to say, rather than let his intimations go unchallenged.

"EMBARRASSING" debates are nothing new in the Senate. Huey Long of Louisiana used to read the records of his colleagues on various matters in open, public sessions. That was "embarrassing." But his colleagues and the Senate survived it. If there is anything about other Senators that is unethical, it should come out. The public is entitled to it. If Sen. Bilbo is trying to pull a bluff, then his bluff should be called.

There is something else involved in the Bilbo case, too, which is a sample of strange reasoning. This is the defense mechanism of Southern politicians and many Southern people that deplores interest by people elsewhere in the affairs of a Southern State. We are, after all, part of one nation. That was decided quite a few years back.

FURTHERMORE, what happens in a Southern State is of more than curious interest elsewhere. Sen. Bilbo, for example, has his influence on people everywhere in the United States as a member of the Senate. He votes and speaks on issues that affect them directly. Notorious examples were his long-winded filibustering on the anti-poll tax and FEPC measures.

The Senate, under the Constitution, is the judge of its own members, and this is a trust that the people expect to be kept. It is doubtful that they will be satisfied with any stretching of the "State rights" issue which seems to be the intention of some Southerners.

Bilbo Report Nears Its Final Stage

The News

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25—(AP)—A tentative report on the relations of Sen. Bilbo (D., Miss.) with war contractors is being circulated today among members of the Senate war investigating subcommittee for approval or amendment.

Later, following up the hearings held last week, the full committee will inspect the report. The present plan is to make it public next Monday. Birmingham, Ala.

A dozen contractors were among the witnesses examined in the open hearings. All were connected with large airfield projects in Mississippi during the early days of preparedness for war. Wed. 12-25-46

Some testified about lending Bilbo money, others to performing jobs for him at his "dream house" estate near Poplarville, Miss. Still others said they had given him money for Wall Doxey's unsuccessful Senate campaign in 1942.

Bilbo contended that all the committee had shown was that he received a car and a small amount of furniture as Christmas presents, and still owes a lot of money.

The committee's report is expected to play a big part in Republican efforts to deny Bilbo a seat when Congress convenes Jan. 3. Contents of the report were a closely-guarded secret.

GOP STEERING BODY WILL ACT ON BILBO

The Times

New York, N.Y.

Takes Up Today Proposal to Bar Seat for Alleged Use of Position for Gain

Tues. 12-31-46

By HAROLD B. HINTON

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30 — The political fate of Senator Theodore G. Bilbo of Mississippi was confided today to the new Republican Steering Committee of the Senate. The committee will consider tomorrow what action, if any, should be taken to keep Mr. Bilbo out of the eightieth Congress.

The Republicans, who will constitute the majority of the Senate which convenes Friday, held their organization meeting today, but there was no time for discussion of the Bilbo question. Senator Homer Ferguson of Michigan, who was elected to the steering committee, said he would see to it that the issue was discussed at tomorrow's meeting.

Mr. Ferguson is the only member of the steering committee who has had direct contact with the Bilbo inquiry. He was the minority member of the War Investigating subcommittee which looked into allegations that Mr. Bilbo had profited from improper financial relations with various Mississippi war contractors.

Funds Group Drafting Report

The Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee is drafting the report on its investigation of charges that Mr. Bilbo incited intimidation of Negroes in his campaign for renomination last spring. This committee, headed by Senator Allen J. Ellender, Democrat, of Louisiana, held hearings in Jackson, Miss.

Since both of these committees were appointed by the Senate of the Seventy-ninth Congress, their Republican members were in the minority. The overturn in Senate control, however, insures that the minority reports of both committees will secure full attention.

Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire and Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper of Iowa were the two Republican members of the Ellender committee. Mr. Bridges said today that he would seek to have Mr. Bilbo unseated on the ground that his election was not a proper one, in view of the intimidation of Negroes to maintain the "white primary" in Mississippi.

This course appeared to attract the favorable attention of most Republicans today, but they realized that it presented difficulties. Mr. Bilbo could be excluded on such charges by a mere majority vote in a Senate which will number fifty-one Republicans to forty-five Democrats.

A factor, however, is the possibility that a motion to have Mr. Bilbo stand aside when it came his turn to take the oath of office Friday might precipitate a filibuster by southern Democrats.

Would Defy Filibuster

Senator Owen Brewster of Maine advocated use of this course, however, declaring that the Democrats would have to take the responsibility before the country for a filibuster.

The action proposed by Senator Ferguson would probably have to be taken under a motion for expulsion which, under the Constitution, calls for a favorable vote of two-thirds of the members present. Some Republican leaders indicated today their belief that such a majority could not be obtained.

The war contract charges, which involve upward of $30,000 in cash, plus the dredging of a lake, the construction of a swimming pool, painting and other improvements to Mr. Bilbo's Dream House and Dream House Junior, may be upheld by a majority report of the War Investigating Committee.

Four Republicans, Senator Ferguson, Senator Brewster, Senator William of Knowland of California, and Senator Joseph H. Ball of Minnesota have announced they will sign a condemnatory report.

There were indications today that two Democrats, Senator James M. Mead of New York, chairman of the war investigating subcommittee which conducted the Bilbo hearings, and Senator Harley M. Kilgore of West Virginia, might join the Republicans to make a majority of six of the ten members of the full committee.

The three Democrtic members of the Campaign Expenditure Committee, Senator Ellender, Senator Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma and Senator Burnett R. Baybank of South Carolina, have made it clear that they will report that Mr. Bilbo merely followed the customs of the Southern States in advocating a "white primary" for the Democratic party. 12-31-46

Mr. Bridges will, according to intentions expressed today, report that Mr. Bilbo was not duly and properly elected. The position of Senator Hickenlooper has not been made known.

Kentucky and Mississippi

The Courier-Journal

I was very much amused at your editorial on Bilbo in The Courier-Journal (December 21), and it was interesting to note your comments.

First, we had a swimming pool for a big-shot politician in this State, and the then President asked the people to return Chandler to Washington. This they did. And then this year we had a congressman mixed up with war contractors, and he at the last minute was taken ill. He did not face an investigation and Bilbo did. And on top of all this our senior Senator Barkley went in the Seventh District and asked the people to return this congressman to Washington, but the good people saw fit to get them another congressman, and they are to be praised for this. Louisville, Ky.

I was born and reared in Mississippi. I lived down there till 12 years ago. I know Bilbo personally. He has not accepted anything except gifts from these war contractors and that has been a custom in Mississippi ever since I was big enough to vote. Bilbo has never had a dime of his own, and, as he testified, he owes everybody that will let him. Fri. 12-27-46

I am not taking up for Bilbo, but just making a little comparison of what he has done with what we have here in Kentucky. So I suggest that The Courier-Journal help get its own politicians in line, and then worry about Mississippi and Bilbo. I will admit that your paper headed in that direction in the recent election, but let's see what happens in the next election. J. Y. O'BANNON.

Decision by the House Campaign Expenditures Committee to investigate the election of Representative Marcantonio from the Eighteenth Congressional District in this city is a natural and proper outgrowth of District Attorney Hogan's inquiry into the murder of Joseph Scottoriggio, a Republican campaign worker, on election morning. Scottoriggio was fatally beaten on his way to the polls. The committee wants to know whether or not it was part of a pattern "to intimidate voters and influence the election."

The House, like the Senate, is the sole judge of the qualifications of its members. Other investigations have been made of the campaign of Senator Bilbo, in Mississippi, and the primary campaign of Mr. Axtell, unsuccessful Democratic nominee for Congress in Kansas City. It is the right and duty of Congress to establish the facts in any election where intimidation has been publicly charged. Asked a week ago if the attack on Scottoriggio was a "political" assault, District Attorney Hogan said that, while other possibilities were not to be dismissed, everything thus far obtained "pointed exclusively to that motivation." New York, N.Y. Thurs.

There is no reason why the two investigations, that by the House committee and the criminal inquiry here, cannot proceed side by side, with mutual benefit. An aroused public will expect both investigations to be thorough. 11-28-46

Solid Front Resists Efforts to Link Senator With Violation of Negroes' Civil Rights

New York, N. Y.

VETERANS ARE PERSUADED

Thurs. 12-5-46

Two Negroes Tell the Inquiry They Urged 32 to Stay Away From Polls at White Behest

By HAROLD B. HINTON

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

JACKSON, Miss., Dec. 4 — A solid front of white municipal officials resisted efforts today by the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee to connect specific violations of Negroes' civil rights with Senator Theodore G. Bilbo's campaign speeches last spring. Most of them claimed only a nominal acquaintance with Mr. Bilbo.

Two Negroes from Greenwood told the committee that they persuaded thirty-two Negro veterans not to go to the polls for the Democratic primary election of last July 2 at the instance of three leading white citizens, with the knowledge of the city's Mayor. One of them, J. D. Collins, a well-to-do shoe repairman, told the committee the white men "asked" him to circulate their "advice" among the Negro veterans.

The other, A. C. Montgomery, a taxicab owner, said that the white men "told" them to keep the Negro veterans from voting. Both witnesses agreed that the white men had told them they feared trouble if Negroes voted in the primary because of a speech Mr. Bilbo had made in the adjoining county in which he urged that all means be employed to keep them away.

Get List of Negroes

Their account agreed that the white men gave them a list of thirty-two Negro veterans who had registered, who were exempt from poll tax under the 1946 Mississippi law, and were otherwise qualified to vote. Collins said he agreed to the wisdom of keeping the Negroes from voting by persuasion and accepted the commission because of his high regard for the white men. He said he "felt they wouldn't cater to anything low."

Shelby Steel, white insurance agent who was one of the leading spirits in the electoral peace plan, and Mayor Allen Safford confirmed the main outlines of the Negroes' statement, except that they both denied testimony by Collins that they told him Senator Bilbo's speeches "had stirred up a lotta hell."

They both said Mr. Bilbo's name was not mentioned during any of the talks they had with him or Montgomery. Means Johnston, an attorney and former state legislator, and Earl Eqquen, a former sheriff, the other two participants in the plan, did not testify.

Mr. Steel represented the scheme as an unofficial venture in civic welfare, intended to avoid disorder. He said the group had advised the Negroes that they had every right to vote, but that "tough elements" in the town might make trouble for them and they could not be protected. Because of his esteem for the Negroes, Mr. Steel said, he did not want to see them have to leave town. 12-5-46

Mayor Safford confirmed Mr. Steel's statement about the excellence of racial relations in Greenwood, with no race riots or disturbances in fifty years.

Bilbo Influence Denied

Mayor A. B. Williams and Chief of Police E. R. Sanders of McComb said that Senator Bilbo's campaign oratory had no effect of enhancing racial tensions during the primary campaign. The Mayor explained that primary elections are usually hotly contested in Mississippi.

On these occasions large crowds are attracted to the polls, disputes flare up and it is difficult to prevent fights. On such days, he said, "it is our main concern to keep whites from getting together," which prompted Senator Burnet R. Maybank, Democrat, of South Carolina, to interject that other cities sometimes have fights and killings during election campaigns—even New York City.

Robert L. Williams, policeman of Gulfport, denied that the beating of Richard E. Daniel, Negro veteran, in the county jail there on July 2 had anything to do with the Negro's attempt to vote, as Daniel testified yesterday. The officer said he arrested Daniel for being drrunk (not 'dog drunk," he specified) and disorderly outside the polling place. When the Negro resisted search at the jail he said he had to slap him two or three times with his open hand.

Senator Styles Bridges, Republican, of New Hampshire left Jackson today to attend a Republican Congressional Conference on Finances in Washington. His departure leaves Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper of Iowa as the sole Republican member of the committee. 12-5-46

Senator Allen J. Ellender, Democrat, of Louisiana, chairman of the committee, said tonight he hopes to finish examination of the committee's witnesses tomorrow morning. It is expected that Forrest Jackson, Mr. Bilbo's chief counsel, will put on a few witnesses intended to refute previous testimony, and will then put Mr. Bilbo on the stand for a voluntary statement and subsequent examination by the committee. The hearings will probably be concluded late tomorrow.

WRIT SEEKS TO FREE WITNESS IN SLAYING

The Times

New York, N. Y.

Court Allows 'Reasonable Time' to Question Man Held Since Nov. 15 in Election Case

Supreme Court Justice Denis O'Leary Cohalan reserved decision yesterday on a writ of habeas corpus to free Dominick Petrone, 41-year-old ex-pugilist now being held in $20,000 bail as a material witness in the fatal beating of Joseph H. Scottoriggio, Republican campaign worker in the Eighteenth Congressional District, on Election Day. Thurs. 12-5-46

Arguing against the writ, Assistant District Attorney Jacob Grumet asserted that "when Judge [James G.] Wallace fixed the bail, he had before him testimony that Petrone, on that very day, had heard someone say that 'Joey' and a bunch of the boys were going to beat the hell out of somebody."

"Who is Joey?" asked Justice Cohalan. "When you refer to people in this court, don't refer to them by their first names."

"It is all in the record which I will submit to Your Honor," the District Attorney answered.

Joseph (Joey) Rao and Michael (Trigger Mike) Coppola are being held in $250,000 bail each, as material witnesses in the case.

Nathan Stern, attorney for Petrone, said his client was "a reputable citizen" employed as an inspector by the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity and was being held illegally.

"On Nov. 15 he [Petrone] had an appointment to meet a detective who was investigating the death of Scottoriggio," Mr. Stern said. "Petrone kept the appointment and was taken into custody. He has been held ever since. Even his wife has been unable to see him. His brothr attempted to see him and was taken to the District Attorney's office, where he was held for eleven hours before he was permitted to se him.

"He hasn't been charged with anything. All they say is that Petrone is alleged to have heard something somebody said to somebody."

The attorney asserted that his client had no record.

Mr. Grumet said Petrone's detention was necessary and that "holding him for eighteen or nineteen days is not an unreasonable length of time."

Justice Cohalan replied:

"On the face of it, at least, this man is a reputable citizen. We certainly want the murderer of Scottoriggio brought to justice. The public wants it. The court wants it. But certainly you should make up your mind just how long you are going to hold this man as a material witness.

"If you can't get the information you want from him in a reasonable time, I'm going to let him go."

It was agreed that Mr. Grumet would provide the court with a copy of the testimony given to Judge Wallace and that both sides would submit to the court today memoranda giving their estimates of the time they would require for questioning.

The court then took the case under advisement.

Senate GOP Says It Will Bar Bilbo

Daily Worker New York, N.Y. Sat. 11-16-46

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—The powerful anti-Bilbo sentiment of the people back home is causing the Republicans to make noises about denying Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo, notorious race inciter, his seat. The GOP Senate steering committee has decided to challenge his taking the oath of office when the new Senate opens in January rather than to try to unseat him after he takes the oath. The first procedure requires only a majority, the second a two-thirds vote. The GOP is being prodded by northern Democrats who have fought Bilbo in the past.

But the long-time alliance of the GOP leaders with the southern polltax tories, plus their own innate reactionary attitudes, may yet make this only noise. While the GOP will have an absolute majority in the Senate, it may still need polltaxers' help in putting through its reactionary program in case of presidential vetoes.

Basis for the attack on Bilbo are his attacks on the Negro people in the course of the election campaign, including incitements to lynchings in case they tried to vote, and his alleged acceptance of bribes from a war contractor in return for special favors.

Two committees are investigating these separate angles now. One is the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, headed by Sen. Allen J. Ellender (D-La). The other is the Senate War Expenditure Committee, headed by Sen. Harley Kilgore (D-WVa).

Democrats are divided as to whether these two Democratic-led committees should act first. Tory Democrats, of course, want the business dropped. Northern Democrats are for pushing the charges through.

Bilbo Hearing Is Flop—As a Drawing Card

The Courier-Journal

Washington, Dec. 12 (AP)—As a spectacle, the Bilbo hearing today was pretty much of a flop.

This opinion is official. It comes from a Capitol policeman. He and six other guards were assigned to the investigation of Senator Bilbo and his role in certain war contracts. Fri. 12-13-46

The hearing began at 10:08 a.m. By 10:17 there were 22 spectators in the large, ornate Senate caucus room. This averages one guard for every 3.14 spectators. Louisville, Ky.

By 11:27 business had more than doubled. Now there was 47, or 6.71 psectators per guard.

A plea that the open hearings on Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo's fitness to take his seat in the new Senate not be confined to Mississippi was directed today to the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee by the Civil Rights Congress. Sat.

A Warm Reception for Mr. Bilbo

Times-Dispatch Richmond, Va.

An Editorial from the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot

BY present indications, Senator Theodore G. (The Man) Bilbo, of Mississippi, will face a warm reception when he comes forward to claim a seat in the new Congress. The warmth will not be of the friendly variety.

According to "an influential Republican Senator," the Republican steering committee in the Senate has decided that one of its members (as yet unselected) will rise to a point of order on January 3, the day the new Congress meets, and object to Mr. Bilbo's taking the oath of office. If present plans mature the Republican majority (backed perhaps by a substantial Democratic showing unless party solidarity is invoked) will vote to refer the objection to the Rules Committee. This committee, in turn, will promptly call for reports from two other groups, the Special Campaign and War Investigating Committees. There should be little delay in obtaining those reports. Mon. 11-25-46

Both the investigating committees have been checking complaints about Mr. Bilbo's political and financial activities for three months or more. The Campaign Committee has had investigators and attorneys at work in Mississippi since the primary there last Summer that resulted in Mr. Bilbo's nomination for his present Senate seat. They have been sifting the evidence behind complaints in regard to a long list of electoral abuses with major emphasis on the charge that Negroes were kept from voting by intimidation. The war committee has been assembling a file on Mr. Bilbo's relations with war contractors since last Spring and dispatched an additional crew of investigators to Mississippi in September after a decision to put "the Bilbo case" high on its agenda. The committee's counsel recently disclosed that the members are much interested in questioning Mr. Bilbo about the manner in which he acquired an eight-acre artificial lake on his Mississippi estate and the so-called "Dream House" erected on an island in that lake.

The Rules Committee, if really aroused, can also call for a report from the regular Committee on Privileges and Elections. This old-line standing committee is said to have an intriguing Bilbo file of its own.

There is a persistent legend that the "exclusive club" which is the United States Senate is very tender in its treatment of members whose credentials are challenged. True enough, it has usually been reluctant to take up charges against individual members or members-elect. But when it has taken them up, it has shown itself capable of tough action. Three cases can be cited since the turn of the century.

In 1910 charges of bribery and corruption were made against William Lorimer, of Illinois. After an initial investigation, the Senate declined, by a close vote, to unseat him. But a committee of the Illinois Legislature uncovered new evidence—and in 1912 the Senate reconsidered its verdict and ousted him with an emphatic vote.

In 1919 Truman H. Newberry, who had defeated Henry Ford for Senator from Michigan the year before, was indicted under the Michigan Corrupt Practices Act. Though found guilty in the lower courts, he was "cleared" on appeal by a Supreme Court ruling that the act was unconstitutional. The Senate accepted him by a 46-41 vote—but the general feeling of censure among his colleagues as well as in popular opinion prompted him to resign after 10 months of tenure.

In 1926 charges of corrupt practices and exorbitant campaign expenditures were preferred against William S. Vare, of Pennsylvania. The Senate refused to accept his certificate of election and ordered an investigation. Mr. Vare was a power in his party's councils and the fight was a long one. But in 1929 the case was pushed to a vote and he was rejected, 58-22.

Mr. Bilbo can derive scant reassurance from such precedents. They suggest that he can place little reliance on senatorial courtesy or any reluctance of the Senate, when pushed to it, to face facts about its members—and that his chances of remaining in the Senate will depend primarily upon his ability to refute the evidence being amassed against him.

A Most Curious Procedure

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

THE Ellender Senate Committee is certainly going about its investigation of election charges against Sen. Bilbo in a phony way.

The findings of this committee, as well as of another Senate committee investigating the Mississippi polltaxer's alleged acceptance of bribes from war contractors, are supposed to be the basis for kicking him out of the Senate.

The Ellender Committee, headed by a Louisiana polltaxer, is conducting public hearings in Mississippi. Its chairman is asking Negroes to come voluntarily before the committee to testify that Sen. Bilbo's actions in the elections kept them away from the polls. Mon. 12-2-46

This is certainly a curious procedure. The case against Bilbo rests chiefly on the speeches he made urging violence against Negroes who tried to vote. Obviously, if Negroes were afraid to go to the polls because of his threats of violence and lynchings, they are going to be even more afraid to appear before the committee to testify directly against Bilbo.

This is why the Civil Rights Congress and numerous other groups interested in fighting Bilbo have insisted that there must also be public hearings in Washington, and that people outside of Mississippi be allowed to testify. Three Mississippi Negro groups have also asked that Negro witnesses be subpenaed by the committee.

As the matter stands now, Sen. Ellender appears to be paving the way for a whitewash of Bilbo. The heat will have to be put on him to compel any real investigation.

Full Senate Inquiry Is Voted On Bilbo's Right to His Seat

Campaign Investigating Committee Acts on Complaints That He Incited Intimidation of Negroes—Public Hearings Ordered

By JOHN D. MORRIS

Sun. 11-17-46

Special to THE TIMES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16—The Senate Campaign Investigating Committee voted today to hold a full-dress investigation of whether Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, Democrat, of Mississippi, was fit to be a member of the Senate.

After a closed meeting at which it considered complaints that Senator Bilbo had obtained renomination in the Democratic primary last Summer by inciting the intimidation of Negroes to keep them away from the polls, the committee announced it would hold public hearings on the question at Jackson, Miss., beginning no later than Dec. 2.

The action, said Senator Allen J. Ellender, Democrat, of Louisiana, the chairman, was based on complaints of forty-eight Mississippi citizens who signed a petition and made affidavits which were presented to the committee by the Civil Rights Congress, with headquarters in New York City.

By inflammatory statements during the campaign, the complaints charged, Senator Bilbo had "advocated, counseled, inspired, encouraged, incited, aided and abetted" the white population "to commit acts of violence and intimidation" against Negro voters.

Senator Bilbo, the complaints said, "has become a symbol of oppression and reaction against the Negro people." They noted that he had won renomination by a "bare majority of less than 4,000 votes" and called on the Senate to refuse to seat him. Sun. 11-17-46

In addition to the formal complaints, the committee considered reports of its own investigators who recently returned from Mississippi.

While denying that the investigators' findings supported the charges, Chairman Ellender said that he nevertheless voted for public hearings and also cast the proxy of Senator Burnet R. Maybank, Democrat, of South Carolina, in the affirmative.

Other members were present and voted affirmatively in person. They included Senators Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, and Bourke B. Hickenlooper of Iowa, who were designated by the Republican Steering Committee yesterday to prepare a report for submission to the Republican Conference Dec. 30.

Senator Ellender stated, some of the hearings probably would be held in Grenada and Hattiesburg after those in Jackson had been concluded. He said the hearings should last about two weeks. None will be held in Washington.

The chairman's talk with reporters outside of the committee room was interrupted by Edgar G. Brown, director of the National Negro Council, who asserted Mr. Ellender had previously said public hearings might lead to "killing of Senator Bilbo should be considered on whether the seating of Senator Bilbo should be contested.

While the campaign committee is not required to report to Congress before the new session begins Jan. 3, Senator Ellender said, the committee had decided to welcome witnesses he desired, Mr. Ellender said, to mouth infection, however, and it would be able to appear or even to come to Washington. The chairman's talk with reporters was questionable whether he would be able to appear whenever they were ready for them.

He said the committee had decided to cided, for the present at least, to limit witnesses to citizens of Mississippi but that others might be permitted to testify later if it were deemed they had pertinent information to offer. The Times

ing." Mr. Brown wanted to know if the Senator felt witnesses testifying against Senator Bilbo would be "unsafe." Sun. 11-17-46

"You are trying to be sensational," Mr. Ellender replied. "The answer is no, of course not."

Senator Ellender said the committee would not look into charges of financial deals in 1942 between Senator Bilbo and War Production contractors. The committee's activities were limited to campaign activities in 1946, he stated.

The Senate War Investigating Committee, however, is expected to meet Monday to decide whether to investigate that phase of the Bilbo question.

In another action taken at today's meeting, the Ellender committee censured a book called "The Plot Against America" and voted to turn the matter over to the Attorney General for prosecution of the author for libel. The book, published during the Montana Democratic primary campaign, contained an attack on Senator Burton K. Wheeler; who was defeated in the primary.

Mr. Ellender said that the committee condemned the book as "one of the vilest, most contemptible and obscene pieces of so-called literature ever to be published concerning a man in public office in the United States."

He identified the author as David George Kin, but Louis C. Wyman, Associate General Counsel of the committee, said that this was a pen name.

Coddling Bilbo

Daily Worker

SENATORS Ellender, and Bilbo, of Mississippi, may think their little joke has settled matters for good. They had their hearings down in Jackson and it was proved to everyone's satisfaction that the Negroes should "know their place" and not try to vote. New York, N. Y.

To everyone's satisfaction, that is, except the 10 million Negro people in the USA and the millions of patriotic Americans who take the Bill of Rights and the 13th, 14th and 15th amendments to the Constitution seriously.

Senator Ellender and the GOP Senators on the five-man committee may try to whitewash the cruel and degrading rottenness of the "white supremacy" racket. But the noble and inspiring heroism of the Negro witnesses will not die. It will march on. Sat. 12-7-46

Meanwhile, public opinion ought to insist in no uncertain terms that the hearings be continued in Washington. For the shameful flouting of democratic rights by the "white supremacy" racketeers weakens democratic liberties in every part of the country.

Bilbo Election Probe Opens Today

Daily Worker, New York, N. Y.

JACKSON, Miss., Dec. 1. — Blustering U.S. Senator Theodore Bilbo arrived here with three lawyers and about 50 of his "white supremacy" pals to defend his reelection against investigation by a Senate sub-committee of charges that he prevented duly qualified Americans from voting in the July 2 Mississippi Democratic primary. In this state the winner of the Democratic primary is assured of election.

Bilbo was renominated by only 4,000 votes. Mon. 12-2-46

The charges which the Senate Campaign Investigations Committee will probe here tomorrow were contained in a petition by 50 Negro and white Mississippians, initiated by the Civil Rights Congress. The civil rights group has been conducting a nationwide drive to oust Bilbo from Congress.

The 50 Mississippians charge Bilbo waged "an aggressive and ruthless campaign" which deprived 500,000 Negroes of their right to vote in the Democratic primary. They said Bilbo made "inflammatory appeals to the passions and prejudices of the white population of Mississippi," and urged the Senate to void the electon and keep Bilbo from his seat.

Attorney Charles H. Houston is expected to present a brief against Bilbo for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Bilbo, in a statement on the eve of the investigation, once more declared that "under our state laws the Negro does not have a right to vote in the Democratic primaries if he has not been in accord with the party for at least two years, so that let's out all Negroes"

Mon. 12-2-46

Bilbo also said the charges were "an indictment of the whole white race of Mississippi, in which we are accused of being bigoted, prejudiced, undemocratic and unconstitutional."

BILBO

Besides the campaign committee's probe, two other investigations are imminent. Mon. 12-2-46

1. An inquiry by the Senate War Investigating Committee into charges Bilbo accepted gratuities from Mississippi war contractors. Hearings on the "war profiteering" charge—entirely distinct from the campaign charges — will begin in Washington on Dec. 12.

2. An investsigation by the Senate Republican steering committee to determine the advisability of making an effort to keep Bilbo from his seat.

The GOP committee, headed by Robert A. Taft of Ohio, has appointed Sens. Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R-Iowa) and Styles Bridges (R-NH) to inquire into the many charges against Bilbo and report back.

Both Bridges and Hickenlooper are members of Ellender's committee.

Democrats Join Republican Plan To Unseat Bilbo

Investigating Group Members In Favor Of Quizzing Senator

BY EDWIN B. HAAKINSON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 — (AP) — The Republican drive to bar Sen. Bilbo (D., Miss.) from his seat gained some Democratic aid Saturday as the Senate campaign investigating committee voted a full scale inquiry into his anti-Negro stand.

BILBO

The vote was unanimous on the part of the three Democratic as well as the two Republican committee members.

Public hearings will be held in Mississippi no later than Dec. 2.

Specifically, they will explore sworn complaints Bilbo violated the constitution by preventing Negroes from voting in the primary in which he won renomination.

If the charges are upheld, they would provide a basis for the Republican steering committee to proceed with its avowed intention of challenging Bilbo's right to the seat. Sun. 11-17-46

THE STEERING COMMITTEE has appointed Sens. Bridges (R., N. H.) and Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) as a subcommittee to plan the strategy. They also are members of the campaign investigating committee. Democratic members are Chairman Ellender, of Louisiana, and Sens. Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, and Maybank, of South Carolina. Birmingham, Ala.

The campaign investigating committee also: News

1. Decided to ask Atty. Gen. Clark to prosecute, if possible, those responsible for a book entitled "Plot Against America" which figured in the Democratic senatorial primary in Montana. The veteran Sen. Burton K. Wheeler lost the Democratic nomination to Leif Erickson but Erickson was defeated in the November election. Ellender termed the book, which attacked Wheeler, "one of the vilest and most contemptible and obscene pieces of literature" ever used against a public office holder.

2. Informed Patrick J. Hurley unsuccessful Republican opponent of Sen. Dennis Chavez (D., N. M.) that Hurley "or anyone he designates" may file sworn charges against Chavez. Ellender said the committee then may send investigators to New Mexico.

3. Decided not to act on complaints against Sen. McKellar (D. Tenn.) made by Edward Carmack unsuccessful Democratic primary opponent of McKellar.

4. Announced no complaints had been received as a result of the close Senate election contests in Maryland or West Virginia.

ELLENDER SAID THE BILBO HEARINGS will be held in the central, northern and southern parts of Mississippi at or near Jackson, Grenada and Hattiesburg.

Edgar G. Brown, director of the National Negro Council, interrupted Ellender's announcement to newsmen to ask the senator whether he still expects "killings" to result from the public hearings. Brown said Ellender previously had predicted "killings" if Negroes testified in Mississippi and asked whether they would be safe.

"You are just trying to be sensational again," Ellender told Brown adding that witnesses would be safe.

Ellender at first said the hearings will involve charges on the "racial issue" filed "by some New York organization."

But Hickenlooper noted the charges actually were sworn to "by citizens of Mississippi" although prepared by the Civil Rights Congress of New York.

Milton Kaufman, executive secretary for the Civil Rights Congress, later handed newsmen a statement which said it had filed the petition and evidence "charging Sen. Bilbo was reelected through fraud and intimidation and constitutional violations."

The statement added the Senate War Investigating Committee should hold similar hearings on charges involving alleged transactions by Bilbo with war contractors.

Ellender was asked whether persons other than citizens of Mississippi could testify.

"No," the chairman said. "We don't want the whole nation to be in Mississippi. It's limited to Mississippians." Birmingham

Ellender said Bilbo will be notified of the hearings and invited to testify or present witnesses. Ala.

Meanwhile a friend of the senator here said Bilbo's physical condition may prevent his appearance on Jan. 3 when Congress opens. News

SEN. BILBO DEFENDS 'WHITE SUPREMACY'

The Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sat. 12-7-46

B-U-L-L-E-T-I-N!

JACKSON, Miss.—Senator Bilbo Monday morning requested that he or his attorneys be allowed to do the cross-examining at hearings now being conducted by the Senate Investigating Committee. The request provoked a sharp difference among committee members. More than 150 witnesses, many of them Negro war veterans, were present, despite earlier indications there would be difficulty in obtaining voluntary witnesses.

(Special to The Pittsburgh Courier)

JACKSON, Miss.—Here in the modern Federal Court building of this ancient Capital City of the Magnolia State Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, defiant and boastful, prepared to "defend" his platform of "white supremacy" as a jury of his colleagues sat to decide his political fate.

Bilbo, who won out in the Mississippi State Democratic primary by 4,000 votes, will have to tell the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee just why (if he admits it) he advocated prevention of duly qualified Americans—Negroes—from voting in the July 2 primary. His foes claim that had Negroes been permitted to vote without fear of reprisals, he would have lost by an overwhelming vote.

The Committee will probe the charges and then recommend whether or not "The Man," as he is facetiously referred to, should be permitted to take his seat in the Eightieth Congress which convenes Jan. 3.

RECALL OLD TRIAL

Although a U. S. District Courtroom is the scene of the attraction, the hearing is likely to be the biggest thing of its kind since the days when the same bespectacled Bilbo was impeached in the State Legislature on a bribery charge, was tried by the State Senate and won an acquittal by one vote.

This time, Bilbo is facing the U. S. Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee. Its members are taking a look into the talkative Senator's political tactics last summer during the State's Democratic primary. Chief complaint against "The Man" is that he urged white voters to keep colored voters from the polls by force, if necessary.

HASN'T CHANGED

Several colored citizens were beaten when they did attempt to vote. The Courier

The hearings were started Monday morning, and conducting them are Senator Allen J. Ellender of Louisiana, and Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper of Iowa.

The ailing Bilbo, surrounded by three attorneys, arrived here Friday from his mansion in Poplarville. He insisted that "I am here as an innocent bystander, but of course if anything hot develops I have two or three lawyers who will give the matter proper attention." Pittsburgh, Pa.

He told reporters that Senator Ellender had forwarded him a copy of the complaint, and described it as an "indictment against every white man and woman who believes in the white race."

SHORT OF WITNESSES

A large conglomeration of spectators jammed the courtroom for the opening session. Close to fifty witnesses were expected to testify, but, so far, the Committee has been able to find less than twenty-five. Riley W. Shanks, general counsel for the Committee, urged all Mississippians to testify if they have any information to substantiate or refute charges that Bilbo's campaign speeches intimidated would-be voters, but despite this plea and promises of Committee protection from reprisals, the Committee has encountered "a lack of cooperation" which Shanks termed "surprising and disappointing." Sat. 12-7-46

WITNESSES AFRAID

The Progressive Voters League, T. B. Wilson, president, called on the Committee to use its power of subpoena to force witnesses to testify, but the Committee has indicated an unwillingness to follow this procedure unless it is proven necessary.

Colored leaders asserted that the hearings would be a "flop" unless the Committee subpoenas Negro witnesses, who fear to volunteer testimony.

Ellender said he was surprised at the national interest shown in the hearings, and he criticized efforts of "outsiders who want to throw Bilbo out regardless of the evidence."

NO NEED FOR GUARD

An effort by "outsiders" to have Governor Fielding Wright call out the State Guard to protect Negroes who wish to testify against Bilbo was denied. Said he: "Negroes have been testifying against white men in Mississippi for fifty years to my personal knowledge and I see no reason for them to be fearful now."

The current hearings mark one of the few times that social issues have been involved in a Senate contest, and it stands as a milepost in the struggle by Negroes to better their political status in the South.

Before the Mississippi hearings are ended a second Senate Committee will begin public airing in Washington of charges that Senator Bilbo accepted gifts from war contractors.

GOP PLAN DOUBTFUL

Republicans in the Senate intend to caucus Dec. 30 to discuss whether to challenge Senator Bilbo when he claims his new seat in January. They might not challenge him because it is possible that they will be defeated in the move.

Washington observers are paying little attention to the rumor that Bilbo might resign because of illness. Sat. 12-7-46

Walter White, executive secretary of the NAACP, last week requested that his organization be represented before the Committee by counsel to present a brief on the law involved in the case. If Senator Ellender grants this request, the NAACP would send Attorney Charles H. Houston of Washington, D. C. here.

Stating that it could be established that the statements and public utterances of Senator Bilbo, during his primary campaign, advocated the use of fraud, force and violence to deny Negro citizens certain Constitutional rights the NAACP asked that it be given the opportunity to present the Committee with evidence of these statements, and that the Committees have Senator Bilbo present so that "he may deny or admit, under oath, before your Committee, the making of these statements . . ."

The NAACP added, in its letter: "We further direct the attention of your Committee to the fact that within a week after the conclusion of the Democratic primary in Mississippi in which Senator Bilbo was successful . . . he openly declared the necessity for making statutory changes in the primary election laws of the State of Mississippi in order legally to prevent Negroes from voting in the Democratic primaries of that State. We specifically ask that he be required to answer, under oath, whether or not he made such statements. Should he make such an admission, it will immediately be obvious that at the time Senator Bilbo made the statements first referred to above, he knew Negroes had a legal right to vote in the Democratic primaries of the State of Mississippi under the law as it then existed!"

Spur Civil Rights Fight

Citizens Organize To Oust Bilbo

45a

NEW YORK—A National Committee to Oust Bilbo, sponsored by the Civil Rights Congress, created to rally national support for Senate action on unseating Bilbo, was announced this week by Quentin Reynolds and Vincent Sheean, co-chairmen.

Organized to make effective the present widespread sentiment for barring Senator Bilbo from the new Senate, the National Committee to Oust Bilbo is spearheading a popular petition campaign urging the Senate to act on charges that he won re-election through fraud and intimidation.

"The charges of violence and intimidation now before a senate committee were signed by a group of courageous Mississippi voters, largely through the assistance of the Civil Rights Congress," Mr. Reynolds explained.

WOULD ENCOURAGE NEGRO CITIZENS

"Ousting Bilbo would not only remove an avowed member of the Ku Klux Klan from the Senate," declared Mr. Reynolds, "but would represent a setback for the system of terror, disfranchisement and race supremacy which Bilbo typifies.

"It would also serve as vast encouragement to the increasing number of white and Negro citizens of the South who seek the democratic right of franchise and free election," he added.

Goal of the campaign is to present petitions bearing one million signatures to the Senate when it convenes in January.

NAMES COMMITTEE

The newly launched committee, consisting of religious, labor business and professional leaders, includes Bishop Edward L. Parsons, Rabbi David deSola Pool, David O. Selznick, George F. Addes, Albert Einstein, Mark Ethridge, the Rev. Dr. Harvey Emerson Fosdick, Dr. Charlotte Hawkins Brown, Albert Sprague, Coolidge, Justice Jands H. Wolf, Van Wyck Brooks, Aaron Copland, Earl B. Dickerson.

Also, John Garfield, Oscar Hammersteinll, Paul Robenson, Sholem Asch, the Rev. Dr. Russell Bowe, Edgar Sr Snow, William Rose Benet, Christian Gauss, Fannie Hurst, Dr. D. V. Jemison, Garson Kanin, Dr. Harlow Shapley, Gene Kelly, Rockwell Kent, Cornelia Otis Skinner, J, Raymond Walsh, Alain Locke, Katherine Dunham, Lenord Bernstein, Dr. Anna W. M. Answering Perry

Dear Sir:

I would like to call your attention to an error of fact which I believe is contained in Jennings Perry's column of Dec. 30. New York, N.Y. 12-5-47 Sun.

In discussing ways and means of barring Bilbo from the Senate (something I would love to see!) he says: "I mean the constitutional requirement that the representation of any state in Congress shall be reduced proportionately as the state may transgress upon the right of its citizens to vote." Further along in the same column Mr. Perry suggested that at the time the Senate convened all that would have been necessary would be for the sergeant-at-arms to read the section of the Constitution mentioned, and Bilbo would automatically be barred.

Mr. Perry apparently was referring to Section 3 of the Fourteenth Amendment, and therein lies his error. That section refers to Representatives only and would not, therefore, apply to a Senator. Furthermore, Paragraph 1 of Section 3 of Article One of the Constitution says there must be two Senators from each State. Sun. 12-15-47

BILBO'S PRINCIPLE IS IN THE BANK

Daily Worker
New York, N.Y.

By Rob F. Hall

WASHINGTON

THE THING THAT emerges with particular force from the Bilbo hearing before the Senate War Investigating Committee is the base immorality of the senior Senator from Mississippi. Mon. 12-23-46

I suspect that I, along with others, always felt Bilbo was motivated by principle, albeit a rank reactionary principle. I suppose we believed he was chiefly by ideology—a vulgar, backward, fascist, racist ideology but nevertheless something which made sense to the warped slave-master psychology of Bilbo and his friends.

The testimony before the committee, however, has established to the satisfaction of most observers that Theodore G. Bilbo has been motivated by nothing more complicated than his own self interest. His political organization has been in the final analysis merely a conveyor belt by which funds, gifts, Cadillac automobiles, furniture, houses, a lake and other assorted real estate have been transported into his possession.

Not that the Senator lacks an ideology. It is the ideology of Southern bourbon fascism, that is, of the plantation owner. Pleading before the committee that he is "a very poor man," Bilbo admitted he owns 3,300 acres, with about 20 tenant houses, and his own mansion, "Dream House No. 1." Mon. 12-23-46

A PLANTER in his own right, therefore, he is in character when he blames the charges against him on "two groups, the Negro group and the Communists." Similarly he was in character when he did his act for the newsreel photographers.

"Say something, Senator," the cameraman said as they focused their lenses on him.

"Keep the Russians out—keep the Russians out—keep the Russians out," Bilbo said, enunciating slowly.

At this writing, it is impossible to say what will be the verdict of the Senate. Certainly Senator Ferguson and Mead are pressing the charges against Bilbo here far more energetically than did their colleagues, Ellender and Bridges, in Jackson, Miss. But the final outcome depends on too many factors to venture a prediction.

It is safe to speculate, however, on what will be history's verdict in the Bilbo case. It will be that a man with some ability and native shrewdness, but without a conscience, shamelessly exploited the backward prejudices of the rural poor and the greed of the rich to the benefit of himself and the detriment of the nation.

THEODORE BILBO himself sprang from poor whites of South Mississippi. I remember stories told me by my mother, a country school teacher in what was then backwoods Pearl River county. The family lived in a small rundown shanty, she said, and the Bilbo children were poorly clothed. But runty, undersized Theodore showed even then a sharp intelligence.

As Bilbo reached manhood, James K. Vardaman was the dominating political figure in Mississippi. A flaming populist, calling down damnation on the greedy corporations and railroads, Vardaman captured the imagination of the states's small farmers. During World War I, Vardaman opposed U.S. entry into what he termed a bankers' war. The other side of Vardaman, like so many of the Southern populists, was a burning hatred of Negroes.

From Vardaman Bilbo learned the road to political success was through expressing the grievances of the people against the corporations. In his early days he combined this with his own brand of Negro-baiting. Today his attacks on Negroes, Jews, foreigners and Communists have become his main platform. Opposition to corporate rule has degenerated in his hands to nothing more than slanders against "New Yorkers." With the rich today he has no quarrel. 12-23-46

The pity is that more of the common people of Mississippi have not yet realized this.

Fear Airing of 'Supremacy' Issue; Senator Ferguson Would Bar Him

WASHINGTON

The stench of the "Bilbo Mess" has become so embarrassing to the Democratic Party, its GOP allies in Congress, and the nation's honor, that a majority of the Senate Campaign Investigation Committee has decided to exonerate "The Man" and let the Senate itself purge him as an undesirable.

This was learned Saturday when Sen. Homer Ferguson (Rep., Mich.) announced that the majority—Sens. Allen J. Ellender of Louisiana, Burnet R. Maybank of South Carolina, and Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma, all Democrats—has approved a "very tough" report criticizing Bilbo for his dealings with war contractors.

As was expected after the Senate War Investigating, and Campaign Committees concluded hearings in Jackson (Miss.) and Washington on Bilbo's conduct in the Mississippi primary, and his relations with war contractors, the plan now is, to "forgive" him for the latter and "exonerate" him on the former.

Republicans Divided

Republicans intent on ousting Bilbo from the Senate are divided on the best method to achieve this goal. The party's steering committee failed to agree on any tactical procedure when it met Friday.

Influential members warned against any attempt to bar Bilbo at the door by simply refusing him a seat.

Many Republicans are anxious to avoid a discussion of Bilbo's "white supremacy" theory if he is challenged, which, in itself, they say, would solidify Southern senators beyond all other considerations.

Thomas Fears Bilbo

Senator Thomas emphasized that he has no intention to "cross swords" with Bilbo, who, he said, should not be denounced for helping contractors in his State, since all senators do that.

The Oklahoman said he had positive information that Bilbo has "a bunch of people" rounding up information which he can use to "embarrass" any senators who rise to oppose him. Sat. 1-4-47

Says Miss. Case Weak

Sen. Bourke B. Hickenlooper, who with Senator Ferguson is the other Republican on the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee, told the steering committee Friday that at best, only "a weak case" could be made that Bilbo's intimidation speeches against colored voters influenced his election.

Senator Ferguson, chief examiner in the Bilbo inquiry, said:

"My idea is that this is not a political matter, and the Senate should not let anyone take the oath of office if it has knowledge of facts that should prevent him from serving.

Ferguson Would Act

"The two-thirds question will not be involved because on Jan. 3 Bilbo will not be a Senator.

"Bilbo should be instructed to step aside next Friday when 34 senators take their seats."

Ellender Plays Tag

Senator Ellender has called a meeting of his committee for 2:30 p.m., Monday to prepare its report.

That is the exact hour that Senate Republicans will hold a conference to appoint a steering committee for the new Congress.

U. S. Agents Probe Bilbo

As GOP Leads Its Guns

The Courier
Atlanta, Ga.
Wed. 1-7-47

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—(AP)—The Justice Department disclosed Tuesday night it is inquiring into the affairs of Sen. Bilbo, Democrat, Mississippi, and the Senate Republican Steering Committee signaled a finish fight to oust him. Wed. 1-7-47

A Justice Department official who is fully acquainted with the inquiry told a reporter that "it has been in progress in Mississippi and Washington for some time."

The inquiry, he said, "is independent of that made by congressional committees. It covers every aspect of the Bilbo case."

The official said Justice Department agents have been in Mississippi "for some time studying the affairs of Sen. Bilbo."

When asked if this inquiry included reports of intimidation of Negroes in the primary in which Bilbo was renominated, he said: "Certainly."

The Republican Steering Committee voted unanimously to try to press its ouster fight.

Sen. Taft, of Ohio, Chairman of the GOP Policy Group, announced this decision with the terse statement that Bilbo "will be attacked."

"When, where and how will be decided later," Taft told a news conference after a four-hour session of the Steering Committee.

The Ohio Senator pointed out that the Committee's recommendations are subject to approval by the full Republican membership. The Courier Wed. 1-7-47

Chairman Ellender, Democrat, Louisiana, of a Special Campaign Investigating Committee, strongly indicated that the Committee majority's report would find no ground for barring Bilbo on charges that he intimidated Negroes into staying away from the polls in Mississippi. Wed. 1-7-47

Bilbo Ex-Aide Told He'd Die If He Talked, Senators Hear

The Times New York, N.Y.

Fri. 12-13-46

By HAROLD B. HINTON

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12—Edward P. Terry, former secretary of Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, Democrat, of Mississippi, is dodging a summons from the Senate War Investigating Committee under an alleged threat of death to himself, his wife and his daughter if he should testify, the committee was told today. A subcommittee began hearings this morning on charges that Mr. Bilbo received gratuities from war contractors who profited from his intervention on their behalf.

The melodramatic disclosure came at the end of the afternoon when Mr. Terry was called to the witness stand. He did not respond to his name, and Senator Homer Ferguson, Republican, of Michigan, asked whether he had been served with a committee subpoena to appear.

George Meader, committee counsel, read into the record a letter from Mr. Terry to Senator James M. Mead, Democrat, of New York, subcommittee chairman, dated Dec. 2, in which Mr. Terry requested not to be called by the committee. It was written on the letterhead of the Hood Lumber Sales Company, 201 Citizens Bank Building, Meridian, Miss.

Resignation from Posts Cited

The letter set forth that Mr. Terry had resigned last Jan. 1 as secretary to Senator Bilbo and to the Senate District of Columbia Committee, of which Mr. Bilbo is chairman, and had been relieved of his duties on Jan. 21. Soon after his return to Mississippi, he said, he was threatened with death, "in the presence of witnesses," whom he did not name.

About midnight on Oct. 31, he wrote, he received an anonymous telephone call at the Lamar Hotel in Meridian, during which the caller told him that he (Terry) would be killed if he had anything to do with the investigation of Senator Bilbo. Another anonymous telephone call at the same hotel on Nov. 26, he continued, came five days after he had testified before the Senate committee in executive session and resulted in a threat that his wife and daughter would be killed if he took part in the investigation.

"In view of the above facts," the letter said, "and especially the fact that the lives of my wife and daughter have been threatened, I respectfully request that I not be called by your committee in connection with the investigation of Senator Bilbo. I do not feel that either you or any member of your committee would request me to do something that would endanger the lives of my wife and daughter."

Promise by Phone Reported

Francis Flanagan, assistant committee counsel, said investigators had talked to Mr. Terry by telephone last Saturday when he was in Lakeland, Fla. At that time he agreed to accept service of the subpoena in Meridian on Monday.

He did not appear and, on Tuesday, inquiries were made of his daughter, who said he had gone to Washington and then to New York. Yesterday, according to Mr. Flanagan, the daughter told investigators that Mr. Terry was enroute from New York to Meridian, traveling by automobile.

At this point Forrest Jackson, Mr. Bilbo's counsel, told the committee that J. Marvin Quinn, a banker in Jackson, Miss., had informed him ten days ago that he (the banker) had seen Mr. Terry and that the former secretary had told him (Mr. Quinn) he would not testify before the Mead subcommittee for fear of incriminating himself. Mr. Terry stated, Mr. Quinn told Mr. Jackson, according to the lawyer, that he (Terry) would use the alleged threats as an excuse for his non-appearance.

On behalf of Senator Bilbo, Mr. Jackson requested that Mr. Quinn be summoned before the subcommittee and instructed to bring records of two accounts which the lawyer said Mr. Terry kept at the bank. Mr. Jackson also urged that Mr. Terry be found and forced to testify.

The Times

Mr. Mead said the subcommittee would take the request under consideration, and added that the Federal Bureau of Investigation had already been asked to help in getting Mr. Terry to appear.

In opening the hearings, Mr. Mead said that the inquiry concerned war contracts and did not involve any other controversies "in which Senator Bilbo has been involved." Mr. Mead added that Mr Bilbo's "political or ideological philosophies are not in question here."

New York, N.Y.

"The subcommittee approaches this task with an open mind and without any preconceived conclusions," the chairman continued. "It does not prejudge the case even though the full committee has decided that a prima facie case exists which compels the committee under its mandate from the Senate to proceed with a full and thorough investigation."

The actual testimony heard today came from a group of Army engineers, two of them now retired, who were stated to have had knowledge of Senator Bilbo's activities in 1941 on behalf of several contractors who built war installations in Mississippi and who received payments totaling $25,932,361.55. The principal camps were the Jackson Army Air Base, Key Field at Meridian and Keesler Field at Biloxi.

Fri. 12-13-46

The witnesses were Maj. Gen. Thomas M. Robins (retired), former assistant chief of engineers; Maj. Gen. William F. Tompkins (retired), former executive assistant to the chief of engineers; Douglas I. McKay, civilian assistant to the chief of engineers; Brig. Gen. Samuel D. Sturgis Jr., former district engineer at Vicksburg; Brig. Gen. Ludson D. Worshaw, former district engineer at Mobile, Ala.; Col. R. E. York, former area engineer supervising construction at Keesler Field, and Col. John R. Hardin, former chief of the construction section, Corps of Engineers.

The burden of their testimony was that Senator Bilbo had been highly active in recommending Mississippi contractors for cantonments to be built in that State but that he had not appeared to push one more than another and that he had done no more than was performed by practically every member of Congress in forwarding constituents' interests.

They drew a picture of the sudden, immediate need of the Air Corps in the spring of 1941 for additional bases. Speed was of the essence. Air Corps construction had been taken away from the Quartermaster General in November and given to the Corps of Engineers.

Christian, M. T. Reed of Beloni and Mizke T. Morrissey of Vicksburg. None of these was considered by the District Engineers capable of performing any of the major contracts by himself and recommended several "outside" contractors to do the actual work.

Where the Air Corps demanded of a project, the success as was the case at the three Mississippi fields, the engineers had no time to advertise for competitive bids but took advantage of Contractors recommended by Mr. Bilbo included campaign manager, Alfred F. Taft and 'The Mouth'

PM New York, N.Y. Mon. 11-18-46

UP TO NOW the fight against The Mouth, or as he is known to the country, Sen. Bilbo of Mississippi, has been waged by progressives and Communists.

But a new and weird twist has just been given to the people's anti-Bilbo fight. This is the announcement that Sen. Taft has appointed a GOP committee to keep Bilbo from taking his Senate seat.

Bilbo must go. That's plain. He's a menace. But Bilbo is only one of the many Negro haters in Washington. Actually, Bilbo is a "front" for the southern cotton growers and the northern bankers who lend them the money and keep them in hock.

But we think the Negro people as well as the rest of American public opinion will not be taken in by the slick little game played by the GOP vote grabbers.

One doesn't have to be a smarty to figure out that the GOP big brains figure they'll need the Negro people's vote in 1948. In making a big noise about Bilbo, they can appear as the "party of Lincoln" and all the rest of the tripe they've been handing out for years.

The GOP promised to pass the FEPC. It never did.

The GOP is backed by the worst Negro-hating crowd in the country, including Gerald L. K. Smith and the "shirt groups" which rooted for a Dewey victory in New York.

The movement to "oust Bilbo" also goes on to say, "Pass the FEPC!" and make all Jimcrow a crime. "The oust Bilbo" demand of the people also says, "Pass a federal anti-lynch law!"

Taft wants to attract votes by posing as an anti-Bilbo character. The anti-Bilbo forces will step up their fight. They will expose all vote-getting insincerity by suggesting that the best way to fight Bilboism is to stand up and fight for a permanent FEPC to compel the big corporations which back the GOP to employ Negroes as mechanics, office workers, doctors, lawyers and engineers, as well as porters.

Little Folk Defy Bilbo

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

Whatever the outcome of last week's Senate committee hearings in Mississippi on the pre-primary activities of Senator Theodore G. (Ku Klux) Bilbo, two important facts have been established.

First of all, as has been indicated here before, the hearings confirmed the downright cussedness and callousness of election and law enforcement officials in some of the Deep South States in open defiance of the U.S. Constitution, and the dogged determination of Senator Allen J. Ellender (D., La.), chairman of the committee, to give Bilbo a clean bill of health regardless of evidence to the contrary.

Secondly, the hearings demonstrated conclusively the courage of the "little people" of Mississippi, who turned out in large numbers to testify against their grinning Ku Klux Senator.

Sat. 12-14-46

Ollie Stewart, staff correspondent, who covered the hearings for this newspaper, summed it up when he wrote:

> Whether Bilbo is seated or not is not nearly so important as the fact that more than 300 men and women voluntarily came forward and pointed a finger at a festering sore. Only 50-odd witnesses were called upon to testify, but the others were there and willing to speak.
> They were not the lawyers and doctors and professional people of Mississippi. They were so little before the hearing that many thought that they would be afraid to show up unless forced.
> They came from small towns, from red clay farms and crossroads. Some of them couldn't always make their nouns and verbs agree—but what they had to say will be heard around the world.

It also took courage for a Catholic priest and a Jewish rabbi to stand up and support the tales of intimidation and bloodshed told by their fellow citizens.

Throughout the entire sickening affair, it was not only Bilbo who was on trial but the whole rotten political and economic system of the South which for years has permitted persecution and coercion of varying degrees and the open espousal of the doctrine of hate.

It is an inescapable fact that Bilbo and the demagogues he represents are guilty as charged, and no amount of whitewash can cover up the corruption and filth which is of their making. Out of the Jackson hearings has come proof of a political awakening in Dixie.

Our hat is off to the little people of Mississippi for their part in this American tragedy. They have wrought far greater than they yet realize.

$15,000 to Beat Bilbo

The Afro-American

The Senate investigation of Bilbo's crookedness in Mississippi last week brought forth the testimony that Irving Liberman, said to be a native-born Russian, put up $15,000 this year to prevent the election of Theodore (The Runt) Bilbo to the U.S. Senate from Mississippi.

Since all the colored people and the majority of the white people are barred from voting by poll tax, Mr. Uberman estimated that $15,000, or at most, $25,000, would be enough to swing the election. Baltimore, Md.

Bloodshed Feared If Bilbo Probe Is Held In South

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky. Mon. 11-18-46

Washington, Nov. 17 (AP)—Edgar G. Brown, director of the National Negro Council, urged today that the Senate investigation of Senator Bilbo (D., Miss.) be held here instead of Mississippi.

Brown wrote Senator Taft (R., Ohio), chairman of the G.O.P. Steering Committee, that "Negro witnesses who told the truth in Hattiesburg or Grenada, Miss., would not live to return home from the Courthouse."

The Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee yesterday voted to hold public hearings in Mississippi to look into complaints that Bilbo prevented Negroes from voting.

Spotlight on Mississippi

The Afro-American

THE HIGHWAY:

By CHARLES H. HOUSTON

Baltimore, Md. Sat. 12-14-46

In the Senate Committee hearings in Jackson, Miss., against Sen. Theodore Bilbo on charges of inciting intimidation in the last primary campaign, the colored man in Mississippi came of age. The Senate Committee ruled before the hearings opened on Dec. 2 that it would not subpoena witnesses to support the charges against Senator Bilbo, but would rely only on volunteer testimony. Many people were apprehensive lest the Mississippi victims might be afraid to testify. But on the mornings the hearings opened, nearly 200 veterans packed the courtrooms of the State.

INDIFFERENT TO POSSIBLE REPRISALS

Older men, too, were there to testify, regardless of possible reprisals against their property, businesses and families. Mississippi met the test. On the witness stand the witnesses were quiet, firm and resolute. Sen. Allen J. Ellender, chairman of the committee, did his best to try to shake them, but got nowhere.

In many instances, the witnesses called names of officers and citizens who had assaulted and intimidated them. When one realizes that many of these persons were officials of cities and towns to which the witnesses must return, their courage is clear.

EXPOSED TO NATION

Here for the first time in over 50 years, the stinking record of terror and intimidation was exposed in a public Statewide hearing.

For the first time during this century citizens of the State dared publicly to urge and insist on their right to have a voice in the government of Mississippi. This time Mississippians always have had courage; it takes courage to live in Mississippi. This time, however, the eyes of the nation were on Mississippi and the Mississippian could feel that he was not standing alone.

There are two lessons to be drawn from the Bilbo hearings:

1. That the story of trickery, bribery, fraud and corruption in Mississippi politics is only what you could expect from a man who is as stupid, bigoted and intolerant as Bilbo.

2. Runt Bilbo and many another Confederate would be the first to refer to the politicians of the early post-Civil War days as "carpet baggers" and "corruptionists." But the colored people who ran Mississippi during the Reconstruction Period were saints of God and angels of heaven compared with Bilbo and his crowd.

From where we sit it looks as though Bilbo took advantage of the war emergency and of a church campaign to put money in his own pocket. There may be some AFRO readers who believe that we should put Bilbo out of the Senate for intimidating colored voters, so that it will be a lesson to all the rest of the Southerners doing the same thing.

That is an admirable suggestion, but the main thing is to put Bilbo out.

Ferguson Says Majority Backs Report on Senator's Dealings With War Contractors

New York, N. Y.

By JOHN D. MORRIS

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28 — Approval by a majority of the Senate War Investigating Committee of what has been described as a "very tough" report on Senator Theodore G. Bilbo's dealings with war contractors was reported today.

Senator Homer Ferguson, Republican, of Michigan, leader of subcommittee's investigation and author of the report, said five of the committee's nine members had voted in the affirmative when he polled them. A sixth also had voted for the report but later changed his ballot in a telegram to Mr. Ferguson. Sun. 12-29-46

The others have not been heard from, and the report possibly will be changed if they so desire, he said. It will be filed with the Senate secretary Thursday, he added.

The report makes no recommendations, it is said, but Republicans seeking to deprive the Mississippi Democrat of his seat asserted that it could be done on "very broad" grounds. Such grounds might include "actions contrary to sound public policy, harmful to the dignity and honor of the Senate, or dangerous to the perpetuity of free government."

Republicans still appear to be undecided as to what tactics to pursue, but most of them seem to favor letting Senator Bilbo take his seat and then trying to oust him after they have reorganized the new Congress.

Precedents disagree on whether he could be barred from taking his seat by a simple majority on the general charges. A simple majority could accomplish the purpose either before or after he had taken his seat if the basis for action was directly connected with the recent election itself. But this is not the case with respect to Mr. Bilbo's 1942 connections with war contractors.

Members of the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee, which looked into charges that Mr. Bilbo incited intimidation of Negroes in last summer's Democratic primary, are doubtful whether that case can be sustained.

Senator Ferguson is apparently among the few who still favor an effort to prevent Mr. Bilbo's being sworn in. He will put the question to the Republican conference of the Senate, comprising all fifty-one holdovers and Senators-elect, which meets Monday.

Since Chairman James M. Mead and three other members will not be in the new Congress, Mr. Ferguson explained, it would be impossible for the committee to hold additional hearings as planned. He had sought additional testimony on a complaint that Senator Bilbo received $1,500 from a narcotics addict after intervening with Federal officials to obtain a narcotics ration for him.

Is it a crime to be critical of a man who defiantly, outrageously and persistently violates the very spirit of our contended democracy? Is it a crime to be critical of a man who heaps abuse and unfounded, unwarranted derogatory remarks upon a fellow human being? Charleston, S. C.

JACKSON, Miss. — (SNS) — A senate committee hearing charges against Senator-elect Theodore Bilbo, Democrat of Mississippi, Monday was told by Eloy Fletcher, a young war veteran, that he was beaten by a group of white men for attempting to register to vote in the Mississippi primary last summer.

A five-man committee holding the the hearings heard Fletcher relate the incident among several charges that Bilbo incited violence and intimidation to prevent Negro registration but said they could produce witnesses who could testify that Bilbo's campaign speeches were "afraid." Report On Sen. Bilbo Described As Tough, Gets Majority Backing

The News-Age-Herald Birmingham, Ala.

Document Criticizes His Dealings With War Contractors, And 'Favors'

Sun. 12-29-46

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28 — (AP) — Sen. Ferguson (R., Mich.) announced Saturday that a majority of the Senate war investigating committee has approved a report—reportedly "very tough"—criticizing Sen. Bilbo (D., Miss.) for his dealings with war contractors.

Ferguson, chief quizzer in the Bilbo inquiry and a leader in the Republican move to oust the thrice-elected Mississippian, told a reporter:

"The report is being printed now and it will be filed with the secretary of the Senate next week, probably on Thursday."

He withheld all comment on its contents and all information on which five of the nine-man group had okehed the official criticism.

Earlier this week a member had called it "a very tough one," reciting evidence of favors done Bilbo by men seeking government contracts and bearing down on contentions that they were solicited for donations.

THE REPORT IS SAID TO INCLUDE no recommendations, leaving up to the Senate what to do about Bilbo, who has denied any wrong-doing.

It was obvious that at least one Democratic senator had voted against Bilbo because there are only four Republicans on the group. In addition to Ferguson they are Sens. Brewster (Me.), Ball (Minn.) and Knowland (Calif.).

At first Ferguson said he had obtained six votes for the critical report, but it was learned that one senator telegraphed instructions to remove his name after first giving approval.

Sen. Mitchell (D., Wash.) resigned this week, reducing the committee to nine so that five senators form a majority.

Three Democratic members, Mead (N. Y.), Tunnell (Del.) and Briggs (Mo.), will not be members of the next Congress, while two, Kilgore (W. Va.) and Connally (Tex.), will continue their service.

Meanwhile, a difference of opinion developed among the anti-Bilbo forces as to the exact strategy to be followed in trying to oust him.

"MY IDEA IS THAT THIS IS NOT A POLITICAL MATTER," Ferguson said, "and the Senate should not let anyone take the oath of office if it has knowledge of facts that should prevent him from serving."

The Michigan senator said that Bilbo "should be instructed to stand aside" next Friday when 34 senators take their oath.

Other Bilbo opponents have suggested that Bilbo be allowed to take his oath so that the Senate will not become involved in a controversy before it is fully organized. The News-Age-Herald Involved in this strategy is a parliamentary question as to whether a simple majority of votes is sufficient to keep Bilbo out or a two-thirds majority will be required to oust him if he is allowed to take his oath. Birmingham, Ala.

Ferguson said "the two-thirds question will not be involved because on Jan. 3 Bilbo will not be a senator." Sun. 12-29-46

FERGUSON HAD WANTED DIRECT TESTIMONY by two physicians and a man previous witnesses had identified as a narcotics addict. They testified that Bilbo received $1,000 or $1,500 from the man after interceding with federal authorities to obtain a daily ration of narcotics. Bilbo denied the authorization for narcotics was connected with funds he said one of the physicians gave him to help build a church parsonage.

Sen. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) asked Chairman Ellender (D., La.) to change the time of a meeting of the special Senate campaign investigating committee set for Monday afternoon. This group conducted hearings in Mississippi on complaints that Bilbo intimidated Negroes from voting. The committee was to have completed its report at the Monday session but Hickenlooper said he and Sen. Bridges (R., N. H.) must attend a Republican conference at that time. The anti-Bilbo strategy may be settled at this conference.

BILBO POLLUTES THE "GREATEST GENTLEMAN'S CLUB."

Chicago, Ill.

THE "Greatest Gentleman's Club in the World," the United States Senate, has discovered that for the past six years it has housed a political hoodlum, Sen. Theodore "The Mouth" Bilbo. The more the senate investigating committee probes into the murky affairs of this Mississippi bribe-taker, the less respect we will have for this great "Gentleman's Club" if it accepts him back into its membership. People are usually judged by the company they keep, and certainly no honorable senator can retain respect of the public by associating with Bilbo. He lowers everything he touches. It has been his record, public and private, ever since he left college. Sat. 12-28-46

It is amusing to follow the testimony of Bilbo's henchmen—a line of Mississippi liars—endeavoring to shield and protect the senator from any bribe connections with war contractors. Bilbo has long established himself as a bribe-taker. Years ago in a political campaign in his home state he confessed that he had accepted $645 in bribe money to vote for Senator Leroy Percy. He produced the marked bills before a Grand Jury, and told the jurors that "he had sacrificed his Honor for God and Country, and that he had allowed himself to be bribed as part of his strategy in abandoning the ministry to come to closer grips with the devil."

On this occasion Bilbo actually proved that he came in closer grips with the devil, because when newspapermen went in search of him they found that the "honorable Mr. Bilbo" had played hide-and-seek with them all night by staying in one of the fanciest bordellos in Jackson, Miss., presided over by an octoroon madam. If you ever go to Jackson, citizens will point out this house where Bilbo came in "grips with the devil."

IT has never been fully explained just how Bilbo came into possession of this $645 bribe. Who passed the money was kept a secret, because a U. S. Treasury official testified at the time that the marked bills came from an issue that had not been released to the banks on the day Bilbo claimed to have received them. Did a banker, in haste to get Bilbo's one vote to elect Senator Percy, rob his own institution? For being involved in this scandal, Bilbo was brought to trial by his fellow senators in the Mississippi legislature. He missed expulsion by ONE VOTE. But the Mississippi Senate gave vent to its feelings with this resolution against "The Mouth":

"Resolved, in view of the unexplained inconsistencies and inherent improbabilities in the testimony of Senator Bilbo, his established bad character and lack of credibility, that the Senate of Mississippi does hereby condemn his entire bribery charge, and the statement of the role he played as detective and decoy, as a trumped-up falsehood, utterly unworthy of belief; resolved further, that as a result of the conduct of Theodore G. Bilbo in this matter, and the testimony produced in this investigation, the Senate pronounces Bilbo as UNFIT to sit with honest, upright men in a respectable legislative body, and he is hereby asked to resign." Defender

Bilbo seems to thrive on scandal; especially where women are involved. Even in this present case it has been brought out that he possessed an over zealous affection for a Baptist pastor's wife, whom the congregation sent away, evidently believing that a scandal would develop and injure the church. When Bilbo was out of a job and asked the late Sen. Pat Harrison to get him one in Washington in 1934, Harrison wrote this about Bilbo in recommending him for a job with the Agricultural Adjustment administration: ". . . Of course, I don't think it would be wise to place Bilbo in a position of financial responsibility. He's as honest as the day is long, you understand, but it wouldn't be fair to put him under any temptation." And on the moral issue, Senator Patterson added this: "Furthermore, Bilbo is an extremely energetic man. At the same time, it might be wisest not to subject him to contact with distracting feminine influences." Chicago, Ill.

IN THE minds of the public, Theodore Bilbo is guilty in his deal with war contractors. From his past record, and the words of his bosom friends, we are led to believe that Bilbo will take anything that isn't nailed down. If he took $645 where probably only a $1,000 was involved at most, what would he do where millions were at stake? He has lowered the toga of the U. S. Senate by accepting "gifts" from contractors for whom he helped secure juicy jobs. In 1930 Bilbo, as governor of Mississippi, engaged in a tug-of-war with the legislature over expenditures for a public institution, then half-built. Bilbo refused to let the work proceed unless his personal friend was appointed an associate architect at $10,000 a year. It was discovered later that this architect was actually drafting plans for Bilbo's "Dream House" at Poplarville, and did little work for the state. Sat.

There has never been anything to infest the United States Senate like Theodore G. Bilbo. He represents just what he is: confessed bribe-taker, scandal-monger, political hoodlum, and all of the other names that denote a rascal. Any decent state would have retired him to private life long ago. When a man becomes so depraved that the Mississippi Senate will condemn him as "UNFIT to sit with honest, upright men," he has about reached the point where persons outside of Mississippi wouldn't want to touch him with a 10-foot pole, less they be contaminated. 12-28-46

Testimony Punctuated Often by Epithets

By OLLIE STEWART
(AFRO Staff Correspondent)

JACKSON, Miss. — "If it was left up to me, not a single one of them would vote. I would use any means to keep N---rs from voting in the Democratic white primary—legal means, this is."

Thus spoke Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, in cross examination here Thursday by a Senate Investigating Committee, probing for four days into charges that the senior Mississippi senotor had made an inflammatory appeal to white people and had waged a ruthless campaign for re-election last summer.

Denied All Charges

Earlier, in his written statement the reading of which occupied most of the two hours Bilbo was on the stand, the Mississippi senator-elect had categorically denied, individually and colectively, all the charges in the indictment which caused the Senate committee to hold open hearing here in the Federal courtroom.

But on cross examination, The Man not only admitted most of the charges made against him by newspapers, magazines and witnesses here in the courtroom, but played to the sympathetic gallery of white persons in the room by adding some new offenses to the list.

Uses Epithet

Repeatedly, he used the word N--r to describe the people he didn't want to vote. He began by saying "Nigra" but quickly slipped into the more offensive term.

"If I am to be denied a seat in the Senate because of my views, then every public official from the state of Mississippi for the last 56 years should never have been seated."

Frequently he was applauded. Frequently he blasted Clare Boothe Luce and Mrs. Roosevelt as "N---r lovers." He reviled the CIO, the NAACP, PAC, Sidney Hillman and "that N---r president at Howard University."

He pulled out all the stops in insisting that Mississippi is for whites and should be controlled by whites. "I know N----rs," he said time and time again, "but they are fickle and you can't depend upon them. They are only a hundred years from Africa where they were eating one another."

Poses as "Friend"

Then The Man wound up his tirade by stating in a honeyed voice: "N--rs never had a better friend than I."

Dressed in grayish plaid suit, white shirt, red plaid tie, wearing glasses and speaking as though he had marbles in his mouth, so that half the time his words were undistinguishable, Bilbo said the charges against him were made in a statement signed by 48 colored and two whites. He also said that this was the first time in 56 years that colored had tried to vote. The Afro-American

He admitted he had been a member of the Klan, but said the group he joined had been out of business for 25 years. Sat.

But Bilbo, for all the crowd that blocked the doorway, aisles and corridors, for all the flash bulbs that popped and movie cameras that ground—for all these things, Bilbo was not the headliner at this hearing. 12-14-46

Little People Speak

The most significant thing about the hearing was the fact that the little people of Mississippi spoke. Whether Bilbo is seated or not is not nearly so important as the fact that more than 300 colored people held here in Jackson, in a clean, airy room, where most of the spectators were clean and well-dressed and orderly for the most part, was significant in itself. Colored persons were assigned the back four rows of seats in one section, but mixed up on the elevators.

They were not the lawyers and doctors and professional people of Mississippi. They were so lit-tle before the hearing that many of them were there and willing to speak. A number of them were called upon to testify, but the others were shown building a house and holding a law book.

They came from small towns, farms and cross-roads. Some of them couldn't all-ways make their nouns and verbs agree—but what they had to say was significant in itself. Colored persons were assigned the back four rows of seats in one section, but mixed up on the elevators.

A huge mural behind the judge's bench depicted white and colored getting along fine. A black man sat on the ground strumming a guitar, while another was weighing a sack of cotton. The whites were shown building a house and holding a law book.

If the frost had not finally finished my rose garden, I would today be forwarding a nosegay to the Republican Steering Committee just for discussing ways and means of rescuing the dignity of the U. S. Senate for six more years of the blighting presence of Theodore G. Bilbo. The favor would go tentatively, with stout strings attached. It remains to be seen whether the Republican side really will attempt to give consequence to its new-found piety, and I am compelled to suspect that there is something more of practical politics than of honest outrage in its sudden holier-than-thous toward the Man Bilbo. Votes are involved that have not been in the GOP fold since FDR led them out in 1932, and every Republican calendar is opened ahead now to 1948.

Herald 11-17-46

In recent years, when it was a fight to preserve the sufferage of the Senate itself against Bilbonic filibusters aimed at keeping the people of Mississippi from the polls, I have seen these same Republican brethren ignominiously duck out. But the stresses of practical politics have produced reforms before, and I do not want to prejudice the motivation of a project whose success would be democracy's gain. So the nosegay would go with strings.

All the rest of my garden, if it were blossoming now, would be in express transit to Dr. Harlow Shapley of Harvard for getting up on his firm American heels and reprimanding the unmannerly arrogance of Mississippi's unworthy Exhibit No. 2 in Washington, Rep. John Rankin, the one-man House Committee on Un-American Activities. To this tribute there would be no reservations. Previously, I have known nothing of Dr. Shapley save that he is a noted astronomer. Astronomers are supposed to have their heads in the stars, but it is perfectly obvious that Dr. Shapley also had had his nose deep in the rights of man—or anyway in the too-much-neglected-nowadays poems of Robert Burns. Though there was no talkative third party to what passed between the white-haired Mississippi black- and red-baiter and Citizen Shapley behind the closed doors of the committee room, it is enough that the grand inquisitor emerged in ruddy expostulation: He had "never seen a witness treat a committee with more contempt."

The word I like here is Mr. Rankin's own—contempt. It described an emotion never restricted by nature not intended by our Constitution to the sole use of men clothed by their fellow men with a little brief authority. It is an emotion that implies a judgment. I am willing to take Mr. Rankin's word for it that Dr. Shapley showed contempt for him, and I am willing to take Dr. Shapley's judgment as that of an estimable and forthright citizen who does have to take his telescope to preceive that disrespect for a notorious bullywagger is not reason, no matter what pompous title the man may hide his littleness behind.

Such contempt is healthy in a democracy, which is a form of government neither Sen. Bilbo nor his fellow Mississippian of the House Un-American Activities Committee knows much or cares much about. The Senator and the Congressman fall naturally together because both are blatant mongers of racial hatreds and both are the natural product of a thimble-rigged electoral system that ends to lift to representative office those individuals more willing than others to capitalize the prejudices amid which they live—or perhaps simply more adept at it. Of the two, Rankin has far more of the qualities with which a talented man could gain a solid esteem. He has been a great champion of the TVA and has worked doggedly for a Tennessee Tombigbee Canal, which ought to be built.

On the other hand, he is, all would agree, the ideal successor of Martin Dies as the moving spirit of the House Un-American Activities Committee if, in the wisdom and trepidation of the Nation's lawmakers, that witch-hunting body is to be continued indefinitely on the pay roll. He will not be bothered by the slightest compunction: it will not even occur to him that he is supposed to be the servant of honorable citizens—like Dr. Shapley—commanded, on no charge, to his private torture room. Undoubtedly it is a real shock to him that Shapley chose and dared to remember that he too is an American.

DEFENDANT DENIES THIS

Doctor Asserts $1,000 Went to Church—Bilbo Calls Entire Case Against Him False

By HAROLD B. HINTON

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19 — A charge that Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, Democrat, of Mississippi took a 66-year-old drug addict's life savings in return for securing for him an ordinary narcotics permit, at no expense, unexpectedly prolonged today the series of hearings on his case before the War Investigating Subcommittee. It had been expected they would close today.

Bitter epithets, directly contradictory statements under oath, and the near-collapse of one of the witnesses characterized the day's proceedings.

In general, the testimony was a duel between the veracity of Mr. Bilbo and that of his former secretary, Edward P. Terry, who was held in contempt yesterday by the subcommittee. Mr. Terry faced possible perjury charges for his testimony at that time, the subcommittee's chairman, Senator James M. Mead of New York, said yesterday.

Mr. Terry, who is suffering from a thrombosis, according to testimony by his attorney, Paul Dillon of St. Louis, appeared only briefly on the stand today, but remained to hear additional testimony.

Terry Staggers to Seat

By the end of the afternoon Mr Terry looked very ill and staggered to a seat near the window of the caucus room, as if he needed fresh air. The hearing was interrupted while the subcommittee instructed attendants to take him to a room where he could lie down.

Two witnesses divulged that it was Mr. Terry who informed the Bureau of Internal Revenue, as well as the War Investigating Committee, of the alleged narcotics transaction which has complicated the record. Mr. Terry had testified to the same matter yesterday, but the committee appeared at that time to attach little importance to it. The added evidence was produced at today's session.

The testimony of five witnesses, including Senator Bilbo, agreed up to a point. The story thus far was that Dr. A. L. Podesta, a Vicksburg physician who numbers Mr. Bilbo among his patients, asked the Senator in the summer of 1945 to obtain permission for him and for Dr. James G. Logan of Natchez to prescribe morphine for John R. Carr, described as a drug addict of thirty-five years' standing.

Bilbo Denies $1,500 Fee

According to the agreed version, Mr. Bilbo came to Washington shortly after that and discussed the case with Dr. Harry J. Anslinger, Federal Commissioner of Narcotics. He gave Dr. Anslinger letters from Dr. Podesta and Dr. Logan setting forth Mr. Carr's physical condition, and Dr. Anslinger wrote a letter to Dr. Logan stating there would be no objection to prescribing two grains of morphine a day for the patient.

Mr. Terry asserted that a fee of $1,500 was paid to Mr. Bilbo for this service, which the Senator denied. Harold B. Holt, special agent of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, and W. Harold Lane, committee investigator, read a statement they had obtained from Dr. Podesta saying that Mr. Carr had contributed $1,000 to the Juniper Grove Baptist Church after the permission was received, in order to show his gratitude to Senator Bilbo.

The Times

Mr. Holt read, in addition, a statement he obtained from Mr. Carr in which he claimed to have sent Senator Bilbo, by Dr. Podesta, the sum of $1,000 as a fee for the Senator's services in the matter. According to his statement to the special agent, Mr. Carr said that there might have been some mention of a church on Dr. Podesta's part, but that as far as he was concerned, it was an outright payment for services rendered.

Mr. Terry's account had it that Dr. Podesta took the $1,500, as he said he recalled the amount, to Jackson in currency to give to Mr. Bilbo. He testified that the doctor himself had told him the whole story while Mr. Terry was a patient under his care in Vicksburg. He added the detail that Dr. Podesta tried to hold out $750 of the money, but that Senator Bilbo made him hand over the entire amount.

Accepts Anslinger Account

Dr. Podesta's statement had it that he turned over the $1,000 in the form of ten bills of $100 each to Senator Bilbo at the Walthall Hotel in Jackson sometime during the summer. Mr. Bilbo could not remember anything resembling any such meeting or any such transaction.

New York, N.Y.

Dr. Anslinger's testimony tended to corroborate the account given by Senator Bilbo, who said later he was prepared to accept every word of it as the truth.

Dr. Anslinger told the committee he had heard there had been some question of money changing hands in Mississippi, but that he, of course, could have no knowledge of it. He maintained that there was nothing irregular in Mr. Bilbo's conduct in bringing the matter to him or in his own issuance of the letter of authorization, adding that a later investigation by a narcotics agent fully confirmed the Mississippi doctor's diagnoses.

In the face of the manifold conflicts on the record, Senator Mead adjuorned the hearings tonight, to be reconvened at his call. The committee will decided whether to summon Dr. Podesta, Dr. Logan and Mr. Carr to come up from Mississippi to testify under oath.

Likewise, the Subcommittee wanted time to dig through a mass of files it asked Senator Bilbo to produce today. The request seemed to hinge on efforts made by Senator Homer Ferguson, Republican, of Michigan, to inquire into the handling by Senator Bilbo of funds donated to him for the construction of the Juniper Grove Baptist Church, and its parsonage.

Mr. Terry testified yesterday that M. T. Reed, Belzoni Contractor who built the Jackson Army air base, had complained to him after contributing $3,500 to the church fund. Mr. Reed, according to Mr. Terry, was indignant because, although Senator Bilbo had told him he could deduct the amount from his gross income, for tax purposes, as a charitable donation "by God, they wouldn't let me deduct it—they said it was a racket."

Tri. 12-20-46

Since then, Senator Ferguson has redoubled his efforts to get Mr. Bilbo to account for the funds 3,300 acres with twenty tenant houses on them.

Even so, he said his finances were in good shape until his divorce proceedings in 1938 forced him to make a cash settlement of $21,750 on his former wife. He said he appealed to seven friends to help him raise the money, and that all but one responded with assistance.

"I raised $22,000 in one week," he told the subcommittee, "and I consider that the finest compliment of my life."

He added that he had never taken advantage of the bankruptcy law, even when most heavily involved. When Mr. Ferguson asked Senator Bilbo aroused objections from both Mr. Mead and Mr. Ferguson over repeated statements tending to lay the blame for the present investigation and all of Mr. Bilbo's current political troubles on Communists and Negroes.

Senator Mead finally overruled his request to put into the record letters soliciting funds by the Na-humor, turning aside pointed questions with humorous replies, until Mr. Ferguson suddenly called his attention to Section 61 M-1, Title 18, U. S. Code. Before asking Mr. Questions today brought the information that the special fund set up by Senator Bilbo in the Bank of Commerce at Poplarville for the Jackson Army Air Base, Jackson, Mississippi; Keyfield, Meridian, Mississippi, and Keesler Field, Biloxi, Mississippi. Benedict had tried to advance the law was passed on July 19, 1940, and that Mr. Bilbo voted against it.

The purport of the law was to prohibit Government contractors from making contributions to any political party or candidate, or to any person for political purposes, or for a candidate to solicit such

"2. That I received $26,200 from F. T. Newton, of the Newton-Glenn Mr. Ferguson suddenly called his attention to Section 61 M-1, Title 18, U. S. Code. Before asking Mr. Ferguson said he had tried to advance the law was passed on July 19, 1940, and that Mr. Bilbo voted against it.

"1. That I assisted various contractors in obtaining cost-plus fixed-fee contracts for the construction of Jackson Army Air Base, Jackson, Mississippi; Keyfield, Meridian, Mississippi, and Keesler Field, Biloxi, Mississippi." Mr. Terry, whom he compared with "Judas Iscariot," "Benedict Arnold," "Brutus," described as the interests of all Mississippi contractors just as other members of Congress had done for their con-day. He maintained his usual good contributions from a Government contractor, at a time when the contractor was negotiating for a contract or engaged in performing one.

Mr. Bilbo's composure was shaken, and he admitted he had forgotten about that particular law. Mr. Ferguson asked him whether he thought it applied to the various contractors who had contributed to the Wall Doxey campaign in 1942, and whether it applied to Senator Bilbo.

Forest B. Jackson, Mr. Bilbo's attorney, was sitting beside him at the witness table, and read over the statute with his client. After some consideration, they both declared their belief that the law had no application to the facts developed in the present hearing. The penalty named by the statute was a $5,000 fine or five years imprisonment.

Says He Is a Poor Man

In the introductory part of his 13,000 word prepared statement, Senator Bilbo said that the subcommittee had been able to establish thus far only that he is "a very poor man and heavily involved in debt." To explain his debts, which he later estimated at less than $45,000, he said he had been taught in his early youth to buy land as the best way of providing for his old age.

Following this advice, he had bought land through the years, even when he had to go into debt to do it. As he got any money, he would buy more land instead of paying off the mortgages and notes he already owed, until he now owns Construction Company." He described $25,000 of this amount as a bona fide contribution to the campaign of Wall Doxey, now doorkeeper of the Senate, for the Senatorial nomination in 1942. The other $1,200 was described as a personal loan, now fully repaid.

"3. That I received $6,200 from B. L. Knost of the Morrissey-Knost Construction Company." Of this amount, the Senator said $5,000 was a joint contribution to the Doxey campaign fund by Mr. Knost and his partner, Michael T. ocrat, of Delaware, observed that Mr. Morrissey had not left the farm in very good shape for breeding livestock. Mr. Bilbo replied that "he didn't match them up—I had to start from scratch."

"5. That furniture purchased for Dream House No. 2 was paid for by war contractors." He said he had bought all of the furniture for the house himself, with the exception of one Christmas gift of one sofa, three chairs, three floor lamps and two table lamps, presented by a group of friends, among whom were three war contractors.

Denies Contractors Paid Note

"6. That a note for $3,000 which I owed to A. L. Shushan was paid by individuals who later were reimbursed by war contractors." He described the Shushan money as part of the fund he raised for the settlement on his wife, adding it had been repaid by Messrs. Jackson, Terry, Grant Stewart and Robert Newton, none of them war contractors.

"7. That certain of my personal expenses incurred in my office at Washington, D. C., were eventually defrayed by war contractors." Mr. Bilbo said this was a fabrication by Mr. Terry.

"8. That a swimming pool was constructed on my premises without charge to me by the St. Catherine Gravel Company, Inc." He said he had asked for a bill from the company, the proprietors of which were old friends, and he had not yet paid it but intended to do so. The swimming pool is not yet finished, and the company only poured the cement for the bottom and sides.

Bilbo Faces New Quiz—About 1942

The Courier Journal
Louisville, Ky.
Thurs. 11-19-46

Special to The New York Times and The Courier-Journal.

Washington, Nov. 18.—A second Senate investigation into campaign activities and conduct of Senator Theodore G. Bilbo of Mississippi was ordered today.

Within 48 hours after the Senate's special Campaign Expenditures Committee has voted to inquire into the senator's 1946 primary campaign, its War Investigating (Kilgore) Committee directed a subcommittee to start hearings Wednesday morning concerning Bilbo's relations with war contractors in 1942.

The subcommittee is headed by Senator James M. Mead of New York. Serving with him will be Senators James M. Tunnell, (D., Del.) and Homer Ferguson, (D., Mich.).

Allows Little Time.

Whereas the campaign expenditures group scheduled hearings to begin at Jackson, Miss., not later than December 2, the war-investigating body set the initial hearing on the 1942 charges with scarcely more than a single day allowed for preparation.

It was indicated that the first witnesses, in closed session, would be committee investigators who worked in Mississippi during much of the summer and submitted detailed reports recently. It was indicated, too, that the committee pretty well knows what witnesses will be called for public hearings later, but was withholding their identities for the time being.

Will Touch Only Contracts.

"This investigation," said Senator Harley M. Kilgore of West Virginia, committee chairman, "will have to do with war contracts only. It will have nothing to do with the 1942 campaign as such."

"The jurisdiction of the Campaign Expeditures Committee," interposed Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.) "covers only the 1946 primaries and general elections. Our hearings will go behind 1946."

The 1942 charges, which the Kilgore committee will investigate, focus largely on "campaign contributions" totaling $33,750 which Bilbo was alleged to have received from war contracts he had aided in getting contracts.

Says Others Got Money.

Bilbo has said these "contributions" went to the aid of other candidates.

Another charge to be aired concerns "dream house No. 2," a dwelling erected on an island in an eight-acre artificial lake on Bilbo's estate at Poplarville, Miss. Two war contractors involved in the committee investigation are alleged to have built the house and a third to have created the lake.

O'Dwyer Supports Drive on Bilboism

NEW YORK — In a message to guests at a Civil Rights Congress dinner in Hotel Pennsylvania on Thursday evening. Mayor O'Dwyer endorsed the nation-wide drive on Bilboism and urged the people to rally to its support.

Mayor O'Dwyer said, "I share with you the firm conviction that Bilboism, as a way of life, is inimical and offensive, not only to our history and traditions, but to the good sense and democratic disposition of our people.

"It is important that support be rallied for your nation-wide drive on Bilboism." Percy Greene, publisher and editor of The Jackson (Miss.) Advocate, and Paul Robeson, actor were among speakers on the program.

Mayor Warns Nation at Civil Rights Dinner

Sat. 10-26-46

NEW YORK—That the people must be aroused again t the dangers which lurk in the wake of Bilboism and fight to save America from reactionary forces, was the warning sounded by Mayor William O'Dwyer at the recent "Unseat Bilbo" dinner of the Civil Rights Congress.

"I share with you the firm conviction that Bilboism is inimical and offensive, not only to our history and tradtions, but to the good sense and democratic disposition of our people," he pointed out to the 800 guests assembled.

The object of the current drive by the Civil Rights Congress is the securing of 1,000,000 petitions to throw Bilbo out of the Senate, on the basis of his intimidating voters and preventing their voting in the Mississippi primaries last July 2.

Baltimore, Md.

New Day Coming

Rep. Helen Gahagan Douglas of California, a member of the American delegation to the United Nations Assembly, predicted that, "There is a new day coming . . . and it may not be far away, . . . when the North will refuse to be swung by the tail of the South."

"The right of free speech does not include the right to incite violence," she declared. "Such incidents are in volation of the laws of this land, and of Congressional dignity, integrity and demeanor. They constitute, in my opinion, moral turpitude."

Percy Greene, publisher and editor of the Jackson, Miss., Advocate, said that for the past 30 years he has known Mississippi political campaigns with the colored questions almost the sole issue.

The Afro-American

Campaign Held Illegal

"The 1946 campaign was the most un-American and illegal in the history of the State," charged Greene. "A campaign in which every emotion born of ignorance and prejudice was called upon to keep the colored citizens from exercising the right to vote."

He aded that, "our grievance is not against an individual as such, but calls for the uprooting of a political action and social conduct which threatens the progress of all the South and the entire nation."

Sat. 10-26-46

Mr. Greene has sent affidavits signed by 50 colored and white Mississippians to the Senate at testing that qualified colored voters were threatened with lynching, beaten, arrested, thrown off their jobs, and in other ways deprived of the right to vote.

Recalls Bilbo Statements

He recalled statements which Bilbo made, calling on citizens of Mississippi to "resort to any means" to keep colored from the polls, going on to say: "And if you don't know what the means, you are just not up on persuasive measures."

Bilbo also declared: "We are faced with the issue and it must be met now. If you let a handful go to the polls on July 2, there will be two handfuls in 1947, and from then on it will grow into a mighty surge."

Messages in support of the unseat-Bilbo campaign were received at the dinner from Americans prominent in many walks of life, including Harold L. Ickes, Bartley C. Crum, Homer P. Rainey, Lee Pressman, Frank Sinatra, Dr. Stephen S. Wise and Dr. Harry F. Ward.

Robeson Speaks

Paul Robeson pointed out that, in its disregrad for American democratic methods, and in its appeal to the basest forms of racial prejudices and hatred, Bilboism is a menace to the very foundations of American life.

"The inconsistency between the professed policy of the American State Department in certain European countries, and the failure of American government to protect American citizens at home is clear for all to see and interpret for themselves," the singer said.

Rabbi William F. Rosenblum declared that Bilbo is a throwback to Heflinism, Huey-Longism and all the cheap demagoguery which was characteristic of the South a decade and more ago.

Lacks Courage

"He wants white supremacy because he hasn't the courage to meet his fellow citizens on a simple man-to-man basis.

"He wants the mint-julep age back again in Dixie because he knows that the moment the citizens of Mississippi get abreast of the times, they will throw him out.

"He boasts of belonging to the KKK because he knows that his white neighbors down South are afraid of the new colored man and hope that the very mention of these three dread letters will keep colored citizens from asserting themselves.

Should Have Seen Hangings

"It might have been a good thing to let Bilbo be one of the official witnesses at the Nuremberg executions, to let him see what happens to bigots," Rabbi Rosenblum added. "On the other hand, he may have a skin as thick as his intellect."

Dashiel Hammett, author and president of the Civil Rights Congress of New York, also spoke.

Presented Drama

An abbreviated version of the WMCA radio program, "The Gentleman from Mississippi," a dramatic presentation by Ira Maing, based on Bilbo's career, was presented by the original radio cast.

Rosalind Drake sang "The Star Spangled Banner" and Thelma Carpenter of Cafe Zanzibar sang several blues numbers.

Bilbo's Dealings In Narcotic Case Are Under Fire

$1,500 Paid Senator For Getting Permit For Friend, Is Charge

BY EDWIN B. HAAKINSON

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20—(AP)—Clashing testimony about payment of $1,500 in a narcotics case held the Bilbo investigation wide open today as the stormy public hearings recessed for the Christmas holiday.

"I have nothing to hide," Sen. Theodore S. Bilbo (D., Miss.) told the Senate war investigating committee yesterday as he denied repeatedly any knowledge of payments reported to have been made to him by a doctor for helping get a narcotics permit for a Natchez (Miss.) man.

Bilbo also offered to open his private files to investigators seeking information on the narcotics allegation, or "anything else that has come up in these hearings."

Chairman Mead (D., N. Y.) announced after Bilbo's testimony that the hearings were "recessed subject to call of the chair." Sen. Ferguson (R., Mich.) told a reporter later that additional testimony will be necessary.

"IT LOOKS LIKE THE FIRST MONDAY after Christmas (Dec. 30)," Ferguson said, adding that the final decision is up to Mead.

Bilbo, after nearly a day of testimony spiced with bitter denunciations, denials and counter-charges, finally acknowledged to the senators investigating his financial dealings with Mississippi war contractors, that he had received respond with this donation.

THE NARCOTICS ISSUE WAS thrust into the hearings — which Bilbo's opponents hope will lead to interrupted by the senators who the unseating of the 69-year-old called Dr. H. J. Anslinger, commis- a 66-year-old Natchez (Miss.) resi- sioner of narcotics, to the stand. dent.

Instead, Bilbo said, any money he received—he could not remember.

Ferguson said, he could not remember being former secretary.

During his testimony on Bilbo's activities, Terry told the committee that Dr. Podesta, a he had learned that Dr. Podesta, a Vicksburg hospital superintendent, could find any record in the special parsonage bank account to cover a narcotics permit for Harry Carr, a 66-year-old Natchez (Miss.) resident.

GOP Senators Stall on Ousting Bilbo

Daily Worker New York, N.Y. Sat. 12-28-46

By ROB F. HALL

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—The Senate Republican Steering Committee failed to agree on a plan to unseat Sen. Bilbo after a three hour session today, it was learned here, and there is an increasing number of observers giving odds the shame of Mississippi will retain his post.

At the conclusion of the steering committee meeting, Chairman Robert A. Taft (R-O) brushed aside reporters' questions with the statement that "this is the old steering committee and cannot make decisions." What is to be done about Bilbo, he said, must be decided by the new committee named by the new GOP caucus to be held on the eve of Congress' opening.

Highly significant, however, was the announcement of Sen. Ferguson (R-Mich) member of both the Steering Committee and the Senate War Investigating Committee, that he will ask the latter group to hold additional hearings on the Bilbo case.

He said he will request Sen. Mead (D-NY) committee chairman, to summon Dr. A. J. Podesta, John Carr, and Dr. James M. Logan, all mentioned in previous hearings in connection with charges that Bilbo obtained money for helping a dope addict receive supplies of narcotics.

CAN'T CONVINCE

The announcement of Ferguson, who is known to favor ousting Bilbo, was interpreted here as a sign of the steering committee's unwillingness to proceed against the Mississippian on the basis of present evidence. Therefore, it is said, Ferguson wants more evidence on the dope charge in the hope that he can convince his fellow GOP leaders that there is ground for action.

Sen. Milliken (R-Colo.), chief constitutional brain truster to the top GOP leadership, has played the game cautiously. An open and bitter opponent of FEPC and anti-poll tax legislation, he has refused to take a public position on the Bilbo affair. However, he made a full report to the GOP steering committee today, and while he contends he only informed them of the law and procedure, it is felt that he indirectly argued against ouster action.

Negro leaders contacted by the Daily Worker today expressed the opinion that no reliance can be placed in the GOP leadership on this issue. While some Republican senators, such as Ferguson and Bridges favor ousting Bilbo, others are opposed to action. In this group they listed the following: Moore of Okla., Robertson of Wyo., Bushfield and Gurney of South Dakota. The new majority leader, Wallace White of Maine, has consistently opposed legislation demanded by Negroes, they said.

On the other hand, they pointed out, some Democrats, notably Wagner of New York and Taylor of Idaho, will go down the line to oust Bilbo.

GOP indecision on the Bilbo issue is only a sample of what may be expected from the Republicans on other issues in which the Negro people are vitally interested, one Negro leader said.

He discounted Republican campaign pledges to support FEPC and anti-lynching and anti-polltax legislation. 12-28-46

The GOP leadership may half-heartedly challenge Bilbo's seat and may officially press for anti-lynching legislation. But it will not invoke party discipline behind these measures and almost certainly will not push for FEPC and anti-polltax bills unless strong pressure is exerted from back home, he said.

EDUCATION BY BILBO

The Times New York, N.Y.

Senator Ellender of Louisiana, who heads the Senate committee investigating the election of Senator Bilbo of Mississippi, predicts that his committee will unanimously clear The Man of intimidating Negro voters. It may be so. Perhaps the Senate itself will hesitate to exercise its right to deny a seat to any kind of representative any State chooses to send it. It may resign itself to the slow process of education, which alone can cure the nation of its own political ailments. But the committee's hearings in Jackson certainly gave the rest of the country a liberal education in what white supremacy and one-party rule really mean. Tues. 12-10-46

The hearings, held in a genial atmosphere of considerable hilarity, revealed case after case of what any ordinary police court would recognize as intimidation, both by threat and violence. A Negro professor was denied his right to vote at the point of a Deputy Sheriff's pistol. Two Negroes who tried to vote were badly beaten. Some found the ballot boxes covered with newspapers. Others were warned not to register or were refused registration. By stipulation Senator Bilbo agreed that he told white voters: "The best way to keep the Negro from voting is to see him the night before election."

But it would be a mistake, according to the advocates of white supremacy, to view any of this as intimidation. Senator Bilbo smoothly explained that he had never urged violence beyond the law or any illegal lawlessness whatever. To this Senator Ellender supplied the most bewildering corollary of all. No actual color line was drawn. Some Negroes were allowed to vote in Jackson, all could vote in Negro primaries or in the empty general election. But it is against the law for Republicans to vote in Democratic primaries. Therefore, all Negroes being potential Republicans, they should refrain from exercising their franchise among Democrats. "You know, I am sure," he told one colored witness, "that only white folks should go to vote in Democratic primaries." As the Democratic primary is the only election that counts almost everywhere in the South, this seems a neat way to dispose of the whole troublesome matter.

The Senate cannot make Mississippi over by fiat or by a vote against Bilbo. There are a lot of white voters in the South who disapprove Bilbo's rabble-rousing methods. But the mass of them back him on the basic idea of white supremacy. It gives them a form of government they are determined for the present to maintain. It is not democracy. But in time its Bilbos will educate every section of this country in that direction.

Will Bilbo Survive?

The Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

The special Senate Committee investigating the War Program is said to be planning to continue its investigation into charges that Mississippi Senator Theodore (The Man) Bilbo accepted about $30,000 "campaign contributions" and other material favors from war contractors in 1942.

The Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee headed by Louisiana Senator Allen J. Ellender, is continuing to "study" the report of its investigators on Bilbo's recent primary campaign in which he waved the bloody shirt of racial strife to intimidate prospective Negro voters, but the Louisiana Senator says that he has "not found a scintilla of evidence that the charges have been sustained," which indicates that he must be going blind. Sat. 11-23-46

Last week the Senate Republican Steering Committee decided at its first post-election meeting to oppose the seating of Senator Bilbo when he appears to be sworn in for his new term on Jan. 3, which action, if agreed to by a majority of the Senators, would refer the matter to the new Senate Rules Committee which would then call Bilbo before it for questioning.

With all of this apparent determination to delve into Bilbo's tortuous past and exclude him from the Senate it would seem on the surface that he will have a difficult time surviving, especially in view of the fact that the GOP, which controls Congress, has its eyes on the 1948 election and hopes to win with the aid of liberals of both races.

But things are not always as they seem on the surface and there is often many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip.

It is very rarely that an elected senator is not seated, because the Senate is usually a stickler for tradition; and moreover there is no precedent for a senator being excluded of raising the racial issue in a campaign.

The war graft charge, however, is something else again, and if that charge can be proved, Senator Bilbo cannot survive because none will dare defend him, not even the Southern Democrats.

'Gifts' for Bilbo

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

THE little comedy of Bilbo's financial pickings as Senator goes on.

It seems that behind the terrorism of "white supremacy," Bilbo was handed peculiar kinds of gifts by certain gents who wanted war contracts. The gifts were contributions to a church and a parsonage. But somehow between the receiving of the contributions and the completing of the parsonage, for example, there still remains a mysterious gap.

Thurs. 12-19-46

Bilbo collected $27,000 for a church fund. But somehow only he had access to the funds which have markedly declined in size.

Bilbo's unfitness for his Senate seat arises from the fact that he was never really elected. His "white supremacy" platform was not "picked" by the adult population of Mississippi; his "white supremacy" platform was a weapon of violence and terrorism against the Negro voters, on the one hand, and let us not forget, against the millions of poverty-stricken whites also.

He should not only be kicked out of the Senate, but, it seems to us, that Federal law-enforcing agencies should look into the question of prosecution in the affairs of this "white supremacy" bully.

JAY G. HAYDEN The Constitution

Southerners Must Oust Bilbo

WASHINGTON—The Senators most perturbed over the certainly impending ouster proceedings against Theodore G. Bilbo, of Mississippi, are his 21 colleagues from the solidly Democratic South.

And the way these Southerners line up is bound to influence greatly both the form of attack upon Bilbo and the final result. The crucial question is whether the case is to be based on the exclusion of Negroes from the Democratic Primary in which Bilbo was nominated, or upon his shady dealings with Government contractors and others just now coming to light. Atlanta, Ga.

If the complaint is pitched on the race issue, it is a foregone conclusion that every Senator from the South, excepting Pepper, of Florida, will support Bilbo. Ever since Reconstruction Days, after the War Between the States, when they were grossly misruled by Northern carpetbaggers, resistance to outside interference in their elections has been the most cherished political principle in all the former Confederate States. Thurs. 12-26-46

Defend Bilbo On that point, Southern Senators will battle to the bitter end in defense of Bilbo, just as they have against Federal attempts to outlaw the poll tax.

On the other hand, a majority of the Southern Senators have no use for Bilbo, and this goes even for the other Senator from Mississippi, James O. Eastland.

If the charges against Bilbo are confined to his financial relations with persons seeking benefits from the Federal Government—voluminously disclosed before the Senate's War Investigating Committee—there is a strong possibility that half or more of the Southern Senators will vote to oust him.

It remains to be seen whether Northern Senators, Republicans and Democrats, who are shouting against Bilbo mainly to curry favor with Negro voters in their States, will permit the race issue to be subordinated.

The nature of the charges to be pressed may be decided the first day of the new Congress, by vote on a motion to bar Bilbo from taking the oath.

The Rule The accepted rule is that if the question goes to validity of the Senator's election he can be required to step aside temporarily or excluded permanently—either or both—by majority vote. The same holds if he is under the prescribed age of 30 years or otherwise falls short of constitutional requirements.

But if it is conceded that the Senator is constitutionally qualified and elected, and for some other reason he is claimed to be unfit, the practice has been to permit him to take the oath, after which a two-thirds vote is required to expel him.

Since Bilbo won nomination by a wide margin and only a handful of Negroes actually applied for ballots and were excluded, the charge that disenfranchisement of Negroes determined the result is far fetched. Even the most ardent anti-Bilboites on the Senate Committee that went to Mississippi to investigate couldn't make much out of that centention.

Contrast In contrast, Sen. Ferguson, who is leading the inquiry into Bilbo's relationship with war contractors and other Government beneficiaries, has turned up a lot of very smelly circumstances. Bilbo himself admits that $40,000 or more of tainted money passed into his hands, and many of his explanations as to what became of the cash thereafter sounded phony.

Especially damaging was the testimony that Bilbo interceded, for a cash consideration, on behalf of a dope addict, seeking a Government permit to buy narcotics. And Sen. Ferguson says Bilbo clearly violated the 1942 law, specifically forbidding acceptance by Government officials of gifts from persons holding or seeking war contracts. 12-26-46

Even so, it is improbable that the two-thirds vote required to unseat Bilbo can be mustered without help of quite a few Senators from south of the Mason-Dixon Line.

BILBO STRIKES BACK

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Sun. 12-29-46

The way things now look, about the only good in the Bilbo investigation will be that the unsophisticated in such matters are given a clear demonstration of the internal rottenness of the great American racket called politics.

Bad as he undoubtedly is, Senator Bilbo has plenty of company in his undercover business of taking bribes in return for exerting political influence at the behest of crooked concession seekers. Quite evidently he isn't bluffing in his threat to expose the under-table dealing of those who have been most active in their efforts to unseat him.

While the Senate is about its investigation, perhaps it would do well to look into Bilbo's counter-charges, and, if they are in any degree genuine, to purge itself not only of the "gentleman from Mississippi" but of all other senators guilty of the same sharp practices. The United States Senate has too much big business on hand for corrupt politicians to tarnish its good name at home and lessen its high prestige abroad.

The American people have the right to expect honesty commensurate with great ability from men who have the sole power of impeaching high public officials and of concluding far-reaching treaties with other nations. Like Caesar's wife, a senator should be above all reproach.

It is doubtless the fault of the voter when men like Bilbo can be elected to the highest legislative body in our land. An informed electorate is the best defense against the choice of grafters and cheap chiselers for public office. The Senate does, however, have the power of ridding itself of its own rotten branches, and in Bilbo's case its duty is very plain. As for the South, we would do well to use more care about selecting our chief spokesmen in the national Senate and House of Representatives.

Maybank for State Sovereignty

The News and Courier

"The issue is greater than Senator Bilbo himself. Not to seat him would be an insult to the voters of the sovereign state of Mississippi, who have their own rules governing the Democratic primary election; there was no issue in the general election. The Democrats in Mississippi certainly voted overwhelmingly for Bilbo. I am going to uphold the sovereignty of the state of Mississippi, as one believing in state's rights." 12-27-46

Senator Maybank in the foregoing saying, and he has not waited or hesitated to say it, truly and well represents the state of South Carolina. "The issue is greater than Senator Bilbo himself." The sovereignty of the state of Mississippi is on trial. The condemnation of Mississippi's sovereignty would be declaration of hostility to the sovereignity of South Carolina and of all the other states. Charleston, S.C. Fri.

Turning Over a Boulder

The Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

Down in Washington last week the Senate Investigating Committee turned over a boulder and from underneath squirmed a motley crew of human bugs, slugs, worms and centipedes attesting to the character of political life in the State of Mississippi.

The boulder was Senator Theodore (The Man) Bilbo whom the committee was turning over in order to get the facts about his dealings with war contractors who allegedly gave him money for some reason which we hope the investigation will soon establish.

But the initial effort of the committee revealed more than some doubtful data about Senator Bilbo.

Like the tar baby in the Uncle Remus stories, it seems that everybody who had ever touched Bilbo was smeared.

There was Bilbo's former secretary declaring he would be killed if he talked; a banker who delivered bales of bills to Bilbo; former Congressman Ross D. Collins who became so infuriated over the revelations of Bilbo's political lieutenant, Robert Gandy, that he knocked him down in the meeting room, and war contractors who admitted how nice they had been to Bilbo as a result of the kind of deeds he had done for them by way of swinging war contracts their way. Sat. 12-21-46

All in all, it was a wonderfully revealing experience when the boulder was turned over and the varmints were exposed in all their naked venality.

This was a picture of politics in Mississippi which a lot of people there are afraid would be corrupted if Negroes voted.

How the picture could possibly be worse is a mystery.

With such a sordid setting, the public should now be prepared for any revelations of the worst character, and it is rather certain that they will not be disappointed, because Biybo has lived a full life.

Voice of the Peepul

The News and Courier Charleston, S.C.

One thing to be said about the Mead committee's investigation of Senator Bilbo is that the voters in Mississippi elected Bilbo and the New York voters rejected Mead. The News and Courier, no worshipper of majorities, is not especially impressed with the foregoing combination of facts, but it ought to cause some of the democrats who prate about the "voice of the peepul" to stop and think about their own inconsistency. Tues. 11-26

From all outward appearances the man least concerned in the crowded room of the Special Senate Committee Investigating the National Defense Program these days is the prime defendant—Sen. Theodore ("The Man") Bilbo, the diminuitive, demagogic Mississippi Democrat. New York, N.Y.

Although the Committee treated Bilbo as it has all others by refusing to allow him to cross-examine witnesses, Bilbo takes out his love for his own voice on the press corps.

When it was charged that his campaign manager, Alfred B. Friend, was "promoter and front man" for a group of war contractors and that, as such, reportedly got a $5000 cut, Bilbo leaned over to newsmen. Wed. 12-18-46

CP Demands Prosecution Of Bilbo

Daily Worker New York, N. Y. Mon. 12-30-46

12-30-46

CRIMINAL PROSECUTION of Theodore Bilbo was demanded yesterday by the National Board of the Communist Party. Communist leaders William Z. Foster, national chairman, and Eugene Dennis, general secretary, urged that Bilbo not be seated in the Senate.

The full statement follows:

When the 80th Congress meets Friday, Jan. 3, the Senate will face its first problem in the seating or the refusal to seat Theodore G. Bilbo.

Outwardly, the Senate will be judging Bilbo. In reality the Senate, by its action on Bilbo, will place itself on judgment before the people of the United States.

Bilbo presents himself at the rostrum of the Senate as one who shamelessly used his position for private advantage in time of war, and—worst of all—an open inciter of violence and gangster "race" murders as a means of controlling and thwarting the process of elections.

Bilbo asks to be seated in the Senate as a trickster who had dealings with war contractors while the nation's conscripted sons were fighting for democracy abroad, and then robbed those sons of their democratic right to vote upon their return. As was said of Bilbo and the house given him by war contractors: "Twelve fireplaces may keep him warm, but can six bathrooms keep him clean?"

Supporters of Bilbo cannot ask the Senate to seat him except in asking the Senate to brand itself.

THEY CAN offer no excuse for seating Bilbo except the Nazi theory which seeks to justify "race" persecutions, disenfranchisement, denial of democracy and systematic political terror and lynch murder.

Supporters of Bilbo offer the dishonest plea that "Mississippi has elected him" and that the Senate must accept whomsover the people of a State may choose. This is a lie. Bilbo was not nominated by members of a political party freely voting, nor elected by the people of Missippi. Bilbo can present himself before the Senate only because the people of Mississippi were deprived of the right to vote against him. The whole world knows that he stole the nomination and the election.

The dishonorable act of seating Bilbo would deny representation in the Senate not only to the people of Mississippi, but also to the people of other States; the honest election of a Senator by another State is, in effect, cancelled out by the corrupt voting of a Bilbo. Members of the United States Senate make laws, not for one State alone, but for the nation. The nation as a whole is concerned. 12-30-46

The rise of imperialist reaction and its achievement of a stranglehold on the life of our country, freeing the hands of would-be war makers of popular control, is reflected in the corrupt alliance of Republican spokesmen for the great financial and industrial monopolies with the so-called "white supremacy" Democrats who violate all Constitutional rights of the South.

THE REACTIONARY, anti-labor, anti-Negro forces, flushed with a substantial victory in the recent election, gather in the 80th Congress eager to bury the Roosevelt tradition. Together with scuttling the Roosevelt policy of peace through collaboration of all democratic nations, they seek to destroy the achievements that the American workers, farmers, Negroes, and the people of the South as a whole have won by stubborn struggle in these years of economic crisis and war. They strive to repeal the Wagner Law and all of labor's other legislative gains. The rights and future of the American trade unions of the AFL, CIO and the Railroad Brotherhoods, now 14,000,000 strong, the nation's greatest bulwark of democracy, is threatened with outlawry by the mad reaction represented by Dewey, Taft, Vandenberg and such men as Bilbo. Daily Worker

From the swamp of Bilboism comes even the Nazi-like proposal (by Rankin of Mississippi, prompted by Dewey of New York) to set aside the election of the American Labor Party candidate, Vito Marcantonio, to the House of Representatives by an overwhelming popular majority of free New York voters, while disfranchised citizens of Mississippi are chained to a Bilbo in the Senate.

The GOP reactionaries, with an eye to Negro voting strength, are using slick demagogy to give the impression that they are the anti-Bilbo champions. In actuality, as indications well show, they do not intend to go through with effective action for the unseating and criminal prosecution of Bilbo.

But the overwhelming majority of the people of all Southern States supported the Roosevelt reforms consistently through four administrations. Mon.

THE INTERESTS of the South as well as of the North demand an end to the pretences so "seriously" put forward in the Senate that Bilbo has the slightest claim based upon popular mandate. Almost exactly half of the citizens of Mississippi of voting age are Negroes — and the chief offense of Bilbo and his supporters consists of criminal acts depriving them of all Constitutional and human rights.

The allegiance of Bilbo and his ilk—and, indeed, their main bulwark of political support—has always been with the semi-feudal plantation landlords and the sweat-shop industrialists, who subject the Southern white and Negro workers to most extreme exploitation and oppression.

The anti-Negro propaganda which permeates the politics of the Bourbon South serves to further the political oppression and the material exploitation of the Southern white as well as Negro masses, to weaken the labor movement, pauperize the small farmers, bankrupt the local industries, and at the same time to strengthen the grip of economic and political reaction upon our country as a whole. New York, N.Y.

There can be no democracy for the white people of the South without equality of the Negro.

THE AROUSED NEGRO masses of the South, true to their fighting traditions during slavery and Reconstruction, are in the very forefront of the struggle, as valiant and powerful allies of the labor movement and of all other civic and political movements working to wipe the curse of Bilboism from the face of their Southern homeland. 12-30-46

The American people demand that the facts disclosed by the two Senate Committee investigations be turned over to a federal grand jury in Washington without exclusion of Negroes from its membership, and that an indictment be returned. Not all of Bilbo's criminal acts are protected by the statute of limitations.

The people demand the criminal prosecution of Bilbo.

The people demand that Bilbo be not seated in the United States Senate.

Mississippians Ask Bilbo Probe

Daily Worker

JACKSON, Miss., Nov. 27 (UP).—Three Negro organizations in Mississippi sent telegrams to the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee today, urging the group to subpoena Negroes to testify at a hearing here Dec. 2 on Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo's campaign activities last summer. New York, N.Y.

The organizations acted after Sen. Allen Ellender (D-La), chairman of the committee, reported "less than five" volunteers had offered to testify at the investigation of the Mississippi Senator's purported anti-Negro electioneering tactics. Fri. 11-29-46

Telegrams were sent to Ellender and Sen. Styles Bridges (R-NH) by the Mississippi Progressive Voters League, the Mississippi branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and the state branch of the American Veterans Committee.

T. B. Wilson, Jackson Negro real estate dealer and head of the Voters League, said: "The hearing will be a complete flop if the committee relies on Negroes to appear voluntarily."

Contempt Fine Asked For Refusal To Tell Where $15,000 Went

BY EDWIN B. HAAKINSON

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21 — (AP) — Attorneys for the Senate war investigating committee saiad today they have asked for authority to file contempt charges against Edward P. Terry, former secretary of Sen. Bilbo (D., Miss.).

The action is based on Terry's refusal to tell the committee what became of $15,000 which he said a New Yorker bave him to use against Bilbo in the Mississippi election this year. Sat. 12-21-46

Committee counsel must obtain permission of President Pro Tem McKellar (D., Tenn.) and then pass the contempt complaint along to the federal district attornrey here for presentation to a Grand Jury.

Penalties for contempt of the Senate range up to a year in jail and $1,000 fine.

Chairman Mead (D., N. Y.) directed George Meader, counsel for the committee, also ot push a perjury charge against Terry.

THE FORMER SECRETARY TESTIFIED he got the $15,000 from Simon Liberman, of New York, to back any opponent who could defeat Bilbo this year.

Unable to find such an opponent, Terry said, he then was told to give the funds to anyone who opposed Bilbo in the rrun-off primary. But Bilbo mustered a majority over his four opponents in the first primary and there was no run-off. So, Terry said, he handed the cash back to Liberman.

Sen. Ferguson declared this was impossible because Liberman died several months before Terry's bank accounts showed the money repaid. Terry said he was "confused" and declined to tell who receeived the funds.

A woman who identified herself as Mrs. Terry said he is ill in his apartment here, under doctor's orders to talk to no one, and has nothing more to say about the transaction.

The senator told a reporter he hardly expects to get the keys to an expensive new auttomobile for additional home furrnishings from Santa Claus this year.

Witnesses testified he received these gifts from war contractors in 1941 along with an artificial lake, a swimming pool, a "Dreamhouse No. 2," a painting of the original "Dreamhouse" and thousands of dollars for a church parsonage on his farm.

Bilbo explained gifts to public servants "are an old Southern custom" and that while some contractors were among the donors they were 'old friends" and there were 'no strings attached."

Ferguson reported he and committee attorneys are rechecking all testimony and exhibits in an attempt to complete a report by Dec. 30. The other two subcommittee members, Sens. Mead (D., N. Y.) and Tunnell (D., Del.), are not Appearing on a public forum, Green spoke of the "New Day in the South," and said that others who had made great contributions this year to the cause of democracy were the 2,000 Mississippi Negro citizens who, despite lynch threats, went to the polls to vote.

The 300 anti-Bilbo witnesses, Green said, were worthy of medals won "in the service of Democracy."

Charging that a definite campaign "to keep the Negro in his place" was launched at the war's close, Green said that Senator Eastland's slurs on the Negro soldier was another phase of the campaign.

He called for new race leaders like Booker T. Washington, men who know "subtle diplomacy" and how to "talk smart" to work for civil rights with the fine white people engaged in the same struggle. He urged that Negro citizens not leave the South for it is here that they can make their greatest contribution to American democracy.

COURAGEOUS MISSISSIPPI

The Courier, Pittsburgh, Pa.

The Senate committee investigation of Senator Theodore (The Man) Bilbo proved to be the farce that The Pittsbur Courier predicted. Sat. 12-14-46

Headed by Senator Ellender of Louisiana who shares the same views about Negro suffrage as Senator Bilbo and with two other Democratic se senators Bilbo, was a f foregone conclusion tha that Senator Bilbo woul would be whitewashed.

There is no likelihoo that when the committee meets in Washington a few days hence it will do any note than tap "The Man" on the wrist and give him a clean bill of health for another six years in th Senate considering the fact that Senator Ellen der went out of his way to be an advocate for the Mississippi Solon. Wheteher Bilbo can beat the war graft charge is still coubtful, however

The inspiring thing about the Mississippi h hearings was the courag of the large group of N Negroes who presented themselves to testify against Senator Bilbo.

It is one thing to criticize Bilbo and his ilk from the safety of the North but quite another thing for color ed citizens living in Mississippi to voluntarily appear against their arch-enemy and de defy the Negrophobic forces who rule that benighted commonwealth

These colored people had everything to lost by so appearing, with very littele hope of unseating Bilbo, but nevertheless, they appeared and spoke upa as menand women against the terror to which they had been subjected to keep them from the polls on primary day.

One after the other they took their places on the witness stand and courageously testified without falter- ine one bit.

This was contrary to what anyone expected because of the widesp read propaganda that Southern Negroes are fearful and frustrated and cowardly.

These Negroes were n not afraid, although they had cause to be, considering the evil reputatio of those against whom they testified.

These veterans had fought for democracy abroad and they were not afraid for democracy at home.

Only those who are familiar with Mississippi life can aggreciate the courage of these veterans, many of them prominent in their various communit ties, and with every t thing to lose b their action.

Let it never be said again the Southern Negroes lack militancy and the courage of their convictions.

Senate Subcommittee to Look Into Charges Mississippian Got War Contractors' Gifts

New York, N. Y.

By HAROLD B. HINTON

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11—A subcommittee of the Senate War Investigating Committee will open hearings tomorrow on charges that Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, Democrat, of Mississippi, received gratuities from war contractors. The subcommittee consists of Senators James M. Mead, Democrat, of New York, James M. Tunnell, Democrat of Delaware, and Homer Ferguson, Republican, of Michigan.

The names of War Department witnesses were announced today. They include Maj. Gen. Thomas M. Robbins, retired, former assistant Chief of Engineers; Doglas I. McKay, special assistant to the Chief of Engineers; Brig. Gen. Samuel D. Sturgis, former chief of District Engineers at Vicksburg, Miss.; Maj. Gen. William F. Tompkins, former executive officer for the Chief of Engineers; and Col. John R. Hardin, former chief of the Construction section, Corps of Engineers. Thurs. 12-12-46

About thirty witnesses have been summoned from Mississippi, including Forrest Jackson, who served as Mr. Bilbo's attorney during the hearings last week before the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee under Senator Allen J. Ellender, Democrat, of Louisiana.

Those hearings involved charges of inciting intimidation of Negro voters during his campaign speeches last Spring. At their conclusion, Mr. Ellender predicted that the committee would report there was no ground for unseating Mr. Bilbo as a result of the charges which were investigated.

A secretary at Senator Bilbo's office said today she did not know where he is. He announced last Saturday, in Jackson, Miss., that he would be in Washington for the hearings starting tomorrow.

Senator Wants 'White Control' By Legal Means

Louisville, Ky. Fri. 12-6-46

Jackson, Miss., Dec. 5 (AP)—Senator Bilbo (D., Miss.) stood pat on his advocacy of "white supremacy and white control," but denied flatly to investigating senators today that he had advocated violence or illegal acts against Negroes during his primary campaign.

The unruffled senator, his diamond-horseshoe stickpin sparkling in the glare of camera flashes and newsreel floodlights, slipped into his stump-speaking manner as he reviewed the campaign last summer in which he was nominated for a third term in the Senate.

Denies Law Violated.

He declared that when he said organizers should be "ridden out of town on a rail" and when "I suggested taking some tar and feathers along and not forgetting a match," he was talking about C.I.O. men trying to organize Negroes, not about the Negroes themselves.

Bilbo told the Senate committee, which came to Jackson to look into a petition seeking to have the senator refused his seat, that he had violated no laws when he asserted Negroes should be kept from voting in the primary.

He complained that newspapers misquoted him by omitting the phrase, "by lawful means." Mississippi Negroes are Republicans, Bilbo asserted, and therefore ineligible to vote in Democratic primaries.

Four-Day Session Ends.

The senator's personal appearance, in a Federal Courtroom packed by both white persons and Negroes, climaxed the closing session of the four-day hearing.

Evidence received earlier from more than 50 witnesses included statements, often contradicted, that Negroes had been beaten, struck, taken to jail for disturbing the peace, and otherwise prevented from registering or voting during the campaign.

Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) questioned the Mississippian at length on newspaper accounts of his campaign, and Bilbo frequently turned the examination into a crackling interchange of quips.

Asked about a reported statement that "Clare Boothe Luce is the greatest nigger-lover in the North except old lady Eleanor Roosevelt," Bilbo grinned and answered, "I said that."

His enunciation impaired by a recent mouth operation, Bilbo paused occasionally to speak distinctly.

He listened to another reported quotation:

"The people of Mississippi are sitting on a volcano. There is a nation-wide effort to integrate niggers into the social life of the country."

"I subscribe to that," Bilbo said. "If I didn't say it, I wish I had."

But he denied saying that anyone should be horsewhipped, that Negroes trying to vote should have gasoline poured on them, or that the leaders of the Mississippi Progressive Voters League, one of the organizations opposing him, should be "atomically bombed and exterminated from the surface of the earth."

Another hearing, on Bilbo's alleged relations with war contractors, is scheduled by a different groups in Washington next Thursday.

Bilbo Is Digging Up Information On Colleagues

The News Birmingham, Ala.

And He'll Raise Some Embarrassing Issues, Reports Sen. Thomas

By FRANCIS J. KELLY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26—(AP)—Sen. Bilbo (D., Miss.), an associate said today, is prepared to raise some "embarrassing" questions if his colleagues' seek to make an issue of his dealings with war contractors. Thurs. 12-26-46

Sen. Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) told reporters that Bilbo has had "a bunch of people" investigating other senators' connections with contractors, and is prepared to parry questions directed against him with "a record of what other people have done."

THE SENATE WAR INVESTIGATING COMMITTEE is weighing a subcommittee's report on Bilbo's relations with a group of Mississippi contractors in the early days of the Nation's defense program. While the report has not been made public, the public hearing went into stories of favors done for the Mississippi senator by men he aided in obtaining multi-million dollar air field contracts.

Bilbo himself has denied any wrong-doing.

The committee's report is expected to be a major factor in a Republican fight to bar Bilbo from his seat, to which he was elected for a third time last Summer.

"There will be a long debate if they try to make him stand aside the day Congress convenes," Thomas declared.

"IT MAY BE AN EMBARRASSING ISSUE FOR SOME, but it won't be for me, because I made it a campaign issue in my own state. I left nothing undone for Oklahoma contractors that I could do."

For example, Thomas said, he exerted the utmost pressure he possessed as a senator in order to get a government powder plant located at Choteau, Okla., rather than at Terre Haute, Ind. He said the issue "I have no embarrassment or another Senate committee which to construct an airplane factory at Tulsa recently delved into Bilbo's actions, duplicate of one at Fort Worth, Thomas said.

In the government to get labor in Oklahoma and unorganized labor in those cases," Thomas said. Similarly, he continued, he got Texas. The Oklahoman is a member of

Senate on Trial With Bilbo

PM New York, N.Y.

Two series of public hearings have now been held on Bilbo. The first, in Jackson, Miss., delved into charges that the Mississippian had violated his oath of office and the laws of the country by keeping Negroes away from the polls at the time of his Senatorial primary victory last July. The second, just completed in Washington, probed into his war contract activities before and during the war. Sun. 12-22-46

Despite the massive pile of evidence produced by these two investigations, the whole case against Bilbo has not yet been revealed. It probably never will be. The same fear that kept so many Negroes away from the Mississippi primaries last July, kept many away from the Jackson hearings three weeks ago. And as for Bilbo's war contract activities, the Senatorial subcommittee which looked into them found that the hardest thing in the world to trace is the dollar bill, soft with use, on which the dishonest fingerprint is lost in the multitude of honest ones.

The soiled greenback was the currency with which Bilbo operated in war-contract activities, and more than once the subcommittee which listened to the evidence lost itself in the chase.

On such occasions Bilbo sat back and grinned, for this was part of his defense strategy. And part of his defense strategy, too, was the highly selective type of amnesia with which certain witnesses became automatically afflicted the moment they took the chair, and the peculiarly jumbled ledgers offered by other witnesses who were efficient enough businessmen in all other directions to have carried through millions of dollars worth of contracts for the Government.

So in this case the Senate, when at its opening session on Jan. 3, must decide on whether Bilbo shall be given the oath of office, will likely know only half the story. But in this case half the story is more, far more, than enough, unless the standards for admission to the most exclusive club in the world are even lower than the most pessimistic and most cynical of observers ever dared hope.

Out of the mass of evidence which has come out of the two investigations, I want to present only four items, three of them unchallenged by Bilbo and the other challenged only by his vituperation and not by any facts which he presented:

Item: At Jackson, Miss., Bilbo admitted on the stand that he urged registration clerks to "think up questions enough to disqualify" Negroes from voting in the Primary, despite Constitutional protection of the Negroes' right to vote and despite an opinion by the Mississippi Attorney General that the only necessary qualification for voting is ability to read and understand the State Constitution.

Item: At Washington, Bilbo admitted on the stand that he had received campaign contributions on behalf of his friend, Wall Doxey, from certain war contractors, despite the Federal Corrupt Practices Act of 1940 which prohibits such contributions.

Item: At Washington, to defend himself against charges that he had kept for his own use some of the money contributed for the Wall Doxey campaign, Bilbo insisted he used this money to buy votes for Doxey, paying this money over to certain of Doxey's opponents to win their support. 12-22-46

Item: At Washington, Bilbo admitted that he had helped a narcotic addict of his State to get Federal permission to obtain drugs and further said that the physician who had asked him to intervene in the case had turned in $1000 or $1500 to a pet project of Bilbo's, a building fund for a church and parsonage on his estate. But the bank account of this special church fund was produced in the hearings, and there is no record of a deposit for $1000 or $1500 having been made during the period in question.

Again, I say, I don't know exactly what are the standards of admission to the most exclusive club in the world. Surely they must be at least as high as any club of any normally honest citizens. And would normally honest citizens, no less the U. S. Senate, accept as a fellow club member a man who acknowledges openly that he buys up political candidates, who openly advocates violation of the Constitution, who breaks Federal law in accepting campaign contributions, who is unable to account for certain money paid to him by a man involved with the furnishing of drugs to an addict?

At this point it is no longer Bilbo who is on trial, but the Senate of the United States. Sun 12-22-46

Blow "The Man" Down

Bilbo's Chance To Give His Side Of Story Is Near

Load Of Testimony By Contractors Tells Of Expensive Favors

Birmingham, Ala.

BY FRANCIS J. KELLY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17—(AP)—Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo (D., Miss.) appeared likely to get a chance today to relate his side of the story of his relations with a dozen war contractors who: Tues. 12-17-46

1. Loaned him money.
2. Bought him a car.
3. Dug him a lake and
4. Chipped in more than $30,000 for his futile campaign to elect Wall Doxey to the U. S. Senate in 1942.

With the witness list drained low, Chairman Mead (D., N. Y.), of a Senate war investigating subcommittee, said Bilbo probably would be called today. Sen. Ferguson (R., Mich.) likewise told a reporter "it looks like 'the man' will get his chance to talk."

BILBO SOMETIMES REFERS to himself in campaign speeches in the third person, as "the man Bilbo." He has been an attentive listener to all the proceedings since the public hearings started last Thursday.

The committee would have preferred to wait for Bilbo's rebuttal until after examining Edward P. Terry, Bilbo's secretary from 1939 until last January.

But Terry, who claims his life has been threatened if he says anything against his former boss, has been in a Quitman, Miss., hospital with a heart ailment and is not due to arrive here until tomorrow morning.

Bilbo told reporters he planned to present a written statement explaining his side of the affair. He recenty underwent a mouth operation and cannot yet wear his denture comfortably.

Although his speech is somewhat slurred and indistinct as a result, Bilbo said he is ready to answer any questions the committee may put to him. He recalled that despite his mouth trouble he was able to testify for two hours during another recent inquiry at Jackson, Miss.

THAT HEARING WAS CONDUCTED by the Senate campaign investigating committee into charges that Bilbo tried to keep Negroes from voting in last Summer's primary. It has not yet announced its findings.

Republicans are counting on the two hearings to provide ammunition for their announced campaign to deprive Bilbo of his Senate seat.

Yesterday's session brought details of how contractors—all of whom held lucrative government construction of contracts in Mississippi—painted the senator's "dream house" home at Poplarville, contributed to the nearby Juniper Grove Baptist Church at his request, dug him a swimming pool and performed other favors.

The senators also heard Abe Shushan, New Orleans wholesale dry goods merchant and one-time Huey Long lieutenant, tell how he drove to Mississippi in 1938 to lend Bilbo $3,000 at the request of a mutual friend, the late Grant Stewart, of New Hebron, Miss. Shushan said he handed Bilbo the money under a shed where they had taken refuge from a driving rain.

A FEDERAL INCOME TAX SUIT was pending against Shushan at the time, and J. P. Winchell, chief counsel for the Bureau of Internal Revenue, testified that Bilbo had called him "four or five times" trying to get the case settled for a lower figure than the government claimed was due.

Shushan said he eventually "paid the whole thing—$102,000 or $105,000," including a settlement for a similar case involving Mrs. Shushan.

The New Orleans man said he understood Bilbo needed the money at the time because of marital trouble. He testified that Stewart finally paid the $3,000 after repeated duns.

M. T. Reed, of Belzoni, Miss., whose government contracts ran into many millions of dollars, testified that he painted the "dream house" at a cost of $1,790.79, which was never paid, and that he paid off a $517.92 note signed by Terry.

Reed was one of several who reported sizable contributions to the Juniper Grove church. His donation was $3,500. 12-17-46

Morrissey dug a 25-acre lake on Bilbo's plantation, leaving an island as the site of dream house No. 2. He also took a $48,000 loss operating Bilbo's farm.

It was Morrissey who gave Bilbo a $1,912 Cadillac automobile as a Christmas present in 1941.

The committee also decided to call for testimony from the Rev. D. Wade Smith, pastor of the Juniper Grove church. In letters seeking money for the church, Bilbo said he wanted to complete the church and parsonage as a memorial to "my sainted father."

Bilbo's Predicament

The News
Birmingham, Ala.
Tues. 12-24-46

Two Senate committees have recently put and kept Bilbo on the front page. One group, holding hearings in Jackson and headed by Sen. Ellender, of Louisiana, was concerned principally with the question of civil rights involved in Bilbo's campaign warnings to Negro voters. Were these threats in violation of their rights, or were they merely the sort of thing to be expected from such a source? One gathers that the Democratic majority of this committee will give Bilbo a clean bill of health. Sen. Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, who is a member of the inquiring subcommittee, made that clear when he told reporters that "Bilbo did nothing that almost every other politician in Mississippi hasn't done."

But another Senate committee, holding forth in Washington, has been investigating Bilbo's financial affairs. A very sordid story has been told of favors and gratuities, of money circulating under many disguises. Bilbo had a church, a dream-house, a lake, a candidate for the Senate other than himself, mortgages. All this and more seemed to require a variety of contributions of one kind or another. To what extent Bilbo has stayed within the law remains to be seen. But a sorry and dubious state of things has been proved, and that may be enough to keep the senator from Mississippi from being allowed to hold his seat.

Other men elected to the Senate—Smith, of Illinois, and Newberry, of Michigan—were thrown out, even though they were not caught red-handed. A Senate majority proceeded on the principle that where there is so much smoke there must be fire, where so much filthy lucre was floating around, a would-be senator's claim to recognition must be tainted. In this instance, also, a question touching the narcotics law seems to be in the picture.

PROBES: Bilbo's Lovely Dream

Newsweek

It was an idyl of man's humanity to man, a pre-Christmas carol of faith, hope, and charity. It was the story of Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo's veneration for the memory of his parents; of dreams come true; of castles in Spain that actually were built in Juniper Grove, Miss., complete with artificial lake and island; of friendship transcending so sordid a thing as money.

The men who told it were Mississippi war contractors—hard-boiled, hard-headed men—and Bilbo himself. The place: the Senate War Investigating sub-committee's hearing on charges that Bilbo had accepted money and gifts from the contractors after helping to wangle jobs for them. The time: Monday, Dec. 16.

Michael T. Morrissey was on the stand. A giant dumpling of a man, with horn-rimmed glasses and pudgy hands, he was explaining why he gave nearly $66,000 to Bilbo in gifts, loans, and services.

And the Angels Sing: It was beatific. There, for example, was that 22-acre lake he dug for the senator in the center of The Man's 3,600-acre plantation. That had always been one of Bilbo's "beautiful, beautiful dreams," said Morrissey, so one day The Man got out his mule, called a one-armed assistant and two boys, and started to work.

"Well," said Morrissey, who was wearing an almost-yellow tweed suit and an expression of injured innocence, "I just happened to drive in to see Bilbo, and he was cutting a right-of-way for a pond. I told him I had a couple of bulldozers lyin' idle, and I'd be glad to do it for him." While he was at it, Morrissey thought he might as well dig a swimming pool, too. Later, he sent Bilbo a bill for the "actual cost" of the work—$3,627—but he made no effort to collect it.

John R. Junkin, who sold ready-mixed concrete for Army airfields, did the cementing job on Bilbo's swimming pool. He, too, was an angel of coincidence. "I just happened to be going by and saw Bilbo gettin' ready to mix cement," he drawled. He later sent The Man a bill for $1,194.70, stamped "paid."

But the stream of Samaritan visitors continued. A few weeks passed, and there was the senator sadly contemplating the peeling paint on his mansion, Dream House. "And I just happened by," began war contractor Maurice T. Reed, "and . . ."

Dayton, Ohio

Republican Sen. Homer Ferguson of Michigan guffawed. "No mule?" he demanded. "No mule," replied Reed. "It was just that I noticed his house needed paintin' bad. So I did it." He said, after urging by Ferguson, that he used ordinary house paint, not special dream paint. Eventually, he sent Bilbo a bill for $1,790.79, a sum he tried to write off at the end of the year as a bad debt. The claim was disallowed, he said, adding: "I think maybe some day he'll pay it. I hope so."

Mon. 12-30-46

There was a cottage, Dream House Jr., on the island in the center of the lake. It was unfurnished. Bilbo's secretary, Edward P. Terry, and Bilbo's political crony, Robert Gandy, borrowed $500 from the bank for sofas, chairs, and floor lamps. The bank, lacking that fine spirit of charity which animated the contractors, demanded repayment plus $17 interest. Contractor Reed footed the bill. Why? "They asked me," he explained.

Passing the Plate: Nor were these the only "beautiful, beautiful dreams" the war contractors made come true. Most beautiful of all was Bilbo's dream of turning the Juniper Grove Baptist Church into a memorial to his parents. With contributions from the contractors running into thousands of dollars, he built a parsonage for the church on his property. The minister never moved into the parsonage and The Man put it up as partial security against an $18,000 loan the next time he found himself in need of funds.

Harris & Ewing

Whence comes the stuff . . .

The contractors insisted that Bilbo did not actually solicit their contributions. Reed testified that one day, on his way to New Orleans, he stopped off to visit with the senator and told him: "Why Theo, I hear your collections for building that lovely Juniper Grove Baptist Church and parsonage on your property are going pretty slow. Would $3,500 help?"

Morrissey testified: "The senator wanted to be buried, when he died, by the parsonage . It was almost too much for him, that dream. He had a hell of a time building the church."

The idyl continued. Morrissey told of going into business with Bilbo under an arrangement that probably was unprecedented. He contracted to pay all running expenses and taxes for Bilbo's plantation, to absorb all the losses, and to share the profits, if any, 50-50. This cost Morrissey a mere $48,000 in four years.

He conceded he wrote off the loss on his income tax. "What bracket were you in?" Ferguson demanded. "Well," Morrissey drawled, "I paid income taxes of $165,000 in 1942."

"Then, in other words," said Ferguson, "the government actually paid 80 per cent of the losses on Bilbo's farm for four years." Correct, said Morrissey.

To Theo With Love: The contractor said he also had given Bilbo a $1,912 Cadillac. "We always send poor people to Congress down there," he explained jovially. "So we gotta help 'em along."

At this, the Senate subcommittee and newspapermen covering the hearing broke into horse laughs. But other contractors rose to agree that Bilbo was terribly poor. They told of helping The Man along with loans, some of which he later repaid in whole or part. F. T. Newton got back all of the $1,200 he lent to Bilbo in 1941; B. L. Knost, who also lent him $1,200, got back $750. Knost was not quite so lucky with the $3,750 he gave to Bilbo's secretary, Terry, presumably for the unsuccessful reelection campaign in 1942 for Sen. Wall Doxey, a Bilbo protégé. Knost said sadly he was now beginning to suspect it had never been used for campaign expenses at all.

If the contractors' testimony was an ode to innocence, not so that of Terry or Miss Virginia Simmerman, another former secretary. Miss Simmerman said that Bilbo had fired her because her father refused to contribute to a fund to help pay the Senator's alimony. The jittery, bespectacled Terry, who had balked at testifying because, he said, his life had been threatened, finally took the stand and on Wednesday promptly proceeded to involve The Man in graft, narcotics, and political manipulations of decidedly undreamlike proportions. Not the least, he also put himself in danger of going to jail.

Mississippi Mud: Terry's own troubles arose from an assertion that he received $15,000 from the late Simon Liberman, author of "Building Lenin's Russia" and onetime Soviet aide, to help finance the candidacy of anyone who would oppose Bilbo in the 1946 Senatorial campaign. He said he returned the money to Liberman "last July." When it was pointed out that Liberman had died the preceding January, he clammed up, saying: "I don't feel I can involve other people." Ferguson moved to cite him for contempt, noting that he also faced possible charges of perjury.

Until this episode, Terry had plastered Bilbo with these charges:

¶ That he collected $1,500 from a Vicksburg physician on the promise that he would try to obtain a narcotics license in Washington for a drug addict.

¶ That he obtained a $3,000 loan from Abe Shushan, former henchman of Huey Long, who in 1940 was sentenced to 30 months in jail on mail fraud charges, with the understanding that it would not be repaid if The Man could help Shushan out of his troubles.

Dayton, Ohio

¶ That Bilbo, who obtained $25,000 from contractor Newton for Doxey's 1942 campaign, didn't use the money for that purpose.

Mon. 12-30-46

Next day, Bilbo paid his respects to Terry in a 41-page statement studded with words like "limicolous" (which means "living in mud"). Lisping, because a mouth infection keeps him from wearing his false teeth, he pounded a table and said: "Christ had his Judas Iscariot; Caesar had his Brutus; George Washington had his Benedict Arnold. But I claim to have had the greatest traitor of them all in my trusted secretary."

Bilbo's report on Bilbo: "I am a very poor man and heavily involved in debt . . . I received during the period the investigation has covered but two Christmas gifts."

The committee, which had already thoroughly investigated all the charges except the alleged narcotics payoff, was unshaken by The Man's history-encompassing prose. It immediately began drafting a report strongly condemning Bilbo, and citing Federal laws which prohibit war contractors from contributing to a political candidate. But, lacking jurisdiction, the committee would make no recommendation on whether the Senate should seat The Man. The Senate would have to decide that for itself.

Primary Elections (Mississippi-Probe)

Bilbo Starts on His 'Last Mile'

The Worker
By Fred Vast

New York, N. Y. Sun. 11-24-46

WASHINGTON.—The little man with the big mouth is finally reaping the harvest he has sown for many years. The long over-ripe fruit is weighing down the tree of justice in Washington and Mississippi.

It's so tempting even the Republicans can't resist. They're apparently climbing on the bandwagon of national indignation against Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo in an attempt to steal the show.

Bilbo's flagrant race-baiting and trampling of every standard of decency, not to mention charges of legal violations and graft, are at last catching up with him.

Two Senate Committees are investigating him. One will hold open hearings in Mississippi, starting Dec. 2, on charges of fraud, intimidation of Negroes and constitutional violations in this year's primary elections. Another started hearings this week on alleged gifts Bilbo received from grateful war contractors in 1942.

REPUBLICAN LEADERS are talking about a move to deny him a seat in the Senate when the new session opens Jan. 3.

An admitted member of the Ku Klux Klan, "The Man" Bilbo has written letters to citizens on Senate stationery, calling them "dago", "kike", "nigger", "liar" and similar insults.

His conduct has inspired numerous demands for his removal from the Senate by city councils, unions, mayors and civic leaders. Last year he was picketed by a wounded war veteran for several days, who was joined by other vets.

Most complete documentation about the polltax rabble-rouser is contained in the petition presented to the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee by the Civil Rights Congress.

Affidavits secured by the group in Mississippi tell the story of terror, intimidation and violence that dominated Bilbo's campaign for reelection this year.

IN THE VICTIMS' own words they tell how Negroes were barred from voting through arrests, beatings, murder threats, and other intimidation, including firings from jobs.

"I call on every red-blooded American who believes in the superiority and integrity of the white race to get out and see that no -----r votes . . . and the time to do that is the night before." Bilbo advised his followers during the election campaign.

"I call on the citizens of Mississippi to resort to any means to keep Negroes from the Polls," he shouted. "And if you don't know what that means, you are just not up on 'persuasive' measures."

On another occasion he offered his legal services "to anybody that gets in trouble. I'm a damn good lawyer. I've defended people in 11 murder cases in my life and got them off free."

"How I did it is my business," he added.

In Senate speeches he has attacked Catholics and praised Nazi Germany for Hitler's anti-Semitic terror.

While governor of Mississippi he was asked to investigate the burning of a Negro at a stake.

"I have neither the time nor the money to investigate 2000 people," he replied.

HE IS REPORTED to have said while governor, that America needs a Mussolini.

No wonder more lynchings have occurred in Mississippi than any other state. A total of 532 such killings have been recorded.

During his first term as a state senator, in 1911, Bilbo narrowly averted being unseated by a one-vote margin over a charge he had accepted a $645 bribe.

Declared his colleagues in a formal resolution:

"The Senate pronounces Bilbo as unfit to sit with honest, upright men in a respectable legislative body.

When the champion of white supremacy left the governor's mansion in 1932, the state was in debt $11,500,000.

Current bribery charges lodged against him, which the Senate War Investigating Committee is examining, include: $25,000 from one contractor for aid in obtaining lucrative jobs, $8,750 from another, a Cadillac car from a third contractor, and $1200 apiece from two others.

In addition it is reliably reported several war contractors pooled their resources to build him a "dream house" with an eight acre artificial lake. Bilbo is also accused of accepting $4500 for appointments to West Point, $3000 for quashing income tax and other indictments, and $25,000 for setting up a church fund out of which he bought property for himself.

Apparently corruption and race hatred go hand-in-hand. There seem to be no bounds for either, especially when in the hands of an unscrupulous man like Bilbo.

SEN. THEODORE S. BILBO

There are plenty of laws to punish perpetrators of the crimes listed above.

Progressives and labor, first to launch the campaign for justice against Bilbo, are not expected to be satisfied with merely depriving him of a Senate seat. They will demand full justice.

Senate Unit Ponders Action Against Bilbo

The News

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27—(AP)—The Republican Senate steering committee was called together today to decide whether to try barring Sen. Bilbo (D., Miss.) at the opening session of the 80th Congress. Birmingham News

Chairman Taft (Ohio) invited Sens. Ferguson, of Michigan, and Hickenlooper, of Iowa, to sit in. They served on two committees which investigated Bilbo's relations with war contractors and his election campaign. Fri. 12-23-46

A senator who was Ferguson's colleague on the Senate war investigating subcommittee declared last night the group has drafted a "very tough" report on Bilbo and the contractors.

It makes no recommendations, he said, but emphasizes Ferguson's contention that the contractors were solicited for funds in violation of federal law.

Hickenlooper was a member of the special camp investigating committee which investigated charges that Bilbo sought to keep Negroes from voting in the primary which resulted in his election to a third term. This committee's report is still in the making.

Bilbo went back to Mississippi for the holidays, declaring neither investigatoin had turned up any evidence of wrongdoing on his part.

GOP Faces Barriers . . in Expulsion Bid

WASHINGTON

Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo of Mississippi was embarrassed and uncomfortable last week when he pleaded ignorance of a law prohibiting solicitations of monetary contributions from Government contractors — a law he voted against — during hearings before the War Investigating Committee. 12-28-46

"The Man" was neatly trapped under the unrelenting cross-examination of Sen. Homer Ferguson (Rep., Mich.) after he had read a prepared statement which required 41 pages, in a desperate effort to refute the incriminating evidence which may cost him his Senate seat.

When Bilbo completed his all-day reading of the statement, Senator Ferguson, who clashed with him repeatedly, asked Bilbo whether there was a statute of limitations in Mississippi.

He explained that the statute of limtations in Mississippi ran three years on open accounts, but said, however, that he would not plead that statute of limitations in the case of any debt he owed.

"I suppose the same thing is true with the criminal statute?" asked Senator Ferguson. "I want to have you now come to a political statute."

Bilbo asked whether it had anything to do with war contracts.

After telling Bilbo it was a law that he, Bilbo, had voted against, Senator Ferguson passed him a United States Code and, citing the law, told Bilbo to have his attorney, Forrest Jackson, of Jackson, (Miss.), read the statute aloud.

The statute, which became effective July 19, 1940, makes it an offense for any person or firm entering into a government contract during the negotiations to make any contribution of money or anything of value to any political party, committee or candidate for public office.

The law also forbids any person to solicit any such contribution. The Afro-American

"Did you know such a law existed?" Senator Ferguson asked Bilbo. "No, sir," he replied. "Under our law, ignorance of the law is no excuse," Senator Ferguson told Bilbo, who himself is a lawyer. Baltimore, Md.

"What about that law?" Senator Ferguson querier Bilbo, after reminding him that he had collected a $25,000 contribution from Bernie Knost and another $25,000 contribution from "Big Boy" Newton, two of the contractors who got the bids for Keesler Field at Biloxi, (Miss.) Sat. 12-28-46

Bilbo said he left the construction of the law up to his lawyer and needed more time to read it.

His lawyer opined that the statute was not applicable to the facts as the investigating committee had developed them, and contended there was no proof of solicitation by Bilbo.

Yet, notwithstanding Thursday's damaging evidence of outright law violation on Bilbo's part, and his admitted efforts to stop colored people from voting, the Republican strategists are facing serious obstacles in their determination to Oust Bilbo—if they possibly can.

It appears that the only clear-cut line of action would be to expell Bilbo from the Senate for moral turpitude after he is seated, an action which would require a two-thirds vote.

The law which Bilbo voted against in 1940 provides a fine of $5,000 or five years' imprisonment for violators.

The Ellender Committee is understood to have had a "knock-down and drag-out fight" over a report on Bilbo's efforts to keep colored people from voting in the Mississippi Senatorial primary.

Without any official reports to go on, the Republican conference scheduled for Dec. 30, can still decide that the evidence against Bilbo is sufficiently damaging to go ahead with the ouster plan regardless.

But, if the caucus so decides—and this seems likely—there are other hurdles to clear.

If a report from the Committee on Election (of which Senator Ellender is chairman) shows that Bilbo's anti-colored activities introduced the element of fraud in his own election, Bilbo could be barred at the Senate door.

Yet, this could be done only in theory, since any attempt to keep him out on these grounds would probably bring the whole Southern bloc over to Bilbo's side.

Should Bilbo be asked to step aside and he refuse, there could be, according to one strategist, "one hell of a fight then and there—" with the Democrats still concerning a brief prepared by Rep. Charles M. LaFollette (Rep., Ind.), entitled "The Case Against Bilbo."

In a prepared statement read to the committee, Bilbo charged that the NAACP and Communist Senate campaign investigating committee during hearings at Jackson (Miss.), into charges that Bilbo achieved his election through the intimidation of colored voters.

Sen. James M. Mead, New York, subcommittee chairman, told Bilbo that the charges were not germane to the issue before the committee, a telegram requesting him to vote against seating Charles H. Houston, NAACP attorney, reminded Senator Bilbo that the "legality" of Bilbo's election is the primary factor in the committee's findings, who asked to be heard before the committee.

Mr. Houston also told Senator Ellender that since Bilbo, as chairman of the Senate Committee on the District of Columbia, claims to be the "mayor" of Washington-read from a NAACP press release

An expulsion order could then be taken in control.

Meanwhile, the NAACP is pressing its campaign to have Bilbo unseated by urging the support of Senatorial members of the Senate Investigating Committee who would vote on the matter.

Walter White, executive secretary, sent Sen. Elmer Thomas (Dem., Okla.), whose vote may be the deciding one on the five-man committee.

Senator Mead repeated his statement of Dec. 12, when the hearings opened, that the committee was concerned only with Bilbo's dealings with war contractors and not with his ideologics or political convictions.

Moving that the committee strike the charges from the record, Senator Ferguson said the mere fact that comittee members refrained from cross-examining Bilbo was because they did not believe his statements were relevant to the issue.

He added, that fact was not an indication that they believed his charges were true.

Bilbo said he had done nothing more than Perry W. Howard, Republican national committeemen from Mississippi, who he asserted had urged colored people not to vote in the State Democratic primary last July 2, in which Bilbo was nominated for a third term.

In making this assertion, however, Bilbo did not deny that he had intimidated colored people and incided violence against them to keep them away from the polls.

Learning about the Bilbo statement, Mr. Howard showed up at the afternoon session last Friday and sought to testify. But the committee had decided not to encumber the record with irrelevant matters. 12-28-46

Mr. Howard denied to reporters that he had urged colored people not to vote in the Mississippi Democratic primary.

He said that as a good Republican, it pleased him to see the Democrats fighting among themselves, and kept his lips closed and made no comment whatever concerning the primary.

"But I do not want the impression to get abroad that I was against colored people voting," he said. "As a matter of fact, I have urged them for 40 years to vote as the only protection they have and so that this country will be a real democracy."

BILBO TO GO HOME; HIS FILES SEARCHED

The Times

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP)—Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, Democrat, of Mississippi, made plans today to spend Christmas in his dream house in Mississippi while attorneys for the Senate War Investigating Committee dug through his personal office files here for evidence of a bank deposit of $1,000 or $1,500 alleged to have been paid to the Senator by a narcotics addict. New York, N.Y.

The investigation of Mr. Bilbo's transactions with war contractors and others still was held open but Senator Homer Ferguson, Republican, of Michigan, told a reporter it may be necessary to forego additional public hearings before completion of a report.

Unruffled by the week of sensational testimony, including more than six hours of his own yesterday, Senator Bilbo told reporters that he had not missed spending Christmas in the dream house on his farm since 1935.

Mr. Ferguson, Republican member of the three-man subcommittee which recessed its public hearings late yesterday, is the only one of the trio who will sit in the next Congress. Sat. 12-21-46

Senator James M. Mead, Democrat, of New York, abandoned his seat to make an unsuccessful race for Governor of New York while James M. Tunnell, Democrat, of Delaware, was defeated in November.

Both Mr. Mead and Mr. Tunnell have left the capital for the Christmas holidays but Mr. Ferguson said he was rechecking all of the conflicting testimony and he hoped "we can have a report ready by Dec. 30."

Six Committee Members Back Criticism For His War Contractors' Deals

Birmingham, Ala. Sat. 12-28-46

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28—(AP)—Sen. Ferguson (R., Mich.), reported today that a majority of the Senate war investigating committee has approved a report criticizing Sen. Bilbo (D., Miss.) for his relations with war contractors.

Ferguson said the 10 members of the committee were being polled onthe Bilbo report and "six of them already have approved it."

He said he could not divulge the names or party affiliations of these six until the entire committee has been polled and the report filed with the secretary of the Senate.

At the same time Ferguson said it would be impossible for the war investigating subcommittee to hold additional public hearings on Bilbo's affairs before the new Congress convenes, Jan. 3.

Ferguson had asked reopening of the public hearings by Chairman Mead (D., N. Y.) of the subcommittee but learned today that Mead could not attend a hearing before Jan. 2, the day that Mead's term as senator expires.

Lawyers Ask Truman to Probe Vote Frauds

DETROIT — Adoption of resolutions asking the unseating of Sen. Theodore Bilbo (Dem., Miss.) and urging President Truman to appoint a special assistant attorney general to investigate vote frauds in Mississippi, highlighted the 21st annual convention of the National Bar Association held here recently. Sat. 12-14-46

The members also adopted a resolution urging the President and Secretary of State James F. Byrnes to use their influence to check imperialism on the part of United Nations' members.

A third resolution proposed that the National Bar Association memorialize the legal authorities of the UN to eliminate discrimination against minority groups in the United States.

Transportation Battle Not Won

Progress has been made in the judicial drive on discrimination in public transportation, said Atty. Richard Westbrooks, Chicago, chairman of the NBA civil rights committee, but he warned that all progressive forces must get behind legal forces to retain and further extend the victories.

Belford Lawson, Washington, furthering the comments on interstate travel, said: "Liberal lawyers throughout America must strive to perpetuate the ideals established by liberal lawyer-statesmen in the past.

"Success or failure of the democratic experiment hinges on this perpetuation. Mere talk of peace, brotherhood and equality means nothing to the man in the street, legal machinery must work to make these ideals mean something," he declared.

Civil Rights Tenuous

Theodore M. Berry, Cincinnati, in his talk on segregation in public places, said that although 18 States have civil rights laws of some kind, successful prosecution of violators is rare.

Principal reasons, Mr. Berry stated, are the reluctance of jurors to seve in such cases and the high cost of litigation to plaintiffs.

In the restrictive covenants report, Loren Miller, Los Angeles, who presided at the discussion, urged that the United Sates be urged to establish and guarantee rights of minorities on a sociological basis.

300 Delegates Attend

Francis M. Dent, Detroit, pointed out that since last June, when Mr. Miller gained nation-wide attention for prosecution of a Los Angeles covenants case involving colored movie stars, prospects for elimination of the pacts have greatly improved.

C. LeBron Simmons, president of the Wolverine Bar Association, host to the more than 300 delegates, welcomed the lawyers on Nov. 29. The theme of the convention was "Second Class Citizenship and Mob Violence Must Go."

Incumbents Re-elected

Chester Smith, fourth vice-president, presided at the final morning session of the convention Sunday, at which time the entire slate of officers was re-elected. Voted back into office were:

Earl Dickeson, Chicago, president; J. Robert Booker, Loren Miller, J. Mercer Burrell, and M. Smith, first, second, third and fourth vice-presidents, respectively; Sadie T. M. Alexander, Philadelphia, secretary; and Harold T. Gassaway, treasurer.

Public Meeting Held

Z. Alerander Looby, Nashville, a counsel in the Columbia, Tenn., "riot" trials, related to a large audience at Bethel AME Church details of the trial and the numerous incidents that preceded the disturbances at Columbia.

He then told of the various attempts to sabotage his efforts in regards to getting a fair trial for the defendants in the case.

Washington was selected as the host of the 1947 National Bar Association Convention.

Insurance Agent Tells of Hotel Rendezvous

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — Testimony showing that Senator Theodore G. Bilbo (Dem., Miss.) received a total of $30,500 from Mississippi war contractors whom he aided in securing fat Army contracts, highlighted the hearings against him last week before the Senate War Investigating sub-committee.

One contractor, Francis T. Newton of Hattiesburg, had testified earlier that on Sept. 7, 1942, he had given Bilbo four checks totaling $25,000.

Earlier testimony established that Bilbo had helped the Newton-Glenn Construction Co., to get the contract for the $13,967,005 Keesler Field at Biloxi, as a co-venture with other contractors.

Hotel Rendezvous

Under a withering examination by Sen. Homer Ferguson (Rep., Mich.), a former judge of the Circuit Court of Wayne County (Detroit), Gandy said he had cashed the four checks for Bilbo and taken the money to him in a hotel room.

Senator Ferguson pressed Gandy to tell what had become of the money after Bilbo received it as chairman of an "informal committee" to aid the candidacy of Wall Doxey, now Senate sergeant-at-arms, against Senator James M. Eastland.

Operation 'Deficit'

Gandy explained that after the regular white Democratic primary in Mississippi in 1942 it was necessary to carry on certain "maneuvers" to get "eliminated" candidates to support Doxey.

Senator Ferguson inferred from Gandy's testimony that the eliminated candidates to be paid for their support of the candidates who were in the run-off primary. Gandy did not agree, but labeled the payment to eliminated candidates as an "operating deficit."

Witness Attacked

Ross Collins, former Mississippi Congressman, and one of the candidates Bilbo defeated in the July 2 Mississippi Democratic primary, by keeping colored Mississippians from voting through intimidation and incitement of violence against them, attacked a witness as he was testifying in the late afternoon. The Afro-American Capitol police quickly subdued Mr. Collins, and Sen. James M. Mead of New York, subcommittee chairman, adjourned the hearings until Saturday morning. Baltimore, Md.

The witness, Robert Gandy, insurance agent of Jackson, Miss., was explaining the political corruption in Mississippi where a poll tax payment and restriction of the Democratic primary to white persons only, prior to this year operated to disfranchise most of the people, leaving power in the hands of a few. Thomas of Oklahoma Declares Mississippi Law Is to Blame, Thinks Inquiry Will So Hold

New York, N.Y. Mon. 12-23-46

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22—Senator Elmer Thomas, Democrat, of Oklahoma, predicted today that Democratic members of an investigating committee would hold next week that the Mississippi election system and not Senator Bilbo, Democrat, of Mississippi, prevented Negroes from voting there.

Mr. Thomas told a reporter that as a member of the Senate Elections subcommittee which held hearings on the ground, he was convinced that "Bilbo did nothing that almost every other politician in Mississippi hasn't done."

Mr. Bilbo was accused of preventing Negroes from voting in the Democratic primary in which he won renomination. Republicans looked to this charge as a possible ground for efforts to unseat him.

"Senator Bilbo's views on this question are well known," Mr. Thomas observed. "As far as I can see, he didn't say anything in Mississippi that he hasn't said on the Senate floor."

Mr. Thomas said he regarded the Mississippi primary system as being in the process of an evolution that eventually would lead to voting by Negroes in increased numbers.

"A few of them voted this year," he remarked. "More of them are likely to vote in the next election, some day most of them will be voting. I watched the same thing in Oklahoma, where there were few; what, if anything, the minority will do about Bilbo.

The outcome of the Senatorial primary campaign of the full elections committee headed by Senator Green, Democrat, of Rhode Island, may be referred by the Senate to its new Rules Committee for recommendations. If this action should be taken, Senator Brooks, Republican, of Illinois, expected to head the Rules group, said it would have to decide whether any further investigation would be justified. 12-23-46

Mead May Join in Report

Senators Mead, Democrat, of New York, and Tunnell, Democrat, of Delaware, defeated in the November election, have closed up shop and gone home. But committee attaches said they believe the two will be willing to join in a report on some of Mr. Bilbo's findings of the Democratic majority found Republicans still apparently undecided what they would do about a minority report at a meeting of the group. Senator Hickenlooper, Republican, of Iowa, said he did not know yet what, if anything, the minority would have to say about Bilbo.

There is now no question about Negroes voting so long as they are qualified voters."

Regardless of the outcome of the elections inquiry, the Republican-controlled Senate will get a report on some of Mr. Bilbo's activities. Senator Ferguson, Republican, of Michigan, has been working on a report of the War Investigating Committee's inquiry into the Mississippi Senator's relations with war contractors. Mr. Mead and Senator Tunnell report by Jan. 3 before they officially go out of office. New York, N.Y.

Maneuver Seen as Attempt to Halt GOP Action Before Congress Meets

WASHINGTON

Senator Theodore G. (The Man) Bilbo (Dem., Miss.), who has disgraced the United States Senate for 12 years, will be asked to "step aside" when he presents himself to take the oath of office for a new six-year term beginning January 3, it was disclosed last Thursday.

If he refuses to comply with the request as other new members of the Senate are being sworn, a test vote probably will be taken on the question of administering the oath to him.

A coalition of Republican and Democratic senators from northern and western States are expected to vote to deny him the oath.

Republicans made "Bilboism" an issue in the recent Congressional elections. Some northern and western Democratic senators already have denounced him for his insults to minority groups. They will risk party harmony by voting to deny him the oath and to unseat him.

Action by Rules Unit

If he is denied the oath, the question of his right to a seat would then be referred to the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration. The Senator who makes the challenge will be called upon to present the case against Bilbo before the committee.

Reports also would be asked from the present Senate Campaign Investigating Committee and the special Senate War Investigating Committee.

These agencies have been inquiring into complaints against Bilbo that he intimidated colored voters, thereby keeping them from voting in the Mississippi Democratic primary last July 2, and that he received a "slush fund" of $25,000 from war contractors.

GOP's Commitment

Senator Robert A. Taft (Rep., Ohio), chairman of the Republican Senate Steering Committee, told a news conference after a meeting of the committee last Thursday that the question of seating Bilbo had been discussed, but declined to into details.

Afro-American

Senator Taft and Senator Eugene D. Millikin (Rep., Col had been designated to investigate procedures to be followe in any challenge that may be made to Bilbo's taking the oa of office.

"The Republican Steering Committee," said Senat Taft, "definitely committed itself to go through with the cha lenge, but wants to find out what method should be followed

Bilbo will be second in the line of newly-elected or re-elected senators appearing to take the oath on Jan. 3. The roll is called alphabetically. The first will be Senator-elect Raymond E. Baldwin (Rep., Conn.).

Strategy Explained

The strategy of trying to exclude Bilbo rather than seat him and then try to expel him apparently was based on the belief that his conduct has been such as not to warrant his being seated in the first place.

Baltimore, Md.

If the request that Bilbo step aside is resisted by Southern Democratic Senators, the issue will be decided by a simple majority vote.

Sat. 11-23-46

If the test comes when he appears to take oath of office, only 29 Republicans, including Senator-elect Baldwin, and 32 Democratic holdovers will be eligible to vote, despite the fact that Republicans will hold 51 of the 96 seats in the 80th Congress.

The other newly-elected or re-elected senators will not have been sworn in. If Bilbo should be seated and a resolution of expulsion later voted upon, a two-thirds vote would be required for adoption.

Committee Feud

After Senate Republicans adjourned policy talks last Friday, Senator Taft announced that the question of seating Bilbo had been assigned to a study group consisting of Senators Styles Bridges of New Hampshire and Bourke B. Hickenlooper of Iowa, with Senator Millikin acting as adviser on procedural matters.

While these two developments were being disclosed, it also was revealed that a fight was brewing within the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee itself.

Senator Bridges charged that Bilbo's friend, Senator Allen J. Ellender (Dem., La.), committee chairman, was trying to "gloss over" charges filed with the committee against Bilbo.

Hearings in Mississippi

The committee met Saturday to receive reports from four investigators sent into Mississippi to check charges that Bilbo carried on a vicious campaign to keep colored voters from the polls in the Democratic primary last July 2, and that a war contractor gave him $25,000 on Sept. 7, 1942.

After the committee had heard the investigators' reports and sworn statements filed by the Civil Rights Congress, Senator Ellender announced unanimous agreement to hold public hearings in Mississippi, beginning Dec. 12 in Jackson, the State capital.

The committee chairman said only residents of Mississippi will be permitted to testify—although numerous organizations in other sections of the country have played an active role in the "Oust Bilbo" movement and wish to be heard through their representatives.

No Washington Hearings

Spokesmen for these agencies interpreted Senator Ellender's move to hold the hearings in Mississippi as an apparent attempt to forestall GOP action before the 80th Congress convenes, and thus set the stage to whitewash Bilbo.

Mr. Ellender said Bilbo will be called to the witness stand and allowed to present any witnesses he desires.

No hearings are planned in Washington, according to the committee chairman, but hearings may be held in communities other than Jackson for the convenience of Mississippi witnesses.

He made no promise that his committee's formal report would be available to the Republicans when ready.

Testimony to Decide Move

It is believed, however, that the Republican advisory unit would not necessarily wait for the formal report.

If the testimony at the hearings warrant it, Senators Bridges and Hickenlooper could make their own recommendation that their party move to prevent Bilbo from taking his seat.

Representatives of the Civil Rights Congress and the National Negro Council waited in an adjoining corridor while the committee held its session behind closed doors.

Witnesses' Safety Asked

Edgar G. Brown, director of the council, asked Senator Ellender at the press conference following the session, if the committee was making any arrangements to protect witnesses who appear against Bilbo.

Mr. Ellender replied by telling Mr. Brown that he was "trying to be sensational."

Ellender Defends Bilbo

The committee chairman charged that the Republican plan is designed to capture colored votes for the party in the next election, that it is an invasion of the sovereign rights of the State of Mississippi.

He defended Bilbo by saying that he did no more than Robert E. Hannegan, Democratic national committee chairman, did during the campaign when he rejected Communist support for his party.

Mr. Ellender's latter reference was to the charge that Bilbo urged white people of Mississippi to do whatever was necessary to keep colored voters from casting their ballots in he Mississippi primary.

"It is not the Republican Steering Committee that has spoken," he declared. "It is a bunch of pressure groups who want to castigate Bilbo and won't be satisfied unless he is hanged."

Press dispatches from Poplarville, Miss., where Bilbo lives, quoted him as saying, after being informed of the decision of the Republican Steering Committee: "I have done no wrong and I have nothing to say."

ANOTHER INQUIRY PLANNED ON BILBO

Senators Schedule Immediate Hearing on His Dealings as to War Contracts

The Times

By C. P. TRUSSELL

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18—A second Senate investigation into the campaign activities and conduct of Senator Theodore G. Bilbo of Mississippi was ordered today.

Within forty-eight hours after the Senate's special Campaign Expenditures Committee had voted to inquire into the Senator's 1946 primary campaign, its War Investigating Committee, headed by Senator Harley M. Kilgore of West Vriginia, directed a subcommittee to start hearings Wednesday morning concerning Mr. Bilbo's relations with war contractors in 1942.

The subcommittee is headed by Senator James M. Mead of New York. Serving with him will be Senators James M. Trunnell, Democrat, of Delaware, and Homer Ferguson, Republican, of Michigan.

While the campaign expenditures group scheduled hearings to begin at Jackson, Miss., not later than Dec. 2, the war investigating body set the first hearing on the 1942 charges with little more than a single day allowed for preparation.

New York, N. Y.

Investigators Are Busy

It was indicated that the first witnesses, in closed session, would be committee investigators who worked in Mississippi during much of the summer and submitted detailed reports recently. It was indicated, too, that the committee pretty well knows what witnesses would be called for public hearings later, but was withholding their identities for the time being.

"This investigation will have to do with war contracts only," Senator Kilgore esaid. "It will have nothing to do with the 1942 campaign as such. We want to find out whether Senator Bilbo's conduct with war contractors was proper or improper."

Tues. 11-19-46

"The jurisdiction of the Campaign Expenditures Committee," interposed Senator Owen Brewster, Republican, of Maine, "covers only the 1946 primaries and general elections. Our hearings will go behind 1946."

Thus it appeared certain that Senator Bilbo would face the reports and recommendations of two independent Senate einvestigating groups when he is scheduled to take ehis Senate seat for a third term on Jan. 3.

The Republican Steering Committee has assigned Senator Eugene D. Millikin of Colorado to study "procedures" and have a tactical plan ready in case its members should decide on the basis of the investigations to request Senator Bilbo to "step aside" when he appears to take his third-term oath.

Action Against Negroes

During the 1946 primary contest Senator Bilbo was alleged by Mississippi citizens to have conducted his campaign in such a wayceived from war contractors he had built the house and a third as to incite the intimidation ofaided in getting contracts. Witnesses Tell Probers of Bilbo

Tues. 12-3-46

JACKSON, Miss., Dec. 2—(UP) Negro witnesses testified before the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee Monday that Sen. Bilbo, Democrat, Mississippi, appealed to violence and intimidation in white supremacy speeches to prevent Negroes from voting in last Summer's State Democratic primary.

Etoy Fletcher, young Negro war veteran, told the five-man Committee that he was stripped, lashed and beaten by a group of six or seven white men because he attempted to register to vote.

T. B. Wilson, Jackson realtor, and Percy Green, Jackson publisher, both Negroes, charged that Bilbo's speeches had aggravated the white supremacy feelings in the State and had contributed to the low Negro registration and voting.

Testimony of the three highlighted the opening day of public hearings into charges that Bilbo, who won renomination in the July primary and subsequent re-election, had engaged in racial discrimination to prevent Negroes from voting.

Other charges that Bilbo received gratuities from war contractors in 1941 and 1942 will be aired in public hearings to be held by the Senate War Investigating Committee in Washington Dec. 12.

At Monday's hearing, Green said that he could produce witnesses who could testify first hand about being refused registration but they would have to be subpoenaed because they were afraid to appear voluntarily.

Bluntly, Committee Chairman Allen J. Ellender, Democrat, Louisiana, replied that Green could tell such a person "the committee will protect him or any other witness who wants to testify because we want to get the facts."

The committee late Monday still had not decided whether to use its subpoena power.

Ellender has been opposed — subpoenas. Sen. Styles Bridges, Republican, New Hampshire, wanted to issue subpoenas because of fear that very few Negroes would testify unless ordered to.

However, nearly 200 Negroes turned up as the hearing opened. Others were in the federal courtroom audience, segregated on the last three rows.

Bilbo, despite his recent illness and an operation on his mouth, appeared healthy and dapper as he sat in the courtroom, flanked by his three attorneys.

Bilbo had asked that he and his attorneys be permitted to cross-examine witnesses but the committee rejected the request.

Fletcher, a student at Jackson Negro College, said he was beaten June 12 in a woods near Brandon, Miss., near here, after he had attempted to register at the county courthouse.

He said the veterans' registrar threw a pamphlet containing the Constitution of the United States on the desk and asked if he had read it. Fletcher said he hadn't and was told he therefore was not allowed to vote.

When he left the courthouse four men in an automobile drove up and ordered him to get in, he said.

Fletcher said they took him to the woods, forced him to disrobe and lie on the ground. He said they took turns lashing his legs with a "car cable" which was less than a finger in diameter and was about five feet long. He said they used it doubled.

Dr. E. J. Matranga, Jackson chiropodist, later testified he treated Fletcher for bruises on his right leg on June 13 and the Negro youth told him he was beaten by four Negroes.

Wilson, President of the Mississippi Progressive Voters League, said he personally heard Bilbo in campaign speeches urge white Mississippians to "do everything you can to keep the Negroes from voting."

Sen Elmer Thomas, Democrat, Oklahoma, asked Wilson what Mississippi Negroes were "afraid" of.

"They have always been unwilling to register Negroes for years and this year the opposition was increased," Wilson replied.

Hats Off!

New York, N.Y.

Hats Off to Rabbi Stanley Brav of Vicksburg, Miss., and Rev. T. J. Strype, Catholic pastor of Pass Christian, Miss., who in the predominently Protestant state of Mississippi were the only two white clergymen courageous enough to attack Sen. Bilbo at public hearings on his election now being held there by a Senate Investigating Committee.

Rev. Strype, who said he was born and received his early training in Brooklyn, N. Y., yesterday testified that no Negro in Pass Christian had been permitted to vote on primary day, last July 2, and declared his belief that the Negroes had been barred as a direct result of Bilbo's campaign speeches. He declared the town officials principally responsible for turning the Negroes away from the polls were "Bilbo's personal friends."

Wed. 12-4-46

Rabbi Brav, testifying on Monday, declared he had heard some of Bilbo's campaign exhortations and could "fully understand how Negroes would be intimidated by the Senator's remarks to the extent of not even trying to qualify for voting." And he quoted his Negro cook as having said, after the broadcast of a Bilbo speech, "I don't think I'll bother with voting —I want to live a little longer."

Even some of Bilbo's supporters acknowledged that it took "plenty of guts for a Jew and a Catholic to support the Negroes in a land where the Ku Klux Klan ain't exactly foreign."

Bilbo's Chances

Newsweek

Chances are slim that Senator Bilbo will be barred from the Senate when he returns to Washington to take his third-term oath of office. Republican senators with inside knowledge of the two Senate committee investigations of the Mississippian admit they haven't much evidence to go on. An airtight case must be made on at least one of three counts: election fraud, violation of his oath of office, or bribery. Evidence collected so far shows that fewer than 100 Negro votes went uncounted and that more Negroes voted in Mississippi this year than two years ago. The question of whether Bilbo's campaign speeches were intended to incite violence is too slender to rely on, and war contract pay-offs are hard to prove.

Busy Bilbo Can't Attend War-Contract Hearings

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

Jackson, Miss., Nov. 22 (AP)—Senator Theo G. Bilbo today advised the special Senate committee investigating the defense program he will be unable to attend hearings on charges concerning transactions he is alleged to have had with war contractors.

Sat. 11-23-46

He has, he said, accepted an invitation from the Senate committee investigating senatorial campaign expenses which will begin hearings here December 2 on charges Bilbo's campaign speeches resulted in intimidation of voters in the July 2 Democratic primary.

Mississippians to Tetsify.

The senator yesterday received a telegram from George Meader, chief counsel of the defense investigating (Kilgore) Committee extending the invitation.

The Senate Campaign Investigating Committee today invited all Mississippians who desire to do so to testify at its hearing on the campaign of Senator Bilbo. It assured such witnesses they need not fear reprisals as they will be given committee protection regardless of their views.

Committee Opens Offices.

The committee opened offices in the Federal Building and announced the offices will be open all day every day, at nights and on Sunday.

Louis G. Wyman, associate counsel for the committee, urged that all persons planning to testify before the committee contact him in order that he might plan an orderly presentation of testimony before the committee.

Wyman added "Senator Bilbo is not on trial. He is not considered guilty by any member of the committee. This hearing is to give the committee information on what went on down here."

Hot Spot For Democrats

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

The Republican maneuver against re-admitting Theodore G. Bilbo to the Senate is a very shrewd political act. If Democrats oppose it, they will help future Republican candidates in closely contested states where Negroes, Jews and many other people hate everything that Bilbo stands for. But if some Democrats support it, there will be more ill-feeling between their reactionary and liberal wings, providing the Republicans with further spectacles of Democratic division to hold up to public view.

Thurs.

The dilemma is still more uncomfortable because, through alphabetical accident, Democrats could halt the maneuver. Holdover Democrats will be a majority of those voting when the motion comes up for Bilbo to stand aside while charges of personal corruption and electoral irregularity are considered. The motion will fail without some Democratic support.

11-21-46

In all probability, those like Overton, Cotton Elmer Thomas and fellow-demagogue O'Daniel will vote to spare Bilbo an investigation. But what about such men as Downey, Hill, Lucas, Taylor and Elbert Thomas? Will they hold their noses and join the reactionaries? Or their hats and join the Republicans?

However politically difficult either choice may be, the course of principle is for Democrats to spank their Bigotry Bloc and go along with the Republicans.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

2 Negroes Tell Bilbo Investigators They Were Beaten Trying to Vote

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

Senators Hear Gulfport Men

Wed. 12-4-46

Jackson, Miss., Dec. 3 (AP)—Two Negroes swore today that they were beaten because they sought to vote last July in a Democratic primary in which Senator Bilbo (D., Miss.) was nominated for a third term.

One exhibited stained clothing as evidence.

They were witnesses at a hearing conducted by a Senate investigating committee which is looking into charges that Bilbo's campaign tactics kept Negroes from exercising their constitutional right to take part in party primaries.

Varnado R. Collier, Gulfport Negro, testified that on July 2 when he and his wife entered City Hall to vote, one of a group of white men in a corridor struck out his arm and stopped them.

"You people don't vote here today," he quoted the white man as saying. "Come back tomorrow."

Collier said 10 or 15 white men then swarmed over him, beating him until he lost consciousness for a moment and threw him out on the City Hall porch. His protesting wife, Collier said, also was struck.

Records Are Subpoenaed.

Another witness, Richard E. Daniel, said he was not allowed to vote in Gulfport, was struck by two men who ordered him to "take that damn hat off," then was taken to jail and beaten insensible by a police officer he named as "Williams." He displayed to the committee clothing splashed with brown stains he said were blood from injuries sustained in the beating.

Senator Ellender (D., La.), committee chairman, said the officer mentioned had been called to appear tomorrow, and that records and witness in the Police Court case against Daniel in Gulfport were being subpoenaed.

Bilbo, an unruffled spectator, said he had not decided whether he would testify.

"I have three good lawyers," the senator said. "I'll take their advice, just as I take the medicine the doctor gives me when I am sick."

John James, 31, Negro taxi driver of Bay St. Louis, Miss., testified he heard Bilbo say June 21, "If any Negro is caught organizing voters, tar and feather him, and don't forget the match."

Priest and Rabbi Were the Only Two White Bilbo Critics

The Tulsa Daily Dispatch Oklahoma City, Okla.

JACKSON, Miss.—(ANP)—Only two white men in this state openly opposed last week Bilbo's arguments in favor of a white Democratic primary before the senate's subcommittee that investigated the klan politician's appeal to white voters last summer to keep Negroes away from the polls. Sat. 12-21-46

They were a Roman Catholic priest and a Jewish rabbi. Both disagreed that Negroes should be excluded from voting in the Democratic primary, which is tantamount to election. Not a single white Protestant clergyman challenged the klansman's position that the primaries should be "white."

Say Bilbo Brought in Contractors

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga.

Fri. 12-13-46

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12—(AP)—A Senate War Investigating Committee, looking into relations between Sen. Bilbo, Democrat, Mississippi, and war contractors, heard from Army officers and ex-officers Thursday:

1. That Bilbo on numerous occasions brought contractors to their offices to recommend them for construction jobs;

2. That Bilbo was extremely active in having construction of the Jackson (Miss.) air base placed under control of the Army Engineer office at Vicksburg, Miss., rather than the office at Mobile, Ala.;

3. That his 1940 campaign manager, A. B. Friend, participated in a $1,731,029 contract at Key Field, Meridian, Miss., as one of four contractors in a pool or co-venture.

When the morning session ended, the little Democratic Senator told reporters:

"If it's wrong to recommend friends and constituents for jobs, then it disqualifies three-fourths of the Senate and all of the House.'"

Wearing a diamond horseshoe stickpin in his red necktie, Bilbo maintained an air of jauntiness as two of his colleagues dug into allegations that he accepted more than $30,000 in cash, a furnished house and a big automobile from contractors for his work in getting them the Government construction jobs.

Maj. Gen. Thomas M. Robins (Ret.), former Assistant Chief of Army Engineers, called Friend the "promoter" and "front man" for the Key Field contracting pool.

Brig. Gen. Samuel D. Sturgis, Jr., former Chief of District Engineers at Vicksburg, said that Friend had no resources, no equipment and no organization, but that his presence among the contractors "did no harm."

Bilbo commented to the press table that Friend certainly was "the brains of the organization."

"I know that," Bilbo said, "because he elected me twice."

Douglas I. McKay, special assistant to the chief of engineers, testified that although he had no personal knowledge of the affair, he had heard "rumors" that Friend was to receive "a $5,000 cut" of the $63,175 fixed fee for the contractors on the Meridian job.

The combine which got the Meridian contract was made up of Friend, the Volz Construction Company, the Flint-Jordan Construction Company and the Rock City Construction Company. The last named firm was from Tennessee, the others from Mississippi. It was Army policy to award contracts, when possible, to residents of the State where the construction work was to take place. Fri.

The original estimate of cost of the job was $1,515,090 plus the $63,175 fee. Eventually the Government paid out $1,731,029 for the work. The Constitution

That excess was minor, however, compared to the under-estimate on the Jackson Air Base. There the estimate was $1,459,710 plus a $62,000 fee to the contractor, M. T. Reed. Final cost was $2,639,983, due principally, the engineers explained, to expansion of the projcet after it got under way.

Contracts under examination by the Committee total $25,932,361.

Sen. Mead, Democrat, New oYrk, presided and Sen. Ferguson Republican Michigan, conducted much of the examination of witnesses. The third member of the sub-Committee, Sen. Tunnell, Democrat, Deleware, was not present at the opening session. 12-13-46

Forrest Jackson, of Jackson, Miss., Bilbo's attorney, inquired at the outset whether he would be allowed to cross-examine witnesses. Mead ruled that he could not, but said that if Jackson or Bilbo wanted to raise any points they could submit them in writing to the Committee. Atlanta, Ga.

Banker Called From Jackson To Bilbo Hearing

The News Birmingham, Ala.

Fri. 12-13-46

Testimony Expected To Shed Light On Missing Witness

BY EDWIN B. HAAKINSON

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13—(AP)—A Senate war investigating subcommittee today ordered a Jackson, Miss., banker summoned to Washington for testimony which may throw some light on the mysterious disappearance of Edward P. Terry, former secretary to Sen. Bilbo (D., Miss.).

Chairman Mead (D., N. Y.) announced that committee agents would serve a subpoena today on J. M. Quinn, executive vice president of the Jackson State National Bank, for an appearance here Monday.

George Meader, committee counsel, said that Quinn, in a telephone conversation with him yesterday afternoon, said he recently had suffered a heart attack and that his doctor might forbid such a long trip.

QUINN'S NAME WAS brought into the investigation late yesterday by Forrest Jackson, attorney for Bilbo in the senators' inquiry into Bilbo's relations with a group of war contractors on Mississippi Army airfields.

Jackson said that Quinn recently informed him that Terry had told the banker he would use alleged threats against his life as an excuse for not testifying in the investigation of his former boss. Jackson quoted Quinn as saying Terry explained also that his testimony might incriminate himself (Terry).

Meader said that Quinn made similar assertions yesterday when he telephoned Quinn at his bank.

Quinn told Meader, the latter said, that he did not believe his doctor would sanction a journey to Washington but if legally summoned and I am physically able to come, I would have to come."

Sen. Ferguson (R., Mich.) asked that Quinn be allowed to come by rail, and made the additional request that Quinn bring Terry's bank records with him. The request was granted.

MEANWHILE FBI AGENTS were searching for Terry, who asked in a letter to the committee to be excused from testifying because of asserted death threats against hi mand his family.

Terry, long-time political associate of Theodore G. Bilbo, told the Senate war investigating committee in a letter made public yesterday that anonymous callers had threatened to kill him, his wife and his daughter if he spoke out in any way against his former boss.

The Senate committee is digging into complaints that Bilbo accepted $30,000 in cash, a new home and other expensive gifts in return for his efforts in behalf of various war contractors who shared in some $26,000,000 worth of construction work in Mississippi.

Terry left Bilbo's employ January. In his letter read into the record, Terry told Chairman Mead that on Oct. 31 a person he did not know telephoned him at Meridian that "I would pay with my life" if he had anything to do with the investigation of Bilbo then in progress in Mississippi. This was an inquiry by the Senate campaign committee into charges that Bilbo had intimidated Negro voters.

Mississippi Shame:

The Worker New York, N.Y.

'Pride of the South'

Sun. 12-8-46

By Matt Magee

JACKSON, Miss.—Toward the end of the first day's hearing of the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee, which is to determine whether U.S. Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, in urging the white populace of Mississippi "to get them the night before," deprived the Negro people of their democratic right to vote in a free election, a Negro named Nathan Hodges of Meridian took the stand.

The day's testimony had been a tale of violence, of beatings, of pistol-waving deputy sheriffs, of intimidation and abuse. And now the puffy Senators were tired and shuffled their feet as Nathan Hodges told what, compared to the beating received by Negro veteran, Etoy Fletcher, seemed to be a mild abuse His ballot had been challenged and thrown out.

"Well," pouted Senator Styles Bridges, Republican of New Hampshire, "for whom would you have voted if you had been allowed to vote"?

Nathan Hodges shook his head. "I don't have to tell that," he said firmly. "That's a private matter."

The New Hampshire Senator hastily accepted his point. But the white spectators in the rear of the Federal courtroom exploded with surprise and indignation. For a moment their angry murmurs seethed, boiled and then died away. A Negro had asserted his democratic right to a white man—without being rebuffed.

IN A WEEK of testimony of violence, brutality and blood-stained shirts, in an atmosphere charged with race hatred, it might seem a small incident, a minor point. Yet it is important. For far more than Bilbo is on trial here. The white supremacy crowd are on trial with him—and they know it.

Also being determined here in this court-room adorned with the American flag and sound-tracked with the mean cackle of men who find it funny if a courageous Negro stumbles in his speech is what the attitude of the Negro people will be towards the Democratic party for the next few years.

That is why this is a remarkable time to be here in Jackson, in the heart of the Jimcrow South.

Jackson, the state capital, is a modern city of 45,000 people and the most industrialized city in Mississippi. Its people are the most literate, the most liberal, and the best educated in the state. They are proud people, proud of their growing industries and the sweet-smelling piney woods country lying nearby. They are proud of their air-conditioning, paved roads and modern stores. They are proud of Mississippi and a tarnished and deserted statue of Jeff Davis in the "old Capitol" with its forgotten memories of days when Negroes sat in its legislative halls and passed the first public school law Mississippi ever had.

BUT IT IS an uneasy pride today for they know, not only in Jackson but throughout the state, they are on trial before the people of U.S. They know they have been called a "disgrace" to the United States.

They know they are held in derisive contempt by the majority of the American people because they named a racial bigot their Senator, because they have abused and held in vicious servitude a million Negroes whose only sin is the blackness of their skin.

So they are whinning in the corridors, on the street corners, in the hotel lobbies, trying to explain and justify their conduct, seeking some kind of approval for their own special form of Nazism.

I have been here many times before and know their pride. It is tormenting their consciences now because they would like to be considered the finest people in United States and not a disgrace. Their pride is as much a part of them as an arm or leg. In a quite literal way they sometimes stand on it—rather than take an empty seat in the Jimcrow section of a crowded bus.

I mention it now because it is important if you are to grasp the drama that it is going on here, that is rocking Mississippi and the whole Deep South.

IT BEGINS each day when a runty, pot-bellied old man named Theodore G. Bilbo crawls out of a creaking old brass bed in a second-rate hotel and wipes from his lips the crusted saliva that drools constantly from his infected mouth.

He could afford a better bed, a better hotel. But he stops at the Royal out of a well-publicized loyalty to the man who owns it and who gave him credit when he was starting his obscene career thirty years ago.

Later, after a breakfast of milk and soft-boiled eggs, he waddles down State Street to the Federal Courthouse, being waved to and patted admiringly by Mississippians who, seeing and remembering his loyalty to the Royal, are somehow reassurred and grateful, even though he has brought them some of their disgrace.

But a Negro school girl, passing him on the street, did an interesting thing. She put her hand over her eyes and walked straight by, as thugh she were shutting him out of her life.

The trial itself is at times farcical, an open travesty of justice. The chairman of the investigators is Senator Ellender of Louisiana, whose views on the Negro do not differ from Bilbo's beyond the correct "thank you" he coldly murmurs after each witnesses' testimony.

Two other Democrats are on the committee, Burnet R. Maybank, from the Jimcrow state of South Carolina, who voted against FEPC, and Senator Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma who voted for FEPC. And then there are the two Republicans—Senator Bridges and Senator Bourke Hickenlooper, who are completely reactionary and interested in the Negro only because they want his vote.

AND THEN THERE is the superb courage of the Negroes taking their lives in their hands, amidst the sniekers and the supercharged hatred of the courtroom to tell you how they were beaten. A Gulfport man was beaten by the police because he came to the polls. A Congregational minister was chased from the Madison County courthouse by a pistol-threatening deputy. A Negro war veteran was flogged by four white men with a cable.

One after another, over two hundred have appeared. Not all have had a story of violence. Some were merely threatened, others were refused, other had their ballots destroyed. But the result in every case is the same: they were not permitted to vote, a situation which Secretary of State Byrnes could find very alarming in any part of Europe but not in his own Deep Suuth.

Bilbo listens, grinning, chewing his cigar, and repeating again and again, "I have done no wrong. I haven't been connected with any of these things. I haven't said anything or done anything that I haven't said in the Senate and will say again."

But this will not end regardless of whether or not Bilbo is okayed by his friends in the Senate investigating committee. The important thing is that for the first time in over half a century the Negro people, who constitute 52 percent of Mississippi's population, have had a chance to stand up and demand their democratic rights.

BILBO IS the best known man in Mississippi. Thousands of white men voted against him, though they still share his views toward the Negro.

They will tell you of reports that he got money from war contractors, that he ruined the state's finances as Governor, that he had accepted a bribe in the state legislature, that he was involved in the seduction of a secretary, that he occupied himself with bawdy-house lechery until his wife divorced him.

But they voted for him because he stands for what they believe to be the "only" way to treat the Negro. Yet they are ashamed of it, embarrassed and tormented by guilt. They yearn desperately for a word of praise, a word of agreement not only about their treatment of the Negro, but about anything in Mississippi. They don't like to be responsible for the "disgrace of the United States Senate."

They want to be the finest people in America.

Fair Play for Marcantonio

Times-Dispatch

UNLESS there are good and sufficient reasons to justify so drastic a procedure, the new House of Representatives should be reluctant to entertain a motion to deny a seat to VITO MARCANTONIO, of New York, who has been reelected for his sixth consecutive term—and whom THE TIMES-DISPATCH despises.

REPRESENTATIVE JOHN E. RANKIN, of Mississippi on Wednesday announced that such a move would be made when the new House convenes on January 3. It would be equally reasonable to bar RANKIN from the House because his views are obnoxious to so many Americans.

MARCANTONIO, whose radicalism is anathema to us and to all but extreme leftists, ran on both the Labor party and the Democratic tickets, and was elected. MR. RANKIN told the Associated Press that MARCANTONIO'S right to a seat would be challenged on a basis of the latter's "political affiliations and activities." He did not state what specific political affiliations and activities he considers sufficient grounds for a challenge.

There are ugly rumors that the fatal beating of a poll worker for FREDERICK BRYAN, the Republican candidate, highlighted a "reign of terror and intimidation" to discourage Republican voters. That charge is now being probed by the House Campaign Investigating Committee, headed by REPRESENTATIVE PERCY PRIEST, a Tennessee Democrat. If the investigation reveals any evidence pointing toward conscious consent on the part of MARCANTONIO, such evidence would be sufficient to justify a challenge.

If, on the other hand, no such evidence exists, nor evidence of other election irregularity, a Republican majority attempt to bar the New York Congressman would be in the nature of a political purge—for purely partisan reasons—a "ganging up" on the lone representative of the American Labor party.

Richmond, Va.

Such action would be in violation of the American code of fair play which permits freedom of opinion within our legislative halls, even when that opinion sails, as MR. MARCANTONIO'S does, directly down the Communist party line. A legally elected representative of any legitimate political party should fully enjoy his right to make himself heard, even when his opinions are unpopular and, in the opinion of the majority of his colleagues, "un-American."

Sat. 11-30-46

Such expression of opinion can, in fact, serve a valuable function in revealing the extent to which pro-Communist sentiment exists within our own country, and thus provide a danger signal enabling us to take such protective measures as occasion may demand.

Down in Mississippi, they don't believe at all in the GOP campaign slogan—"Had enough?" At least, not according to Felix T. Newton, Hattiesburg, Miss., contractor who gave Sen. Bilbo four checks totaling $25,000, but who says that Mississippi would reelect "The Man" all over again.

"Furthermore," drawls the bulky Mississippi contractor, "if Sen. Ferguson (of Michigan) and these other sonofabitches up here think $25,000 was heavy sugar to give to Bilbo to help Doxey, let them wait and see how much real dough we raise down in the Magnolia State if it becomes necessary for Bilbo to run again. 'White Supremacy' Racket

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

THE "white supremacy" racket sure has been paying handsome returns to Sen. Bilbo. He is the gent who has been getting himself elected Senator in Mississippi by the simple device of terrorizing his opponents away from the polls.

The leering lynch advocate has been having some of his private deals exposed before a Senate Committee. It turns out money has been rolling into his pockets. War contractors have delivered "gifts" to their senatorial friend and, as if by magic, they found themselves rewarded by profitable contracts —war contracts. Wed. 12-18-46

Sen. Bilbo's patriotism was of the kind that did not hesitate to mix his private advantage with government affairs during wartime.

We can't say we're surprised, frankly.

Our experience has been that where you find a professional red-baiter and "white supremacy" racketeer, you find something crooked.

Bilbo matched his contempt for the Negro people with contempt for his public duties.

His "white supremacy" ravings were only a cover for private greed and corruption, as all race "supremacy" propaganda is a cover for somebody's profiteering and thievery.

Can there be any doubt left that Bilbo is unfit to sit in the Senate?

The evidence is in already.

With evidence in, Bilbo should go. No other verdict is decently possible.

CONTRARY to the expectations of the Committee chairman, the Ellender Senate Committee investigating Sen. Bilbo in Mississippi is finding the Negro people ready to brave terror and lynching in the fight for democratic rights. New York, N.Y. Thurs. 12-5-46

Dozens of witnesses have testified to the fact that Sen. Bilbo and his cohorts kept them away from the polls in the Democratic primaries by actual force or threat of force. Sen. Ellender, himself a Louisiana polltaxer, "predicted" before the hearing that only about two or three would show up.

The fact that the Negro people, with vets in front, are fighting back against Bilbo terror is both a sign and a result of new currents in the South.

The Fight Against Bilbo

Two senate committees are investigating his evil record. While there is a chance that one of these committees may try a whitewash, the opportunity is good for striking a blow against Ku Kluxism. New York, N.Y.

No doubt, the GOP leaders in the Senate, for their own partisan political reasons, are not averse to taking action against Bilbo even if he is a political ally. Thurs

But they cannot be depended upon to carry the fight to a finish unless there is powerful popular intervention.

The people should take over the fight to unseat Bilbo. The nation's anti-Bilbo sentiment should be directed at this moment to the chairmen of the two senate investigating committees, Sens. Allen J. Senator Tells Inquiry He Never Urged Unlawful Means to Bar Negroes From Primary

By HAROLD B. HINTON

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

JACKSON, Miss., Dec. 5 — Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo denied to the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee today that he had incited violence or racial hatreds during his primary campaign last spring. On July 2, he was nominated for his third term as United States Senator, winning by a majority of about 3,800 over four opponents. Fri. 12-6-46

The senior Senator's own testimony was the high point of the closing day of the committee's hearing here, and the Federal court room was filled to overflowing when he took the stand. A goodly number of Negroes, who had been following the proceedings from day to day, was absent when he testified.

Sen. Allen J. Ellender, Democrat, of Louisiana, declared the hearings closed soon after Mr. Bilbo left the stand. There was every indication that the committee would recommend that he be sworn in and take his seat in the Senate on Jan. 3. Mr. Ellender said he would be "disappointed if the report is not unanimous."

The committee came to Jackson to investigate complaints signed by fifty Mississippians charging that Mr. Bilbo had been elected as a result of wholesale intimidation of Negro voters and asking that his election be declared illegal and void.

Bilbo Reads Denial Statement

"I specifically deny," Senator Bilbo said in the formal statement he read to the committee, "that if there were or appeared to have been any incidents of attacks, acts of violence, or intimidation against any Negro resident or any qualified Negro elector of Mississippi, they were committed as a result of anything that was said or done by me during the campaign for the senatorial nomination in the election of July 2, 1946, nor were they attributable to or occasioned by any act or utterance on my part during the campaign."

Since Monday, when the hearings began, the committee has heard more than fifty Negroes testify that they were prevented from registering or voting either by force, intimidation or persuasion, or had been afraid to attempt to register or vote. Five of them told of being beaten because, they said, they had tried to vote. All of these witnesses attributed their plight to racial tensions induced by Mr. Bilbo's campaign speeches.

Only two white witnesses appeared to corroborate this estimate of the situation. One was a Roman Catholic priest who is pastor of a Negro church in Pass Christian. The other was a rabbi from Vicksburg.

"I deny that such election was achieved by force, violence, or the use of criminal, extra-legal or illegal tactics," Mr. Bilbo's tsatement said, "or in wanton disrespect or disregard or in derogation of the rights, privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States under the United States Constitution, particularly, the Fifteenth Amendment thereof."

Says He Once Joined Klan

He repeated his previous admissions of former membership in the Ku Klux Klan, and said he had attended only one meeting of the organization, when it was first formed. He said the Klan he joined had been out of existence twenty-five years.

Most of the interrogation of Mr Bilbo was conducted by Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper, Republican, of Iowa.

Mr. Bilbo conceded that the bill of complaint's quotations from newspaper and magazine articles were accurate in the main, with one important exception. He said that everytime reference was made to his recommendations that white Mississippians use every means to keep Negroes from the polls on July 2, the writers omitted the word "lawful." He contended he had never advocated any but legal methods to keep Negroes from voting.

Among the quotations which he agreed were substantially correct were these:

"I'm a damn good lawyer. I've defended people in eleven murder cases in my life and got them off free. How I did it is my business."

"The white people of Mississippi are sleeping on a volcano and it is left up to you red-blooded men to do something about it. The white men of this State have a right to resort to any means at their command to stop it."

"If there is a single man or woman serving in this important office (circuit clerk, who acts as registrar) who cannot think up questions enough to disqualify undesirables, then write Bilbo or any good lawyer and there are a hundred good questions that can be furnished."

Fists Swing As Senators Beard Bilbo

Ex-Congressman Kicks Recumbent Figure Of A Testifying Deacon

Session Adjourns

But One War Contractor Tells Of Checks He Paid To Mississippi Senator

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13—(AP)—The Senate inquiry into Senator Theodore G. Bilbo's dealings with war contractors recessed in tumult today when former Representative Ross Collins, of Mississippi, knocked a witness out of his chair and rained kicks and blows upon him.

The witness, Robert Gandy, Baptist church deacon, insurance man and political associate of Bilbo's, had been testifying about an arrangement under which, he said, part of a $25,000 campaign contribution by a war contractor was to have been paid to Collins.

Calling Gandy a "damn liar," Collins rushed. He upset the witness chair. Gandy sprawled on the floor and Collins began pounding and kicking him.

Capitol police moved in, warded off Collins and assisted Gandy to his feet. On motion of Senator Ferguson (R), Michigan, the Senate war investigating subcommittee then recessed the hearing. Sat. 12-14-46

Gandy said he suffered only a sprained wrist.

Earlier in the hearing Felix T. Newton, a Mississippi war contractor, testified that he paid $25,000 to Bilbo, Mississippi Senator, as a contribution to the unsuccessful Senate campaign of Wall Doxey in 1942. Doxey is now Senate sergeant-at-arms.

"You tell us that you were giving $25,000 to have Wall Doxey elected as United States Senator so he would be for you in the future?" demanded Ferguson.

"Yes." Newton replied.

Gandy Cashed Checks

Gandy said that he cashed the checks for the $25,000 after endorsing his name below Bilbo's.

Gandy testified that he was treasurer of an "informal committee" trying to elect Doxey. He said Bilbo was a member of the committee.

Gandy related that Bilbo came to Doxey's hotel headquarters in Jackson and asked him to cash the checks.

"Did he ask you to get the money in small denominations, five and ten dollar bills?" Ferguson asked.

"I can't just remember," Gandy replied.

However, President William M. Mounger, of the Jackson bank, where the checks were cashed, testified that Gandy had asked for $10 and $20 bills. Mounger agreed that $25,000 in these bills made quite a bulky package.

"It would take a mighty big pocket to hold them," he said.

Gandy explained that he and others were "working day and night on the campaign" and that the $25,000 was badly needed in a run-off election.

In the original primary, Doxey led former Representative Collins and Rolland Wall but lost in the run-off primary to Senator Eastland.

Ferguson insisted that Gandy explain exactly what was done with the money.

Gandy said he delivered it to Bilbo in the hotel suite which served as headquarters for the informal Doxey campaign group.

Ferguson asked what Bilbo did with it.

"He disbursed it," Gandy said. "He started disbursing it right there."

Gandy explained that he and Forrest Jackson, Bilbo's attorney at the current hearing, had borrowed $7,500 from a Hattiesburg, Miss., bank to finance some of the committee's activities, and that $7,500 of the $25,000 went to Jackson. He said another $1,000 went to Leland Speed, mayor of Jackson, Miss., to repay another loan. The Advertiser

Gandy said the second or run-off primary was coming up, there were some candidates eliminated in the first primary to be dealt with, and some "manipulating" had to be done.

"You mean you had to pay off the defeated candidates?" Ferguson asked. Montgomery, Ala.

The audience rocked with laughter as Gandy rejoined: "Senator, you haven't been down in Mississippi in an election, have you?" Sat. 12-14-46

Ferguson and Chairman Mead (D), New York, asked Gandy to interpret his personal account book on the Doxey campaign.

"Well we paid one gentleman $1,000," he began slowly.

"What was it? What was his name?" Ferguson and Mead shouted.

"Why do you hesitate?" Ferguson asked.

Gandy, silent for a moment, attempted to explain that in Mississippi primary winners usually help losers meet "election deficits" in return for support in run-off elections.

"Probably the last loser in the runoff is the only loser," Senator Mead put in. "Nobody can pay him off."

Gandy agreed, adding that Doxey supporters still were meeting the deficit of his unsuccessful 1942 campaign.

Ferguson pressed Gandy for the name of the primary loser who got $7,500.

"You make it pretty hard for us fellows who are not politicians to discuss this in public," Gandy said, and then testified that payments of $7,500 went to Roland Wall.

Ferguson then wanted to know if Gandy had agreed to pay Ross Collins any money.

Gandy said that he, Bilbo, and Jackson met Collins and three Collins supporters for a "conference" about an "operating deficit."

Gandy said "Cecil Travis, Charlie Snow and George Butler" accompanied Collins and that Collins and Bilbo "exchanged greetings."

Gandy said that in the last 40 years Collins and Bilbo "at times had been the closest of friends and the bitterest of enenmies."

"Did you talk money?" Ferguson asked.

Gandy said that Travis was designated by Collins to work out details of the "operating deficit."

Little headway had been made when the hearing was recessed late today until Monday morning.

Mr. Bilbo, invited to take the stand during the day, declared that he "didn't get a damn dollar" of the money in question.

In the first three days of its hearings, the subcommittee heard testimony that F. A. Newton, a contractor of Hattiesburg, Miss., gave Mr. Bilbo drafts amounting to $25,000 as a contribution to the campaign fund to win for former Senator Wall Doxey the Senatorial nomination in 1942. The drafts were cashed and the proceeds, in ten and twenty-dollar bills, were taken to a room in the Royal Hotel in Jackson, Miss., and given to Senator Bilbo.

That is as far as the testimony has agreed. Senator Homer Ferguson, Republican, of Michigan, interrogated witness after witness on the disposition of the money, without success. At one point today, where the testimony seemed to be hopelessly contradictory, he invited Senator Bilbo to take the stand. This was when Mr. Bilbo made his denial.

"I will give you a written statement at the conclusion," Senator Bilbo told the hearing after having said that it was the truth that "I didn't get a damned dollar."

Mississippi political enmities were involved in the testimony of the witnesses. Robert Gandy, who was knocked from the witness stand yesterday by Ross Collins, former Representative and unsuccessful candidate for the Senate both in 1942 and 1946, told the subcommittee that the Collins organization received $11,000 from him and from Senator Bilbo and Forrest B. Jackson, Mr. Bilbo's lawyer, to support Mr. Doxey in the run-off primary in 1942.

Three candidates, of whom Mr. Collins was one, had been eliminated in the first primary on Aug. 25. In the decisive run-off election held on Sept. 15, James O. Eastland defeated Mr. Doxey and is now the junior senator from Mississippi. The Times

Mr. Gandy, along with Mr. Bilbo and Mr. Jackson, set up what Mr. Gandy called an "informal committee" to back Mr. Doxey's candidacy in the run-off. This body had no connection with Mr. Doxey's authorized campaign committee, of which Lee Hall was manager.

No Overall Records Kept

The "informal committee" received contributions which Mr. Jackson estimated at "less than $100,000," including the $25,000 from Mr. Newton. Mr. Gandy and Mr. Jackson said that the money was spent, often faster than it came in, for what were considered legitimate campaign expenses in Mississippi and for which no overall records were kept.

"We would like to keep Mississippi politics out of this and get the facts," Mr. Ferguson said at one time. New York, N.Y. Sun.

"They are inseparable," Mr. Gandy replied.

He and Mr. Jackson testified seated side by side. Mr. Jackson said that the $25,000 from Mr. Newton and the other contributions were all put into the pot and disbursed under "the frenzied finance" which the witnesses said was inevitable in Mississippi run-off primaries. 12-13-46

A good deal of the money, Mr. Jackson told the subcommittee, went to hire automobiles to transport voters from the war projects on which they were working, in such places as Gulfport, Meridian and Laurel, back to their homes to vote. He recalled that in 1942 automobiles and gasoline were scarce and that the transportation problem was a serious political consideration.

Tells of Paying 'Losers'

The largest single expenses, however, were devoted to the purpose of swinging over supporters of the three losers in the first primary to vote for Mr. Doxey in the run-off. Mr. Gandy said that the Collins organization got $11,000 for this purpose, and Roland J. Wall, another unsuccessful contender, $8,000.

On the stand yesterday, Mr. Gandy had appeared about to say that Mr. Collins himself got the $11,000. Just before he reached that statement, if he intended to make it under Mr. Ferguson's questioning, Mr. Collins knocked him from the witness stand and broke up the hearing.

On resuming the stand this morning, Mr. Gandy made it clear that he had never meant to intimate that Mr. Collins received a single dollar. He told the Senators that he paid the money to Cecil F. Travis, Jackson lawyer and political supporter of Mr. Collins, in five installments.

Mr. Travis, he said, had been designated by Mr. Collins to make the financial arrangements for covering the Collins "operating deficit" resulting from his unsuccessful campaign. Later in the day Mr. Collins denied that he had any deficit or that he had received any money from the Bilbo group.

Collins Questions 'Practice'

Mr. Ferguson asked him whether it were the usual custom in Mississippi primary contests for the two winners of the first race to attract support of the losers by paying their "operating deficits."

"I have been defeated in primaries," Mr. Collins said, "and I have never taken a penny from anyone to pay any deficit, real or imaginary. I should not like to think it is the usual custom in Mississippi. It is a very reprehensible practice."

Mr. Wall, on the other hand, admitted cheerfully that he had received $5,500 of the $8,000 the Bilbo group promised him for his support for Mr. Doxey. Asked whether this sum were to cover his "operating deficit," he replied that "a rose by any other name would smell as sweet."

"I didn't know a thing about this $25,000," he said. "If I had, I wouldn't have sold myself as short as I did."

Mr. Travis partly cleared the confusion surrounding the testimony in regard to Mr. Collins by saying that he had taken the $11,000 from Mr. Gandy to build up the former Collins county organizations to work for Mr. Doxey in the second primary. He said that the sum was reached by calculating $100 for each of the State's eighty-two counties, plus $3,000 for general expenses.

The whole sum, he testified, he turned over to Phil Kimball, a dealer in building supplies, for distribution to the county managers and other field workers. Mr. Kimball died about a year ago.

Letter of Apology Is Read

At the beginning of today's session Senator James M. Mead, Democrat, of New York, chairman of the subcommittee, read a written apology by Mr. Collins for hitting Mr. Gandy yesterday.

"I take a fierce pride in my reputation, not only in Mississippi but elsewhere," he wrote. "It is difficult for a man to sit idly by and hear another man, by insinuation, innuendo and cheap humor, besmirch him and seek, in a few moments, to tear down a reputation which is the product of a lifetime." 12-16-46

Mr. Doxey testified that he knew nothing of the Newton $25,000 contribution until some time after his defeat, when the contractor told him of it at a dinner in Washington.

"I said 'Goodness, gracious,'" he told the committee. "Well, I probably didn't say 'Goodness, gracious.' What I actually said was, 'The hell you say.'"

Mr. Hall, Mr. Doxey's campaign manager, said that the Newton contribution had not been included in his report to the State of Mississippi under its Corrupt Practices Act, at the request of the contractor.

Negroes Defy Bilbo Gang; Continue Testimony in Probe

By Mary Southard

JACKSON, Miss., Dec. 3.—A heroic procession of Negro witnesses, coming voluntarily without protection of subpena from all over Mississippi, continued to file to the witness stand in Federal Court today to testify against Senator Bilbo before a Senate Investigating Committee.

Sitting only a few yards from the witness chair was Senator Bilbo himself, listening closely to testimony. He was surrounded by his legal staff, which has been granted power to present questions to the Committee for cross-examination of witnesses.

Courageous young Negro veteran, Richard Daniel, came all way from Gulfport at a risk to his personal safety to describe brutal treatment suffered on election day, July 2. Daniel was struck on the head by two election officials, later arrested by a policeman, who took him to City Hall and beat him into unconsciousness.

Daniel exhibited to the Committee and the crowded courtroom his blood-stained clothes as evidence of the brutal attack. He was tried and convicted in Gulfport of "drunkenness and disorderly conduct." Senator Bridges recommended the Committee impound Daniel's clothing as evidence.

Daniel was one of more than a score of young Negro veterans who braved a gamut of Mississippi anti-Negro mobs and many months of intensified intimidation to fight on the witness stand for the right to vote.

It was brought out in testimony that at Meridian, ten veterans were refused the right to place ballots in a ballot box, and were told that all Negro ballots were being challenged and put in separate envelopes. At Greenville, 20 veterans attempted to register and get poll-tax exemption receipts and were told by the county clerk that "if you recite the Constitution backwards, it won't be satisfactory to me" and that he wasn't going to stick his neck out to register Negroes.

Louis Miles, young GI student from Jackson College and chairman of the Mississippi American Veterans Committee, said he had reports from all over the state that Negro veterans had been intimidated and kept from regis-ing by hatred created by Bilbo's inflammatory campaign speeches.

A number of witnesses refused registration by Circuit Clerks placed direct blame on Bilbo's speech, reported in the Jackson Daily News of May 28, in which he stated:

"If there is a single man or woman serving in this important office (Circuit Clerk) who cannot think up questions enough to disqualify 'undesirables' then write Bilbo or any good lawyer and there are a hundred good questions which can be furnished."

Father George Strype, white priest from Pass Christian, testified that 82 Negro veterans who had voted in the June municipal elections were kept from voting in the July Primary by decision of the local electoral board, all good friends of Bilbo, who had stated that voting of Negroes at this town was "one of most damnable demonstrations of demagogery in our Southland."

MET WITH PISTOL

Dr. William Bender, Negro minister from Tougaloo College, testified he had been kept from the polls on election day by two white men who told him "we're not letting N-----s vote today" and by another white man who met him at the polling place with a pistol.

Evidence was expanded by testimony of Joseph Parham, who last voted in 1898 and was told by a sheriff on election day, "You're too old to get into trouble trying to vote" after white men insolently asked him "what kind of flowers do you want?"

The Investigating Committee has so far refused to use powers of subpoena to protect prosecution witnesses, but has announced it will subpoena Circuit Clerks, election officials, all of whom will be Bilbo witnesses.

Bilbo Ex-Secretary To Testify Today Despite Threats

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15. — Edward P. Terry, who claims he was warned under pain of death not to testify, appears before a Senate War Investigating Committee tomorrow to take up the elusive trail of $25,000 which a war contractor allegedly paid over to Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo (D-Miss).

Bilbo is accused of accepting the money and other gifts in 1942-43 in exchange for his influence in obtaining lush war contracts. His answer is that he "didn't get a damned dollar" and that he'll prove it when all the evidence is in.

The right to his Senate seat may be the stake.

Terry said from his hospital bed that his testimony will "strike a telling blow" and "have definite bearing on Bilbo's political future."

QUIT BILBO

He quit Bilbo a year ago and also resigned as Clerk of the Senate District of Columbia Committee which Bilbo heads. No reasons were given. Last week, soon after the Bilbo hearing started, the Senate probers were electrified by reports that Terry and his entire family had been threatened with death.

Substance of testimony so far is that Bilbo got the $25,000 from Felix T. Newton, Hattiesburg, Miss., contractor, to aid the unsuccessful Senatorial campaign of Wall Doxey, who is now Senate Sergeant-at-Arms.

Politician Takes Punch at Witness Telling of Pay-Off in Mississippi

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga. Sat. 12-14-46

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13—(UP) Ross Collins, 66-year-old Mississippi political leader, threw a punch Friday at a witness testifying at the Senate War Investigating Committee's inquiry into charges that Sen. Bilbo, Democrat, Mississippi had accepted money and other gratuities from war contractors.

The blow, directed at Robert Gandy, Jackson, Miss., insurance man who was telling the story of how politics are run in Mississippi—sometimes, he said, by paying unsuccessful candidates' expenses—failed to land squarely.

But Gandy, a much younger man, was bowled over and he and the witness chair crashed to the floor.

As Capitol policemen grabbed Collins to restrain him, Sen. Mead, Democrat, New York, hurriedly recessed hearings until Saturday.

Gandy was giving the committee an intimate picture of Mississippi politics. Just a moment earlier the committee had invited Collins, a former congressman, who apparently is hard of hearing, to take a front row seat. Collins did so, and was close to Gandy.

Collins, one of Bilbo's opponents in last Spring's Democratic primary, had been occupying a rear row seat as Gandy told of the "installment" plan of paying off the debts of defeated primary candidates to gain their support for the second primary.

Gandy said a few words of greeting as Collins sat down near him.

A moment later Collins' unexpected attack came. It was the climax of a day of dramatics in which:

1. F. T. Newton, a Hattiesburg, Miss., contractor testified that in 1942 he gave Bilbo checks for $25,000 ostensibly to aid the Senatorial campaign of Wall Doxey of Mississippi, who now is Senate sergeant-at-arms.

2. Another contractor testified that he had donated $500 to the construction fund of the "in-the Poplarville, Miss., Baptist Church on the representation that it was a "good thing to do" since Bilbo considered it a worthy charity" 3. The Senate subcommittee is sued a subpoena for the appearance next Monday of J. Marvin Quin, Vice President of the State National Bank, of Jackson, Miss.,

to tell what he knows about Bilbo's former secretary, Edward P. Terry, who is missing and whose whereabouts are being checked by the FBI.

How Bilbo's Pals Kept Negroes from Voting

The Worker New York, N.Y.

By Mary Southard

JACKSON, Miss.—The low, even voice of a Negro shoe repairman from Greenwood filled Federal Court here with the story of how Negroes were terrorized away from the polls in Mississippi's July 22 primary. Of an estimated potential Negro electorate of 500,000, only about 2,500 managed to exercise their franchise.

The Negro, brought in under subpoena to testify before the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee probing the reelection by a slim plurality of Sen. Theodore G. "The Man" Bilbo, was J. D. Collins, chairman of the Greenwood district of the Mississippi State Progressive Voters League. Sun. 12-8-46

Collins related how Mayor Allen Saffold and three of his "white supremacy" cronies of Greenwood county seat of Leflore County (population: 14,394 whites and 38,970 Negroes), met three weeks before election day. The Mayor's cohorts were Shelby Steele, a big seven-foot insurance man; attorney Means Johnson and another unidentified white attorney.

THESE FOUR called in Collins and a friend, Negro taxicab driver and service station operator A. C. Montgomery, and gave them a list of the Negroe veterans in the Mississippi Delta town. The two Negroes were told to contact the others and warn them not to attempt to vote

They didn't vote, Collins related, as his emotion-filled voice rose and fell, but remained constantly intelligible in this room filled with Bilbo followers who seize every trip or blunder as an occasion for laughter and fun-poking.

"The city officials called me in," he said. "They said there had never been any disturbance in the city before and they didn't want any. They said Mr. Bilbo had made some threatening speeches. They said five of us could vote but there would be trouble if the others tried to.

"They wanted me to go around and say because Senator Bilbo's speeches caused such restlessness it might be bad for us. Neither of us wanted the job."

THEN CAME the day's revealing remark from committee chairman Allen J. Ellender (D-La), who, in five words, expressed his attitude toward the right of Negroes to vote:

"Did you perform your duty?" he asked Collins.

But the question was quickly reworded to state, "Did you go around and see these people?"

Collins did, under pressure from the white supremacists, and his testimony was borne out by other Negro witnesses, who came forward from the Jimcrow section at the rear.

One, Louis Redd, 39-year-old Negro veteran, was on the list. He said Collins told him of the confab with the white officials and showed him his name on the list, advising him not to try to cast his ballot for fear of recriminations.

"He being the leader (chairman of the Voters League), I took his advice," Redd said.

The tales of beatings and intimidations went on through the week. Two young Negro witnesses testified they had been beaten at polling places on election day. Another told how he had been taken to the woods and beaten when he tried to register.

NUMBERS TOLD how they had been refused registration by Circuit Clerks who said, "This is a white man's primary and we don't want n . . . .' to vote."

Only two white witnesses have appeared thus far to testify against Bilbo—a Catholic priest from Gulfport, who reported 82 Negro veterans had voted in the municipal election there in June and then were barred from the polls in the primary; and a Jewish rabbi from Vicksburg, who testified to the state of fear produced among potential Negro voters by Bilbo's ranting speeches.

The main force of the anti-Negro campaign here was directed against the 60,000 Negro veterans who were exempt from polltax payments. This vote alone would have been sufficient, if cast in strength, to wipe out Bilbo's plurality of 3,824 votes.

Chairman Ellender, in attempting to lead witnesses to state that a "white primary" was the accustomed pattern in the South, has tried to absolve Bilbo of wrong by implying "The Man's" conduct of his campaign had no effect on the potential Negro vote. 12-8-46

No member of the committee has stated for the record that a "white primary" is unlawful or that depriving Negroes of ballots is a violation of the 15th amendment to the Constitution.

Bilbo Says Place In Roll Call to Prevent Republicans From Barring Him In Senate

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

He'll Be Second To Take Oath

Mon. 12-16-46

Washington, Dec. 15 (AP)—Senator Bilbo (D., Miss.) predicted confidently today the Republicans will be unable to bar him when the new Senate convenes January 3.

Republican strategists agreed privately that regardless of the outcome of a current inquiry by the Senate War Investigating Committee into what happened to $25,000 a war contractor gave Bilbo in 1942, the prediction probably is correct. But they vowed that if they are defeated in the first round, they will press further efforts to unseat the senator.

Bilbo told a reporter he is satisfied "they can't stop me at the door."

"They haven't even got a scratch against me," he declared, adding:

"Besides, alphabetically, my name is Bilbo."

There, said Republicans who have been studying the situation, is the rub.

When the Senate meets to begin swearing in new members, the Democrats still will be in control, with Secretary Leslie Biffle in the chair. Holdover Democrats outnumber holdover Republicans 30 to 29 after the death today of Senator Bailey (D., N. C.).

If precedents are followed, new members will be sworn in alphabetically, with Senator-elect Raymond E. Baldwin (R., Conn.) first on the list. That would make the count 30 Democrats and 30 Republicans when Bilbo comes up second.

Expect Terry to Testify.

Even if they get some Democratic votes or are aided by absences on the side, Bilbo's opponents fear they might lose some Republican votes.

Meanwhile, Chairman Mead (D., N. Y.) said he expects Edward Terry, Bilbo's former secretary, to be available tomorrow to tell the War Investigating Subcommittee what he knows about the involved financial transactions the group is investigating.

Terry, who has been in a Quitman, Miss., hospital, has reported anonymous threats against his life if he testified in any manner against his former employer.

Mississippi Officials Admit They Barred Negroes From Voting

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

By Mary Southard

JACKSON, Miss., Dec. 4.—The whole rotten structure of Mississippi political life was being exposed today as witnesses took the stand in Federal Court here before a Senate Campaign Committee investigating charges against Senator Bilbo. Thurs. 12-5-46

A number of county officials, in a brazen matter-of-fact manner, admitted on the witness stand discriminatory treatment of Negro applicants for registration as voters. A sheriff stated he had advised Negroes not to attempt to vote in the recent primary.

A Circuit Clerk said he had put harder questions to Negro registrants with the purpose of denying them registration, in spite of the fact that Mississippi law requires only that an applicant shall be able to read and write the Constitution or interpret it when read to him.

Two Negro members of the Progressive Voters League testified that the Mayor and three leading white citizens of Greenwood, Delta community, has presented them with a list of 32 qualified Negro voters, and urged them to contact these voters and advise them not to appear at polls on election day "to avoid trouble."

J. D. Collins, a Negro witness, stated that most of 207 Negro veterans in Greenwood would have voted except for the intimidating speeches of Bilbo.

Witness after witness attested to the eager desire of Negro veterans to vote in the Primary. A body of Negro veterans estimated at 60,000, exempt from poll taxes and able to meet literacy requirements, constitutes an entirely new political force in Mississippi and bore the main brunt of violence and intimidation.

SLM PLURALITY

Bilbo won election by a slim plurality of 3,824 votes and Negro votes cast in spite of Bilbo's incitement are estimated at 2,500. Had only one-ten of the potential vote of Negro veterans been cast, Bilbo would have been forced into a run-off and faced with united opposition, it appears.

Rev. C. M. Eiland, Negro minister of Louisville, testified that two white men stopped him at polls July 2 when he declared he was a reputable citizen whose father had paid taxes for 50 years, he himself for 20 years. They told him, "We don't want these colored soldiers boys to vote and if we let you into the polling precinct, they'll want to come too."

In spite of conciliatory conduct on the part of Senator Ellender, chairman of the Committee, who repeatedly attempts to lead witnesses to state that keeping Negroes from voting in primaries is a common pattern in Mississippi, evidence is piling into the record showing Bilbo won election by illegal conduct of Circuit Clerks and a campaign of intimidation on a statewide scale. 12-5-46

Hickenlooper Not So Sure of Bilbo Whitewash

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Sen. Bourke Hickenlooper (R., Ia.), engineering Republican anti-Bilbo action, said yesterday there is no assurance of a unanimous committee vote to clear the Mississippi Senator of charges of intimidating Negro voters. PM

Hickenlooper, member of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee which conducted hearings in Mississippi, said he had not made up his mind, although Chairman Allen V. Ellender (D., La.) had predicted a unanimous decision in Sen. Theodore Bilbo's favor. The committee will meet next Monday to consider its report.

Hickenlooper declared that "Republicans are not engaged in any plot" to keep Bilbo from taking his seat in the next Congress. Hickenlooper, member of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee which conducted hearings in Mississippi, said he had not made up his mind, although Chairman Allen V. Ellender (D., La.) had predicted a unanimous decision in Sen. Theodore Bilbo's favor. The committee will meet next Monday to consider its report.

"The question is not a partisan political issue, but rests entirely upon the propriety of the individual, regardless of what party he belongs to."

Meanwhile, attorneys for the Senate War Investigating Committee assembled witnesses, documents and photographic copies of bank accounts and war contracts preliminary to a second investigation involving Bilbo appearing here Thursday. Mon. PM

Congressman Slaughter Defeated by Negroes

The Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.
Sat. 8-17-46

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—(ANP)—Congresman Roger C. Slaughter, who killed the FEPC bill in the House Rules Committee last year, received the defeat that he deserved in the primary election Tuesday, Aug. 6, when Negro voters marched to the polls and cast their ballots against him.

Slaughter lost the Democratic nomination for congressman from Missouri's Fifth District to Enos A. Axtell, young lawyer who was endorsed by President Truman when he made public his "purge" on Slaughter.

Axtell, who polled 20,389 votes to Slaughter's 17,606, has pledged to support the FEPC bill if he is elected to Congress. He will run against Albert L. Reeves Jr., Republican, in November.

The election returns clearly show that it was the Negro vote which defeated Slaughter, and which won the nomination for Axtell. Axtell piled up a heavy majority in the First, Second, Third and Fourth Wards, where most of the Negro voters live, while Slaughter carried the ten Southside wards where the well-to-do whites and the "silk stocking" crowd who supported him live. Axtell carried only the first four wards, but his majority in those wards was sufficient to give him a 2,783 lead over Slaughter.

Axtell rode to victory over Slaughter with the support of the Negro voters, the Pendergast organization, the CIO Political Action Committee and, of course, with the backing of President Truman.

City Primary Voting Light; Marcantonio Fight Bitter

ALP Chairman's Battle to Win Place on 3 Tickets Waged Vigorously — Few Complaints Are Filed in Day

Wed. 8-21-46

By JAMES A. HAGERTY

Twelve Representatives in Congress—four Democrats, seven Republicans and one member of the American Labor party—faced contests in yesterday's primary election in New York State.

In the city, with slightly more than 2,000,000, qualified to vote in the party primaries, the vote, except in those districts having contests, was extremely light. It was not particularly heavy in the contested districts, except in the Eighteenth Congressional, where Representative Vito Marcantonio attempted to repeat his feat of two years ago by carrying both Democratic and Republican primaries, as well as that of the American Labor party.

From the time the polls opened at 3 o'clock in the afternoon until they closed at 10 in the evening there was a minimum of disorder and comparatively few complaints.

The Democratic Representatives whose renomination was contested are all from New York City Districts. Six up-State Republican Representatives and one in New York City had primary opposition. The one American Labor party Representative engaged in a primary contest was Mr. Marcantonio, New York County chairman of that party, who was unopposed for the Labor party nomination but sought also the endorsements of both major parties. Wed. 8-21-46

Of the comparatively few contests for legislative nominations, the one of outstanding interest was that of Irwin Steingut, Democratic leader of the Assembly, for renomination in the Eighteenth Brooklyn District against Paul Seiderman, former Assistant District Attorney.

There were contests for election as members of the Democratic State Committee in four Brooklyn Assembly districts, election carrying with it the district party leadership, and a Republican leadership contest in one Brooklyn district.

Of particular interest in New York City were the attempt of the Labor party and the CIO Political Action Committee in infiltrate into the major parties by influencing fights for Congressional nominations. New York Times

In the Eighteenth Congressional District, Mr. Marcantonio was opposed by Frederick V. P. Bryan for the Republican nomination and by Patrick J. Hannigan for the Democratic nomination.

Marcantonio Drive Vigorous

Mr. Marcantonio made a whirlwind tour of his district in a manner reminiscent of former Mayor Mayor La Guardia. He visited virtually every polling place and urged his supporters to get out every possible vote. N.Y.

"You can't win an election by sitting in a clubhouse," he said. "I am confident that the people of my districts will ratify my record with their votes."

Mr. Hannigan, a World War veteran and former policeman, predicted that 50 per cent of the 42,000 enrolled Democrats in the district would go to the polls.

"That spells victory for the only Democrat on the ticket," he said.

Mr. Bryan, who was accompanied by his mother when he voted at public school 77, First avenue and East Eighty-sixth street, predicted that he would win the Republican nomination.

Left wing influence also was a factor in the contest for the Republican nomination for Representative in the Seventeenth Congressional District. Joseph Clark Baldwin, Republican incumbent, was turned down for redesignation by the party organization, which designated State Senator Frederic R. Coudert Jr. Mr. Baldwin is unopposed for the Labor party nomination and tried unsuccessfully to get on the Democratic primary ballot as an opponent of Myron Sulzberger Jr., now the unopposed Tammany candidate.

Caudert Voices Confidence

Mr. Coudert, after voting at public school 6, 39 East Eighty-fifth Street, said he was entirely satisfied with the indications.

"The case is now before the Republican voters," he said. "I am entirely confident of the result."

Secretary of State Thomas J. Curran, New York County Republican chairman, predicted the nomination of both Senator Coudert and Mr. Bryan. Wed. 8-21-46

"There's no question at all that Coudert will win," Mr. Curran said, "and I am sure that Bryan will be successful too, since we have got a good break in the weather and are sure to get out a good vote. The only trouble is that many people are out of town. This is a terrible time to hold a primary election—right in the middle of the heaviest vacation season—but we can't make it any later and still get ballots overseas to soldiers who want to vote."

Another Democratic contest in which the Labor party is involved is that for nomination for Representatve i nthe Twenty-first Congressional District among Assemblyman Daniel Flynn, City Councilman Eugene P. Connolly, secretary of the County Committee of the American Labor party, and Norman S. Rein, backed by the present Democratic representative, James H. Torrens, whom Tammany turned down for designation. Mr. Flynn, organization designee, has charged that the candidacy of Mr. Connolly, unopposed for the Labor party nomination, represents an attempt of Mr. Marcantonio to gain control of the Democratic party in Manhattan.

Powell Seeks 3 Nominations

Wed. 8-21-46

In the Twenty-second Congressional District, Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. is unopposed for the Labor party nomination, but has Grant Reynolds, former Army chaplain, as an opponent for the Republican nomination and Harold E. Simmekjaer as an opponent for the Democratic nomination. Mr. Powell, enrolled as a Democrat, won all three legal party nominations two years ago.

The Labor party and the PAC also figure in the contest of Representative William B. Barry for renomination in the Democratic primary in the Fourth Congressional District in Queens. Mr. Barry incurred the displeasure of the PAC by his votes in Congress. He was opposed for the Democratic nomination by George H. Rooney, who was unopposed for the Labor party nomination.

In the Thirteenth Congressional District, Brooklyn, Representative Donald L. O'Toole finally overcame Labor party opposition and was unopposed for that nomination, but was opposed by Arthur F. Hurley, backed by local Democratic organization leaders, for the Democratic nomination.

Up-State the Congressional contest of greatest general interest was that of Representative Augustus W. Bennet against Mrs. Katharine St. George, a distant relative of the late President Roosevelt. Mr. Bennet, a Republican, was elected two years ago on the Democratic and Labor party tickets in a drive to oust Hamilton Fish from his seat in the House of Representatives. The district includes the counties of Rockland, Orange, Sullivan and Delaware.

Another up-State contest of general interest was that of Representative John Tabor, veteran Republican, who was opposed for renomination by C. A. Roberts in the Thirty-eighth District. Other up-State Republicans having contests for renomination were W. S. Cole, Thirty-ninth District, opposed by F. C. White; John C. Butler, Forty-fourth District, opposed by Kenneth O'Hara; and Daniel A. Reed, Forty-fifth District, opposed by Carl W. Lundberg. Wed. 8-21-46

In New York City, there was no opposition to the nomination of party candidates for Surrogate of New York county, City Court and Municipal Court Justices and members of the City Council in Manhattan and Queens.

Delegates to the State and judicial conventions of the three legal parties were elected, for the most part without opposition. The Democratic and Republican State Conventions for the nomination of State tickets will be held Sept. 3 and 4, respectively at Albany and Saratoga Springs. The Labor party convention will be held in New York City on Sept. 3.

Fish Scores James Roosevelt in Talk on Mrs. St. George's Victory Over Bennet

Thur. 8-22-46

By JAMES A. HAGERTY

A trend toward the right, undoubtedly caused by growing resentment toward the actions of Russia and its satellite nations in the post-war period, was indicated in Tuesday's primary election in New York City.

The defeat of Representative Vito Marcantonio by Frederick V. P. Bryan for the Republican nomination for Representative in the Eighteenth Congressional District, and the close margin of Mr. Marcantonio's victory over Patrick J. Hannigan for the Democratic nomination indicated clearly an increase of opposition to an alliance of either major party with the American Labor party with its communistic elements and its alliance with the CIO Political Action Committee.

Rightist Successes Listed

This anti-Left, anti-Communist trend also was shown in the following results:

The overwhelming defeat of Representative Joseph Clark Baldwin by State Senator Frederick R. Coudert Jr., for the Republican nomination for Representative in the Seventeenth Congressional District. Thur. 8-22-46

The defeat of City Councilman Eugene P. Connolly by Assemblyman Daniel Flynn for the Democratic nomination for Representative in the Twenty-first Congressional District.

The defeat of Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr., for the Republican nomination for Representative in the Twenty-second Congressional District.

The victory of Representative William B. Barry over Labor-supported George H. Rooney for the Democratic nomination for Representative in the Fourth Congressional District.

These right-wing victories for major party candidates were regarded as distinctly encouraging by leaders of the Republican party, who will increase their efforts to elect Republican candidates for Representative in New York City with special drives to elect Mr. Bryan over Mr. Marcantonio and to elect Jacob K. Javitz, Republican Congressional nominee, in a three-cornered fight with Mr. Flynn and Mr. Connolly, who was unopposed for the Labor party nomination, in the Twenty-first Congressional District. The victory of Mr. Bryan and the strong run of Mr. Hannigan were due in large part to war veterans who formed a bi-partisan committee to oppose Mr. Marcantonio in the Democratic and Republican primaries. Times

The one purely left-wing victory in the city was the nomination of Samuel Kaplan, former member of tthe Communist party, by all parties. Mr. Kaplan, unopposed for the Republican nomination, won the Democratic nomination from Assemblyman Philip Blank and the Labor party nomination from Morris Kaufman. Thur. 8-22-46

Fish Comments on Result

Up-State, the victory of Mrs. Katharine St. George, second cousin of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who defeated Representative Augustus W. Bennet for the Republican nomination for Representative, drew favorable comment from former Representative Hamilton Fish, whom Mr. Bennet defeated two years ago. Mr. Fish said: New York

"James Roosevelt, eldest son of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt, injected himself and his radical New Deal views into the primary campaign for Congress in Orange County, by endorsing his father's New Deal protégée, Augustus Bennet, against his cousin, Mrs. Katharine St. George. It turned out to be a political kiss of death. The Republicans of the Twenty-ninth Congressional District preferred a real Republican to a New Deal

CITY PRIMARY RESULTS
Times New York, N.Y.
Our local primary elections have registered an unmistakable anti-left-nomination. He chose to contest this decision. The Republicanism of his opponent, Mr. Coudert, was not in question, though the ALP had denounced him as a "Red baiter." Mr. Baldwin had the full support of the ALP and of its nominal head, Mr. Marcantonio, but it only seemed to handicap him. It is to his credit that he has now withdrawn as an active candidate in November, though he won the ALP

November elections.

Perhaps the sharpest setback suffered by the radical groups was the 5-to-1 defeat of Representative Joseph Clark Baldwin in the Seventeenth Congressional, the so-called "silk stocking" district. Mr. Baldwin's voting record was often too close to that of Representative Marcantonio to please fellow-Republicans, who refused to accept him as their candidate for reward swing the significance of which will be recognized far beyond State and city limits. New York City is the very stronghold of the radical American Labor party and the shock troops of the CIO's Political Action Committee. Yet despite Tuesday's light vote, which favored their infiltration into other primaries, they made a sorry showing. It indicates a reaction against the extreme left which may be felt in the nomination. Thur 8-22-46

Even more surprising is the shaken prestige with which Mr. Marcantonio emerges from the Eighteenth District primary. This was considered impregnable ALP territory, fortified by Tammany Hall. Throughout the war years Marcantonio, who has followed a pro-Communist line, has pocketed the nominations of all three parties. This time he was defeated for the Republican nomination by Lieut. Col. Frederick Bryan, and even with Tammany backing barely captured the Democratic nomination from another vote-getting veteran, Patrick Hannigan. His chances in November may be jeopardized if the veteran vote combines against him. In Harlem Representative Powell, who has also followed a pro-Communist line, did better, yet lost the Republican nomination to another veteran. In almost every district the swing was against the radicals. They can now match one small but clear-cut victory for an Assembly seat against many unexpected setbacks.

Primary results here may influence the coming State election. They should cause sober reflection in Democratic ranks over the selection of candidates. ALP support may not prove as weighty as it was. But it is national trends which will be studied throughout the country. A revolt against the extreme radicals seems to be spreading in both parties. This trend is nowhere more clearly discernible than in California and New York, two of our most populous States. Opportunist tactics such as those of Tammany Hall are at a discount. Yet one of the strongest undercurrents, apparent all over the nation, lies in the astonishing strength shown by politically unknown veterans. To the dismay of the "Ins," the GI is having his say on the American scene.

REPUBLICANS HOPE TO WIN CITY SEATS

Curran Sees Chance to Defeat Marcantonio—21st District Fight Also to Be Pushed

Thur. 8-22-46

Encouraged by the results of Tuesday's primary election, Republican leaders intend to make intensive efforts to capture Congressional seats in New York City now held by Democrats.

They will concentrate particularly on an attempt to elect Frederick v. P. Bryan in the Eighteenth Congressional District over Representative Vito Marcantonio and Jacob K. Javits in the Twenty-first Congressional District. In the latter district a three-cornered fight among Mr. Javits, Assemblyman Daniel Flynn, Democratic nominee, and City Councilman Eugene P. Connolly, American Labor party candidate, is believed to give Mr. Javits a chance of election in a strongly Democratic district.

The Republican leadership also will make a vigorous campaign for the election of State Senator Frederic R. Coudert Jr., who defeated Representative Joseph Clark Baldwin for the Republican nomination in the Seventeenth Congressional District, and for the election of Grant Reynolds, who defeated Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr., for the Republican nomination in the Twenty-second Congressional District.

Although the primary returns alone indicating little chance of defeating Mr. Marcantonio for election and less of defeating Representative Powell, Republicans have some hope of electing Mr. Bryan. Thur. 8-22-46

Curran Assails Marcantonio

Secretary of State Thomas J. Curran, New York County Republican Chairman, expressing satisfaction at the victories won by Mr. Coudert, Mr. Bryan and Mr. Reynolds, declared that the primary results indicated a definite trend.

"In fact, the results were more than a trend," Mr. Curran said. "They were in the nature of an unequivocal demonstration that pressurized PAC efforts, spearheaded by radical forces, cannot long endure under our American system of government and the political philosophies upon which this Republic was founded."

Mr. Curran said that the effort of Mr. Marcantonio to infiltrate his left-wing followers into the Republican party had failed dismally and that the return of veterans from the second world war had played a significant part in the primary results.

"The Marcantonio dreams, his dreams of running the city at a future date by extending his delusions of empire-building to all New York County and the greater city, have received a revastating set-back," Mr. Curran said.

Bryan to Seek Hannigan Aid

Mr. Bryan in an interview in his office in the Chanin building announced that he intended to make a vigorous campaign for election and hoped to get the support of Patrick J. Hannigan, Mr. Marcantonio's opponent for the Democratic nomination. He attributed his nomination in part to the support of war veterans who, he said, had worked actively for the nomination of both Mr. Hannigan and himself.

"The results of the primary election show that for all practical purposes the Democratic party has ceased to exist in the Eighteenth Congressional District," he said. "It is a combination of Clarence Neal, Bert Stand and Ed Loughlin, in addition to a dose of Marcantonio. Add to that the Communist party and The Daily Worker and you get a very peculiar cocktail when you shake them all up together. This is a cocktail which is very distasteful to the voters of the district." Thur. 8-22-46

Martin P. Beirne announced that an effort would be made to draft Mr. Hannigan to run as an independent candidate, saying that enough support had come to the Hannigan headquarters to indicate that he would win. Mr. Beirne added that Mr. Hannigan had not said he would run independently.

Mr. Reynolds, a former Army chaplain, said that he regarded his primary victory as evidence of the beginning of an act that would end Mr. Powell's public career, and added that he would follow it with a vigorous campaign for election.

PRIMARY DAY IN NEW YORK ADMITTEDLY

The Nation New York, N.Y. Sat 8-31-46

brought no cheer to the left, but the ecstasy of the conservative press is pathetically out of proportion. Joseph Clark Baldwin and Augustus Bennet, two reasonably liberal Republicans—both repudiated by their party and running without campaign funds, organizational backing, or any kind of mass support—were defeated for renomination to Congress. That is the extent of the victory. From the editorial pages of the Scripps-Howard, Hearst, and other metropolitan papers the casual reader might conclude that the G. O. P. had gone much further and retired from public life such leftist luminaries as Vito Marcantonio and Adam Clayton Powell. Actually, all that happened was that those two gentlemen, deprived of a Republican nomination, will run in November on two tickets instead of three. As Democrats and American Labor Party nominees, both are almost certain to return to Congress. Their failure to go back as Republicans, far from depressing us, seems like a healthy, if unsought, release from a none too savory connection. The appallingly low vote in the New York primary is regarded by experienced observers as a failure of the machines: not enough canvassers rang enough doorbells. This failure, particularly marked on the left, was largely responsible for the Republican defeat of Marcantonio and Powell. Communists and their fellow-travellers, who can normally be counted on to perform this basic chore, are reliably said to have fallen down on the job this year—a sign of the weakness that has beset the party since the purging of Earl Browder. Here again the effect can be salutary if it induces labor candidates to organize such support in the trade unions instead of buying it, politically, from a party which, like the Republicans and Democrats, has its own fish to fry.

Powell Loses GOP Nomination

The Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sat. 8-31-46

NEW YORK—Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr., was unsuccessful in his attempt to capture the Republican nomination in Tuesday's primary from Grant Reynolds, although Powell did win the Democratic nomination by an overwhelming majority. Reynolds will be Powell's opponent in the November general election from the Twenty-second Congressional District.

In another hotly contested district Vito Marcantonio barely received a majority to win the Democratic-ALP nomination from the Eighteenth Congressional District. Marcantonio 9,778 to Patrick Hannegan 9,216. Marcantonio lost the Republican nomination to Frederick melk.

In the GOP voting Grant received 2,150 to Powell's 1,591.

In the Democratic balloting Powell got 7,550 to 671 for Harold Simmelkjaer.

NEGROES HELP WHIP BOREN IN OKLAHOMA

St. Louis Argus St. Louis, Mo. Aug. 8-9-46

OKLAHOMA CITY—(ANP)—Negroes in the 4th Congressional district of Oklahoma helped to snow under Lyle Boren, because of his reactionary voice and vote in the national legislature. Boren tried two years ago to bait the Negroes of his district with a jim crow vet hospital bill for Boley, and when this blew up the black voters remembered Boren's reactionary vote against FEPC and anti-lynching legislation.

Glen D. Johnson snowed Boren under 31,093 to 19,469 in the primary election in a district where the black vote is decisive. There is no question but the Negro vote was a vital factor in Boren's undoing. A Negro candidate for congress in this district, Eugene Dunn, polled 1,600 votes.

THOMAS L. STOKES

South in Throes Of Revolution

Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.

MEMPHIS—Conflict is the prevailing motif today in the political and economic life of the South. It is erupting more frequently in violence lately in sections of our country that always has had more than its share.

This is the most vivid impression of a three-week visit below the Mason and Dixon Line.

There will be more conflict, perhaps more bloodshed, as the South continues to adjust itself to new and changing conditions, both economic and political, some growing from the war.

Industrialization, which always creates problems, was advanced during the war. Industrial conflict is intensified now by the stepping-up of union organization by the AFL and CIO—themselves also in conflict. And a new factor has been introduced which undoubtedly will have far-reaching influence as time goes on.

8-6-46

THAT is the war veteran. He has returned from far places and has come back, as does anyone who has been away from the South for a time, to see conditions in his native land in new perspective and more clearly. He wants to change them. This, of course, is not true of all veterans. Some slip back easily into the old setting. But it is true of an intelligent minority, and it is the intelligent minority which always brings about revolutions. Tues.

This determination for change exhibited itself in its most violent form in the armed revolt of returned veterans against a sector of the corrupt political machine of Burch Biggs in three Eastern Tennessee counties. The veterans rose up at Athens against the usual machine attempt to control elections.

Veterans had a stake in the election with a ticket in McMinn County—jointly supported by them and Republicans—that included a candidate for Sheriff, 33-year-old Knox Henry, who ran against Paul Cantrell, the Biggs machine boss in McMinn County. The other two Biggs machine counties are Polk and Monroe. Burch Biggs or his son have rotated in the sheriff's office in Polk County for years. The Biggs machine never has hesitated to use force and gunplay. Now, for the first time, it met force from a new direction.

SIGNIFICANT is the fact that the Biggs machine is in alliance with Boss Ed H. Crump here in Memphis. The two work together in election as well as in the legislature, using the same repressive tactics. The victory for reform in McMinn County may have its effect eventually on Boss Crump's State control.

War veterans also were active in the abortive revolt against the Crump machine in Memphis in the State-wide election last week. Veterans were among the corps of watchers trained by the CIO, and the Clean Election League to try to keep the count honest in Shelby County. They failed. But they are not done yet.

LONG-ENTRENCHED machine bossism is a first and obvious target for veterans. It sticks out plain in Tennessee. But veterans are getting perspective, too, on the bigger target of entrenched interests who are represented in many cases by the bosses. Some, they have learned, use the racial issue to perpetuate themselves in power or recapture power.

A most significant thing happened here in Memphis on the night of the election. The local chapter of the American Veterans Committee voted to admit Negroes, to have one single, mixed chapter instead of segregation. That was a revolutionary departure by young Southern white men who fought in this war.

Hope for the future lies in these veterans who are beginning to see the evils in their native Southland.

Carmack Ready To Press Election Fraud Charges

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.
Thurs. 9-12-46

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11—(AP)—Edward W. Carmack, defeated in the recent Tennessee Democratic Senatorial primary, informed the Senate campaign investigating committee today he is prepared to testify under oath about what he termed the "illegality and corruption" in that election.

The nomination was won by Kenneth D. McKellar, presiding officer of the Senate and its senior member.

Carmack gave reporters at a Capitol news conference copies of a letter addressed to Senator Ellender (D), Louisiana, chairman of the investigating committee, in which he offered to testify.

Probe Is Ordered

The committee has ordered investigations of Democratic primaries both in Tennessee and Mississippi, where Senator Theodore G. Bilbo was renominated.

Carmack, a tall young man with curly hair, also declared that E. H. Crump, Memphis Democratic leader, Senator Taft (R), Ohio, and Carroll Reece, Republican National chairman, were engaged in a "conspiracy" to throw Tennessee into the Republican column in 1948.

Carmack said that Taft had "given out a statement endorsing McKellar a couple of weeks before the primary" and that recent published reports quoted Crump as predicting that the Republican party would win the Presidency in 1948. He did not specify what part Reece, a Tennesseean, took in the affair.

Carmack wrote Ellender he was here "to put myself at the disposal of your committee." The staff of the committee still is being selected, and its general counsel, Riley Shanks, is not to take office until next week. Ellender is out of the city.

Carmack's letter said he was willing to appear as a witness at the committee's convenience and "then make under oath considerably more extensive and more definite charges of the illegality and corruption in the said primary." He added:

"In the interest of the future decent government and honest elections I am willing to go to any length in the exposure of the frauds and thoroughly unscrupulous and tyrannical methods by which nominees are declared in the Democratic primaries in Tennessee."

Carmack's Hope

He said he hoped to see Democratic National Chairman Robert Hannegan to tell him about the "conspiracy" to make Tennessee Republican. He declared flatly that "the Republican machine in East Tennessee had for years played with the Crump machine and Senator McKellar."

A reporter, noting that Carmack referred to himself as a "defeated candidate," asked whether Carmack had any serious hope that he might be seated in place of McKellar.

"I think I'd be very optimistic to hope to unseat a man of Mr. McKellar's power and position," he replied. "I believe it would be wholesome for the future if they have a full investigation."

Carmack said he honestly did not know whether he or McKellar received the most votes.

He said he spent "about $6,900" in his own campaign, although conceding some other funds may have been spent in his behalf without his knowledge. He estimated that "the opposition" spent close to $500,000.

When reporters asked if Senator McKellar had any comment on Carmack's statement, they were told at the Senator's office that he had none.

THE TENNESSEE PRIMARY

Advertiser Montgomery Alabama

On the basis of incomplete returns from the Tennessee election it appears that Ed Crump, the Memphis political boss, has chalked up another victory in his long and imposing string of trophies. The Nashville Tennessean, chief sponsor of the Browning-Carmack challenging team, conceded defeat to Mr. Crump early in the returns. Considering that only one box from Shelby County figured in the returns up to the moment of conceded defeat by the Nashville paper, it appears that Boss Crump owns not only Shelby County and Memphis, but also the whole State of Tennessee. 8-3-46

That one Shelby County box gave Carmack only one vote. To McKellar, it gave 205. A whole county at the opposite end of the state, normally Republican, gave McKellar the impressive vote of more than 500 to 1 over his challenger. These two examples of abnormally one-sided returns are sufficient to convince even the most skeptical that something curious was happening in Tennessee's Democratic primary Thursday. Such almost perfect unanimity in election returns just is not credible in a free election—the only kind we are supposed to have in America. 8-3-46

There is one bright aspect of the Tennessee primary. So far as reported, it was free of any racial issue. It was a knock down and drag-out fight between an entrenched and apparently impregnable political machine, and the awakening civic consciousness of Tennesseans. The issue was not the ignorance, prejudice, and passions of the electorate, but corruption of and loyalty to a selfish machine. Saturday

Viewed from any angle, returns of recent elections in the three states of Mississippi, Georgia, and Tennessee are not entirely discouraging. In each of the three states there is a powerful and intelligent minority who resisted every pressure possible for bossism and demagoguery to bring to bear upon them. They have been through the fire, and it would be a serious error for anyone to discount their power for good in the future.

The Political Picture Of The Negro In Houston And Texas

The Informer, Houston, Texas
Sat. 8-24-46

By REV. B. H. ROBERTS

The Negroes of Houston and Texas as a whole have just emerged from one of the hottest and most bitterly contested campaigns of recent times. The Negro was in the heat of this battle not so much for political office for himself but for the candidates of his choice, whom he felt disposed to vote for. Certainly this was his right as well as that of any other citizen of Texas.

Since this primary campaign of July 27 has passed and we are facing another hot contest for August 24, it is well that we consider the picture of the Negro in election of July 27, and what his future should be in regards to the coming campaign. It certainly is well to remember that there are many angles to politics and one may not get all he expects in return for the very best efforts put forth. Politics is a win or lose game. Somebody must always lose and somebody must always win.

The method of winning or losing makes up the system of politics. No one can always predict the outcome of an election. Neither can anyone guarantee to any candidate his success in a race for any place in government, and this should not be pretended by anyone.

Everyone who voted honestly in the July 27 election need not feel ashamed because honesty is the only safe rule in politics. If you were sincere in your belief of the worthiness or unworthiness of a person and cast your vote accordingly then you should feel that you have done your duty.

It is not wise for Negroes to make their vote a racial vote for that is just what we have always complained about on the part of the white man; but we must put character and ability above race. If a man is worthy be he white or black, he should be our choice, if not then we should reject him.

The Negro has the right to claim any position which he is capable of holding and so does the man of the other race. This is a sane and constructive political philosophy. If we are to survive politically we must be wise and strategic in our approach to our problems. We must not allow the over anxious and over ambitious Negro to run away with us in order to gain for himself political notoriety and financial gain. We must have strong and well trained political personnel, formed into strong political organizations in our city and state. This organization must take up the political problems of the Negro and deal with them on the basis of reality and not as mere political expediency. If we are not organized we will be unprepared for such attacks as we faced following the recent primary.

The recent primary election has convinced the intelligent Negro that education politically is a serious problem with us and that some are inclined to take advantage of every point of vantage against our political well being.

In the recent primary election, two Negroes were elected as Precinct judges who must hold the elections. This is indeed gratifying we are really grateful to God that we were fortunate enough to win for these two members of our race these places of distinction, but this is not half of the question—there is a great responsibility associated with these positions which these men are bound to regard with the deepest moral conviction and the keenest sense of their duty and loyalty to the group that made it possible for them This we hope they ever keep in mind.

If what followed the July 27 election was a possibility under a white man's supervision who has had years of experience in politics, what will be our fate if such lossness accompanies our own efforts.

These judges need not expect the over indulgence of the colored citizens when it comes to the performance of their proper functions and the safeguarding of the interest of all concerned The public will not excuse indifference and carelessness, and inefficiency on their part They were elected because the citizens were willing to trust their honesty and ability but this fact must be demonstrated by them in the fair an impartial an efficient administration of their offices.

Now, concerning our July 27 election we know, according to the decision of the Court that boxes 48 and 24 lost all votes cast for the Sheriff race in behalf of Mr. Woolley Whether this decision was justified or not it is the decision of the Court and it places us on the defensive as voters in these precincts, and every one of us feels the reflection but that must not discourage us. We must still go to the polls and vote and, by all means, see to it that you do not vote for your enemy knowingly.

Let us be prepared against the repetition of such an outcome in the future Let us assure ourselves against such charges as were alleged against us in the other election. Let someone be designated or any number of persons be appointed to observe the voting and be prepared to refute any false charges that might be brought against our boxes.

75,000 Negro Vote Reported in Texas

Atlanta, Ga. Journal
July 30, 1946

AUSTIN, Texas, July 30.—(AP)—Governor Coke Stevenson estimated that about 75,000 Negroes went to the polls Saturday in the first Texas Democratic primary.

It was the first time in Texas politics that Negroes have cast a full, free vote in a Democratic primary election.

The governor said he believed that for the most part the votes in the gubernatorial race were cast in a bloc for Homer P. Rainey, who ran second in the balloting. Rainey faces Beauford H. Jester in the August 24 second Democratic primary.

Run-Off Seems Assured In Texas, With Negro Vote Heavy In Primary

The Courier-Journal, Louisville, Ky.
Sun. 7-28-46

Jester and Rainey Vie for Governor

By the Associated Press.

Dallas, Tex., July 27.—A run-off contest for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Texas apparently was assured tonight as two colorful political figures raced ahead in mounting returns from a Texas primary election featured by a mass Negro vote.

Beauford Jester, 53, member of the powerful oil-regulating State Railroad Commission, and Dr. Homer P. Rainey, deposed president of University of Texas, ran steadily ahead of the 12-man pack as a record-smashing vote was tabulated across Texas.

It was the first Democratic primary in Texas' 100-year history in which Negroes voted in large numbers.

Jester had a lead of 6,000 votes over Rainey in incomplete returns from the Texas Election Bureau. Attorney General Grover Sellers, close friend of retiring Governor Coke R. Stevenson, was a poor third.

Connally Sure of Choice.

The two leaders were so close on the basis of an estimated 1,250,000-vote total that it appeared definite neither could capture a clear majority and the nomination, which is tantamount to election. The state's first runoff for the Governoship since 1934 was indicated. It would be held August 24.

Apparently reassured of renomination was Senator Tom Connally. He had more than three times as many votes as his four opponents combined and his lead was increasing steadily. Another Texas political leader, House Speaker Sam Rayburn, was unopposed.

Official returns from 40 of the 254 counties gave these results in the Governor's race: Jester, 17,662; Rainey, 11,532; Sellers, 7,032; Lieutenant Governor John Lee Smith, 4,832; Jerry Sadler, 4,068! Caso March, 507.

The same tabulation gave Connally 11,078 votes. His nearest opponent was Floyd E. Ryan, Houston, with 1,615 votes.

The Texas Primary

Birmingham, Ala., News

The first Texas primary held last Saturday gave the wealthy Beauford Jester a big lead over Homer Price Rainey, but Rainey is in the runoff. Liberals throughout the country had hoped that Rainey might come in first and enter the runoff with the velocity of band-wagon jumpers to push him into the nomination. But although he is trailing Jester by about 100,000 votes out of some 1,250,000 cast, he is not to be counted out yet.

Rainey's name is widely known throughout the land because of the difficulties he had when he was president of the University of Texas. He fought a losing fight against the encroachment of certain business interests in the matter of academic freedom. The influence of Gov. Coke Stevenson and Sen. Pappy O'Daniel was too much for him, and the board of regents of the university dismissed him on Nov. 1, 1944.

he had extensive funds to use in the campaign. There is no doubt, also, that Jester had much of the support of the Texas Regulars, a group which, it will be remembered, jumped the Democratic party in 1944 because of its hatred of Roosevelt and the New Deal.

The race that Rainey made in the primary is probably all the more remarkable in that

A lesser man might have left the state and gone on to a position somewhere else, for there were many college administrative jobs open to him. But he chose to stay on in Texas. He conducted a radio program called "Religion in Life" which had a wide audience in the small towns and rural sections. Incidentally, he is an ordained Baptist minister. When the time came to qualify for the governor's race, no one was surprised at his entry. It was always known in Texas that he was the man that the other candidates had to beat. 7.30.46

His platform was clearcut and simply stated. It was critical of certain big corporations, most of which are controlled at the top outside the state. Gov. Stevenson, who has had strong support from big business, has been able to stay in office longer than any other person in the history of Texas. Also it has been amply evident that O'Daniel in the Senate has worked hard in the interest of his wealthier constituents. The influence of both these men was against Rainey in his campaign.

Rainey proposes a constitutional amendment to do away with the ceiling on funds for old-age assistance, aid to the blind, to dependent children, and further public welfare work. In order to get more funds for altruistic enterprises in the state, he has let it be known that he would raise taxes on the state's resources of oil and would increase levies on tobacco and liquor. Like James E. Folsom in Alabama, Rainey promised a minimum teachers' salary of $1,800 a year, but unlike Folsom, Rainey told the voters just exactly how he proposed to raise the needed funds.

The leader of the pack in Saturday's primary, Beauford Jester, is a rich man in his own right, and although he split the corporations' support with Jerry Sadler brought the race issue into the ca he did not have the support of the state's largest newspapers. Furthermore, by an agreement among the radio stations to ration the time allowed each candidate, he was forced to give up the program he had conducted for many months and thus lost the radio personality he had built up. Tue. 7-30.

Now the campaign goes into its final phases. The runoff will be a clearcut fight between Rainey and Jester. It should be a rip-snortin' campaign in the best Texas tradition, guns blazing and no holds barred. For the next four weeks the people of Texas should really enjoy life. We'll watch with much interest from the sidelines.

An Estimated 75,000 Negroes Voted In Texas Primary

Daily Texan Austin, Tex.

AUSTIN, Tex.—(SNS)— Governor Coke Stevenson estimated Monday that 75,000 Negroes voted in Saturday's Texas Democratic primary marking the first time that Negroes have cast a full vote in the Democratic primary election. Wed. 7-31-46

The Governor stated that he believed that most Negroes voted in in a bloc for Homer P. Rainey who ran second in the race

Analysis Of Negro Vote Refutes Charges

The Informer

HOUSTON.—Loose and random statements have been made following Saturday's elections about Negro votes being sold and about machine politics among Negroes. These charges have been made by people who were either ignorant or who sought to give Negro voters a bad name.

The best way to explain the Saturday's elections is to show Negroes what they did as a group in their voting.

The governorship presented a special case in Saturday's voting. The choices of Harris county for governor were Beauford Jester and Homer P. Rainey. Negroes chose Rainey, giving him 95% of their votes. Houston, Texas

The whites in Harris county gave Jo Ed Winfree, a local candidate for lieutenant governor, an overwhelming vote. The Negroes gave Winfree an even more impressive vote. The whites gave James for state treasurer almost 2 to 1 over Williams. The Negroes came nearer giving a 2 to 1 vote for James than the whites did. The whites cast 60% more votes for Justice Sharp than for Rowland. Negroes gave better than 2 to 1 to Sharp.

In the case of the criminal court of appeals the whites divided their votes between the four candidates a about 11,000, 14,00, 18,000, and 22,000. Negroes divided their votes among the four.

For Justice Graves of the court of civil appeals, the whites gave better than 2 to 1. Negroes gave Justice Graves about 3 to 1. Whites gave Albert Thomas better than 2 to 1 over Prof. Horne. Negroes gave Albert Thomas almost 3 to 1.

For district attorney the whites gave Winborn nearly 2 to 1 over Allen. The Negroes were better than 2 to 1 for Winborn. So down through the total list of candidates the comparison goes about the same. 8-10-46

The cold facts prove what we have always contended; namely, that the Negroes and whites have about the same interest in the same localities and will come near voting the same, all things being equal. Negroes have no more reason to vote in blocs or to be sold or bought than whites, and are never sold and bought any more than whites.

The modifications of race or racial interests are always a minor element in elections, though some particular candidate will naturally pay the price for having been hostile to Negroes on some occasion. For instance, Sellers and Smith did not want any Negro votes, and they didn't get any to speak of, either. Captain J. R. (Bob) Davidson didn't appeal to Negroes for support and he got practically no votes from Negroes.

But Captain Davidson will be one to long remember that the Negro vote in Harris county is important to reckon with whenever the election is close. In the two years ensuing, he will probably come to realize that a vote is a vote, regardless of the color of the citizen who casts it, and we predict that if he ever runs again for office in Harris county, he will not go out of his way to discourage the Negro vote.

It was remarkable how nearly the vote of the Negro of Harris county coincided with the published choices of the Informer. Even in cases where the local organizations had endorsed others, the people in practically every instance showed a judgment similar to that of the Informer. The Informer takes it as a compliment to its faithfulness to the will and interest o fthe people themselves that it could beforehand so accurately and so uncannily pick the course the people would take.

Even in the case of the sheriff's race, where the Informer frankly declined to choose a candidate but suggested that Woolley and Polk would be in the runoff, we were correct, the people giving Neal Polk 1900 votes and Fay Woolley 1600 votes, with 208 for Captain Bob Davidson. It is significant that the only real machine among Negroes was behind Neal Polk, still there was only a 300-vote edge for Mr. Polk. In this instance the total vote for Mr. Polk was 27,000 as against 17,000 for Mr. Woolley, and another 17,000 for Captain Bob Davidson. It is interesting to wonder what would have happened if the Informer had endorsed Mr. Wooley or Mr. Polk! Sat.

Too often during the period when Negroes were disfranchised, our liberal white friends would say they thought that intelligent Negroes should vote, but they wanted to know how it could be figured so that Negroes would not be sold or voted in blocks. The implication always was that Negroes could be bought, and therefore would vitiate the election. Well, we'd like to know who bought or sold the Negro vote in the past primary.

For most candidates the Negroes of Harris County voted like the white people voted on the basis of the records of candidates as they knew them and on the prospects of what candidates convinced them. The deviation from general friends came only in a few spectacular instances in which the Negro voters felt they had friends to reward or enemies to punish.

Negroes took marked sample ballots to the polls with them in an attempt to vote intelligently. They should have no shame for having done that. It was a crude thing to do, but an honest one. Next election they will know to remember whom they want to vote for and forget the rest.

Handful Of Negroes

The Whip Miami, Florida

EL PASO, Texas, (ANP)—Negro voters of El Paso—some 600—played a decisive part Saturday in defeating County Judge M. Scarborough in the first state primary election held here in which Negroes have participated.

In all parts of the state, at least 75,000 Negroes cast their ballots, according to reports. In this city and the surrounding county, the 3,000 Negro residents were most interested in the county judgeship, since the county judge is the political head of the county.

How significant the Negro vote was may be seen from the fact that Judge Scarborough lost by a mere 316 votes. The winner is Victor Gilbert, local attorney, who received 6,840 votes to Scarborough's 6,524. Sat. 8-10-46

The 600 Negro votes went heavily against Scarborough for several reasons:

1. Not a single Negro is employed by the County.

2. The City-County Hospital, whose board is named by the judge, refuses to accept Negro physicians in any capacity; therefore, no Negro doctor can accompany his patient to the hospital.

3. When a group of Negroes sponsored the Southernaires last year, and sold tickets to white friends without segregation, Scarborough sent a deputy sheriff to order the sponsors to segregate the patrons. This order he issued two hours before concert time.

4. When FEPC sent G. James Fleming here in 1942 to direct investigations into job discrimination, Scarborough telephoned the White House, it is reported, and protested a Negro in such a capacity. A few days later, when Scarborough thought Fleming had been recalled, he telephoned a newspaper and said: "I've gotten rid of that coon at last, and a northern one at that."

When Scarborough campaigned before the Negro Voters League before election, he was questione on a number of his past practice: Negroes were thereafter convinced that they should not help him in office.

All the newspapers supported Scarborough, and expressed surprise that he was defeated.

In the contest for Governor, Homer P. Rainey, liberal ex-president of the University of Texas, ran second in the state, and will figure in the run-off election on August 24. He will be opposed by Beauford Jester, railroad official.

Rainey was backed by liberal groups, but opposed by most newspapers and the groups who believe him too liberal on the Negro question. In the election on Saturday, Rainey was knifed by several radio announcers who continually stressed that "150,000 Negro voters will cast their ballots today for Rainey," or "The first 51 ballots cast here were by Negro voters and all for Rainey." The ballot in Texas is not secret; ballot boxes are not locked.

NORFOLK CANDIDATE LOSES BUT SHOWS SOME STRENGTH

Daily Ward Atlanta Ga.
Wed. 6-19-46

NORFOLK, Va. — (A N P) — Victor J. Ashe, Negro attorney, who failed to win a seat on the city council in the June 11 election here, showed so much strength at the polls, that political observers are predicting success for him in the future in case he runs for a local or state office. Though Mr. Ashe stood in seventh place in the field of nine candidates, he polled 3,101 of the 16,984 votes cast.

Mr. Ashe secured votes in every one of the 37 precincts in the city. "The People's Ticket" consisting of Richard D. Cooke, attorney; Protlow Darden, automobile dealer and brother of ex-governor Colgate W. Darden, Jr., of Virginia and John Twohy III, sand and gravel dealer, won the election.

Wed. 6-19-46

PARTIAL VICTORY

Though Mr Ashe did not get elected, defeat of the incumbents, Mayor James W. Reed and Councilman Richard W. Ruffin and C. E. Wright, none of whom rated high among Negro voters, was considered a partial victory for Negro voters. Their defeat is a signal for more action among progressive voters for the things they want in the city.

It is the unifying contribution of the Ashe campaign for Negro citizens and the salutory effects of his campaign on interracial problems that mark his candidacy as a successful one. Obviously, many white people voted for him. More would vote for him for local office. Jews supported the campaign financially and with votes.

Virginia in Bondage

Times-Dispatch
Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

With smugness we in Virginia look upon the re-election of Bilbo in Mississippi and Talmadge in Georgia. Before we heap criticism on others, should we not put our own house in order?

Sun. 8-4-46

Make no mistake: What Bilbo is to Mississippi, Talmadge to Georgia, Crump and McKellar to Tennessee, O'Daniel to Texas, Wheeler to Montana; what Ham Fish was to New York, and the late Huey Long to Louisiana, Harry Byrd is to Virginia. Each and every one of these men is a political dictator, out of step with the times, and a disbeliever in the American doctrine of the right to freedom, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness for all.

Drive to un-Byrden Virginia

Daily Worker

By Alice Burke

Richmond, Va.

The renomination of Sen. Harry Flood Byrd in the Virginia Democratic primary is a serious blow to our nation. For millionaire apple grower Byrd is the leader of the polltaxers who together with the Taft, Vandenberg Republicans are spokesmen for Wall Street monopolists in their drive against the people.

BYRD

New York N.Y.

In 1944 Byrd organized and led the southern delegates at the National Democratic Convention against Henry Wallace as FDR's running mate. Byrd was "too busy picking apples" to support FDR.

Today Byrd's number one aim is to wipe out completely all traces of progressive legislation enacted while FDR was in office, and to prevent enactment of Roosevelt's Economic Bill of Rights.

Despite the set-back suffered by the re-nomination, there were certain positive features of the struggle to un-Byrden Virginia.

Martin Hutchinson, a Roosevelt democrat who ran against Byrd, received 82,000 votes—the highest vote ever received, despite lack of organization and money — against the Byrd machine. As a matter of fact this was the first real bitter political struggle since 1922.

In the 2nd Congressional District (Norfolk - Suffolk) Byrd's man in Congress, Ralph Daughton, was snowed under by the nomination of Porter Hardy, a farmer.

In the 3rd District (Richmond) Byrd's candidate, J. Vaughn Gary barely nosed out Minetree Folkes, World War II veteran who lost his right leg at Iwo Jima.

How Byrd Got Out Vote

Every pointer that PAC ever made on how to mobilize the voters was used by the Byrd forces. There was a systematic door to door check of whether voters had a way to get to the polls. In Richmond alone 57 cars were doing double duty bringing voters to the polls and back home. For mothers with small children, the Byrd forces provided "baby sitters"—while mother went to vote.

For the farmer who couldn't leave his crop, Byrd provided farm hands and took the farmer to the polls by car.

In contrast to this highly geared machinery in every voting precinct and district, the Hutchinson campaign was to a large degree unorganized.

8-16-46

That Hutchinson could have won despite the huge sums of money spent by Byrd, is evident from those areas where there was at least a degree of organization, primarily of labor, Negro people and veterans, as in Norfolk County, Portsmouty, Clifton Forge, etc.

Labor Organization Was Lacking

Friday

State PAC attempted to do great things but in the absence of organization of political action groups in the local unions this was very difficult. For instance, in the city of Danville where there are some 12,000 organized workers in the CIO textile union—Hutchinson got only 1,596 votes. Clearly the CIO workers in Danville were not educated to the need of struggles on the political front. This situation can be duplicated in most areas where workers have been organized in CIO and AFL.

One of the greatest handicaps of the progressive forces is their failure to get into a campaign until the very last moment. While Byrd was burning up the airwaves with broadcast after broadcast, the Hutchinson people were without organization. As a matter of fact Hutchinson had no state manager, and the local managers' political experience and training was almost nil.

It will be impossible for Virginians to ever defeat the reactionary machine unless the process of organization begins now in preparation for the General Assembly elections in 1947 and 1948 congressional and presidential elections.

It has to be done first on a local scale—in each local union and in each precinct.

Unions who struggle so desperately for wage increases are practically wasting their time if at the same time they are not organizing the membership for political undrstanding and struggle to guarantee that the wage increases are not stolen back in the form of high prices and high taxes.

If each international union would place a full time political activities director to set up and organize day to day active political machinery in each local union, this would be of immesurable aid in safeguarding and raising the standard of living.

Work Must Begin Now

Unless this organization work is done now—long before the next elections — there can't be much hope for un-Byrdening Virginia and bringing it into the area of progress.

There are three main fields of activity. Labor, Negro people and veterans.

The little organization that Hutchinson had was primarily led by a group of veterans. Byrd also tried to win the veterans and lied all over the lot to explain his voting against veterans and peoples legislation.

The most highly organized progressive group are the Negro voters who have been consistently organizing and qualifying people to vote. Byrd reconized this and attempted to swing the Negro vote his way by a clever maneuver. One of the leading Negro leaders was pressured, at the last moment, to write a letter to the press —to the effect that while Byrd was Governor of Virginia a state anti-lynching law was enacted. He concluded that if re-elected Byrd would work for enactment of a federal anti-lynch law. This strategy, when hundreds of thousands were enraged at the brutal lynchings in Georgia and Mississippi, was calculated by the Byrd forces to win votes among the Negro people. Lateness of the hour made it impossible to counter this outrage.

Despite all these tricks and huge sums of money, Byrd got 138,000 votes, and Hutchinson 82,000. There is real hope for Virginia if the progressive forces begin organizing today for the '47 and '48 campaigns.

Primaries In The South

The Advertiser

The Republican National Committeeman from Georgia, Mr. Wilson Williams, threatens an old political tradition by suggesting that the Southern States choose delegates to the Republican National Convention by preferential primaries. The idea is that by taking the choice of delegates away from party leaders (most of them are hand-picked at State conventions) the South's representatives at a national convention would tend to reflect the desires of rank-and-file Southern Republicans rather than the maneuvers of party bosses.

Beneath the obvious and praiseworthy objectives of Mr. Williams' suggestion, it is not difficult to see a more immediate and practical effect. Throwing the choice of delegates open in a primary contest would undoubtedly loosen the influence which the Ohio group, headed by Senator Robert A. Taft, now exercises over Southern party organizations. But, regardless of any designs on the Taft influence, the fact remains that the Republican party organization in the Southern States need a thorough overhauling. Montgomery, Ala.

The need is apparent, but the preferential primary does not offer the best means of attaining that result. Presidential primaries have been tried, with varying results since 1910, when Oregon passed the first primary law. New Jersey followed suit a year later, under Woodrow Wilson's prodding. The results have been demonstrated that they can control primaries for selfish purposes as effectively as they can control State conventions. The technique is different, but the result is often the same. There is more than suspicion that Wendell L. Willkie's defeat in the Wisconsin Presidential primary in 1944 was rigged by political forces eager to end his career. Nov. 12-9-46

The South needs an overhauling, politically, but the primary isn't the best answer. Mr. Williams' suggestion will serve a useful purpose if it stimulates the National Committee, when it meets this week, to review the whole subject and devote some constructive thinking toward making the Republican party in the Southern States the force it has every right to be.—New York Herald-Tribune

People Win Victory In Norfolk Although Candidate Defeated

The Defender Chicago, Ill.
Sat. 7-20-46

By MEREDITH JOHNS

"Victor Ashe did not win a seat in the Norfolk City Council but the people won a victory just the same."

Long-haired easy-talking David Levine, of Norfolk, Va., head of the Tidewater region, American Veterans Committee, said that last week while visiting the Defender offices in Chicago. He also said that the election was a wonderful education for 25,000 Negroes.

"We had the heaviest vote in that election in the history of Norfolk," asserted Levine. "Heavier than any election for governor. Heavier even than any presidential election."

Levine, operator of a large furniture manufacturing company in Norfolk, was a lieutenant in the Navy, skipper of a small naval vessel. He spoke quietly, with an air of complete confidence.

"Three factors that caused Ashe to be defeated were: He entered the race late; it was the first time Negroes had voted, and many who had paid their poll tax had not registered, and many who had registered had not paid their poll tax," he explained.

Ashe, one of the only Negroes to run for office in Virginia since the 1890's, is a 32-year-old Norfolk born attorney. He was backed solidly by Negroes and a substantial number of whites at the outset.

His entering the city council race was called "symbol of a new spirit among Negroes of Norfolk."

"Voting was entirely clean," said Levine. "There was no intimidation. Ashe received votes in every precinct. He had two poll watchers and counters at every precinct. Everything went off perfectly. It was a wonderful experience for Norfolk Negroes.

"One of the things that probably caused some confusion at nearly the last minute was the acceptance of huge 'don't vote single shot' ad by the Courier Journal and Guide."

There had been a move prior to election to single shot Ashe. By this technique—voting for only one instead of three candidates—the strength of the Negro vote could have been tripled.

But when the Negro newspaper ran the ad stating "don't vote single shot," naturally hundreds of Negroes and quite a few whites were confused.

"If we had three out of five progressive men in the city council, not necessarily Negroes but men of the people, we could remake Norfolk," says Levine.

"It was a victory for us even though our candidate did not win, because we had one of the right people running for office. He just happened to be Negro."

One of the major obstacles to progressive moves in Virginia is Democratic Sen. Harry Byrd, whose political machine through three terms has reached such proportions as to have complete control of every political job in the state down to and including the lowest paid.

"Sen. Byrd to me is not a man who hates Negroes," said Levine, "but a man who is anti-all common men. His dislikes are not confined to separate races or creeds like Bilbo and others. His is a fight against everyone except Byrd.

"Byrd claims that the Congress of Industrial Organizations is spending $1,000,000 to defeat him in the August 16, democratic primary," he asserted. "He will probably win again though, for among other things he has all of the big papers behind him. They back him on account of his political experience."

Powell, Dawson Plan Racial Justice Fight

The Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sat. 11-23-46

Inspired to militant action by their recent re-election to seats in the U. S. Congress, Representatives Adam Clayton Powell Jr., of New York, and William L. Dawson of Illinois, have expressed their determination to fight for the passage of certain specific legislation to help lift the yokes of social and economic oppression off the necks of their constituents.

In New York City, Adam Powell Jr., representing the Twenty-second Congressional District of New York, declared:

"I will specifically concentrate on a National Civil Rights bill to guarantee protection of all minorities everywhere in America, through the Department of Justice."

PLANS ANTI-SEGREGATION BILL

Further outlining his plans, Congressman Powell explained:

"I will also introduce a national Anti-segregation bill which will embody FEPC, Abolition of Jim Crow Interstate Transportation and Jim Crow in the Armed Forces, etc., all in one bill."

Representative Powell also declared that the Republican landslide was a real warning to the Democratic party. People didn't vote Republican, they voted anti-Democratic party, he said. And they will not vote a Democratic ticket again until the Democratic party, from the top down, completely recaptures the spirit and principles of Roosevelt, he added. Mr. Powell said that his contention was proven by the fact that only those Democrats won who were fighters and have been 100 percent Roosevelt.

DAWSON HITS HOUSING BIAS

Meanwhile, out in Chicago, reports indicated that Representative William L. Dawson, who was re-elected to represent the First Congressional District, was planning on sponsoring a National Housing Fair Practices Act. which would make race discrimination illegal in Federally financed housing projects.

While Congressman Dawson has not made any official statement it is said that he is studying a legislative draft of the measure which he plans to present to the next session of Congress before revealing its details.

BILL HAS SEVEN POINTS

Authoritative sources, however, say that the bill is made up of the the following seven points, and would:

1. "Make illegal, discrimination because of race, creed or color in housing financed in whole or in part by Federal funds;
2. "Deny Federal financial assistance to any State or local housing project or venture, which so discriminates;
3. "Deny Federal financial assistance to any state or local housing program from which persons are denied benefit because of race, creed or color;
4. "Establish a Federal housing fair practices commission with power of subpoena, appointed by the President to enforce this policy;
5. "Give power to this commission to order withholding of Government funds from individuals or corporations guilty of discriminatory practices . . . and of recommending suitable punishment to violators;
6. "Deny priority assistance to any privately or publicly financed project which so discriminates; and
7. "Deny mortgage insurance to any builder or financial institution for any housing project which is discriminatory in character."

White Democracy

The News and Courier

To The News and Courier:

Note the words of Dr. Clark Foreman, of Atlanta, that his organization has initiated and is cooperating in the drafting of a bill to be introduced into congress that will leave no doubt that the civil rights granted in the constitution are to be enforced by the federal government.

This bill, he says, will for the first time give a real meaning to the constitution in many Southern states. Note the words of a negro war veterans' organization and demands to vote in our Southern Democratic primaries. We are going to break the Mason and Dixon Line was sounded at the seventh Southern negro youth congress.

Encroachment on our Southern states rights is the chief desire of the negro organizations and should such a bill be a national law further encroachments and liberties will be injected for passage by our national government.

Suffice me to say the negro has lasting and true friends in our states, however, any concessions he desires must confine themselves to the negro with no encroachment on our Southern White Democracy. The Mason and Dixon Line is here to stay and the White Democracy of our states will endure to the end of time.

New Bill Seeks To Halt School Discrimination

Bi-Partisan Measure In Albany Provides Loss Of Tax Exemption

3-7-46

Staff Correspondence

ALBANY, Mar. 7.—Extension of the Ives-Quinn Law to include the field of education seemed assured today following introduction of a bi-partisan measure to give the State Committee Against Discrimination (SCAD) jurisdiction over reported cases of discrimination in all educational institutions.

The bill, which is expected to receive widespread support from all parties, would make religious or racial discrimination by schools unlawful, and specifically provides for various penalties, including the automatic loss of tax exemption privileges.

3-7-46

Widespread hope is held here that passage will go very far toward combating the rampant discriminatory practices which are known to be followed by virtually all the privately owned tax-free education institutions in the State.

P.M.

Ives in Favor

Assemblyman Irving Ives, Chenango Republican, Majority Leader in the Lower House as well as an outstanding spokesman on both educational and anti-discrimination issues, is reported to have given his blessing to the bill. Ives previously had demurred from any extension of the Ives-Quinn Bill, passed last year, on the grounds that it was desirable to give SCAD more time to get under way before increasing its scope.

The bill specifically provides for SCAD methods to determine that discriminatory practices exist in any particular institution. It provides that the SCAD can base its findings on "group data"—that is, the general experience of a large number of persons—rather than on the experience of an individual. This will rule out the frequently heard argument that it is impossible to prove discrimination because of the possibility of an error in judgment in a particular case.

Definition

The bill carries this definition of an "educational institution," for tax exemption purposes:

"An institution which determines the admission of its applicants not solely and exclusively on grounds of their intellectual ability and moral character, but aims, in selecting its students and members of its instruction and research staff, at the satisfaction of racial and religious prejudices, is not devoting its property exclusively to educational purposes and is not an educational institution within the meaning of the law."

Sponsors of the bill are Sen. Walter J. Mahoney, Buffalo Republican, and Assemblyman Bernard Austin, Brooklyn Democrat.

A special exemption is provided for sectarian schools, permitting them to restrict admission to persons of one particular religion. Such schools, however, are specifically enjoined from excluding applicants because of either race or color.

N.Y. Bill Hits Race Hate In Radio Shows

Chicago Defender

NEW YORK—A bill aimed at slashing from radio programs any acts inciting race hate was introduced in the New York State legislature this week by Rep. L. P. Murphy.

2-9-46

If passed, the bill would serve to eliminate race prejudice from virtually every media of information, entertainment and cultural dissemination.

Legal experts state that it is the first bill ever proposed in this country that would make it illegal for any person to use the radio to refer to races in a disparaging manner.

It would affect the majority of the big radio network shows, since most of them originate in New York. The bill covers all programs coming out of the state, and also pertains to books, pictures and pamphlets.

The measure is said to be the most powerful of its kind, and predictions are that it will be used as a model in other states even if it is not passed in New York.

In the New York legislature it has been read once, and referred to the legislature's committee on general laws.

Sat.

Radio industry officials have observed that the bill would be far more effective than the recent Illinois anti-libel bill instituted by Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of "The Chicago Tribune" which owns WGN, the Midwest outlet for Mutual.

The Illinois bill was described as a political maneuver on McCormick's part, but was passed toothless because of compromising points placed on it by the radio industry and McCormick opponents.

Agricultural Economics Unit Hit

Atlanta Daily World

Atlanta Ga.

Sat. 3-30-46

WASHINGTON. — (NNPA) — The Bureau of Agricultural Economics, under congressional mandate, must restrict its activities to the gathering and dissemination of statistical data related to agriculture, and not explore and not inquire into the question of race relations in counties in southern states.

Restrictions on the activities of the Agricultural Economics Bureau were invoked after southern members of the House Appropriations Subcommittee on the Agriculture Department had browbeaten H. R. Tolley, chief of the bureau, during hearings on the Agriculture Department's 1947 appropriations.

To make its mandate effective, the House lopped off $485,543 of an appropriation recommended by the Budget Bureau for the Agricultural Economics Bureau.

BILL NOW PENDING

The appropriation bill is now pending in the Senate Appropriations committee. The Senate itself after the bill is reported may approve the cut, restore the funds lopped off, or further reduce the appropriation.

The wrath of southern members of the House Appropriations Committee was provoked by a report concerning Coahoma County, Mississippi, made to Dr. Tolley by staff members. It was intended for use by officials of the Agriculture Department in order that they might have before them the situation in the counties studied.

According to Representative Malcolm C. Tarver, of Georgia, chairman of the appropriations subcommittee, about 40 or 50 per cent of the report was devoted to race relations in urban as well as rural areas.

Sat. 3-30-46

The report stated:

"At present the militant Negro leadership in urban centers of the North is making its opinion felt on the rural Negroes of Coahoma County, for a number of them subscribe to northern newspapers which do not hesitate to emphasize injustices done Negroes."

Judge Tarver declared that statement an indictment of the people of Coahoma County.

COMPARES TREATMENT

"I think that the treatment accorded Negroes in industrial centers of the North is much worse than that which is accorded Negroes in the agricultural sections of the South in which they are dealt with, on the whole, with sympathy and understanding," he declared.

Judge Tarver was particularly critical of the report because it stressed "the importance of leadership, so-called militant northern Negro leadership, which, in my judgment, is a most unfortunate thing and which is doing a greater injury to the Negroes of the South than anything else when it comes to the handling of racial problems which exist in the South, problems which in the main are stirred up by these northern agitators, who seem to take every opportunity of stirring up things of this character."

ADMINISTRATION

The Agriculture Department administers:

The free school lunch program toward which the federal government contributes $50,000,000 a year.

The Extension Service, for which a total of $27,233,660 is provided in the 1947 Agriculture Department appropriation bill. These funds are allotted to the States and distributed between the white and colored land-grant colleges. A recent study made by the Negro Newspaper Publishers Association revealed that the seventeen colored land-grant colleges get a disproportionately small share of these funds.

Sat. 3-30-46

The Farm Security Administration, which administers the rural rehabilitation program providing loans for low-income families who are unable to obtain credit on reasonable terms from any other source; the farm tenancy program which lends funds to tenant farmers and veterans for the purchase of small farms.

Colored farmers, to some extent, participate in all of these programs. The data collected on race relations in counties in southern states with large colored populations would enable the Agriculture Department to determine whether these programs are being fairly administered. But the House has told the Agricultural Economics Bureau that it must not collect such information by withholding funds for such studies.

Miss. Solons Get Equal Salary Bill

Chicago Defender

Chicago, Ill.

Negro Teachers May Take Case To Court

Sat 1-19-46

JACKSON, Miss.—(ANP)—A bill to increase and equalize salaries for Negro teachers in public schools will be presented to the Mississippi State Legislature which convened here Tuesday.

The bill is under sponsorship and the result of a state-wide study by the state department of education and the Mississippi Educational association, an organization of white teachers in the state.

Aside from its provisions for increased and equalized salaries the bill will contain also a number of other important provisions seeking to improve education in the state, important among which will be the setting-up of a teacher-training division in the state department of education.

Salary Scale Revised

The salary scale, as recommended, will call for giving teachers with a master's degree, $1,160 of $1,400 yearly, depending on experience, down to $280 to $520 for those with three years' high school or less.

Negro education in general will be the subject of a number of important provisions in the bill among which will be a recommendation for further teacher training facilities for Negro teachers.

Simultaneous with the convening of the state legislature it was revealed that an overwhelming number of Negro teachers are in favor of carrying their fight for equalization of salaries to the courts. The realization that the majority of Negro teachers favored carrying their fight for equalization to the courts came as a result of a poll conducted by Prof. E. S. Bishop, principal of the Corinth Negro high school and president of the Mississippi Association of Teachers in Public schools.

Court Action Favored

The results of the poll were published in the January issue of the Mississippi Educational Journal, official state teachers' journal. The article reveals that some 3,000 questionnaires were sent to a representative cross section of the 6,000 Negro teachers of the state with answers coming from more than 1,500, 95 per cent of whom were in favor of court action.

The poll also showed that of the 1,500 answers some 55 per cent were in favor of waiting until the present state legislature has had a chance to act before filing suit. Fifty-two per cent were not in favor of pressing for action immediately for the equalization of educational opportunities for Negroth of the state.

With respect to the filing of the suit upon the failure of favorable action on the part of the legislature, informed circles in Jackson say that the Negro teachers' organization has already overcome one of its major obstacles in the way of filing suit—that of getting a qualified complainant. According to these quarters, a teacher possessing the very highest qualifications has already volunteered to file the complaint if it is decided to bring suit.

The legislature is expected to take several days before actually getting down to business of enacting bills, but it is generally understood that a vast majority of its members are in favor of a progressive educational program for the state.

OFFER STATE BILL ON COLLEGES' BIAS

New York Times

Bipartisan Sponsors Would Let Ives-Quinn Commission Act Against Offenders

ALBANY, March 6—A bi-partisan proposal to clothe the State Commission Against Discrimination, set up by last year's Ives-Quinn Act, with broad powers to proceed against colleges, professional schools and other educational institutions that were found to practice racial and religious discrimination in the admission of students or selection of faculty was studies made by the Legislature today. Jewish Congress.

Its sponsors are Senator Walter J. Mahoney, Republican, of Erie and Assemblyman Bernard Austin, Democrat, of Brooklyn, both of whom were members of the Ives Commission which was instrumental in enacting last year's legislation.

As the Legislature is scheduled to adjourn in less than three weeks, there appears to be little chance that the bill can be adopted at this session.

Under the bill, racial or religious discrimination by educational institutions would be declared unlawful and violators would be subject to various penalties, including the automatic loss of tax exemptions.

In determining whether an educational institution, against which complaint is made, is practicing discrimination, the commission, under the proposed law, would be directed to "take into account all general data, statistical and other, which shows the race, creed, color, ancestry or national origin of the persons who have sought or obtained admission as students or employment as members of the instruction or research staff by the respondent and which thus may tend to prove the existence of a predetermined pattern of admission of students or employment of members of the instruction or research staffs."

Explaining this provision and the need for it, the sponsors said in a sent statement:

"An educational institution could always find an excuse for the rejection of any individual applicant. 'Lack of personality,' for instance, is an unanswerable subjective judgment. The resulting difficulty of proof account for the fact that so few and insignificant complaints have been lodged in the field of employment with the State Commission against Discrimination in the eight months of its existence. The new bill faces the difficulty squarely by permitting the proof of the existence of a 'general policy' or of a 'quota system' or other device. Thur. 3-7-46

"This bill expressly exempts all sectarian schools by permitting them to restrict admission to persons of a given creed. But it would not permit the exclusion by sectarian schools on account of race or color; or the exclusion on account of religion by schools which hold themselves out as non-sectarian." Thur. 3-7-46

St. Louis Mayor Aids Bill on Bias

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

Special to the Daily Worker

ST. LOUIS, April 18.—A bill prohibiting race discrimination in city employment will be introduced in the Board of Aldermen here, Mayor Kaufman has notified the St. Louis Fair Employment Practices committee. Fri 4-19-46

The new bill provides penalties of $100 to $500, or imprisonment up to six months, for violations. The FEPC committee has called a conference for May 5 to support the measure and plan a campaign for extending such a law to all businesses as well. The CIO Industrial Union Council has already endorsed the conference.

NAACP Supports Nat'l Health Bill

Daily Worker Atlanta, Ga.

Thurs 4-11-46

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Dr. W. Montague Cobb, prominent Washington medic, will testify for the NAACP before a Senate Education and Labor Committee holding hearings on the National Health Bill in Washington, D. C.

The measures sponsored by Senators Robert F. Wagner, Democrat, New York; James E. Murray, Democrat, Montana, and Representative John B. Dingle, Democrat, Michigan, would authorize appropriations of about $50,000,000 to finance a comprehensive health program, including branches for public health, maternal and child care, care of needy persons, national compulsory health insurance, and grants to states for medical research and education.

DISCRIMINATION

One of the features of the bill will be the provisions that services and facilities are furnished under the plan and shall be available to all mothers and children in the state or locality who elect to benefit in the program, and that there will be no discrimination because of race, creed, color, or national origin, and no residence requirements. Thurs 4-11-46

The bill has the full support of the administration behind it. Moreover, the fact that the co-sponsor of this bill, Senator Jas. E. Murray, is chairman of the Education and Labor Committee to which it was referred, practically assures an early hearing on the measure.

No Constitutional Violation

Times

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK TIMES:

An editorial in the May 28 issue of THE NEW YORK TIMES expressed the opinion that the labor draft feature of the President's proposed emergency strike legislation violates the constitutional provision against involuntary servitude. Similar views have been expressed in the Senate and seem to be widely held among the general public. Without going into the question of the wisdom of the proposed legislation, I should like to point out that this view does not seem to be in accord with the construction given to the Thirteenth Amendment by the courts. 6-9-46

The Supreme Court has stated that the Thirteenth Amendment prohibits only "those forms of compulsory labor akin to African slavery which in practical operation would tend to produce like undesirable results." The courts have consistently taken the position that the Thirteenth Amendment was not intended to destroy effective government by depriving it of essential powers and the rule seems well established that essential services for the Government may be compelled in the public interest without violating the Constitution. Familiar instances of this are service in the armed forces, jury service, and attendance as a witness. The Supreme Court also has upheld State statutes requiring all able-bodied men to work on public roads for a specified number of days each year.

It would thus seem to follow that if an emergency exists which would make it a proper function of the Government to operate the railroads or furnish other essential services to the public, qualified persons may be called upon to assist the Government in the discharge of its functions without violation of the Thirteenth Amendment.

Blow To FEPC

Daily World Atlanta, Ga. Wed. 8-14-46

The Seventy-ninth Congress, which was anything but distinguished will be remembered for the lethal blow it dealt the Fair Employment Practice Committee.

That blow was the halving of funds necessary for the operation of the agency in the fiscal year 1946 with the proviso that it should wind up its affairs by June 30 last.

With the termination of the wartime agency definitely fixed, efforts to get the Congress to pass a bill creating a permanent agency were frustrated. Southern Democrats filibustered against the bill in the Senate, while its proponents made only feeble efforts to break the filibuster. In the House the Rules Committee refused to give the measure a special rule in order that it might be brought to the floor for a vote. The Congress thus ignored one of the major recommendations of President Truman.

No Poll Tax Bill

The record of the Seventy-ninth Congress also was marked by its failure to enact anti-poll tax legislation. The House passed the bill, but the Senate shunted aside the measure by refusing to limit debate.

The circumstances under which the bill was brought up in the Senate given credence to the charge that Senator Alben W. Barkley, the Majority Leader, made a deal with opponents of the measure.

Senator Wayne Morse, Republican, of Oregon, gave Senators an opportunity to vote for the anti-poll tax bill. Within two hours of the time fixed under a unanimous consent agreement for the Senate to vote on the oil-rich tidelands quit-claim bill and all amendments, Senator Morse offered the poll tax bill as an amendment to that measure. Senator Barkley and Senator Claude Pepper, Democrat, of Florida, one of the proponents of the poll tax bill, joined by Senator White, the Minority Leader, pleaded with Senator Morse to withdraw the amendment. He refused. Senator Barkley then pledged himself to bring up the anti-poll tax bill and made a motion to table the Morse amendment. The Barkley motion was adopted. Daily World

Cloture Filed

Before he made a motion to take up the anti-poll tax bill Senator Barkley circulated a petition to limit debate on that measure and obtained 28 signatures. Immediately after making the motion to take up the bill Senator Barkley filed the cloture petition. Two days later, as required by the rules, the Senate voted on the cloture petition, which failed to get the two-thirds vote necessary for adoption. The Senate went on with other bussiness. Atlanta, Ga

The results of the November elections will not insure passage of legislation to extend suffrage by enactment of an anti-poll tax law, to give equal job opportunties to people regardless of race, color or religion, or to make mob violence a federal offense. If the Republicans win the House, there will be a change of committee chairmen in that body and Southerners will not be able to block as easily legislation especially benefitting colored people. But as long as Senate rules are as they are, enabling opponents of a measure to talk endlessly, FEPC, anti-poll tax and anti-lynching legislation has little or no chance of passage. Wed. 8-14-46

In the circumstances, when the Eightieth Congress convenes next January 3, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the National Council for a Permanent FEPC, the National Committee to Abolish the Poll Tax and all other organizations and people who favor FEPC, anti-poll tax and anti-lynching legislation should bend all their energies toward getting Senate rules changed so that a majority may bring to a vote any bill it desires after reasonable debate.

Race Discrimination Ban Sought by Solon

The Times-Union Jacksonville, Florida

WASHINGTON, July 31, (UP) Representative A. Clayton Powell (D-NY) today introduced a bill prohibiting racial discrimination in transportation, theaters, hotels, restaurants and other public places.

The bill would make it both a civil and criminal offense to either undertake such discrimination or to aid or incite in it. Thurs. 8-1-46

The maximum criminal penalty would be a fine of $1,000 and one year imprisonment.

The aggrieved person also could sue for $1,000 in a civil action.

The bill would override state laws requiring any form of racial separation or segregation.

Aldermen Introduce Measure to Outlaw Prejudice in Chicago

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 9-14-46

CHICAGO — (ANP) — A measure was introduced to the City Council here recently to make the practice of racial preju- a misdemeanor in Chicago, with penalties ranging up to $500 fine and a year in jail.

The ordinance, presented by the council's two South Side aldermen, William Harvey, second ward, and Oscar DePriest, third ward, also provides that the victim of racial prejudice may obtain damages from the offender ranging from $25 to $500.

New Congress to Get Fair Housing Bill

The Worker New York, N.Y. Sun. 11-24-46

CHICAGO.—A National Housing Fair Practices Act aimed at illegalizing race discrimination in federally financed housing projects, will be introduced in the forthcoming Congress by Rep. William L. Dawson (D-Ill) the United Negro and Allied Veterans of America here.

Dawson, in discussing the proposed bill, stated he is studying a preliminary draft of the measure before announcing the final form of the bill.

The projected National Housing Fair Practices Act, the veterans' officials stated, grew out of a resolution passed by the veterans' organization's national council at a meeting here Sept. 28. The resolution called for congressional action to stop widespread discrimination against "Negro and other minority veterans in federally financed housing."

The resolution contained the following seven points, which UNAVA officials said they hope to see placed in the bill:

1. Make illegal discrimination because of race, creed or color in housing financed in whole or in part by federal funds.

2. Deny federal financial assistance to any public or private housing project or venture, which so discriminates.

3. Deny federal financial assistance to any state or local or corporations housing program from which per-inatory practices.

4. Establish a federal Housing Fair Practices Commission.

5. Give power to this Commission to order withholding of Gov-ernment funds from individuals or corporations guilty of discrim-ination to any builder or financial institution for an housing project which is discriminatory in character.

6. Deny priority assistance to any privately or publicly financed project which so discriminates.

7. Deny FHA mortgage insurance to any builder or financial institution which is discriminatory in character.

2 Democrats Contend Anderson Jumped Gun On Handbook Bill

The Courier Journal Louisville Ky.

1-24-46

Two Jefferson County legislators, Representatives Michael B. Gilligan and B. J. Bonn, both Democrats, were planning to introduce in the General Assembly bills licensing handbooks when Representative Charles W. Anderson, Jr., Negro attorney, "jumped the gun" and presented his measure Wednesday.

While this trio discussed possible amendments to the bill introduced, other lawmakers expressed doubt that enough support could be mustered to steer it through House and Senate. Leon Shaikun, Democratic senator from the 38th District, questioned the constitutionality of Anderson's proposal.

2 Favor Big License Fee.

Gilligan and Bonn favor a higher tax on handbooks, with Gilligan's measure calling for a $1,500 fee and Bonn setting the license cost at $5,000. Both legislators believe a higher fee than the $500 suggested by Anderson would tend to drive many of the "chiselers" out of business, making the policing problem easier.

Bonn said he favored including a provision in the measure prohibiting handbooks from operating in a building where intoxicating beverages were sold. Violators would have their licenses revoked, he explained.

A clause confining the bill to first-class cities should be inserted, as rural areas are not troubled with handbooks on a scale comparable to larger cities, Bonn added. "If this amendment was made, the bill would stand a better chance of passing," he continued.

Would Ban Street-Level Books.

Fundamentally, Gilligan's proposal embodied the same ideas included in Bonn's, but Gilligan included a point requiring all handbooks to be operated above street level. This would eliminate them from drugstores, barbershops, newsstands and other places where they bother non-patrons, Gilligan explained.

Gilligan favored earmarking all funds derived from a handbook bill for the Welfare Department. "Heaven knows, they need all the help they can get," he remarked.

He said he had his bill ready when Anderson presented his, but illness prevented him from introducing it. He will introduce it this week, he added.

Gilligan Says Trade Favorable.

Gilligan revealed that he had approached "bookies" in Louisville about a bill regulating handbooks, and they indicated a desire to pay a license. "They feel it would eliminate some chiselers in their field and be less botheresome than having to deal with politicians and police," he reported.

1-27-46

All three of the legislators included a clause in their proposals that would require handbook operators to post a bond guaranteeing good conduct in their places and insuring pay-offs.

In questioning the constitutionality of a bill regulating handbooks, Shaikun cited the decision of the Court of Appeals in voting 4 to 3 on the legality of pari-mutuel wagering. There is still question among lawyers concerning the legality of this form of betting, he explained.

Doubts Anderson Bill to Pass.

Anderson's bill stands little chance of passing in the form introduced in the Legislature last week, Shaikun said. Any bill to be successful will have to set a high license fee and create a board to regulate handbooks similar to the Alcohol Beverage Control Board, he added.

"Most of the legislators from rural areas would be reluctant to vote on any measure legalizing betting in the entire state," he predicted. It might possibly become a law if a local option clause were inserted similar to that applied to liquor, he added.

Ralph G. Stone, Democratic representative from the 39th District, declared the chances of the bill passing are remote, although it has much support in Louisville. Support might be gained in the Covington and Lexington areas, but rural lawmakers would not favor it, he said. Stone refused to commit himself on the measure.

1-27-46

Anderson Is Optimistic.

In spite of the attitude of his colleagues in the General Assembly, Anderson was optimistic about the possibilities of his bill. He said he had conferred with men from the Covington and Lexington sections, and he believed the proposal had a 50-50 chance of passing.

"Many legislators feel this a step in the right direction, but will not support the bill because of fear of the voters at home," he stated. They are afraid church and reform groups would charge them with legalizing gambling, he added.

"If the bill is acted on favorably in committee I plan to make some changes, including raising the fee to at least $1,000," Anderson continued.

1-27-46

Gambling-Trial Aide Favorable

W. A. Armstrong, attorney, who was assistant to the Commonwealth's attorney in recent gambling trials in Criminal Court here, wrote Anderson a letter expressing himself in favor of the bill. He wrote he was for such legislation only if the license was set at $2,500 and the bond was high enough to guarantee compliance with the law.

"The higher fee would do away with small-fry operators who prey on 25 and 50-cent bettors and juveniles," he stated.

Vincent J. Hargadon, Democratic senator, joined Shaikun in questioning the legality of such a bill. He said he hadn't had much chance to discuss it with other legislators but planned to approach some of his colleagues for opinions this week. The bill might gain considerable support in areas where heavy gambling is centered and where officials want the condition regulated, he continued.

FEPC and the Poll Tax

Richmond, Va.

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

Of all the important bills on which Congress has stalled so long, to choose FEPC to toss before those reactionary Southerners whose power there so much exceeds their wisdom was certainly the worst fumble in its history, giving the filibuster its one chance of survival.

It is the one bill for which their opposition has any justification, an unworkable, mischievous bill, as represented to us, that would inevitably be a setback to racial relations anywhere in the United States, but particularly to the great progress made in recent years between Southern whites and Negroes.

2-18-46

Legislation is no solution. The bill would fail of its declared purpose as the prohibition legislation did, and for the same reason—it impinges on the personal, on free opinion. Its extraordinary powers of enforcement are calculated to disrupt business, creating resentment in both parties to thousands of contracts, big and little; to corrupt the courts, and to produce the very evils it professes to cure, as with prohibition.

This bill was never set clearly before the people, and neither party fought for it; both played to the galleries. Its getting past Senator Byrd, chairman of the Rules Committee, to the floor of the Senate was no accident, but is explained by the fact that Southerners who had begun to realize the truth that we are victims of the poll tax, have now been roused by this bill to stronger support of it.

The people of the South, including the Negro, have lost again, lost doubly; freedom from the poll tax recedes, and the filibuster becomes established procdure.

Nobody will stop the demagogues.

2-18-46

Why does not Congress honestly face the truth, that the Federal government cannot be any freer than Virginia's until the poll tax ceases to hold the balance of power there?

Mrs. Luce Backs Pay Equality

New York Times

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31 (U.P.)—Representative Clare Booth Luce of Connecticut introduced a bill today to establish the principle of equal pay for equal work regardless of an employee's sex or color. Mrs. Luce's bill would put Congress on record as believing that wage differentials in industry based on sex or color were "prejudicial to common welfare and without basis in equity or in law or economics."

Fare Safeguard Bill By Davis, Cacchione

Daily Worker New York

1-23-46

By HARRY RAYMOND

City Councilmen Benjamin J. Davis and Peter V. Cacchione, Communists, yesterday introduced joint legislation to make mandatory a public referendum on any bills to increase transit fares.

Hugh Quinn, Queens Democrat previously had called on the Board of Estimate to fix transit fare at 8 cents.

Councilmen Michael J. Quill and Eugene P. Connolly, Laborite, joined with Davis and Cacchione in demanding a Council probe of Consolidated's electric rates.

Other measures, sent to committee, were:

- A bill by Connolly to add to the city charter guarantees against discrimination and protection for city employes in the right of organization.

1-23-46

- A resolution by Davis and Cacchione supporting state measures for financial aid to a state university.
- Resolutions by Davis for appointment of a Negro to the Board of Education, for Feb. 12 as Negro History Week, for Board of Education facilities for war veterans, and for adoption of a State GI Bill of Rights.
- A resolution by Cacchione and Davis for use of state surpluus for city subway construction.
- Resolutions by Cacchione calling for rehabilitation of the Coney Island Creek area, for construction of a subway spur to the Brooklyn Navy Yard, and for replacing the Norton Point Trolley Line with bus transportation.
- Bills by Quill for overtime pay to city employes, for the city to supply uniforms to all uniformed city workers, and to permit temporary patrolmen to become full-fledged members of the Police Department.
- A resolution by Councilman Councilmen Earle, Isaacs and Connolly urging no increase in the price of milk.

Joseph J. Hennessey, retired letter carrier, was named in place of L. Garry Clemente, Democrat from Queens, who was elected but is still in military service.

Former Assemblyman Maurice E. Downing was named to replace William A. Carroll, Manhattan Democrat, who resigned to be deputy city clerk.

Housing, Rules and Buildings Committee sessions will be held Friday.

1-23-46

Next full Council session will be Jan. 29.

Kentucky: Bill Seeks Entrance of Negroes to Grad Schools came Gettysburg, Pa.

LOUISVILLE—(ANP)—Charles W. Anderson Jr., Louisville attorney and member of the Kentucky Legislature, renewed his fight this week for the admission of Negro students to the University of Kentucky of Louisville upon a graduate and professional level.

Mr. Anderson's bill is for the GRADUATES purpose of repealing, in part, Kentucky's separate school law and permit Negro students to attend the yard of the professional schools at colleges in Kentucky.

In the 1944 session of the General Assembly he sponsored a similar bill, which passed the Lower House by a vote of 41 to 40, but was defeated in the State Senate when the rules committee failed to change institutions at the present time.

Mr. Anderson stated that the bill introduced by him has the support of the Kentucky Negro Educational Association, Inc., branches of the NAACP, Kentucky, President R. B. Atwood, Kentucky State College; President H. C. Russell, West Kentucky Vocational School; and the National Bar Association, of which he is a former president, Jan. 27, 1939, a motion for cloture against the filibustering of the anti-lynching bill, submitted by Senator Matthew Neely of West Virginia, was defeated, 51 to 37. In the same Congress of Congress a motion for cloture on the anti-poll tax filibuster was introduced by Senator Alben B. Barkley of Kentucky and defeated 41 to 37; in the 78th Congress on May 15, 1944, the motion to limit debate by cloture on the anti-poll tax bill, introduced by Senator Barkley, was defeated by a vote of 44 to 36.

Bill Would Ban "Quota System"

Afro American Baltimore, Md. Sat.

ALBANY, N.Y.—A new method of combating racial and religious discrimination in educational institutions was proposed on Mar. 6 in a bill presented to the Legislature which would permit proof of the existence of a "general policy" or "quota system" in proceedings before the State Commission Against Discrimination.

Automatic loss of tax exemption would result from adverse rulings by the commission. 3-16-46

The bill was introduced as a bipartisan measure by Senator Walter J. Malhoney, Buffalo Republican, and Assemblyman Bernard Austin, Brooklyn Democrat, who were senior legislative members of the Ives commisison which drafted the 1945 Ives-Quinn act against discrimination in employment. 3-16-46

Emphasis on Groups

It is concerned primarily with the treatment of groups rather than with single individuals, and "recognizes that discrimination can be effectively fought only if it is treated as a pattern of behavior rather than as a series of disconnected individual acts."

"An educational institution," said the sponsors, "could always find an excuse for the rejection of any individual applicant. 'Lack of personality,' for instance, is an unanswerable subjective judgment. 3-16-46

Evidence by Data

"The resulting difficulties, too, account for the fact that so few and insignificant complaints have been lodged in the field of employment with the SCAD in the eight months of its existence."

They said the bill would expressly direct the commission to consider "all general data, statistical or otherwise, which show the race, creed, color, ancestry or national origin of persons admitted or rejected by schools, thus proving existence of a pre-determined pattern of admission.

Sectarian Schools

The bill specifically exempts all sectarian schools by permitting them to restrict their admissions to persons of a given creed.

It would not, however, permit sectarian schools to exclude applicants on account of race or color, or permit schools which hold themselves as non-sectarian to exclude applicants on account of religion.

N.Y. Bill Offered on College Bias

Afro American Baltimore, Md.

ALBANY, N. Y.—A proposal to give the State Commission Against Discrimination power to act against colleges, professional schools and other institutions practicing discrimination was submitted to the Legislature today.

According to its sponsors, Walter J. Mahoney, republican, and Assemblyman Barnard Austin, Democrat, discriminating institutions would be declared unlawful and subject to various penalties, including the automatic loss of tax exemptions. 3-16-46

The bill would exempt all sectarian schools by permitting them to restrict admission to persons of given creed, but it would not permit the exclusion on account of religion in non-sectarian schools.

New Jim Crow Bus Law For Mississippi

Chicago Defender

JACKSON, Miss. — (ANP) — Among the many bills put into the legislative hopper of the 1946 session of the Mississippi State legislature is one to require bus companies to have separate buses on inter-city lines for Negro and white passengers. Mar. 23-46

It appears doubtful that the present session will get around to consideration of the bill because of the press of more "timely" legislation.

7 Bills Offered to End Racial Discrimination

Courier Journal Louisville, Ky.

Louisville's Negro Representative Anderson Wants Commission Made Permanent

2-2-41

By ROBERT C. DOTY

The Courier-Journal Frankfort Bureau.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 1.—An act to create a permanent Kentucky Commission on Negro Affairs and six other measures embodying recommendations of the temporary group of that name seeking to eliminate racial discrimination were introduced in the House of Representatives today by Representative Charles W. Anderson, Jr., Louisville Republican and only Negro legislator.

Anderson's other bills called for:

1. Expansion of courses of study at the Kentucky State College for Negroes, provision for financing out-of-state study for Negroes barred by law from Kentucky institutions which offer the courses desired and admission of Negroes to State graduate and professional schools in courses not offered by the College for Negroes.

Would Prohibit Discrimination.

2. Prohibition against discrimination against Negro physicians, nurses and patients in public hospitals.

3. Prohibition against discrimination against Negro citizens in stores.

4. Provision that the State Department of Education shall not approve or accredit as individual schools the separate common schools of any school district and requiring that all schools in one district, both white and Negro, must be accredited together, thus forcing districts containing Negro schools to raise their standards.

5. Employment of a full-time assistant supervisor of Negro education, a Negro qualified in the field of Negro education, by the State Board of Education.

6. Removal of the provision restricting membership on the Kentucky Aeronautics Commission to white persons.

Would Make Group Permanent.

The commission bill would give permanent status to the group of six Negroes and six white persons appointed by Governor Simeon Willis 16 months ago to study and report on "economic, educational, housing, health and other needs of the Negro citizens of Kentucky." 2-2-46

The commission's report in December listed 27 specific recommendations seeking to improve the status of Negroes in the fields studied, and today's bills bring to nine the number of recommendations presented to the General Assembly. Anderson previously introduced measures to prohibit discrimination for race or color by contractors doing business with the State and putting domestic servants and farm laborers under provisions of the State Wage and Hour Law. These bills are now under consideration by the House Labor Committee, which is expected to report them out next week.

The bill calls for the Governor to appoint again the 12-member commission, divided equally by race, with one member of each race as chairman and cochairman and with one member of each race qualified in the fields of education, civil affairs, housing and social welfare, economic affairs and health. The members would serve for four years beginning July 1, 1946, without compensation other than reimbursement for travel expenses.

An appropriation of $7,500 a year is provided for the hiring of research assistants and clerical workers to aid the commission in the preparation of reports and recommendations to the Governor.

In the field of higher education Anderson's second bill would provide for a survey of the facilities, departments of study and curricula at the Kentucky State College for Negroes here with a view to expanding the college program "so that the college will be enabled to do work such as is done in other educational institutions of corresponding rank and kind."

Continues Scholarships.

Pending accomplishment of such an expansion, the bill calls for continuance of out-of-state scholarships for Negroes desiring education not offered at the college, but reduces the residence requirement from five to one year, increases the maximum yearly grant from $175 to $350 and provides that the grants shall continue for a sufficient length of time to permit completion of the course. 2-2-46

Finally, it is provided that, beginning July 1, 1947, any Negro qualified to take graduate or professional work not available at the Negro college may take such courses at "any educational institution in this state."

With reference to medical services, another bill provides that no physician or nurse shall, on account of race, be denied the right to attend his patients in any hospital in the state; that no person shall be discriminated against on account of race in admission to and service in State hospitals; and that no person may be denied the right to receive postgraduate training in medicine, surgery or nursing in hospitals because of color; and that the same provisions should be observed by the Federal Government in the hospitalization and medical treatment of war veterans in Kentucky. Penalty for violation of the act was set at a fine of $50 to $500.

Although the bill, as drawn at present, makes no distinction between public and private institutions, Anderson said it was intended to apply only to the former.

Bill to Outlaw Job Bias Utility Jobs Before Solons

Sat. 3-2-46

ALBANY, March 1. — The long drawn out battle against job discrimination by public utilities is once again before the State Legislature.

Sen. Louis L. Friedman, Brooklyn Democrat, has introduced an amendment so the courts can enforce a 1933 law.

The amendment was prompted by the refusal of Kings County Judge Samuel H. Liebowitz to order a Grand Jury investigation into charges against three Brooklyn utilities.

Judge Liebowitz refused on the ground that it was virtually impossible to prove discrimination sponsors as a result of his failure to make it enforceable. His criticism was directed at both the law and the State FEPC law passed last year.

The Friedman measure is one of several important anti-discrimination proposals. Others include the Falk-Jack bills against restrictive covenants in housing, the Friedman-Pino bills removing tax exemption for educational and religious institutions that discriminated and the Wachtel amendment to the State FEPC law allowing anyone to file complaints of job discrimination instead of only the "aggrieved person."

There are definite signs, however, that the Dewey Administration has turned thumbs down on all anti-discrimination proposals this year, and that they can be passed only by an all-out public fight.

Dewey has been in hot water with his closest GOP associates and sponsors as a result of his failure to block passage of the State FEPC bill last year. He has been mending his fences with them ever since and is expected to avoid any further action that might anger them.

Bill Forbids Changes To Segregate Pupils

Sat. 3-2-46

Albany, N. Y., March 19 (AP)—Creation or alteration of school districts to segregate pupils of one race or religion in one school is prohibited under terms of a bill passed unanimously today by the Assembly. 3-20-46

Introduced by Assemblyman Hulan E. Jack, New York City Democrat, the measure prohibits continuation of school districts for the purpose of maintaining a predominance of pupils of one race or religion. It was sent to the Senate.

Political Trick Unmasked

Afro American Baltimore, Md.

One of the slickest political tricks of recent years was uncovered in the Senate the other day in an amendment which would revise the 14th Amendment by excluding aliens from the population counts by which members of the House of Representatives are apportioned.

The maneuver, almost unnoticed and already approved without opposition by the Senate Judiciary Committee, has been pushed by legislators from rural areas which would stand to gain representation should the measure be passed by Congress and then approved by three-fourths of the State legislatures.

Sat 2-23-46

Heavily populated Northern States, such as New York, New Jersey and Michigan, with a higher percentage of aliens would lose representation while the South gained. Here is an attempt to reduce the strength of metropolitan areas where labor is strong. It is obviously unfair.

If aliens are excluded in the North, how about excluding the thousands of disfranchised colored Americans in the South upon whose backs the Bilbos, Rankins and Eastlands have climbed to power?

When the 14th Amendment was written, the word "persons" was used specifically instead of "citizens" to give protection to colored people. Yet, it is a well-known fact that while these people are counted in the census for the purpose of determining Congressional representation, many of them, by various discriminatory devices, are prevented from casting a ballot in the South.

Authored by Senator Arthur Capper (R., Kans.) the amendment has all of the earmarks of Southern dictatorship. Congress should wisely reject it.

Negroes Hit GOP Silence On Their Needs

Daily Worker
New York, N.Y.
Mon. 12-9-46

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Failure of the Republican leadership to include FEPC, anti-lynch and anti-poll tax legislation in its program for Congress has caused sharp resentment in Negro circles here.

The December issue of the Republican News, national GOP organ, emphasizes a three-point legislative program, including tax cuts, cutting out social services through reduction of government expenditures, and anti-labor legislation.

In a letter to GOP chairman B. Carroll Reece, Leslie Perry, of the NAACP Washington office, criticized the omission of the three issues concerned with advancing democracy, as well as of federal aid to education.

"The wave of mob violence which has shocked decent people all over the ever-mounting employment discrimination against Negroes and other minorities, the brazen disenfranchisement of hundreds of thousands of Negroes in the South and the low state of educational opportunity for children in certain sections of the country, make it imperative that the correction of these evils be given top priority by the 80th Congress," Perry wrote Reece.

Folsom Becomes 43rd Head Of State Jan. 20

The News

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 25—James E. Folsom will become Alabama's 43rd governor at noon Jan. 20 during a brief ceremony in front of the Dexter Avenue entrance to the capitol, after a parade in which school students from each of the 67 counties are expected to participate. Birmingham, Ala.

As most of Alabama's governors since 1865 have done, the six-foot, eight-inch chief executive will receive the oath of office while standing on or near the spot where Jefferson Davis stood when he took the oath as president of the Confederacy. Mon. 11-25-46

Chief Justice Lucien D. Gardner will administer the oath following invocation by Folsom's pastor, Dr. J. E. Marion, of the First Baptist Church of Cullman, and the newly installed governor will deliver his inaugural message.

From 9 a.m. until midnight, the inaugural day is to be a round of festivities.

The inaugural parade will form at 9 a.m., and the new governor is expected to follow tradition by riding up Dexter Avenue, in full dress and top hat with the retiring governor, Chauncey Sparks, at the head of the procession.

UPON REACHING the Capitol Folsom will take his position in the reviewing stand as a lengthy procession of bands, floats and military units passes.

The City of Montgomery will play host to the new governor. Final plans for the inaugural are being worked out by Mayor John L. Goodwyn, and Associate City Commissioners William P. Screws and Willie A. Gayle.

Richard T. Rives, well known Montgomery attorney, will be master of ceremonies.

A short while before Gov.-Elect Folsom takes the oath of office, brief inaugural ceremonies will be held in the Senate chamber for the new lieutenant governor, J. C. Inzer, of Gadsden. Chief Justice Gardner will administer the oath to the Senate's new presiding officer.

Following the inaugural address by the incoming governor, both Folsom and Inzer are to be on hand during an open house reception in the governor's offices, between 1:30 and 3:30 p.m.

A second open house reception will take place at the executive mansion between 3 and 5 p.m.

TWO DANCES will be features of inaugural night. A formal inaugural ball will take place in Hangar 6 at Maxwell Field, between 9 p.m. and 1 a.m., and a street dance will be staged on spacious Dexter Avenue.

Frank Boswell, a member of the inaugural executive committee, along with Mayor Goodwyn, John P. Kohn, Jr., Gould Beech and Melvin Dawkins, declared today that the official program of the inauguration will be presented in souvenir booklet form.

Every county in the state, Mr. Boswell declared, is expected to present a float, with high school students arranging and designing them. City schools, he declared, will furnish bands. In cases where there is more than one high school in a county, the students will cooperate in presenting joint floats.

THE THEME OF the inauguration, declared Mr. Boswell, will stress the need for greater educational opportunities.

Arrangements are being completed, he said, to take care of as many school children from other counties as care to attend the inauguration.

Commissioner Gayle and W. Cleve Stokes are chairman and vice chairman, respectively, of the inaugural entertainment committee.

Details of the inaugural parade are being worked out by Dr. Austin Meadows and Col. Millard Wescott, chairman and vice chairman, respectively, of the inaugural parade committee.

OTHER COMMITTEES are headed as follows:

Inaugural publicity committee, Ellis Stewart, chairman, and Charles G. Dobbins, vice chairman; decoration committee, Haygood Paterson, chairman, and T. N. Brown, vice chairman; transportation committee, Van Burer Gilbert, chairman, and R. F. Alley, vice chairman; housing committee, Roy E. Nolen, Jr., chairman, and Alex Kaufman, vice chairman; ball committee, Col. Everett Jackson, chairman, and Col. W. E. Covington, vice chairman; reception committee, Mrs. Francis Johns, chairman, and Mrs. Roy L. Nolen, vice chairman.

Most of the expense of the inauguration will be paid by the City of Montgomery.

Gov. Sparks, however, recently drew a warrant for $5,000, payable to Building Supt. Thames, toward constructing an inaugural reviewing stand and providing decorations. Thames has handled the capitol details during several administrations. He said he expected to use about $3,000 and to return the balance to the state.

EDITOR'S DIGEST

By ROBERT DURR

Governor-Elect Folsom Is Man Of Destiny

The Weekly Review
Birmingham, Ala.
Sat. 11-30-46

For quite some time, I have wanted to have a heart to heart talk with Governor-Elect James Folsom, of Alabama, to thank him personally for having been big enough not to inject the race issue into his campaign for the high office to which he has been elected, and let him in on the "as is" situation in the state, insofar as Alabama's largest minority in concern from the standpoint of ordinary folk like myself.

Well he scheduled me for a conference during the past week. We did have that heart to heart talk. I found that the name "Big Jim Folsom" is just about the only way you can describe Mr. Folsom. And I don't mean physically either. Just as sure as I am black and forty-seven, Mr. Folsom is going to prove to be the greatest governor Alabama has had in many a moon. He has a heart. He believes in the Golden Rule. He is determined to be the governor of all the people. He will insofar as he is able, protect all the people from any of the people who might get the idea of running over some other people, be they black or white, or what have you.

Of course, you know that when you run across a man who likes children, I think we have something there. In the course of our talk, he asked me how many children I had, and when given the number, he said, "You are a man after my own heart". I gathered, he is one of the rare human beings who recognizes that if a man, state or nation, has any immortality, it is in their children. I believe Mr. Folsom will strive to put a lot of money into the very important business of educating the children of Alabama, in order that they may go forth, and build a better Alabama.

I think it most fortunate from the standpoint of the people of Alabama that, Mr. Folsom was elected. Frankly, I think his election will mean more to the state, its people, and the entire South for that matter, than the election of any of he several others who held forth for the office to which Mr. Folsom will ascend on January 20th. Mr. Folsom has a heart. He comes from he people and he is peculiarly equipped to understand—really understand—and to appreciate what government ought mean to the least among the people. This man has not only a heart, but he has convictions. Believe it or not, on vital things, we see eye to eye. Suffice to say I feel much better after having talked with our next governor. I wanted to have this talk with him, because many of us had become greatly perturbed over the terrific drives against our people. Many of us know, that many laws, have been enacted in Alabama, to make it "legal" to assure the existence of the Negro for the state, and white supremacists for exploitation, oppression, humiliation, degradation, and destruction. And without sharing in the making and administration of the laws under which we live, even on the advisory level, we have known that unless the people who are elected to high office are determined to do what's right instead of hiding behind the against God-Negro laws to facilitate total economic strangulation of minorities within the state, we face an impossible and intolerable stuation in Alabama.

I informed Mr. Folsom that, my purpose in coming to see him in Cullman, was two-fold, (1 to express appreciation and (2) to arrange for a meeting with the members of Alabama Press Association ,to lay before him, some suggestions on matters pertaining to civil liberties, the ballot, labor, hospitalization, education, health, housing, and integration. Our committee will as an instrument and voice of the people, collect and lay before Mr. Flosom, our thinking on these matters, after his inauguration. He has asked that I do that. Any reader having any suggestions you would like included in our memorandum to be left with Mr. Folsom, is urged to write same out and forward to Yours Truly, for consideration by the ANA committee, for presentation to the governor.

As Governor of All the people of Alabama, Mr. Folsom will be pleased to see us represented at and in the Inauguration Parade Montgomery, on January 20th. And I think we should be there that day, like white on rice. This is the one time the great bands of A & M, Alabama State Teachers College, Tuskegee Institute, Parker, Rosedale, Fairfield bands and those of every other college, and high school in the state should be there, strutting their stuff with bells on. In the Inauguration Parade, every outstanding fraternal, church, civic and professional organization in the state should have representation. The people ought really be on parade that day, because the peoples man is going to take his scrub brush and bucket into the capitol of Alabama.

"Big Jim" Folsom is what the doctor ordered. I am sure he is headed for big places in the nation's affairs. Thats a lot for me to say. I said it when I first saw Willkie. I was right. My guess about Dewey was right too. Under our next governor, Alabama can go forward by going forward. As she goes forward, she can drag the South forward with her. Failure in Alabama affects the nation and the world. The Weekly Review

Governor-Elect Folsom and I, talked about the so-called race problem. He understands it better than most Alabamians I have talked to. That's saying a lot. One distinct advantage he has over a lot of people I have talked with is that, he does not have as much to unlearn and he aims to learn by talking with the leaders of our people in all walks of life, all over the state. And I think the smallest man in the state, be he white or black, could talk with Mr. Folsom. He is just that big. A man who is willing to listen to and talk with the people, gets to hear the voice of God. Birmingham, Ala.

Your next Governor of Alabama is a man of destiny. He is not going to let you run over anybody, and he is not going to let anybody run over you, and he will do his best to see that you get what is yours, under the Constitution of the United States of America—that you can be sure of, for the next four years, insofar as it is possible for Governor Folsom to assure as Chief Executive of the State of Alabama. Former Says He Is Definitely Through With Politics; Latter Promises No Wholesale Purge

Saturday 7-20-46

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 20—(AP)—Gov. Sparks' announcement that he was retiring from politics when his term expires in January and a visit by Gov.-Nominate James E. Folsom highlighted capitol activities during the last week.

"I do not plan to be a candidate for any office," Gov. Sparks said yesterday, "and I am looking forward with some degree of pleasure to laying down the responsibilities of the governorship."

7-20-46

The state's chief executive, who is 61, said he did not believe he would feel like undertaking another statewide campaign. A veteran legislator before he was elected to the governorship four years ago, Sparks said he planned to return to his Eufaula home to dabble at banking and farming, and practice some law on the side.

7-20-46

Alabama's governors are barred by the state constitution from running for the U. S. Senate or a state office for one year after expiration of the term for which they are elected.

News

In another development, the governor was quoted by The Montgomery Advertiser as saying that a "white party" and a "black party" should never be allowed to exist in Alabama or the South.

The paper quoted the executive as saying in an address yesterday before the Montgomery Council of Federal and State Agencies:

Saturday 7-20-46

"WE NEED HAVE NO FEAR because certain candidates have recently been elected in neighboring states and no state has ever been ruined because of the election of any individual.

7-20-46

"Perhaps it is the best thing that could happen to us, for we have been traveling too fast, in a political sense. It is time to put on the brakes, slow down and stop, look and listen."

News

The article said he called for the South to practice a "realistic tolerance" under which white and Negro would be allowed the privilege of voting when they have become sufficiently educated and properly qualified under election statutes.

To state employes generally the best news of the week was the governor-nominate's declaration that, despite his campaign talk of using his "suds bucket and mop" to clean up the capitol, he does not intend a wholesale purge of non policy-making employes or junking the state merit system.

Non policy makers who have been doing their work satisfactorily and who have not engaged in political activities, he said, need not fear for their jobs.

"I not only want them to stay, but I will insist on it," Folsom said in a press conference. "In addition I hope to make it more attractive for them to stay by raising salaries in the lower wage brackets to keep up with the cost of living."

THE GOVERNOR-DESIGNATE left a trail of blushing stenographers and other women employes, kissing them right and left on his way in to confer with Gov. Chauncey Sparks and when leaving to start back to his Cullman home.

He said he plans to accept Gov. Sparks offer of an office in the State Capitol which he indicated he might open in September.

News from most state offices was sparse with hot weather and vacations bringing on the annual mid-Summer lull in state government affairs.

Finance Director Hayse Tucker released a financial statement in which he pointed out that some $80,000,000 now listed on the state treasurer's books is tied up in various ways to make it unavailable for general use.

He said a balance of $53,000,000 was shown as cash on hand as of June 1 and $24,417,000 represented sinking funds not included in the total figure.

THE STATEMENT LISTED $26,586,748 as "necessary for working capital and encumbered funds due to purchases having been authorized." The other funds are earmarked for various purposes or are held in trust for state agencies or departments.

Gov. Sparks wired members of Alabama's congressional delegation to urge support for House Bill 6952 which would allocate federal funds for construction of dormitories, classrooms and laboratories at institutions of higher learning.

Many state officials joined the State Guard encampment at Dauphin Island, near Mobile, to participate in a three-week schedule of military training.

Although the State Public Service Commission called off all hearings this month in transportation cases, Western Union Telegraph Company requested and was granted a 10 per cent increase in intrastate rates.

The increase was authorized for one year effective today.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 12—(PPS)—This city set something of a precedent during the week when a Negro, Attorney Charles Matthews, 39-year-old former deputy district attorney of Los Angeles county, was appointed to the five-man police commission by Mayor Fletcher Bowron.

Ironically Matthews was named to succeed Van M. Griffith, the commissioner who occasioned the entire shuffle by his battles with the mayor stretching over the last several months.

The appointment of Matthews, subject to approval by the City council, is a signal victory for numerous citizens organizations of the community who have waged a long battle for representation in the city government and particularly the police commission. Sat. 8-16-46

Matthews, a graduate of the University of California, Berkeley, served as a deputy district attorney for this county from 1931-45. He was appointed to this post to succeed Leon Whittaker, first Negro to hold the post, after the death of the latter.

Matthews resigned two years ago on the grounds that the office offered no chance for promotion. He is a registered Republican.

Congresswoman Douglass Pleads For Equality, Regardless of Race

Journal & Guide Sat 2-23-46

Norfolk, Va.

NORFOLK — Equal opportunity for all, irrespective of race, creed or color, to advance according to ability, was reaffirmed as the very essential of democracy by Congresswoman Helen Gahagan Douglas of California, addressing an audience of several hundred colored and white persons in the auditorium of Blair Junior High School Sunday night.

ALL BROTHERS

Congresswoman Douglas, who appeared here under auspices of the Norfolk Women's Council for Interracial Cooperation, declared "We are all brothers, and equality for all must be practiced even in the market places."

She envisioned a world in which people shall come first, that the principle of human brotherhood shall transcend the motives of profits or politics. In this atomic age, "our only hope is international cooperation of an unprecedented kind," Mrs. Douglas said. S-2-23-46

MUST SHED PREJUDICES

"We must get rid of our old prejudices, and our new prejudices," she observed.

"We are the most powerful nation on earth. We have the greatest natural resources, the greatest force of skilled labor. We ate better even during the war than ever before. Yet none of these is the greatest of our assets. The greatest of our assets is freedom. And our freedom rests on the equality of man," Mrs. Douglas asserted.

"We have just emerged from the greatest of wars. That was fought between the forces that believed in the equality of men. We did not fight to save democracy all over the world. We fought to keep from becoming slaves, and for no other reason, for that is what we would have become had the forces of oppression won. We won the shooting war but the psychological war is still with us."

ATOMIC POWER

The Congresswoman said that scientists are coming and going to and from Washington "to save us" from the frightful potentialities of the atomic power, and declared that our first and compelling duty is harness the "power within us. That is far more important than to harness atomic power."

Helen Douglas Advises:

Elect Progressives To Pass Lynch Bill

The Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sat. 9-28-46

EDITOR'S NOTE—The Courier has asked Mrs. Douglas, running for re-election on the Democratic ticket to comment on the question: "Will the next Congress pass an anti-lynching bill?" Next week we will publish the comment of Frederick M. Roberts, Republican opponent, on the same question.

By HELEN GAHAGAN DOUGLAS
(Representative, Fourteenth California District)

I was asked a straightforward question, "Will the next Congress enact an anti-lynching law?"

I wish the answer could be as straightforward as the question. I wish I could say "yes," and let it go at that. But I cannot.

The Eightieth Congress will enact an anti-lynching law ONLY if the people of the United States send the proper Representatives to Washington. Sat. 9-28-46

MUST ELECT PROGRESSIVES

The Eightieth Congress will not enact an anti-lynching law if the people of the United States, in this November's election, choose the wrong type of Representatives.

One of the first bills before the last Congress was continuation of the House Un-American Activities Committee—the group known previously as the Dies Committee. It goes without saying that the progressive elements in Congress—both Democratic and Republican—

THERE MUST BE NO LYNCHING

I have seen reports that lynching has decreased in the United States. Such statistics are meaningless to a discussion of a bill to prevent lynching. There must be no lynching.

So long as one American citizen is killed by self-appointed vigilantes, there can be no complete democracy in the United States.

So long as one American citizen is killed because of the pigmentation of his skin, there can be no complete democracy in the United States. The Courier

So long as one American citizen is killed because of his beliefs, there can be no complete democracy in the United States.

Certainly democracy is incomplete where men and women are high-handedly maltreated and assaulted by skulking sadists disdainful of the law.

As Representative of the Fourteenth California District, I assure the readers of The Pittsburgh Courier that the California delegation will, with only one or two exceptions, support anti-lynching legislation, and it will support anti-poll tax legislation. These matters are not even controversial in our delegation. But there are other delegations in the United States that will either fight against such legislation or, at best, whose members will divide their votes. It is these delegations which definitely will need laundering this coming November.

A BIG "IF"

In the Seventy-ninth Congress I introduced both an FEPC bill and a anti-poll tax bill. I hardly have to state that neither became law. Nor do I have to tell why.

Unless the iniquitous conspiracy between the "white supremacy" voted against continuing this witch-hunting committee. More than 180 votes lined up against it.

If the people of the United States re-elect these 180 Representatives without changing the rest of the House, it is safe to say that no anti-lynching bill will be enacted for the simple reason that they will be outnumbered.

WILL ALSO GET FEPC

But if this November enough progressive, patriotic, unprejudiced Americans are sent to Washington to bring this number up to 250, then an anti-lynching bill will be passed and will become a law of the land. Pittsburgh Pa.

Furthermore, if this is done, you will also see an anti-poll tax bill, a fair employment practices act, and a properly devised full employment bill passed by the same Congress.

What is more, with the proper Representatives elected this November, a real housingf program and a genuine price control act will be written on the books.

RECATIONARIES WILL BLOCK LEGISLATION

An anti-lynching bill is as impossible to pass as an anti-poll tax bill in any Congress composed of a vociferous minority who believe in "white supremacy," before they believe in Americanism, and who are willing to filibuster decent, humane legislation to death.

An anti-lynching bill is as impossible to pass as a fair employment practices act in any Congress which includes a coalition of reactionary Republicans and reactionary Democrats determined to block liberal legislation at any cost.

I believe that an anti-lynching bill should be passed and will be passed by Congress and signed by the President. Whether this is done in the Eightieth Congress or in the Eighty-first Congress will depend solely on the wisdom exercised by the people in selecting the makeup of Congress. Sat. 9-28-46

An anti-lynching bill will not be passed IF the wrong men and women are sent to Congress. That's the answer.

My answer, then, must necessarily be "IF." An anti-lynching bill will be passed IF the right men and women are sent to Congress.

New York, N.Y. Wed. 8-21-46

HARTFORD, Conn., Aug. 20 (UP).—George M. Fitch, 29, New Haven, became today the first Negro to be appointed to the State Athletic Commission's staff of referees.

He started his ring career 12 years ago. He has had 65 bouts as a pro, losing only 10.

Fitch was one of heavyweight champion Joe Louis' favorite sparmates. He helped the Bomber prepare for both bouts against Billy Conn. He worked out with Louis at Pompton Lakes, N. J., Sunday as the title holder began to prepare for his go against Tami Mauriello next month.

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky

It seems to me altogether wrong that Clare Luce should be permitted to retire from public life. True, she said that she would not be a candidate again, but that statement was made in circumstances so emotionally tense as to require reconsideration—certainly by her constituents.

Of the ladies of the congress, Clare Luce continues to excite the most interest and attention. I once worked for this lady in the relationship of a free-lance writer to an assistant editor. She was then not as popular or unpopular, depending upon how one approaches the subject. I admired her then for her fine intellect, her ability to get at the heart of a story, her keen and precise mind that grasped ideas, even when actions and events confused them.

Clare Luce is unusual not because she is an interesting woman but because she is a brilliant person. Like Anne O'Hare McCormick and Dorothy Thompson, her power of expression is generated by knowledge and conviction. If women find her repartee ungenteel and overwhelming, they are correct in their judgment because she thinks sharply and precisely and finds the hypocrisies of gentility vulgar. She speaks with sureness of purpose, because when she speaks, she has a purpose. It is never the idle chatter of one who either dines to be seen or sings for her dinner.

These women, Clare and Anne and Dorothy, influence American opinion as few men do because they are incapable of that masculine compromise which goes by the phrase, being a good fellow. They speak with the positiveness of a mother fighting for the character of her own child.

There have been tragedies in Clare Luce's life which have aroused in her dormant spiritual powers and have altered her outlook, making it difficult for her to play the game of politics for personal glory and profit and power. She seeks rather to arouse a flaccid public to the tragedy of their own lives; to the broken families; to prejudices which reject those whom God created for no other reason than that they were made to look different from others; to the heartless betrayal of civilization in the rush for a promised but false security.

It is unpopular and even unprofitable to swim against the tide, as anyone knows who during these last 10 years or more has spoken and written and preached the error of discarding centuries of wisdom for a decade of wisecracks. To such a woman as Clare Luce, unpopularity can mean nothing except a stimulant to a greater activity and a swifter and surer battle for what she believes to be right.

It is as futile as it is impossible to advise such a woman to be practical, for practicality can mean little more than time-serving, than making the best of a bad bargain—the sort of thing that Senator Alben Barkley does in public and Senator Robert Wagner in private. And it has been their practicality that has left us without principles or ideals, while such a person as Clare Luce cuts through the fog of confused thinking and, finding the error, hits it down with a sarcasm so deadly and an aim so sure that the hypocrites flee like shamed creatures.

Yet, were she nothing but a sarcastic, satirical person, she would be a shrew like Harold Ickes, who, soured on life and his own fate, finds no redeeming grace in anything upon earth or in heaven or I presume hell, except those who happen, for a rare moment, to accept his biliousness as philosophy.

Clare Luce is different, for ever she holds high the deep idealism and abiding faith of a traditional Americanism, as embodied in the philosophy of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution. It may appear that she sometimes quarrels over details that seem to mean nothing; yet they are part of a mosaic of the permanent; put all together they belong to the eternal and objective truth that man is his brother's keeper not only to support him materially but to guide him spiritually aright.

It is not likely that she will be permitted to retire from politics as she has announced. It should not be permitted.

CLARE BOOTHE LUCE ANSWERS

Where Do You Stand on the Race Problem?

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 7-13-46

The following excerpts are taken from an article by Rep. Clare Boothe Luce (R., Conn.) appearing in the current issue of Today's Woman.

All of us know that of all our domestic derangements, the situation of colored people is the gravest and in many ways the most fundamental problem that will face our nation in the years ahead.

In all the half-million letters I have received, I doubt if a thousand treated exclusively with the problem of what we ought to do about this one-tenth of our population—the one-tenth that is indisputably the worst fed, worst educated, worst housed and the worst treated.

Clare Luce

This silence about colored people — when on every other subject where justice or inequity are involved, average Americans are so talkative and communicative and opinionated—is a tacit admission of guilt.

It does not mean that we are failing utterly "to solve the race problem," but it does mean that we are hiding from ourselves the real extent and meaning of the problem and, therefore, we are incapable of seeing what must be done as clearly as we see what should be done with relation to our other, chiefly less important, domestic problems.

I can see this very plainly from my correspondence. Among the letters I receive are a goodly number of truly disinterested ones—mostly from women, who write me, asking:

"What can I do to make America strong, a better, happier, healthier, safer country for my children to grow up in?" "How can I prove my faith in democracy?"

One Ready Answer

To any woman who asks this question in complete sincerity, I always give one ready answer:

"Do what you can—and you can do much—to destroy that most unChristian and undemocratic of attitudes—in your own country—Racial Discrimination."

Let me talk for twenty minutes with any woman about the colored race, and at the end of the conversation, I will tell you whether or not she is a woman who practices the precepts of Christ, or one who simply professes Christianity.

"The Best Cook"

I know a woman who raved for years that she had the "best cook that was ever born," and who then embarked on a diatribe about racial inferiority when the "best cook" one day asked for the same wages she then had to pay a truly inferior white cook.

I know dozens of white men and women who were nursed all through their helpless infancies at the breasts of black women, who suddenly announce that black women are "incapable of assuming responsibility."

I know, unhappily, thousands of Americans who in their churches every Sunday subscribe to the doctrine that all men are creatures of God; that the only rights are human rights; that every man is to be judged by spiritual standards; that all men enjoy equal privileges in the eyes of God; and who, on the other six days of the week, judge their fellow men in office, factory, kitchen, school and college by purely zoological standards—worse, by a purely visual judgment—is his skin black or white?

Blind Can "See"

Paradoxically enough—if every American were suddenly struck blind—he could see on this question.

So, I believe the sternest and truest test of today's woman, one who calls herself either a Christian or a democrat, is where she stands and what she says—not only in public—but in private—about the colored people.

Ask Innocent, Wise

Ask the innocent, the simple, and the wise in your own community about colored people.

Seek out some children—your own, perhaps. Ask them, in good faith and in the utmost sincerity, "What is the difference between a colored child and a white child?"

If they answer, as they will, "He is black and I am white" (as they might say, "This flower is white and that one is red"), then ask—and wait for the answer, don't give it—"Does this make him smarter, or you smarter? Him a better little boy or you a better little boy?"

The child's bewilderment at the irrelevance of your question will be your answer. If you seek to "enlighten" him with prejudice, you will have revealed yourself to yourself.

Then, if you are a churchgoer, ask your minister, or priest, this question: "What, in the eyes of God, is the difference between me, a white woman, and a black one in similar profession or circumstances?"

Other Fronts for You

Of course, if your mind is made up, your prejudices jelled, your heart closed, your conscience stilled on this most vital question that faces our nation—that is different.

There are other fronts for you to fight on in the name of democracy and Christianity. Good luck to you on them.

For my part, I'd rather be right in the thick of the battle for democracy, where the greatest moral question facing America will be settled—the colored question.

Is Clare Booth Luce Disillusioned?

Birmingham, News, Alabama

BY MARQUIS CHILDS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—Long residence in Washington is likely to induce a corrosive cynicism concerning human motives. It may be that this is merely an occupational disease of politicians and those who associate with politicians, accentuated in the Capital, where politics is the chief occupation.

In announcing she had been received into the Catholic church, Clare Boothe Luce apparently felt it necessary to add that she was retiring from political life, lest her action be interpreted in some way as a bid for votes.

Like so many others before her, Mrs. Luce has discovered it is difficult in politics to get one's serious utterances taken seriously. Her final decision to retire may have had some connection with a drama of disillusionment that took place 10 days before the announcement of her religious conversion.

THE CONGRESSWOMAN FROM CONNECTICUT put a great deal of time and stress on a speech to be delivered at the annual Lincoln Day banquet of the Republican members of the House and the Women's Republican Club of the District of Columbia. The speech dealt with the Negro in America.

Mrs. Luce hit hard at injustice and discrimination. It was a long way from the traditional Lincoln Day speech paying lip service to Republican dogma on the Negro.

Running through the speech was the theme of the brotherhood of man; the profound belief that underlies the Christian faith, more often honored in the breach than in the observance.

"As Christians," said Mrs. Luce, "we know there are no such things as 'Negro rights' or 'white rights.' There are only human rights which Negro and white and brown and yellow all claim equally as members of the human family and children of God. In every way the Christian approach to the problem is the soundest, the truest and the safest."

MRS. LUCE'S WELL-DRESSED, WELL-FED AUDIENCE WAS STARTLED. They had expected, from her, wit and sarcasm at the expense of the Democrats.

As she warmed to her theme, she went even further. She attacked Sen. Bilbo, of Mississippi, directly by name, a violation of "congressional courtesy."

"It has been said," Mrs. Luce declared, "'if any man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar.' Against this supreme charge, Sen. Bilbo must find himself defenseless, now and eternally. Let us try as best we can to stay out of this dreadful docket with him, for unhappily all of us have, to some extent, failed our brothers."

This was calling a U. S. senator a liar, even though it was done by way of the Bible. When Mrs. Luce finished her speech, there was only a faint pitter-patter of perfuctory applause. Several choleric Republicans are said to have left the dining room in the middle of the address.

Thurs 2-21-46

REP. CHARLES LA FOLLETTE, of Indiana, a liberal Republican and one of the few at the dinner who heartily applauded Mrs. Luce's courage, offered to have the speech put in the Congressional Record. It was discovered, however, that this could not be done without deleting the references to Bilbo, in defence to congressional courtesy, and Mrs. Luce refused to permit her remarks to be edited.

The press carried almost no reference to the speech. Altogether, her most earnest effort since she has been in Washington was ignored, leaving her to the unhappy conclusion that, whereas a wisecrack will make Page 1, virtue must be its own reward.

Disillusion was compounded for Mrs. Luce when she learned those who had been annoyed with her speech were explaining it away by saying she was merely bidding for the Negro and the labor vote in her district. This was the unkindest cut of all.

THERE HAS BEEN SO MUCH DOUBLE TALK about the "Negro problem." That may be one reason for the reception given Mrs. Luce's hard-hitting speech.

But this cynical Capital is always looking for hidden motives. The game of political poker, as it is played in Washington, takes nothing for granted.—©.

REP. CLARE BOOTHE LUCE OF CONN.

Nation Has to Complete Its Half-Finished Job

Afro American Baltimore, Md.

Sat 4-6-46

(The following excerpts are taken from the address at the Lincoln Day Banquet of the Republican members of the House made by Clare Boothe Luce, Congresswoman from Connecticut. Mrs. Luce was advised to have her address read into the Congressional Record, but refused when told that her remarks about Senator Bilbo would have to be deleted.)

By CLARE BOOTHE LUCE

There are many times, I am sure, when all Americans, Democrats no less than Republicans, confess to themselves, "Our treatment of colored people is an American hypocrisy which every good citizen must do everything in his power to end." But, the inescapable political fact is that this thought is in the direct line of our great Republican tradition, and is only divergently embraced by a few Northern Democrats.

The Republican party was born in the tradition of freedom for colored people. In the establishment of it, Republican men and women invested their hearts and their minds and their blood. But it cannot be finally ours, as Republicans, until we have, as Republicans, completed the task which was begun by that greatest of all Republicans, Abraham Lincoln.

Either we Republicans must do it, or it will be done for us. For of one thing I am certain: the moral sense of this nation cannot long be denied. We must again have a great Republican President, or we shall have a great revolution—a great President who will solve this greatest of American dilemmas and finish the job that Abraham Lincoln so nobly started.

The colored man who was freed by Abraham Lincoln from the individual master must be freed from his present condition, which is that of being the slave of our whole society. It is our job to free him completely from the economic slavery that is still relatively his lot.

Must Be Republican

That is one of the greatest meanings of the Republican task before us, and one of the main reasons why we must elect a Republican Congress.

If Lincoln and the Republican men and women of his time had the moral courage to roll up their sleeves and wade into the job when it was twice as great, shall it phase Republican men and women of today when the job is only half as great?

How should we as individual Republicans approach the problem?

lem? There are many ways.

1. We can think of it as a Christion problem. The ethics of our Christian morality will not let us rest until our conscience is clear on the so-called color question.

There are no such things as "colored rights" or "white rights"; there are only human rights, which all claim equally as members of the human family and children of God.

Sat 4-6-46

Is Soundest Approach

In every way, the Christian approach to the problem is the soundest, the truest and the safest.

The Bilboes of our Congress evoke many secular authorities, and political and economic principles for their intolerant attack on the colored man. But not even Senator Bilbo has had the impudence to quote Scripture as witness.

Let us quote some Scripture for him. It has been said, "If any man say, 'I love God,' and hateth his brother, he is a liar." Against this supreme charge, Senator Bilbo must find himself defenseless, now and eternally.

2. There is another way we Americans can approach the problem: as patriots. Can we, as patriots, rest easily so long as there is a black blot on the American flag for which America must face the world with shame?

3. The third way to approach the problem is as practical, money-minded men and women, to figure out in dollars and cents what our failure to solve the problem costs us.

How much does it cost us, as taxpayers, when a member of an average colored family falls ill? Or has children? When such contingencies occur in the average impoverished colored family few ever think of calling a doctor.

That is to say, a private doctor. And why? Because such families have had the previous experience of not being able to obtain a doctor.

For doctors, too, must live, and alacrity does not spring spontaneously when the doctor's experience tells him that he almost certainly will not be paid.

But whatever the merits of that may be, do you know what the standard practice is, as every hospital in America can testify? A colored family calls an amublance and either public or private philanthropic funds pay the bill. Those funds come from the community pocket.

Or let us remember the long depression years when colored people constituted a disproportionate share of the nation's relief load. No practical minded citizen wants to have to lift that kind of load again. It is too costly to the taxpayers when people are on relief. It is cheaper for all that they should be working.

War Program Costly

As a member of the House Military Affairs Committee, I can tell you that the whole nation was forced to pay for it when wartime training programs financed from Federal funds were barred to colored by discriminatory administration of State and local educational officials.

In the 18 Southern and border States where colored constitute 22 per cent of the total population, they constituted only 4 per cent of the total trainees for war industries in January, 1942.

In the State of Texas, where colored persons were 14.3 per cent of the population, they comprised less than 2 per cent of the persons admitted to training for defense production in 1942.

Discrimination weakened the Army's fighting potential and the potential of our production belts. Many a white mother today has sacrificed a white son, on the altars of white prejudice.

In Baltimore colored people comprise 20 per cent of the population and are crammed and jammed into 2 per cent of the residential area. In Chicago a quarter of a million live in units built to house 150,000 people.

Impose a Burden

These conditions impose an insupportable burden on the communities where they exist.

They stack up to health bills, sanitation bills, crime bills, prison bills, police bills, fire bills and a continually lengthening list of costs to the community. These are the price of poverty and the human degradation which poverty breeds.

Hard-headed, practical Republicans know that these are the ways in which we can save money: by making it possible for the colored man to earn a decent living, by freeing him economically so that he may develop all the talents and capabilities the good Lord gave him and by making it possible for him to hold any job for which those capabilities fit him.

No, the personal prejudices of such men as Senator Bilbo are not only a spiritual blot on our civilization, they are an economic drain on the purse of the whole nation.

The monumental size of the national debt requires that every able-bodied man and woman in the United States must produce to his fullest capacity, if we are ever to free ourselves of that staggering burden.

In the face of such a necessity the personal hatreds of the Bilbos are too expensive for the nation to afford any longer. We can no longer pay for such Democratic juvenile delinquencies.

As Mr. Joseph Martin pointed out in a recent debate on the House floor, there were six votes in the House Committee on Rules to bring out the FEPC bill.

Four of them were cast by Republicans—which constituted the entire Republican representation on the Rules Committee.

He further pointed out that if just one Democrat would vote for releasing the bill, the legislation would come before the House.

While the 13,000,00 colored people in America are perhaps the largest single bloc of Americans who suffer the disabilities of prejudice in the competition for jobs, there are many more millions of Americans comprising numerous groups of white Americans who suffer equal disabilities for reasons of prejudices.

There are millions of Americans of foreign birth who cannot get jobs in many parts of this country. There are many places where Catholics find themselves barred from jobs.

Citizens of Italian or Mexican birth find the same difficulties. There is prejudice against Jews and against Poles in many places. The total of prejudice is staggering.

Men of good will have recognized two things at the outset, in their effort to establish a permanent FEPC:

One, that prejudices cannot be legislated out of existence. Legislation merely can penalize them; only education can eradicate them.

Two, that it would be difficult, if not impossible, to enforce such legislation. Prejudice is largely a subjective matter of intent in the mind of an individual and therefore is not easily amenable to legal proof, which would be required for successful enforcement.

And these two practical difficulties, it was realized, would preclude the possibility of such a law having an immediate corrective result.

In that event, why have the law? Why expend the great effort and energy it would require to pass such a law?

Republicans of good will and vision believe that despite the practical obstacles, such a law is desirable because it would constitute a constructive step in changing the moral attitudes of any community where prejudices might exist.

'White Artists' Clause Before D. A. R. Session

Birmingham News
Birmingham Ala.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 21 —(AP)—The daughters of the American Revolution has agreed to study rental contracts which bar Negro entertainers from the D. A. R. Constitution Hall at Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Julius Y. Talmadge, of Athens, Ga., president-general of the D. A. R., announced last night a special committee has been appointed "to go thoroughly into the matter of leases" which contain the words "white artists only."

A spokesman for a 17-woman committee, headed by Rep. Clare Boothe Luce (R., Conn.) said the group's activities in the past few months caused numerous D. A. R. chapters to petition Mrs. Talmadge to have the "white artists only" clause deleted from the contracts.

The 17-woman committee took the step to permit Negro entertainers to appear in commercial programs at the D. A. R.'s famous hall. They had submitted to the resolutions committee a recommendation that the words "white artists only," instituted in 1932, be deleted in future leases. Jue. 5-21-46

The showdown was expected today or tomorrow.

Rep. Clare Boothe Luce (R., Conn)., a member of the committee submitting the resolution, is not a delegate to the congress. Six of the 17 on the committee are delegates.

There has been much controversy over the clause. At one time Marian Anderson, the Negro contralto, had been banned from appearing in Constitution Hall. In 1943, however, at the invitation of the D. A. R. she gave a benefit performance in the hall. An official of the congress said the Negro Tuskegee Institute choir was scheduled to sing at the Hall next month.

Recently Hazel Scott, Negro pianist, was refused permission to present a concert in the hall. After government seizure of Washington buildings for wartime purposes only Constitutional Hall was left in the city for accommodation of large crowds. Jue. 5-21-46

Constitution Hall Issue Is Revised

Jue. 5-21-46

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 20 —(AP)—Mrs. Julius Y. Talmadge, of Athens, Ga., president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, charged tonight that Rep. Clare Boothe Luce (R.-Conn.) was the leader of a "rebellious group seeking to force a change in our rules governing Constitution Hall at Washington, D. C."

"This little band of women, who style themselves 'loyal members of the DAR,' formed an unconstitutional committee calling itself a 'DAR Committee against Racial Discrimination in Constitution Hall,' and is, therefore, misrepresenting itself both to the general public and to the membership of the society," Mrs. Talmadge said in an address opening the DAR's 55th continental congress.

The committee, composed of 17 women, including Mrs. Luce, has submitted a recommendation to the DAR resolutions committee calling for elimination of the words "white artists only" in rental contracts for Constitution Hall. Jue. 5-21-46

Last Fall Hazel Scott, Negro pianist, was refused permission to rent the hall for a concert and her husband; Rep. Adam C. Powell (D. R. ALP-N. Y.), brought the matter to the floor of the House of Representatives.

Mrs. Talmadge told the 2,000 delegates to the congress that the DAR national board of management last October "reaffirmed the well-known decision regarding use of Constitution Hall—based upon conformity with the prevailing customs in the District of Columbia."

She said the DAR "has been accused of being un-Christian" and that "there have been personal attacks upon me, the principal reason—seemingly being—that I am a daughter of the South and their purpose is to stir up sectional and racial discord."

Mrs. Talmadge said a special committee was named at a board meeting last Saturday to study the Hall's leases and contracts and that the committee would make a report later.

A DAR spokesman said that in view of appointment of the board committee, the resolution calling for elimination of the "white artists only" clause probably would not be reported out for action by the congress. Jue. 5-21-46

"Be it stated here and now," Mrs. Talmadge said, "that pressure groups and non-active members, who express themselves through the press, the radio and other media, are very much mistaken if they think they exert any influence whatsoever upon the members of the national board."

Of the 17-woman committee, one is not a DAR member and only six are delegates to the congress. Mrs. Luce is not a delegate.

Before the opening of the congress, Major-General Ray E. Porter, director of the War Department's Special Planning Division, declared the only way to have a strong standing army and adequate reserve forces would be to establish compulsory peace time military training.

Mrs. Luce Disregards DAR Order

The Call
Kansas City, Mo.

Says Committee Will Not Be Dissolved

5-31-46

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.

Representative Clare Boothe Luce of Connecticut, in a telegram to Mrs. Julius Y. Talmadge, national president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, said that the committee against racial discrimination in the use of Constitution hall will not be dissolved and will continue its efforts to have persons of any race perform in the Washington auditorium. Friday

This statement was in answer to action made by the 55th continental congress of the DAR, meeting in this city, ordering dissolution of the 17-woman committee after it had sought deletion of the "white artists only" clause in the hall's rental contracts.

Blames Luce for Row

Blaming Mrs. Luce for starting a row at the DAR meeting, Mrs. Grace L. Brosseau, national chairman of the DAR resolution committee, said:

"If Clare Luce had not injected herself into this, it would have been settled long ago. The board would have acted quietly on it, if it had come from a veteran member, but the national board is not going to be dictated to by a woman who has not even attended a DAR meeting."

Mrs. E. C. Denny Vann, floor spokesman, pointed out that Negroes are not the only ones barred from the Constitutional hall by the rental contract. She said that the organization had carried out programs to aid Indians and yet a talented Indian could not appear on the hall's program. The contract also refuses Filipinos, some South Americans, and others the right to appear at the hall, she emphasized.

5-31-46

Ban Madam Kai Shek

"The dirtiest stevedore would be welcome, but not Madam Chiang Kai-shek," she said.

Mrs. Brosseau said: "We have had rows in the DAR before, but this isn't a racial discrimination issue—it's a matter of DAR policy." Friday

Mrs. Luce's committee has sought deletion of the rental contract phrase after the DAR refused Hazel Scott permission to use the hall for a concert last fall.

Wilmington Pharmacist Elected GOP Treasurer

Dr. A. Roland Milburn Served for 20 Years as Republican Ward Chairman: Held Co. Post

Sat. 12-28-46

WILMINGTON, Del.—Dr. A. Roland Milburn, Sixth Ward Republican chairman for the past 20 years, was elected treasurer of the Republican City Committee last week to become the first colored citizen to be given so much responsibility in local politics.

Election of the popular pharmacist, who is a brother-in-law of Marian Anderson, was expected because of his outstanding work among minority group voters here. He succeeds Ellwood S. Leach who was elected chairman of the Committee.

Operates Pharmacy

Dr. Milburn, proprietor of the Ninth Street Pharmacy, was born in Philadelphia, attended the public schools there, but has been a local resident for 40 years.

He is a graduate of Howard University, Washington, where he was elected to membership in the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity. He obtained his pharmacist's degree from Philadelphia College of Pharmacy in 1917.

The new treasurer got his start in politics through his uncle, the late Dr. Samuel G. Elbert, for whom a Wilmington elementary school is named. As political leader he has never lost the Sixth Ward either in city or in general elections.

Held County Post

Dr. Milburn served for several years, starting in 1921, as a Deputy County Treasurer and Tax Receiver for New Castle County. He is married to the former Miss Pauline C. Fisher, whose brother, Orpheus Fisher, is the husband of Miss Anderson.

He also is a brother-in-law of John O. Hopkins, owner of the National Theatre, who served 16 two-year terms as a member of City Council from the Sixth Ward, a record in local history.

Dr. Milburn, who lives at 922 French St., is a member of the Pyramid and Commissioners Clubs of Philadelphia, Monday Club, the Sixth Ward Republican Club, the Elks and Ezion Methodist Church.

Assign Col. Mann To Clemency Board

Journal & Guide Norfolk, Va.

By ANPA News Service

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Lt. Col. Theophilus Mann of Chicago, who recently returned from the European theatre of operations has been assigned to the War Department clemency board which recently began to review the cases of all of the 34,260 military prisoners serving general court martial sentences. 2-2-46

This board, of which Owen J. Roberts, former associate justice of the United States Supreme Court, is chairman, will effect such reduction in sentences as may be warranted on the basis of the individual records in each case.

Assignment of Col. Mann to this board is regarded as a guarantee that the highest standards of fairness will be maintained in this postwar review and that clemency will be granted, wherever it is warranted. A large number of the cases to be reviewed involve colored military prisoners.

Only Colored Investigator in Africa and Italy Returns

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. 2-2-46

NAPLES, Italy (By Cable) — Among the thousands of soldiers of both races who left here aboard the SS Richardson, which was scheduled to dock in New York last week was Special Agent Samuel R. Pierce, Jr., 24, of Ocean Cove, Long Island.

Pierce, it has been revealed, was the only member of the colored race to serve as an agent with America's Criminal Investigation Department throughout the North African and Italian campaigns.

Previous mention might have drawn added personal danger to his perilous job as well as perhaps hampered his efficiency.

A 1943 Cornell University graduate and former football star, there, Pierce is returning after having chalked up an enviable efficiency record with the CID here, which resulted in his receiving six citations.

He plans to continue his law studies at Harvard University, where he was studying when he entered service.

While here, he worked indiscriminately rather than solely among members of the colored race, helping to crack some of the largest CID cases here.

Typical was that of the Lane gang in Rome a few months ago, which involved a million-dollar counterfeiting ring.

Escaped Without Scratch

While his department lost some 27 men alone in Italy in skirmishes with lawbreakers, Pierce managed to escape without a scratch.

His closest shave, he says, came in Casablanca over a year ago, when, disguised as a native and hot on the trail of some enemy espionage agents, he had to fight and shoot his way out of a trap set with half dozen paid Arab assailants. 2-2-46

Cracking cases overseas has led him to assume at various times, the roles of a member of different types of Army units, an AWOL GI, a Frenchman and the whatever else occasion demanded.

Life Valued Lightly

"The war is over, but life over here is, if anything, cheaper than it was during combat. Murder is one of the biggest things with which investigators are faced daily.

However, MTO officials choose to be close-mouthed and refuse to divulge any figures on the major crime record for this theater.

Although Pierce is a fond collector of guns, he carried one only on the most dangerous assignments. Instead, the 6-foot 190-pound investigator relies on his wits to handle difficult situations.

Preparation for Job

Pierce, it has been revealed, after regular college hours, busied himself studying a number of subjects related to intelligence work long before the CID job was offered, because he thought it would help greatly his study and broaden his understanding of law.

As a result, when the opportunity did present itself, he was ready and qualified. His record attests to the fact that he was very well qualified to move in that circle of veteran crime-busters that the CID usually employs.

Resignation of Harold Ickes Takes Friend From Cabinet

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat 2-23-46

WASHINGTON — (AFRO Bureau) — The resignation of Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes from President Truman's cabinet while expected for many months came as a surprise to the Capital, Wednesday.

With the exception of Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Commerce, none of the men who surrounded the late President Roosevelt and set the pace for the liberal trends which were introduced with the New Deal remain in the Truman administration.

Ickes, long the butt of attack by both Republican opponents and reactionary Democratic elements, has a long record as a progressive and a liberal. As Secretary of the Interior he has consistently opposed all efforts of Southerners to extend the pattern of segregation both within the department and in the parks, grounds and recreational facilities operating on Government property under his jurisdiction.

Opposed DAR Action

He was one of the leaders in by its own admission couldn't the fight against the Daughters of the American Revolution when they banned Marian Anderson from Constitution Hall and he was directly responsible for Miss Anderson's appearance in her Easter concert at the Lincoln Memorial.

With the departure of Ickes the appointment of Judge William Hastie as governor of the Virgin Islands also hangs in the balance. Judge Hastie was Ickes's choice for the post and with Hastie still unconfirmed speculation is rife as to how much influence Ickes can now wield in consummating the appointment in face of the bitter opposition being hatched up by friends of deposed Governor Harrington. Sat 2-23-46

Ickes, an old Teddy Roosevelt Bull Mooser, has been involved in many fights both before and since coming into the cabinet three years ago in which the race issue has been paramount.

Some idea of the extent of his convictions on these matters is reflected in the case last year when he fired one of his top policy making assistants when it was called to his attention that the latter had in his audience a colored woman elevator operator.

Enemy of Bigotry

Ickes took the position that he was no place in his department if he would have to serve Bomar, recently appointed assistant advisor to the postmaster general, made an "Uncle Tom" speech on "how to get along with bosses." His remarks followed those of Joseph F. Gartlin, white postal executive, who said that Negroes should "demand rights and privileges, which justly belong to them."

Ickes Will Be Missed

Afro American Baltimore, Md

The resignation of Harold L. (Old Curmudgeon) Ickes as Secretary of the Interior removes one of our few remaining friends-at-court in the nation's government.

It was no surprise that this man, hailed by many as the greatest Secretary of the Interior this country has known—and longest in office—should resign. The surprise is that Honest Harold stood it as long as he did.

Mr. Ickes, who before his election was once president of the Chicago branch NAACP, time and again demonstrated his understanding of interracial problems and his firm belief in equality for all.

Sat 2-23-46

He will probably be remembered best by many people for the unequivocal stand which he took in 1939 when he rebuked the DAR by placing the Lincoln Memorial at the disposal of Marian Anderson after she had been denied the use of Constitution Hall for a concert.

On other occasions he lashed out at the Dies Committee which was seeking to Red-bait prominent Americans and he called the Ku Klux Klan a menace to the entire world.

He frequently struck out against inequalities in educational opportunities and championed academic freedom and tolerance. He had nothing for "professional patriots" to do and once rebuked a delegation of Southern women seeking to introduce segregation in the Interior Department's cafeteria by going to the cafeteria and eating with the darkest persons he could find.

On another occasion he issued an order that the District's municipal parks are open to all citizens following a complaint that golfers playing at Potomac Park had been intimidated and needed police protection.

He was one of the squarest shooters the country has known and had the courage to speak his mind against injustice, dishonesty and crooked dealings. We'll certainly miss him.

Like Father, Like Son?

Afro American Baltimore, Md

Opposition to the nomination of Commodore James K. Vardaman Jr., Naval aide to President Truman, for membership on the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, raises the question of whether the nominee is anything like his late father.

The elder Vardaman, once governor of Mississippi (1904) and later U.S. Senator (1913-1918) was undoubtedly one of the worst Negro-haters and Negro-baiters we have ever had. If anything, he was worse than Bilbo.

Vardaman Sr., appealed to the poor white man by saying that the political superiority of the white race was being endangered by the education of colored people. He was one of the six wilful senators who opposed our entry into the League of Nations and defeated Woodrow Wilson on this issue.

Sat 3-9-46

As a member of the Federal Reserve System, it may be assumed that Vardaman Jr., is removed from any sphere of influence affecting colored Americans. Yet, his relationship with President Truman has been of such a nature as to make him a possible continued source of counsel.

There is an old saying: "Like father, like son." On this basis, if no other, Vardaman Jr., is open to intense scrutiny.

Weaver Fired By Recorder

Sat. 9-7-46

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—The Rev. Marshall L. Shepard, Recorder of Deeds of the District of Columbia, last Friday summarily dismissed his first deputy recorder, Frederick S. Weaver.

The dismissal, effective at the close of business Aug. 30, is likely to have repercussions. Whether Mr. Weaver will carry his fight against his dismissal to the White House, Congress, the Democratic national committee, or all three could not be learned last Friday.

The dismissal of Weaver followed an exchange of notes Aug. 28, between him and Shepard and a personal conference. Mr. Shepard's first note informed Mr. Weaver that his usefulness as first deputy recorder had come to an end and demanded his resignation forthwith.

FOLLOWED FBI PROBE

Whether the dismissal of Mr. Weaver was an outgrowth of the investigation into the office of the Recorder of Deeds by the Federal Bureau of Investigation could not be learned. The FBI completed their investigation in the Recorder's office on Aug. 16, but continued to interview former employes.

Mr. Weaver has been an employe of the Recorder's office for eleven years. He has worked in various capacities from messenger to first deputy recorder.

Gibson Named to Training Group

The Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

WASHINGTON

Truman K. Gibson Jr., of Chicago and former civil aide to the Secretary of War, was one of the nine persons selected by President Truman last Thursday to serve on his advisory commission on universal training.

Meeting at the White House on Friday, the President asked the commission to make a careful study of methods for aiding the physical and mental development of young citizens with an eye to building up in them a sense of responsibility toward the republic.

Sat. 12-28-46

They were instructed to obtain ideas of Cabinet members and Congressional leaders before submitting their report to him. The Chief Executive explained that he wanted the group known as a commission on universal training with the word military left out.

Peace, Production

Explaining that the United States doesn't want more territory, he said he is most interested in peace in the world and production at home. He added that the U.S. doesn't want to hog world trade, but wants an interchange of ideas and merchandise.

The commission elected Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, as chairman; Joseph E. Daves, former Ambassador to Russia, vice chairman, and Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, a labor adviser to the late President Roosevelt, secretary.

Text of His Remarks

"Through the draft board records, it was found that 30 per cent of our young people who were called up for military training, were unfit physically or mentally. That is a terrible reflection on a free country," Mr. Truman said.

"I want our young people to be informed on what this Government stands for. I think the best way to do this is through a universal training program, giving them a background in the disciplinary approach of getting along with one another."

mission on military training.

Named with seven others to work on a broad universal training program designed to stress physical and spiritual as well as military training, Gibson conferred with members of the commission after the newly-appointed advisers had consulted with the President.

The commission, which includes churchmen, educators and others, selected Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, as president, and Joseph E. Davis, former U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union, as vice-chairman.

The commission, meeting with the President for the first time on Friday of last week, was told by the Chief Executive that the national training project would not be military in the strictest application of the term, but would place equal stress on physical, religious, and moral training.

Truman told members of the commission he would like to omit the word "military" from the commission's name, and call it a universal training program.

The commission went immediately to work on plans which include contacting labor leaders and heads of governmental agencies. Compton said they hope to make recommendations for training by March.

Universal military training has been proposed by the War Department as a means of building the National Guard and Organized Reserves, also as a trainee reserve pool, unorganized, but available to fill units in case of mobilization.

Teachers' Exodus Seen as Threat to Nation

ACTION HELD URGENT

Inadequate Salaries Basis of Situation

Sat. 11-16-46

WASHINGTON

J. L. Horace, National Fraternal Council of Churches; Mrs. Estelle Massey Riddle, National Council of Negro Women, and P. B. Young Sr., National Negro Newspaper Publishers Association, were recently named on a sub-committee to plan reports to the Nation on the critical teacher shortage.

Members of the Citizens Federal Committee on Education, which recently concluded its semi-annual meeting, here, they will co-operate with leading white educators, business and civic leaders on the committee in issuing a series of reports on the situation during 1947.

The CFC, which acts in an advisory relationship to the U. S. Office of Education, believes that the present crisis affecting the teaching profession throughout the country is of such gravity as to threaten the future of the American way of life.

National Tragedy Hinted

"In recent years there has been a mass exodus of hundreds of thousands away from the teaching profession," Thomas C. Boushall, hairman of the CFC, pointed out.

"Completely inadequate teacher salaries, the lack of public esteem, and the lack of other factors that make for job satisfaction, make this understandable," he asserted. "Only vigorous and statesmanlike action on a scale commensurate with the urgent need can avert a serious national tragedy," he warned, before setting up the sub-committee to plan the reports to the Nation.

Charles S. Johnson Named To Educational Commission

The Informer Houston Texas

NASHVILLE—Charles S. Johnson, director of the Department of Social Science at Fisk university, has been appointed to the educational commission named by the State and War Departments to go to Japan, at the request of General Douglas MacArthur. Dr. Johnson is the only Negro on the commission which is composed of 20 top-flight American educators.

DR. CHARLES S. JOHNSON,

Sat 2-23-46

One of this country's foremost sociologists, Dr. Johnson has served the national government in many capacities during the past 10 years. In 1930, he was appointed by President Hoover as the American member of an international commission to study forced labor in Liberia. He was named by President Roosevelt to be a public member of the panel on wages and hours in the railroad industry. For the NRA, he directed a study of the tobacco industry. Dr Johnson sat with the committee which drafted plans for the Farm Security Administration which was devised to aid small farmers. His interest in agricultural problems has taken him to Ireland and the Scandinavian countries where he studied systems of tenure and farm operation.

Sat 2-23-46

In addition to his duties as Director of Social Sciences at Fisk university, where he has been since 1928, Dr. Johnson is director of Race Relations for the Julius Rosenwald Fund and serves as director of the Race Relations Division of the American Missionary Association.

It seems fitting that Dr. Johnson should serve on the commission to Japan on the basis of his studies in race and culture in which field he is regarded as a competent authority.

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—Dr. Charles S. Johnson, head of Fisk university's social science department, was one of the 20 distinguished educators who left this country by plane Feb. 20 for Japan where they will formulate the new plan of education. This American Commission, appointed at the request of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, includes Dean Virginia Gildersleeve, of Barnard college.

On the Fisk faculty for 17 years, Dr. Johnson is at present a trustee of the Rosenwald Fund; director of the American Missionary ass'n's race relations program; and first Negro president of the Southern Sociological ass'n. His past honors include men[illegible] the League of Nation[illegible]n investigating forced labor in Liberia in 1930 and service on President Hoover's conference on home building and home ownership in 1931.

Dr. Johnson is also recognized for his numerous articles and books, as a world authority on race and culture. His books include "The Negro College Graduate" and "Statistical Atlas of Southern Counties", both published by the University of North Carolina Press; and "Patterns of Negro Segregation", published by Harper bros. in 1943. He also holds a merit citation from the Alumni ass'n of the University of Chicago.

Dr. Johnson Back From Tokyo Trip

Black Dispatch Oklahoma

NASHVILLE. — (ANP) — Dr. Charles S. Johnson, director of the department of social sciences, Fisk university, and one of the members of a commission appointed by the state and war departments, at the request of Gen. Douglas McArthur, to study and make proposals for the redirection of the education of the Japanese, has returned to this country after spending March in Japan studying various aspects of that country's educational and cultural systems.

The commission consisting of 27 American educators and working with a group of Japanese educators of about the same number as the American body, had an opportunity to investigate all types of educational institutions in Japan. Attention was given primarily to questions concerning the teaching of state religion in schools, the use of the imperial rescript in schools, the provision of materials to replace school subjects overweighted with nationalism and the religious issue of Buddhism, Shintoism, Confucianism and Christianity. the last problem has arisen through the competition of the four types of religion for ascendancy in the schools with the advent of religious freedom in Japan.

Sat 4-27-46

Recommendations of the mission's report were submitted to Gen. MacArthur following the completion of the mission's study in Japan. The commission urged the change in Japan's written language in order to eliminate "the difficult time-consuming medium of expression and communication." It recommended among other things, the substitution of Roman letters for picture-characters in written Japanese and urged drastic reform of Japan's "bureaucratic" school system. It urged compulsory high school education free from mythological indoctrination.

In an audience with Emperer Hirohito, Dr. Johnson said that the emperor declared he desired an American educator for his sons, and was placing one of them in the peers school, a public school for the upper classes in Tokyo. The members of the mission also had conference with Gen. MacArthur, Baron Shidehara, premier of Japan; and Japanese minister of education, Y. Abe.

In regard to the Japanese people, Dr. Johnson declared they seem on the whole "remarkably cooperative giving evidence of tremendous psychological defeat throughout the country, but are naturally an industrious people and have set about trying to rebuild destroyed cities. The military occupation, while stern and exacting, struck me as being accepted by the Japanese people as just, although rigorous, and they have respect for it."

The mission spent most of its time in Tokyo; however, visits were made to Hokohama, Kyoto, Nara and Osaka.

Sat 4-27-46

The American commission was headed by Dr. George D. Stoddard, president elect of the University of Illinois. Chairman of the Japanese committee was Dr. Shigeru Nanbara, president of Tokyo Imperial university. Some of the other members of the American commission were: Dr. William M. Compton, president, Washington State college; Virginia C. Gildersleve, dean, Barnard college; Ernest R. Hilgrad, Stanford university; David H. Stevens, Rockefeller foundation; Mrs. Douglas Horton, president, Wellesley; Harold Benjamin, U. S. Office of Education, and Gordon Bowles, department of state.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (NNPA)— Postmaster General Robert E. Hannegan last Monday appointed Marsden W. Cabell, 34, of Charleston, W. Va., as a confidential assistant to Jesse M. Donaldson, first assistant postmaster general.

Mr. Cabell was sworn in by Mr. Hannegan in ceremonies in the Postmaster General's office attended by Representative E. H. Hendrick, Democrat, of West Virginia, and ranking officials of the Post Office Department and other government agencies.

MARSDEN W. CABELL

Mr. Donaldson said Mr. Cabell's experience with people "eminently qualified" him for the job.

He said he had no intention of using Mr. Cabell to work solely on problems dealing with colored people but would use him on any assignment that he might need him for.

Postmaster General Hannegan said Mr. Cabell will be an excellent addition to the entire postal service.

Mr. Cabell graduated from West Virginia State college in 1933, studied Italian at La Scoula D'Italia, Portugese at Morris Harvey college, and attended Social Workers' Institute in Charleston.

He has been active in education and business fields and in Democratic politics in West Virgina. He is married and has three children. He credits Senator Harley M. Kilgore and Representative Hedrick, Democrats, of West Virginia, with his Post Office Department appointment. The job pays $6,000 a year.

MANILA, P.I. — (ANP) — Because Marcus H. Ray, civilian aide to the Secretary of War, did not visit here long enough, nor meet persons who could have given him first-hand knowledge of conditions, the more progressive elements here believe that his recent visit was a complete failure.

Mr. Ray made an unannounced week's visit to survey and establish grounds for better relationships among colored Americans and Filipinos, but many believed his mission also was to check on reports of a civil clash between progressive and reactionary Filipino groups.

The Chronicle, a Manila newspaper, quoted Mr. Ray as confirming anti-colored propaganda directed against colored troops by vicious white elements. Other sources criticized him for not having met the "right people," nor remained in the country long enough to get a clear picture of conditions here.

Minority Chief Orders Misconduct Charges Filed

Dispute Over Rating Said to Be Basis of Long-Standing Friction Between Pair

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — Friction, which has existed between Mrs. Thomasina C. Johnson, chief of the minority groups section of the United States Employment Service, and Lawrence A. Oxley, senior technician in that office, has broken out into an open fight, it was learned last Friday.

Mrs. Johnson, asked about Misler, Labor Department attorney, to prepare formal charges of misconduct against Mr. Oxley.

Charge of Wastage Made

The charges against Mr. Oxley grew out of his having a woman employee perform some personal work for him on government time and equipment.

The woman employee concerned claims that the work was performed during her lunch period and that she had the permission of her supervisor to do it.

Misler Reveals Action

Mr. Misler, on Friday, was asked to comment on a report that he had given a USES woman employee a "good going over," while questioning her about the personal work she is reported to have performed for Mr. Oxley.

Mr. Misler said that in questioning the woman, he was acting in his official capacity as a Labor Department attorney; and that he had been instructed to gather informaion concerning Mr. Oxley and prepare charges against him.

He denied that he had used "third degree' methods in questioning the woman employee involved, stating that he told her he was merely seeking information concerning someone else.

Mr. Fletcher changed Oxley's efficiency rating from "fair" to "satisfactory."

Bating Starts Friction

Friction between Mrs. Johnson and Mr. Oxley dates back to the latter part of last April, when she concurred in a rating of "fair" given him by Benjamin Wilson, Mrs. Johnson's predecessor, for the rating period which ended March 31, after Mr. Wilson resigned.

Four days after Mrs. Johnson took office in April, is reported to have notified Richard Fletcher, chief of the standards and methods division of the USES, that she concurred in the rating of "fair" given Mr. Oxley.

Mr. Oxley has been an employee of the Labor Department for 14 years and has had several ratings of "excellent" and none below "very good."

Mrs. Johnson Rebuffed

Immediately after Mr. Oxley was given the "fair" rating, United Public Workers of America, Local No. 10, announced it would take up his case. Its first move was a rebuff to Mrs. Johnson.

When she appeared at a conference at which the rating was to be discussed, union officials refused to begin the discussion until she left.

According to reports, the union contends that Mrs. Johnson was incompetent to rate Mr. Oxley, because he was never under her supervision during the rating period from April 1, 1945, to March 31, last.

Oxley's Rating Adjusted

Mr. Wilson's rating is said to have been based on poor work performance, but was given Mr. Oxley on the ground that he was non-co-operative and had sought to disrupt the program of the minority groups section.

When USES officials met with the union heads two weeks ago to discuss Mr. Oxley's rating, the officials asked the union to give them two weeks to gather additional information in the case.

Vets' Training Program

The Afro-American

One meeting where the race questions never got an airing was at the conference of State Veterans re-training and re-employment representatives, who meet here Wednesday and Thursday.

Not even Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach, who made such a forthright speech in which he reiterated his record as a liberal before the National Council of Negro Women, who were meeting in an adjoining room, mentioned the problem of the darker brother.

The reason for all this was explained by Col. William A. Clarke, consultant on veterans' problems. Colonel Clarke, formerly of Tuskegee, was the only colored person in attendance. He along with Dr. F. D. Patterson, Dr. Ambrose Caliver of Washington and Julius Thomas of the National Urban League are advisors on the Vets Training program.

Advce Unsatisfactory

So far a lot of people are not satisfied with the advice they have been giving, if any, because to date there is not one colored worker assigned to the 13 regions employing 90 high salaried employees.

Baltimore, Md.

"We do not consider the problem as a racial problem, but we are covering all veterans regardless of race, creed or color," declared Colonel Clarke.

Prior to the cessation of hostilities, Colonel Clarke served as a specialist in charge of the welfare of colored soldiers in the South. Prior to that he was dean of the Echool of Education at Tuskegee for 21 years.

He expressed deep disappointment at the rate at which discharged veterans are returning to theSouth. During the training period, he said as he travelo among the draftees in the varoius camps he heard thousands of youths saying they would never come back to the old conditions of the South.

Sat. 11-23-46

Employment Mounting

But with war's end, they are flocking back even more disillusioned and maladjusted than ever. As a result unemployment is mounting and race relations aggravated by the economic situation, are becoming more strained.

This is not equally true of civilian workers who migrated northward and westward. Having had a chance to put down their roots in industrial centers, they seem more inclined to stick it out than the ex-soldiers even though many war plants have shut down.

This, Colonel Clarke attributes to the fact that matters not how bad things apparently get up north ,it's just as good if not better than what they left. There is nothing to lure them back.

Executive Order Creates Civil Board To Study Weaknesses In United States' Laws

The Defender

Chicago, Ill. Sat. 12-14-46

By VENICE SPRAGGS

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON—Strongly acknowledging the responsibility of the federal government to guarantee individual liberties and equal protection under the law, President Truman has established a 15-man committee to recommend legislation for the more effective protection of the civil rights of the people.

The committee which shall be known as the "President's Committee on Civil Rights" was created by executive order, and has been authorized "to inquire into and to determine whether and in what respect current law-enforcement measures and the authority and means possessed by federal, state, and local governments may be strengthened and improved to safeguard the civil rights of the people."

12-14-46

Composed of some of the nation's outstanding crusaders for justice and equality, the committee will function under the chairmanship of Charles E. Wilson, president of the General Electric company and formerly executive vice chairman of the War Production board.

In establishing the committee, the president said the Federal government is presently hampered in meeting its responsibility for protecting individual liberties because of an "inadequate" federal law. He said this move was aimed "to provide the Department of Justice with the tools to do the job."

"The preservation of civil liberties is a duty of every government — state, federal, and local. Wherever the law enforcement measures and the authority of federal, state and local governments are inadequate to discharge this primary function of government, these measures and this authority should be strengthened and improved," he declared.

Mr. Truman's move was motivated by petitions from numerous organizations throughout the country, calling for presidential intervention in the mass brutal lynchings which swept the country earlier this year. It was timed to coincide with a federal grand jury investigation of the atrocious murder of four innocent victims at Monroe, Ga.

The President had indicated to a delegation which called on him at the White House, headed by NAACP secretary, Walter White, that he intended to take some positive action to bring lynchings under control. It had been expected the committee would have been named earlier. A White House spokesman told the Defender Mr. Truman had refrained naming the committee prior to November 5, lest his action be interpreted as politically intended to attract the Negro vote.

Two Negro members, Mrs. Sadie M. Alexander, lawyer, of Philadelphia, and Dr. Channing H. Tobias of New York City, director of the Phelp-Stokes Fund; formerly senior secretary of the National Council of the Young Men's Christian association.

Defender

In a statement accompanying his order, President Truman noted that "Freedom from Fear" is more fully realized in our country than in any other on the face of the earth. "Yet all parts of our population are not equally free from fear," he stated.

"Today, Freedom from Fear, and the democratic institutions which sustain it, are again under attack. In some places, from time to time, the local enforcement of law and order has broken down, and individuals — sometimes ex-servicemen, even women — have been killed, maimed, or intimidated," the Chief Executive reminded.

The President in his order instructed all departments and agencies of government to cooperate with the committee in its work and to furnish the committee such information or the service of such persons as it may require in the performance of its duties.

He directed, that when requested by the committee to do so, persons employed in any of the executive departments and agencies of the Federal government shall testify before the committee and shall make available for the use of the committee such documents and other information as the committee may require.

Chicago, Ill.

The committee's findings and recommendations for action will be made to the President in a report, and will serve as the basis for legislative action.

12-14-46

It has been known for some time that the Civil Rights division of the Department of Justice, under the direction of Attorney General Tom Clark has been working on a document of justification for a stronger civil rights law which it plans to present to the 80th Congress when it convenes on January 3. Other members of the committee are:

JAMES B. CARNEY of Washington, D. C.; secretary-treasurer, Congress of Industrial Organizations; chairman, CIO Committee to Abolish Racial Discrimination.

JOHN S. DICKEY, president of Dartmouth college; formerly special assistant to the Secretary of State.

MORRIS L. ERNST, lawyer and author, of New York City.

RABBI ROLAND G. GITTELSOHN of New York City; spiritual leader of the Central Synagogue at Rockville, Long Island; recipient of the Navy Commendation Medal for his services as the Jewish chaplain of the Fifth Marine Division at Iwo Jima.

DR. FRANK P. GRAHAM, president of the University of North Carolina; formerly member of the War Labor board.

THE MOST PEVEREND FRANCIS J. HAAS, bishop of Grand Rapids, Michigan; formerly chairman of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice.

CHARLES LUCKMAN of Cambridge, Mass.; president of Lever Brothers; formerly consultant to the War Loan Division, United States Treasury.

FRANCIS P. MATTHEWS of Omaha, Neb.; former Supreme Knight of the Knights of Columbus; vice president of the National War fund; designated Papal Chamberlain by Pope Pius XII.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT JR., lawyer of New York City; chairman of the Housing Committee of the American Veterans committee.

THE RIGHT REVEREND HENRY KNOX SHERRILL of Boston, Mass., presiding bishop of the Episcopal church; member of the Governor of Massachusetts' Committee on Racial and Religious Understanding.

BORIS SHISKIN of Alexandria, Va., economist for the American Federation of Labor; formerly a member of the President's Committee On Fair Employment Practice.

A Peep Behind the Scenes at the Work of Dr. Ralph Bunche

YOU know all about Matthew Henson, who accompanied Commodore Peary to the North Pole in 1909, so I propose to conduct a minor exploration into the burgeoning career of another black (really, high yellow) man this week. My man, like Henson, is making headway over a treacherous, weather-beaten terrain uncharted heretofore for the likes of him. My man is Dr. Ralph Bunche, erstwhile professor of political science at Howard University, now on leave for service with the State Department. I think the boys and girls ought to study up on Dr. Bunche. This little piece is being written to kindle their interest, to stimulate them to find out more. If they learn how Dr. Bunche has moved ahead in his field, they may come to understand that there is a chance and a future for them.

Mr. Prattis

I don't know how Dr. Bunche went into the State Department under Cordell Hull. But I am confident he did not start at the top. When I began to know about him, he was doing a journeyman job in the Division of Dependent Areas. That is, he was in that division of the department which concerns itself with political, social and economic relations in colonies and other exploited areas. You know, of course, that millions and millions of the people in dependent areas are black and brown people. You would hope that the leadership in our own division of Dependent Areas would work to promote the welfare, in every way, of the people in such areas. You would feel a bit encouraged when you learned that a black man was put into a position where he could see what was going on. You would feel very much encouraged if the heart of that black man was in the right place.

Sat. 35-20-46

WELL, from journeyman Dr. Bunche moved right up in his division. He became associate director of the Division, then acting director which he has been for almost a year. Simply, a black man has been running the Division of Dependent Areas in our State Department ever since James F. Byrnes became Secretary of State. Strange things happen, don't they?

They don't hide Dr. Bunche in the State Department like they do many of our bright boys in the post office. He occupied a big office in the Fairmount Hotel, San Francisco, during the Conference there and served as technical advisor to the American delegation. Prior to that, he had helped the American delegation at Dumbarton Oaks draw up the preliminary draft for a United Nations Charter. From San Francisco, he went to Paris to participate in the conference of the International Labor Organization. Miss Frances Perkins, former Secretary of Labor, was chief of the American delegation. Miss Perkins was so struck by the work of Dr. Bunche, by a Negro playing a major role in such affairs, that she wrote a lengthy article commending him and noting the significance of a Negro performing such intellectual chores. From Paris, Dr. Bunche went to London for the first meeting of the General Assembly of the United Nations. At the conclusion of its sessions, he flew from London to St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, to participate in the second West Indies Conference as an American member of the Caribbean Commission.

It ought to be mentioned that Dr. Bunche's staff accompanies him to all these places and that no color line is drawn in providing him with staff. He is thoroughly respected by all those who work for him and under him. When he reached Miami (on the way to the Virgin Islands), he was whisked away (by whites in Miami) to a special function given in his honor.

TWO FINAL words. Dr. Bunche is dead set against imperialism of all kinds. He wants to see all people politically free. He is uncompromisingly FOR the peoples of the dependent areas, behind the pleasant, youthful smile he carries. Sometimes, you think he is too much for freedom or for too much freedom. He writes with a wonderully fine Italian hand. He did yeoman work with Gunnar Myrdal in compiling "An American Dilemma. He has an extraordinary facility for "loading" a paragraph with what he believes in and making a superior belie/e that the thought came to him first. He is not selfish. He is not one of those Negroes who gets in on a choice spot and becomes wary against other Negroes moving in and sharing the spotlight with him. After his return from London, he said to this writer:

"Prattis, Negroes ought to get busy and prepare to obtain some of the jobs in the United Nations' set-up. There are going to be all kinds of jobs and Negroes should attempt to get jobs on all levels. Some organization should be working on this now."

Of course, I thought he was right. I told him I thought the task ought to be undertaken by one of the fraternities or sororities. Qualified men and women, wher ever they can be found, should be pointed for United Nations service. Dr. Bunche could have such a job but he prefers to stay where he is. He wants to see others move ahead.

I hope he will pardon this little mention of him. He is a behind-the-scene worker. But sometimes the curtain has to be lifted for the benefit of others.

Albright Named Assistant To Gen'l Bradley

Atlanta Daily World

Appointment Follows Demand By Veterans

Atlanta Ga.

Wed. 5-15-46

WASHINGTON,—(ANP)— Negro executive representation in the powerful Veterans Administration improved last week through the precedent-shattering appointment of Joseph Francis Albright, Associated Negro Press columnist and veteran public relations man, as assistant to Gen. Omar Bradley, VA chairman. Albright had served as liaison officer and information specialist for the Veterans administration since last November.

His latest appointment is said to have been pending since last December, following a growing demand by Negro veterans for VA executive representation. Albright's appointment is credited to Rep. William L. Dawson, Illinois congressman, and other influential Negro and white leaders.

GOODWILL AMBASSADOR

A native of Minnesota, he has been in public life for more than 20 years. He served on the public relatelons staff of a large industrial firm before the war. After entering the army, he served as public relations specialist of the Army Air forces and by his interracial civilian military activities earned the title of "goodwill ambassador of the air corps."

Albright was the first Negro in air corps history to officially deliver orientation lectures to the entire white personnel civilians and military, at army air bases. He has been frequently credited with laying the foundation for current army racial reforms, partly projected in the highly publicized Gillem report on wider utilization of Negro troops. James C. Evans, assistant civilian aide to the secretary of war, predicted that Albright's military orientation lectures would be "a pattern for post-war interracial conduct."

Complete details on his duties have not been released, but it is assumed his recommendations will represent the wishes and demands of Negro veterans.

Recorder of Deeds Office Among Few Jobs Given Minority for Party Vote

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

Sat. 5-21-46

By LOUIS LAUTIER

(For the NNPA News Service)

The office of the Recorder of Deeds of the District of Columbia is one of a handful of Presidential appointments given to colored persons in recognition of their political contribution to the victory of the party in power.

The governorship of the Virgin Islands, a federal judgeship in the same islands, a judgeship of the United States Court of Customs Appeals, a judgeship of the Municipal Court of the District of Columbia, and the ministership to Liberia about complete the list.

Upheaval Minor

Comparatively, so far as can be learned, the upheaval that has recently taken place in the Recorder's office appears to be minor.

The charges range from unbecoming conduct to favoritism and inefficiency, with a staggering backlog of work that is embarrassing financial institutions lending money on property in the District of Columbia.

Nine of these charges are verified. The Rev. Marshall Shepard, the Recorder of Deeds, is not talking until the Federal Bureau of Investigation submits its report of the inquiry it conducted into his office.

Fred Weaver, the deposed first deputy Recorder of Deeds, also is not talking until he has exhausted his means of vindication within the Truman Administration and the Democratic party.

FBI Silent Still

The Federal Bureau of Investigation is not commenting. As a matter of fact, a spokesman for that agency said it wished newspapers would not comment upon pending cases because very often the charges made are proved unfounded and "the defense never catches up with the prosecution."

In the circumstances, the charges, the FBI investigation, and the arbitrary dismissal of Mr. Weaver are unfortunate.

This case will not be cited as another example of bad bureaucratic administration; it will be used to further the campaign of the commissioners of the District of Columbia for control of this office, on the ground that colored persons cannot capably administer it.

One of the difficulties, in which Mr. Shepard now finds himself involved, stems from the fact that positions under the Recorder of Deeds are excepted from the civil service laws.

Not Federal Employees

General speaking, the officers and employeess of the District of Columbia are not within the classified service because they are not officers and employees of the federal government but of a munipal corporation.

But positions under the District of Columbia Unemployment Compensation and the Public Welfare Boards have been made subject to the civil service act and rules, and employees of the Juvenile Court of the District of Columbia are required to be appointed from eligible lists of the Civil Service Commission.

The District of Columbia Employment Center is part of the federal government rather than of the District of Columbia government, and positions in the center are in the classified civil service.

Positions in the police and fire departments of the District of Columbia, although not in the classified service, are filled under the civil service rules by virtue of statutes.

If appointments made by the Recorder of Deeds were subject to the civil service rules, the charges of favoritism among employees would not have been brought against Mr. Shepard.

No Civil Service Protection

Appointments, promotions and removals would have been made in accordance with civil service rules and regulations, and employees of his office would have the benefits of the civil service acts and rules with respect to tenure.

A basic rule of the Civil Service Commission provides that no person in the classified service of the United States shall be removed therefrom, except for such cause as will promote the efficiency of the service and for reasons given in writing.

The person whose removal is sought shall have notice of the same and of any charges preferred against him and be furnished with a copy thereof, and also be allowed reasonable time for personally answering the same in writing.

Inasmuch as employees of the Recorder's office are not subject to the provisions of the civil service act, they enjoy none of the benefit under the civil service act and regulations that other federal or District employees, who are not excepted, enjoy.

The benefits of the civil service laws should be extended to all persons engaged in the legitimate service of the government, whether such persons are or are not technically in the employment of the United States.

One other thing: Taxpayers are entitled to have, as the Recorder of Deeds of the District of Columbia, a man, who for the salary of approximatly $9,000 a year, will devote his full time to the duties of the office.

WASHINGTON—Samuel F. Coleman is a veteran of the European campaign in which he won two battle stars. He holds a degree in engineerig from the City College of New York.

The appointment is in accord with an announcement made last March by Caspar Olmes, commissioner of patents for the Commerce department, informing Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace that he became the only Negro patent examiner in the United States Commerce department Patent office.

Additional appointments to similar positions will be made after Judge Cole-ly, according to patent office officials.

'Army in Pacific Performs Difficult Task Well,' War Aide Tells Patterson

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 9-28-46

Ray Reports Troop Morale Generally High Following Inspection of Oriental Bases

WASHINGTON—(NNPA)— In the Pacific area, the Army has performed a difficult task well, despite the additional burdens brought about by the too hasty redeployment program and the loss of large numbers of disciplined and battle-tried veterans.

Marcus H. Ray, his civilian aide, so officially reported to Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, at the conclusion of his recent tour of Army installations in the Pacific area.

Mr. Ray said he found on Oahu, the most important of the Hawaiian islands, 51 colored officers. Recreational facilities were adequate and were used by all military personnel without regard to race or color, he stated.

Morale Generally High

Morale was generally high and mess facilities were generally from very good to excellent, with the exception of the Army port and service command, commanded by Brigadier General Roy E. Blount, Mr. Ray disclosed.

"Here I found adverse morale conditions," he reported to Mr. Patterson. "The men were quartered in the deck area of Sand Island, recovered tideland," he said.

The area was depressingly unsightly, and the appearance of the quarters and mess facilities was not conducive to the development of morale," he stated.

Investigation Promised

Mr. Ray added that the colored officers, seven in number, had been directed not to use the facilities of the officers' club.

The conditions were brought to the attention of the commanding general of the Army Forces in the Western Pacific, who promised to investigate, Mr. Ray reported.

At Schofield Barracks, commanded by Brigadier General Wayne C. Smith, Mr. Ray said he found the most effective implementation of War Department policy regarding effective utilization of colored personnel.

There were stationed at these barracks two quartermaster truck companies, one quartermaster laundry company, one quartermaster service company and an Army Ground Forces band.

He said there were 18 colored officers assigned to these units, of whom seven were performing essential staff duties.

Mr. Ray added that quarters on the post were assigned without regard to race or color and General Smith reported no incidents of friction. Morale, discipline and training were at a high level, he reported.

Whites at Hawaii Biased

At the Hawaiian Air Depot, Mr. Ray had to request corrective action in eliminating race discrimination in housing and work assignments among civilian employees, he said.

Mr. Ray found seven colored officers assigned on Guam, where he said mess, housing and recreational facilities were very good. He also reported that morale was very good.

At Okinawa Mr. Ray found three colored officers and the Twenty-fourth Infantry Regiment among other units. The regiment, Mr. Ray reported, has been selected for intensive training which will fit it for trans-shipment to Japan for occupation duty in the near future.

Mrs. Edmonia Grant Chosen To Education Post In Washington

Globe and Independent Nashville, Tenn. Fri. 11-8-46

Mrs. Edmonia W. Grant, director of education for the American Missionary Association, has been appointed by the U. S. Office of Education to be assistant director of the project for the Adult Education of Negroes. Mrs. Grant, who left today for Washington, will be away on a three months leave of absence from her A. M. A. headquarters on the Fisk University campus.

Perhaps best known for the series of posters on "The Races of Mankind," which she originated and popularized, Mrs. Grant goes to her new post, she said in an interview this morning, "to aid in the preparation of simple, dramatic material for adult education, and in the adoption of army literacy programs for civilians use."

The adult education project sponsored by the U. S. Office of Education and financed by a grant from the Carnegie Corporation was recently inaugurated at a number of Negro university centers, following a meeting of government and educational leaders at Hampton Institute in September. Mrs. Grant attended the conference as a consultant. Tennessee A. and I. State College and Fisk University are jointly supervising evening classes at special centers in the Nashville and Memphis areas. The program's primary concern is with 'functional illiterates'—those adults who have not completed the 5th grade. 41 Per cent of America's colored population are in this category.

Mrs. Grant, who received the B. A. degree from Howard University and the M. A. from Fisk, was supervisor of adult education for WPA in western North Carolina from 1935 to 1937. Following a period as research assistant at Fisk, she was given a Rosenwald Fellowship at Columbia University's Teachers' College for a two years study of adult education. In 1945 she came to the A. M. A. staff in Nashville from a position as program secretary of the National YWCA's student division.

War Dept. Aide Ends 30-Day Tour

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

WASHINGTON

Winding up a 30-day tour of Army installations in the Western Pacific with a visit to Korea, Marcus H. Ray, Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War, is en route to Washington aboard a C-54 transport plane, the War Department announced last week.

Mr. Ray toured the Pacific area to inquire into the welfare and utilization of military and War Department civilian personnel.

His itinerary included brief visits to Oahu, Territory of Hawaii; Guam in the Marianas; Manila and the Province of Pampanga on the island of Luzon; Okinawa; Tokyo, Kobe, Kyoto, and Yokahama in Japan, and areas in Korea.

Lunched With MacArthur

Arriving in Tokyo on Aug. 23, Mr. Ray was luncheon guest of General of the Army Douglas MacArthur, Supreme Allied Commander in the Pacific, at the American Embassy, and on Aug. 25, attended a briefing session at headquarters of AFPAC (American Forces in the Pacific) in the Da-Ichi Building in Tokyo.

While in Manila, Mr. Ray was luncheon guest at Malacanan Palace of President Manual Roxas of the Philippine Republic, where he met Paul V. McNutt, American ambassador, Elpidio Quirino, vice-president of the Philippines, and Maj. Gen. James G. Christiansen.

Mr. Ray is accompanied by Maj. Judson W. Wark, War Department General Staff, and 1st Lt. George E. Norford, War Department Public Relations Division. Sat. 9-13-46

New D.C. Deputy Recorder Named; Rumors Not Proved

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 9-14-46

WASHINGTON

First claiming the headlines when FBI investigators moved in two weeks ago and began quizzing employees, then thrown into high gear last week when First Deputy Frederick S. Weaver was ousted the fireworks in the District Recorder of Deeds Office were about doused Tuesday with the announcement that William O. Woodson has been appointed to succeed Weaver.

Clarence A. Dockens, administrative assistant to Dr. Marshall Shepard, made the announcement in absence of the head of the office who is attending the National Baptist Convention in Atlanta this week.

Pittsburgher Appointed

Mr. Woodson, a Pittsburgher, who has been in Washington since 1935, is currently a member of the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, and is not expected to assume his new duties for a month.

He is a graduate of Terrell Law School and has served as court bailiff but, otherwise, has no startlingly impressive local record save that he is generally considered a good citizen.

During the two weeks preceding Woodson's appointment, however, speculation on reasons for the FBI probe, attempts to connect the probe with requests for Weaver's resignation and rumors of a dozen kinds have been rife in governmental and civic circles.

Federal Officials Mum

At first reluctant to comment on the FBI investigation, officials have since gone completely mum on what J. Edgar Hoover's men were seeking; but reliable sources have revealed that they may have been looking for any one of a number of things.

While some less imaginative commenters have been satisfied with the explanation that the FBI was checking compliants about policy and operation of the agency, a few more morbid souls have added spice to the incident.

Juiciest of all rumors is one that an unidentified guard told of having admitted a couple to the office on a Sunday and subsequent having seen them indulging in alcoholics and other conduct unbecoming in an office building. The Afro-American

Rumor Scotched

This was scotched, however, when the man denied the statement to a probing AFRO reporter.

Next most interesting yarn, as far as the public has been concerned, is that both the investigation and the firing of Weaver stem from Weaver's political ambitions.

It is an accepted fact that Weaver had more than a decade of service in the agency and had hoped to get the appointment at the time of the death of Dr. William J. Thompkins, under whom he had worked for nine years.

Has Influential Friends

Weaver claims personal friendships with President Truman, Chairman Bob Hannegan of the Democratic National Committee and Countless Congressman on the District of Columbia Committee. His political pull was reportedly exerted before the appointment of Dr. Marshall Shepard, a Philadelphia minister; but it is said that he doesn't command enough votes for the satisfaction of Democratic big-wigs. Baltimore, Md.

Dr. Shepard, with the Baptist Convention behind him, seemed a better choice to the Democrats.

After his selection, though it is alleged that he knew of Weaver's efforts to get the appointment, he kept Weaver on as first deputy.

Great Lag in Work

Some commenters insist, though, that Weaver was disgruntled and while often boasting of "running the office" while Dr. Shepard was either in or out of town, the administration of the agency was really in the hands of Administrative Assistant Dockens.

Other commenters contend that Weaver really did "run the office," which would normally be no more than his duty when Dr. Shepard was not in.

These Weaver rooters have some difficulty explaining an alleged backlog of 14,000 pieces of work, but argue that a property boom in the District tripling the work has come about while personnel remained approximately the same.

Summarily Dismissed

Weaver's dismissal followed an exchange of notes with Dr. Shepard and a brief personal conference. No specific sharges were levied against him; so he refused to resign and was summarily dismissed. Sat. 9-14-46

It is reported that office officials insist that there is no connection between his dismissal and the FBI probe.

Speculators, however, insist that it may have been that Weaver "talked too freely" when being questioned about alleged improper employer-employee relations.

Probe Results Untold

Dr. Shepard has said for publication that he had previously planned to ask for Weaver's resignation and observers point out that the FBI's findings have not been released and questioning of some former employees is still underway.

Whatever the case, there is a new first deputy in the Recorder of Deeds' office this week and the only repercussions expected by those reputedly "in the know" are that Weaver is not yet out of the picture, altogether.

The Boards, charged with reviewing cases of all military prisoners now serving general court-martial sentences, are set up under the Under Secretary of War's office with a view of effecting such reduction in sentences as may be warranted on the basis of individual records in each case.

Colonel Moses, who has a total of 22 years' military service, served as Special Clemency Boards in Hawaii, Australia, New Guinea and the Philippine Islands during World War II.

At the same time, it is said that the findings of the FBI probe be released everything from moral misconduct to expressions of racial prejudice among some white workers might be disclosed.

Office Political Plum

The records show that the recorders' office has been a political plum reserved for colored ever since its inception before the turn of the century, except for one period during the term of President Woodrow Wilson.

Even those handling the incidents most viciously express the hope that whatever changes have been made will serve to remove any onus on the office.

They fervently pray that the office will not be snatched away because of the shortsightedness or misconduct of a few

"It was just like renewing old acquaintances," said Mrs. Armond W. Scott, who accompanied her husband, Judge Scott, on their first postwar visit to the White House Tuesday nigh as the guests of President and Mrs. Truman, at the Judiciary Reception.

This is the first of the once colorful annual affairs held at the Executive Mansion since Dec. 17, 1940, the Scott's fifth trip to the White House. Sat. 12-21-46

Wears Moss Green Creatioin

Mrs. Scott wore a warm moss green crepe gown, designed and fashioned by Nora Higley.

The back was completely bare to midsection of her back, and caught at the neckline by a loop which supported the "V" shape front. Instead of sleeves, there were bands fitted to hug her arms directly above the elbow.

Appliqued bunches of multi-colored flowers in sequins were at the shoulder, hip and bottom of the draped skirt. Her accessories were of dawn gold.

Greeted Cordially

On her platinum tresses fashioned with a center part to the back and pompadour sides, she wore a black mantilla of lace. Her evening coat was of black velvet on which she wore an emerald and gold pin with matching earrings.

Mrs. Scott said that Mrs. Truman greeted her very cordially and she received the same hospitality as she did in previous years.

Among the new acquaintances she made was Judge Alan T. Goldsborough, who recently rendered the verdict against John L. Lewis, AFL Union leader.

Oath of Office Administered To Oliver Thornton

WASHINGTON. — (NNPA) — Oliver Thornton of St. Louis, was sworn in Thursday afternoon Dec. 19, as deputy recorder of deeds of the District of Columbia, succeeding Frederick S. Weaver, whose forced resignation took place in August.

The oath of office was administered to Mr. Oliver by Judge Armond W. Scott of the District of Columbia Municipal court. The ceremony took place in the library room.

Present at the swearing in were the Rev. Marshall Shepard, Recorder of Deeds; Mrs. Oliver, and employes of the office of the Recorder of Deeds. Dr. Shepard stood on one side of Mr. Oliver during the ceremonies.

Last Of New Dealers Leaves Cabinet

The Informer Houston Texas

Sat. 9-28-46

Henry A. Wallace, last of the Roosevelt New Dealers in the executive branch of the national government, walked the plank last Saturday. He joined Harold L. Ickes, Henry Morgenthau, and others of Franklin Roosevelt's official family in exile. Speculation is still rife on what the meaning and significance of Wallace's leaving the cabinet will have on the November elections. Reports are that he will speak in each of the 48 states before the November elections.

Representative John J. Sparkman of Alabama, chairman of the Democratic speakers bureau, announced that neither Wallace nor Senator Claude Pepper of Florida would speak officially for the Democrats. Only those who are not critical of what James Byrnes of South Carolina is doing with American foreign policy will be allowed to speak in the name of the administration and the Democratic party.

Mr Wallace is not the president of the United States today because the southern democrats under Mr. Bilbo's leadership refused to have him. James Byrnes is not president today because the northern Democrats refused to have him. So Harry Truman became vice president and succeeded to the presidency.

Henry Wallace took the compromise pleasantly. He took the stump and covered the United States talking to people and working speeches for the election of Roosevelt and Truman. In New York City one day in 1944, Mr. Wallace and Congressman Adam Clayton Powell walked ten blocks through Harlem's streets. Negroes swarmed in windows and doorways to see the two men just walk along. Mr. Powell is reported to have said, "This walk means 50,000 votes for Mr. Roosevelt." Mr. Wallace replied, "If I thought that, I'd walk to the Canadian border."

In 1944, Mr. Wallace covered a lot of territory, not always walking. One day he came to Prairie View college campus. Finding Dr. W. R. Banks away from the campus, he walked down to the principal's house and sat on the porch and talked to Mrs. Banks.

On Thursday, July 11 1946, in a speech at a Madison Square Garden anti-Dewey, anti-Republican rally sponnsored jointly by the Independent Citizens' Committee of the Arts and Sciences and Professions and the National Citizens Political Action committee, Henry Wallace in the following statement took an unequivocal stand that racial hatred was an insuperable barrier to national as well as international peace.

"The price of peace—for us and for every nation in the world—is the price of giving up prejudice, hatred, fear and ignorance.

"Let's get down to cases here at home.

"First we have prejudice, hatred, fear, and ignorance of certain races. The mass lynching in Monroe, Ga., July 13, were not the most unwarranted, brutal act of mob violence in the United States in recent years; it was also an illustration of the kind of prejudice that makes war inevitable.

"'Hatred breeds hatred. The doctrine of racial superiority produces a desire to get even on the part of its victims. If we are to work for peace in the rest of the world, we, here in the United States, must eliminate racism from our unions, our business organizations, our educational institutions, and our employment practices. Merit alone must be the measure of men.

"Second, in payment for peace, we must give up prejudice, hatred, fear and ignorance in the economic world. This means working earnestly, and after day, for a large volume of world trade. It means helping undeveloped areas of the world to industrialize themselves with the help of American technical assistance and loans.'

The junking of Mr. Wallace by President Truman will have serious results on the fate of the Democratic party in 1946 and in 1948. The most important issue now is the peace. Can this peace endure or must there come another war before there can be peace is the issue.

Henry Morgenthau, who was one of the late President Roosevelt's closest advisors as well as dearest friends, published a blueprint for peace. He was one of the first cabinet members Harry Truman disposed of. Almost forgotten, and completely ignored now, is Morgenthau's plan. Sat. 9-28-46

Critics of Mr. Wallace rest their case and the supposition that James Byrnes speaks for this country's foreign policy and that being in such a position he should be supported. Henry Wallace denies him the privilege to carry us to new wars when we can have peace.

Henry Wallace insists that he wants the peace that the forgotten man, whose remains rest in a rose garden on the banks of the Hudson, wanted. The man who won the wars had a blueprint of peace. Jimmy Byrnes ignored all but his own plans and ideas. Wallace says that the people of these United States will know more of these things before the November elections.

Supremacists Condemned by Wallace

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

Sat. 9-21-46

By RICHARD DIER
AFRO Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK — Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace made a speech that bore the approval of President Truman, Thursday night severely lashed America's foreign policy as fostered by Secretary of State Byrnes and his aides, Senators Connally and Vandenburg.

The address keynoted a political rally sponsored by the Independent Citizens' Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions and the National Citizens' Political Action Committee and held at Madison Square Garden. More than 20,000 attended.

Linking Byrnes's "get tough" policy with race prejudice and the white supremacy doctrine, Mr. Wallace asserted: "The price of peace for us and for every nation in the world is the price of giving up prejudice, hatred, fear and ignorance.

Mentions Lynching

"Let's get down to cases here at home. First, we have prejudice, hatred, fear and ignorance in certain races. The recent mass lynching in Georgia was not merely the most unwarranted, brutal act of mob violence in the United States in recent years, it was also an illustration of the kind of prejudice that makes war inevitable.

"Hatred breeds hatred. The doctrine of racial superiority produces a desire to get even on the part of its victims. If we are to work for peace in the rest of the world, we here in the United States must eliminate racism from our unions, our business organizations, our educational institutions, and our employment practices. "How we meet this issue will determine whether we live not in 'one world' or 'two worlds'—but whether we live at all," he declared.

Others Speak

Other speakers heard included Senator Claude Pepper (Dem., Fla.), Paul Robeson, Dr. Frank Kingdon, radio commentator, and Mrs. Frederic March, wife of the screen actor.

Mr. March spoke out for freedom, equality and opportunity for people of all races and religions, translated into living things "like housing and fair employment practices." Baltimore, Md.

Dr. Kingdon called the election of Bilbo "Mississippi mud thrown into the eyes of the American people."

"The wave of lynch terror and mob assault against colored men and women represents the ultimate limit of bestial brutality to which the enemies of democracy, whether Nazis or Ku Kluxers, are ready to go," declared Mr. Robeson. Sat. 9-21-46

FBI Is Helpless

"Yet, today in the face of this vicious assault there is general silence," he continued. "To date, not a single arrest, indictment or conviction has been made. The Department of Justice, with all of the vast power at its command, has indicated no progress in apprehending and punishing the criminals involved."

The singer explained that colored voters know that it is the help always given to Southern poll-taxers like Rankin and Bilbo by Northern Republicans of the Taft and Vandenburg type which accounts for the repeated death of anti-poll tax, anti-lynching, FEPC and other nationally needed legislation.

Mr. Robeson sang "Go Down Moses" and three other selections. was an implied realization in the committee's report that the membership in many instances would be more familiar with local situations. The Afro-American

Local awareness would be further implemented, however, by a clarification of issues affecting minorities by experts in the national office.

The national office was cautioned to limit itself to merely giving the voting records of Senators and Representatives with particular emphasis on issues affecting members of the NAACP.

Six Recommendations

The following resolutions were voted as recommendations to the board of directors by the committee: Baltimore, Md.

1. That the association go on record as not endorsing any political party or any individual because of party connections or affiliation.
2. That the policy of the NAACP shall be that branches are urged to examine proposals, purely non-partisan in character as listed below, affecting local or State public issues and which require electorate approval; to take a position for or against such proposals within the constitutional limits of the association, unless good cause be presented why a position should not be taken; and give active support to a position taken thereon. To include such issues as:
   (a) Proposals arising locally or State-wide by and through initiative and referendum.
   (b) Bond issues. Sat. 9-21-
   (c) Charter and constitutional amendments.

   Where proposal is State-wide, State conferences of branches, where they exist, are urged to determine and announce a position to be binding on all branches. Otherwise, some workable intra-State method should be devised for unified coordinated action after consultation with the national office.
3. That the national board call a meeting of all representative colored organizations to consider the question of focusing attention on issues that will come up for decision in the election of candidates in the fall and the importance of colored citizens participating actively by registering and voting. Further recommended that advertisements and other material be carried in the press.
4. That the board call upon every branch to conduct a registration and voting drive.
5. That an entire issue of the Bulletin be devoted to registration and voting.
6. That the board consider the use of staff assistants and preparation of material that would be of assistance to the local branches in the conducting of registration and turning-out-the-vote drives.

Poll Shows Minority for Wallace's Policy

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

ST. LOUIS (ANP)—Preference for ex-Secretary of Commerce Henry Wallace's foreign policy was revealed by Frederick W. Bond, editor of Negro Magazine, as the result of a poll conducted for the December issue among its 1000 readers, here recently.

According to Bond, the opinion of colored people is that Wallace's policy far overshadows that of Secretary of State Byrnes. Out of 801 persons interviewed, 551 were for Wallace, with Byrnes receiving 151, and the remaining 99 being neutral. Sat. 11-23-46

Intimate View Of A Great Man

45

HENRY A. WALLACE

Sat. 10-12-46

By SALMON H. GARFIELD
(Defender News Editor)

There is an evangelical zeal about those devoted to Henry A. Wallace and his principles, unlike that attached to any political figure in the history of the United States, with the possible exception of Abraham Lincoln.

So declared the lean, dark-haired man, one of Wallace's intimate associates, whom I met soon after the sensation of the former Commerce secretary's resignation. Although his name cannot be used, since he remains in government service, my informant can be identified as one of those, devoted to Wallace, who aided his chief in preparation for his international tour of several years ago. Since he dines with Wallace weekly, his words can be considered authoritative.

Counterbalancing the fervor of Wallace followers, my informant told me, is the mass of the opposi-

"No Middleground"

"There is no middleground for Wallace," said Wallace's friend. "He is either hated or loved. And this is perfectly natural. He is here he comes to speaks for the common man and for the economic security and international accord essential for the common man to live in decency

Wallace lives a life, amazing only for its simplicity, he said. His major dissipation is his garden on his sister's farm in upper New York. It is here he comes to escape the terrific strains of Washington. A scientific farmer by training, Wallace raises strawberries the size of small peaches, and equally exotic produce. In the earth, which he loves, Wallace is truly at peace. Were he to live his life as he pleases, instead of as he feels he must, my informant said, Wallace would doubtlessly devote his time mainly to experimental farming.

Must Carry On

"But he feels he must carry on his fight, and he will," he continued. "Of course, no man comes as close to the presidency as Wallace did without having presidential aspirations," he added. "However, there is no consideration of that now, nor of a third party."

The man, who devoted the last 13 years of his life to public service seeks now only to have elected a Congress truly representing the people, and to give the people what he feels is the only road to enduring peace, a friendly accord between the world's two greatest powers, the United States and Russia, based on mutual understanding and respect for the rights of each other.

Wallace is an amazingly simple man, his admirer emphasized, for a person of his brilliant intellectual stature. He would as readily dine with the waitress, who serves him as with the great potentates of the world. And this is not an ostentatious display of democracy. It is genuine, and some feel this man of the people actually prefers the plain talk of simple folk.

Dignity of Man

This deep rooted respect for the dignity of all human beings is the root of the whole Wallace philosophy. It is the basis of his deep repugnance for persecution and abuse of any racial and religious minorities. Regardless of color or creed, Wallace is literally incapable of viewing any man as other than just a man, in his own right.

His basic simplicity, part of a deeply religious nature, extends into the personal Wallace habits, I was told. His usual lunch is a cheese sandwich and milk. He neither smokes, nor drinks. These simple habits have handicapped him somewhat in the "hail fellow" atmosphere of Washington, where every senator and congressman keeps a refrigerator packed with beer, a decanter in a drawer, and cigars in pocket.

But it leaves him with a single minded devotion to the people and their cause, for which he lives. This remarkable figure who has been labelled variously a Communist and a dreamer, a vicious demagogue and a rosy idealist, is actually nothing more than a great lovely man with a great purpose, who has no time for the petty bickerings and machinations that currently infest Washington.

He is an intelligent realist to whom the forward moving forces of our country look to unite the people in a great mass to wrest their government from the selfish self-seeking, and to win it back for themselves.

Dr. Johnson, head of Fisk's department of social sciences, was a member of the commission sent to Japan earlier this year to help organize a new educational program for that country. There are 43 delegates in all from the United Nations to the Paris meeting. Each has one vote. The 9 other Americans selected by Truman are: Sat. 10-26-46

Archibald MacLeish, head of the Library of Congress; Arthur H. Compton, chancellor of Washington university, St. Louis; William Benton, assistant secretary of state; President George D. Stoddard, of the University of Illinois; Chester Bowles, former OPA administrator; Mrs. Anne O'Hare McCormick, member of the editorial board of the New York Times; Milton S. Eisenhower, president of Kansas State college and brother of General Dwight Eisenhower; George Shuster, president of Hunter college; and Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, member of the OWMR Advisory Board.

Subjects to be taken up at the Paris and at later meetings will begin with text books and extend to the atomic bomb. However, only the social and economic implications of the bomb will be dealt with, according to Dr. Johnson.

UNESCO, organized by the United Nations a year ago in London, is, according to Dr. Johnson, "an attempt to raise the level of literary and mutual understanding among people of the world and hence make easier their more direct participation in the affairs of their country and of all mankind."

45c 1946 D. C. (Returning and Remployment Administration)

Clark, Caliver And Thomas To RRA Positions

FCS 10-11-46

The Call Kansas City Mo.

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — Lt. Col. W. A. Clark, dean of the graduate school at Tuskegee institute; Dr. Ambrose Caliver specialist in Negro education; and Julian A. Thomas, director, industrial relations, National Urban league, were named last Wednesday as consultants to the Returning and Reemployment administration by Maj. Gen. Graves B. Erskine, RRA administrator.

The three men were named as consultants on the recommendation of Dr. Frederick D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee institute, who is himself a special consultant to General Erskine having been named to that post last July 29.

To Study Data

The newly named consultants, along with Dr. Patterson, will make studies and submit data and recommendations which will assist RRA in the formulation of policies and programs of benefit to minority groups in the carrying out of its post-war reconversion functions.

Col. Clark, a former field adviser to the commanding general of the 7th Army headquarters in Atlanta during the war, will be adviser to Robert K. Salyers, assistant administrator in charge of field service for RRA.

Dr. Caliver, nationally known for his work in Negro education with the U. S. Office of Education, will act as advisor to George L. Glasheen, assistant administrator in charge of retraining and vocational education.

Mr. Thomas, a recognized specialist on industrial relations, will advise Shane MacCarthy, assistant RRA administrator in charge of the reemployment branch.

In announcing the appointments General Erskine said:

"In our haste to replace the chaos of war with the tranquility of peace, we must not overlook the welfare and well being of those minority groups who constitute a substantial segment of our population.

Miss Objectives

"Any program of peacetime reconversion which does not do this will have missed the objectives for which many of our people gave their lives on the field of battle in two great wars of our generation, namely to preserve our way of life, and to assure for us all complete freedom of thought and action."

Stating that activities in retraining, reemployment, vocational education, and vocational rehabilitation should be of benefit to all people General Erskine continued:

"Accordingly, through the designation of these four consultants, who possess the very highest degree of ability and intelligence, and who, I am sure, can assist us materially in the execution of our responsibility to the people of their race, the RRA feels that it will be in a better position to further the attainment of the goals of human reconversion which congress had in mind in enactment of the general program of peacetime readjustment." New Diplomat Arrives in Capital

Baltimore, Md. Afro-American

WASHINGTON

Recently appointed by Emperor Haile Selassie as Minister Envoy Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to the United States, Ras H. S. Imru arrived in Washington on Wednesday to assume his duties as representative of the Ethiopian Government. 5-11-46

The former Governor General of the Province of Begemder, Ras Imru succeeds the previous Minister, Blatta Ephrem T. Medhen by order of his Imperial Majesty.

Ras Imru, who speaks only French, was interviewed at the Ethiopian Legation on Thursday by the AFRO through an interpreter, G. Tesemnia, First Secretary.

Silent About Mission

Ras Imru would not divulge last week any official information regarding his mission to the United States because he had not yet presented his credentials to President Truman.

However, he reported that Ethiopia is recuperating slowly from the ravages of the war and that an UNRRA mission is now working in the country to aid in rehabilitation. Sat 5-11-46

Ras Imru was accompanied to this country by his wife, Madame S. M. Imru and two daughters, Hirut Imru, 19, and Yodit Imru, 17.

The secretary at the Legation said the daughters would probably attend school in the U.S. at some institution to be announced later

Pepper Stands For Progress

The Defender Chicago, Ill. Sat. 11-2-46

By VERNON JARRETT

What manner of man is a Southern senator who becomes one of the nation's chief spokesmen for progressive issues—while reelected each term from a state with a record of 281 lynchings, a revived Ku Klux Klan and a relatively weak labor movement?

Claude Denson Pepper, 46, an ex-Dudleyville, Ala., farm boy could not answer that question in one sentence. But during an exclusive Defender interview at the Morrison hotel last Saturday morning the answer became self evident. The stocky black-haired Florida senator stopped packing his luggage and reflected a second before declaring:

"It costs me votes every time I make a liberal utterance, because my enemies distort my statements. However, I still have a sense of appreciation for the dignity and welfare of all human beings."

Pepper, who has played a hard-hitting left end on the Democrat's Senate team for 10 years, revealed for the first time that he and Clark Foreman, head of the Southern Conference of Human Welfare were working on a general bill to be presented in the 80th Congress that would cover the poll tax, lynching, and make it a criminal offence to deprive persons of civil liberties. The three measures are combined to block repeated filibustering, he explained.

The Phi Beta Kappa Senator was reminded that in 1944 he was accused of preaching liberalism in northern banquet halls while supporting bigotry during his Florida campaign speeches.

"That is a distortion of facts," Pepper answered sharply. "It all started when I was questioned as to whether or not the Supreme Court decision outlawing white primaries would enforce 'social equality' and end 'white supremacy,' and I said it would not, which is a matter of fact."

Triumphs Over Bigotry

In that election, pictures were circulated showing Pepper shaking hands with Negroes in a Los Angeles Baptist church along with being called "nigger lover." He won by a 10,000 majority.

This Southerner, who has incurred the wrath of Bilbo, Rankin and others of the Wall Street-dominated clique, points out that he has no "special love" for any single minority. And his attitude is simply that "prosperity for white men cannot be divorced from that of the Negro. "Furthermore, Negroes are human and are entitled to human rights," he continued.

Liberalism a Necessity

Liberalism to Pepper is a necessity — not an accessory. There were no singular incidents that turned him into rabid "radical." He never took the road to Damascus. But during his years as a student working his way through the University of Tuscaloosa, through Harvard, and as a teacher at the University of Arkansas, he evidenced the ability to spot trends—forces coming into being as well as the dying away.

Moving to Florida during the height of the Hoover era, he became a vigorous labor spokesman when organized labor there was negligible. Like Roosevelt, Pepper works closely with a core of able young men, many of which are in the state legislature. In 1937 these young progressives in the Florida assembly kicked the poll tax off the books.

Speaks for "Poor" Man

Probably his greatest strength lies in a continued fight for the "poor white man in the South" rather than big northern interest who exploit cheap Southern Negro and poor white labor. In the last election 35,000 Negroes voted for the first time.

At this point we hustled out of the hotel down to a waiting taxi, and during the five-minute ride to his train, Pepper advised:

"We all—especially those who have suffered long and are impatient—must treat life in regard to facts. Pessimism and vengeance do not remake the world. There are forces working for the best interest of the Negro people and all people. They must be supported."

Confidence in Soviets

While worming our way through the Polk and Dearborn Street station, Pepper expressed a deep concern over international peace. However, he said that he was highly confident that Stalin and the Soviet people were not designing a third World War. But Pepper is not a Marxist, in spite of suspicions. During our chat he refused to recommend public ownership of even a few basic industries. He felt that enforced government controls should be tried much longer.

Will Continue Fight

This grandson of Alabama confederates in a genial and warm but very serious man. During our entire conversation, he never wasted a smile. However, as he boarded his train, the Senator clasped my hand very firmly and made one request:

"Tell Defender readers that I will continue to fight for the decent protection of civil liberties of all people—regardless of the consequence to me personally."

Perhaps a Pepper Party

The News and Courier Charleston, S.C. Sat. 9-28-46

Naturally, inevitably, Senator Pepper, while saying that those whom he describes as "reactionaries" should be left at home, should, if they be office-holders, be kicked downstairs, declares that he and Secretary Wallace (Mr. Wallace when a member of the cabinet was an "adviser of the man in the White House") are opposed to a third party, that "a third party would be doomed to failure." In Florida, the "reactionaries" might gain power and "doom to failure". Mr. Pepper. Mr. Pepper has supported the measures of the Harlemites and the Liberalites of New York and other cities. The colored voters are informed that he advocates the FEPC the repeal of the poll tax, the so-called "anti-lynching" bill which was defeated when Senator Byrnes and other Southerners filibustered against it. Were the "reactionaries" about to defeat Mr. Pepper for the senate, in a white man's primary, would he remain in the party with them? As an independent candidate in the general election he would probably receive the votes of a solid negro bloc, as Mr. Carmichael received it as a candidate for governor in Georgia. As long as Mr. Pepper shall regard himself safe in Florida's Democratic party it will be his wish and contention that reactionaries driven out of office in Florida shall remain in the party and cast votes for Pepper. Perhaps we shall some day have a Pepper party in the South.

Yesterday And Today

Danger Of Patronage

ONE OF THE evils against which Negroes must guard is the habit of the major political parties to make individual appointments of Negroes to governmental jobs—in place of passing broad legislation which will help the Negro mass. It is a fine thing and good thing for individual Negroes to get jobs as judges, governors, department heads, and the naming of individuals to such offices should be something that Negroes and white allies should strive to see continued. But it is altogether another thing when Republicans and Democrats make deals with Negro leaders that, in return for marshaling votes or other support, so-and-so gets a job—while the same parties wink at handling anti-lynch, or anti-poll tax legislation which would benefit the Negro millions.

The history of recent major party politics is filled with this type of thing and I think that the Man in the Street needs to know about this.

This practice has been one of the more notorious approaches of Governor Thomas E. Dewey in New York State. In the Spring of 1944, when Dewey wanted to be President and feared to pass Anti-Discrimination Law legislation at that time, and ditched such legislation until after the 1944 Presidential elections, he hastened to recoup his lost prestige by naming a number of individual Negroes to jobs in New York State. This did not much help 500,000 Negroes in that area who remained unprotected in job legislation.

Nice Gesture

IT IS A GREAT and wonderful thing to have Judge Mollison named to a federal judgeship, as occurred last year, and it is a fine thing that William Hastie was named Governor of the Virgin Islands, but the Democrats certainly do not fulfill their obligation to the Negro group by such appointments alone. This does not exempt them from responsibility for passing FEPC legislation, for repealing Jim Crow legislation—but they believe that it does take care of their obligations.

As a matter of fact the policy of appointing a few individual Negroes to important jobs can have deleterious effects too. Once Irvin Mollison was known as a valiant fighter against the restrictive covenant in Chicago. When he was named to a federal judgeship he won a life job, the court won a fine man, and the Negro people lost a great battler. He may never be heard of again.

One of the outstanding evils of our national political life has been that of "compromise." This means: the making of deals. Always the Negro has been the victim of such compromise, always he has been the piece of cheese in the deal between the mouse and mousetrap. Negro politicians have been drawn into this practice. They must learn to aim for the biggest deals, however, the passage of a National Civil Rights Bill, the making of FEPC into law, and kindred broad legislation which will strike at fundamentals and help 13,000,000 black citizens and at the same time enhance the whole democratic picture. The naming of a Negro to a generalship in World War II didn't help segregated Negro troops.

Leads To Catastrophe

I MENTION all this because, in the new period, when political lines are so uncertain, when nobody, white or Negro, knows just what the immediate political future will bring, it would be a damned shame if Negro politicians, editors and publishers, business men and others having influence with the major party machines were to be prepared, mentally, to turn over the great Negro vote of 1948—a decisive vote—in exchange for a few jobs for individuals while the great mass of their people don't know whether to join the breadlines or the souplines.

The Democrats and Republicans will have more respect for Negro leadership and Negro political chiefs if they take a firmer stand in demanding passage of broad political legislation that will strengthen democracy for all. The Negro should not underestimate his voting strength, nor his influence as an economic factor in national life. He should place a higher stake on his political relationship to the community. He must demand of the major parties that they come through with real advance for millions—and the devil take the crumbs.

Negro Woman Elected

The Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Thurs. 1-9-47

A recent issue of the Alabama Baptist contained some interesting political information that most Alabamians might want to consider. This column is quoting the Alabama Baptist verbatim:

"In the elections of November 5, two Negroes, W. L. Dawson and A. Clayton Powell, Jr., were returned to Congress, and 38 were elected to the legislatures of Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Marrachusetts, Michigan Missouri, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Vermont and West Virginia. In addition, three legislative incumbents held over, making a total of 43 who in 1947 will occupy legislative seats, state and national.

"Of those elected this year twenty-four were Republicans and sixteen (including the two congressmen) were Democrats. Six will occupy seats in the Pennsylvania legislature, six in that of Illinois, five (including one woman) in that of New York, four each in those of Indiana, Missouri, and Ohio, and two in that of Colorado. Several other states, including Kentucky, will have one each." Thurs 1-9-47

Reading from left to right is seen County Commissioner Fred White, who holds the highest ranking elective office held by a Negro west of Chicago, Congressman A. Clayton Powell Jr., and Hon. William H. Towers, Kansas State Legislator and Deputy City Attorney of Kansas City, Kansas. In the background is seen—Garland Williams, local civic and business leader and attorney Elmer Jackson. Commissioner White represents the second commissioner district in Kansas City, Kansas, and is the first Negro elected to the office. . . Mr. Towers is representative of the Eighth Legislative District in Kansas City, Kansas. . . . Congressman Powell represents one of the largest districts in New York. He was the first Negro elected to Congress in New York. . . While he ran on the Democratic ticket, he won the nomination on three tickets . . . the Republican, the Labor and Democratic tickets.

Bilbo's Speech

I do not know how accurate are Senator Bilbo's statistics concerning the relative numerical proportions of Government jobs held by Negroes and Whites, as the Senator gave the figures in a speech in the Senate on December 21, which was reported only in part in The Post.

His figures purported to show that Negroes have 10 per cent more jobs than their proportion of the national population entitles them to. This he thinks is unfair to the whites.

But, granting the full accuracy of the Senator's figures, there still remains to be considered the important matter of the relative proportions of the total wages as salaries received by the two groups compared with their population ratios.

Perhaps someone will give us light on this phase of the matter which will assist in determining whether the Senator's charge of unfairness is justified and, if so, which group is actually victimized.

F. H. M. MURRAY.

Alexandria, Va., Dec. 22.

Senator Bilbo says Negroes hold 19 per cent of the 300,000 Federal jobs in Washington. He suggests that they should be cut to nine per cent which he claims is their relative strength in the population. He does not mention that Negroes count 28 per cent of the population of Washington.

Mr. Bilbo neglects to say that it is because private employment refuses to give Negroes jobs in many areas of work that causes them and some other minority groups to look for jobs under the Federal Government. Negroes are barred because of their race and the local pattern of prejudice from holding any but the menial jobs in the utilities, the Capital Transit Co. and our great stores, although as consumers in many of these areas they support them.

Although still believing it will be possible—or should be—in a democracy to eventually see this unfairness eliminated, this writer wishes that we might have an administration which would do in America what MacArthur has done in Japan. It is possible that we are witnessing more of democracy there—through the abolition of absentee landlordism, and the other social reforms taking place in Japan—than we have right here in the Capital.

Negro Digest Poll

NEGRO WANTS WALLACE OR DEWEY FOR NEXT PRESIDENT

Los Angeles

Dawson Absent, Powell Votes No On Anti-Labor Bill

WASHINGTON—Rep. William L. Dawson (D., Ill.), did not vote, and Rep. Adam C. Powell Jr., (D., N. Y.), voted "nay" on the vicious anti-labor Case bill before the House last week.

On a roll call vote on the House took a resolution accepting the Senate amendments to the "strike-control" bill and sent the measure to the White House by a vote of 230 to 106 vote.

Under the law unions working in industries affecting interstate commerce could be required to "cool of" for 60 days after asking a collective bargaining conference, before they could strike or engage in a "concerted slowdown."

Violation of this provision would mean the loss by the striking union of their status as employees and their protection under the Wagner Act.

Solons Salaries

Daily Worker

The salaries of Representatives William L. Dawson, of Chicago and Adam C. Powell, Jr., of New York, both Democrats, would be upped from $10,000 a year to $20,000 a year, if Congress carries out the recommendations of President Truman for revision of salary in the legislative, judicial and executive branches of the Government.

Atlanta, Ga

Mr. Truman believes that the wage scales of federal employees, with few exceptions, are obsolete and inadequate, particularly those of the federal judiciary.

At the same time he recommended a salary of $20,000 a year for members of Congress, Mr. Truman also recommended the repeal of the provision now applicable to the House of Representatives for an additional expense allowance.

Wed 3-6-46

In accordance with the President's program, the salary of Judge Irvin C. Mollison of the United States Customs Court would be doubled from $10,000 to $20,000 a year, if congress approves a recommendation of Arthur S. Flemming, a member of the Civil Service Commission.

But Judge Herman E. Moore of the United States Court for the Virgin Islands would not benefit under the salary schedule proposed by Mr. Flemming for United States judges. Mr. Flemming recommended a salary of $20,000 a year for each judge of district courts, including the associates judges of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, and the judges in Puerto Rico, Hawaii, and Alaska exercising federal jurisdiction, and each judge of the United States Customs Court.

According to Mr. Flemming, the revision he recommended in the salary scales for judges would result in the maintenance of the same dollar relationship between the salaries of judges and the salaries of members of Congress. But why the omission of the judgeship of the Virgin Islands?

Raphael O'Hara Lanier receives $10,000 a year as Minister to Liberia. The pay of Judge Arnold W. Scott of the Municipal Court of the District of Columbia is $8,750 a year. The Rev. Marshall L. Shepard, Recorder of Deeds of the District of Columbia, also receives $8,750 a year. Dean William H. Hastie will receive a salary of $8,750 a year after he is confirmed by the Senate and takes the oath of office as governor of the Virgin Islands.

Wed 3-6-46

All of these jobs represent mere crumbs from a heavily-laden patronage table. The right to hold office is a prerogative of citizenship. But the appointment of colored people to office has not been made in proportion to their advancement, their importace as a political factor, and the increase in bureaucracy.

As a matter of fact, in offices requiring Senate confirmation ground has been lost since the Taft Administration. In the lower and middle brackets, in relative numbers, there also was a decrease in clerical jobs held by colored persons between the Taft Administration and the outbreak of World War II. The requirement of photographs of applicants for civil service jobs and the discretion allowed appointing officers to choose one of three persons certified for a job accounted for this decline.

Cal.

CHICAGO—If the American Democrat would vote in the 1948 presidential elections, either Commerce Secretary Henry Wallace or New York governor Thomas E. Dewey will probably be land in the White House.

The Negro Digest poll for May shows a cross-section of the Negro population, of both Republican and Democratic parties, still fast in these two selections of two years ago. The poll also discloses a widespread distrust of President Truman, whose southern origin is held against him.

Democrats were asked, "What Democrat would you like to see nominated for President in 1948?" and furnished with a list of 10 candidates. Results favor- overwhelmingly (91%) Ickes got 4%; Truman, 1%; and Eisenhower and Guardia, 1%; and Edwards, James F. Byrnes, Alben Barkley, and Douglas received no Warren; and 1%, Eric Johnston and Leverett Saltonstall. There was no support for either Dwight Green or Robert Taft.

5-25-46

Sixty-two percent of the Republicans asked a similar question of Dewey. 19 per cent chose Dewey, 6% to the enactment of the Ives-Quinn law against discrimination in New York, while Stassen's poor showing is believed due to his failure to commit himself on racial issues.

Harold Stassen; 6%, Douglas MacArthur; 4%, John Bricker; 2%, Earl Warren; 3%, John Vandenburg and Arthur Vandenburg.

Congressmen Leave D.C But Secretaries Work

The Afro-American
Baltimore, Md. Sat. 9-7-46

Duties Just as Heavy When Sessions End as When Both Houses Hold Deliberations

WASHINGTON — (AFRO National Bureau) — Did you ever wonder what happens in a Congressman's office when Congress is not in session?

Well, if you think that representatives have, quiet, protracted vacations and that their secretarial staff sit around and knit sweaters or darn their hubbies' socks, you're all wet.

Things are humming just as fast whether Congress is in session or out on vacation.

Girls Keep Busy

Mrs. Phoebe Nelson, secretary to Congressman Adam Powell (Dem., N.Y.), and Mrs. Christine Hughes, secretary to Congressman Willaim L. Dawson (Dem., Ill.), follow the same routine that they do the year round.

They report at 9 a.m., attend to the volume of correspondence, visit the libraries and archives and keep in constant contact with their bosses, wherever they happen to be.

Politics is a year-round business. Most of the letters flowing in are from people demanding favors of all kinds.

Some Voters Importunate

While some voters look upon their franchise as a privilege and a duty, there are thousands of others who consider their vote a form of barter to improve their personal fortunes.

It is these voters who give their Congressman no peace. With thousands of employees facing loss of Government jobs, requests for assistance are growing in volume.

Many of the letters urge the representative to speed up their applications for transfers or to use his influence to help them keep the jobs they have.

Ask for Jobs

Some of them, however, are in the following vein:

"Dear Congressman:

"I have been given notice of dismissal. I voted for you during the last election. Will you please find me another job at once?"

Both the Congressmen and their secretaries "burn" at letters like these. They find it easier when the person has made some effort to locate a new position for himself and just needs a friendly word to help expedite consideration.

War Complicates Duties

To expect the Congressman to find the job and then use pressure, too, is asking a little too much of him.

The war has also added to the Congressmen's load.

Parents deluge the office with requests for help in speeding their boys' discharge; or if there are no civilian jobs available at home to help keep their boy in the armed service.

Repair Political Fences

The GI Bill of Rights, with its educational provisions, also requires a lot of attention. Veterans, both sick and well, are constantly sending in SOS calls.

Then there is the job of keeping "political fences" in repair at home.

Failure to answer a letter may cost plenty of votes where one might least expect, because people are never quite as zealous in putting somebody in office as they are to vote him out if they are offended, even though unintentionally.

Yes, a Congressman leads a busy life, and so do his secretaries.

HOW HISTORIANS HAVE PLAYED TRICKS WITH NEGRO HISTORY

Chicago, Ill. Sat. 7-27-46

IT WAS a well-studied, if not an organized, plan by early white historians to paint the Negro unfit and incapable of being a voter and not eligible to hold elective office after he was driven out of politics by the aid of President Rutherford B. Hayes, Republican, who "sold the Negro down the river" in that notable Tilden-Hayes political controversy in 1876. Samuel Tilden, governor of New York, a Democrat, had been actually elected president of the United States, and he went to bed on election night thinking so. When he awakened the next morning, he had another thought: two Southern states, Florida and Louisiana were in doubt, and upon their decision rested the presidency.

Lucius C. Harper

Hayes proved to be the better business man. He made a deal with the South that if these states gave him their electoral vote he would withdraw federal troops, guarding the election boxes to insure safe counting of the Negro vote, and let the white Southerners govern their elections as they deemed fit. President Grant had placed troops in the South to protect the Negroes against ballot stealing and raids of the Klan. When Florida and Louisiana agreed to Hayes' bargain and gave him the one vote necessary to election, it spelled the doom of the black man in politics below the Mason-Dixon line. The Negro was actually disfranchised by a Republican, not a Democrat. The Defender

WHERE Hayes left off, the historians of the South took on. Ever since that date, and up to the present time, their busy pens have been alert despoiling the record and achievement of the leading Negro politicians of the Reconstruction period. Surely, there were faults aplenty in the economic and political situation after the Civil War. After every war this is natural. From the Revolutionary to the present war political readjustments had to be accomplished, and in the turnover many mistakes were made. At present Congress has before it a case of outright thievery of big men in office, involving millions of taxpayers' money squandered by agreement with Representative May of Kentucky. This, of course, is just the beginning of smoking out the thieves who profited through political connections when young America was sacrificing its life on the battlefield. The Negroes, be it said to their credit, after the Civil War elected their best men to Congress, not their worst, as these historians would have us believe. Chicago, Ill.

The Negroes sent to the Senate and House of Representatives ten college graduates, and 12 others having secondary school training. Dr. Carter Woodson, who made a comparative study in this field, tells us that most of the Negro congressmen had more formal education than Warren G. Harding who became president. When the Mississippi state senate met in January 1870 and decided to select a senator to replace the traitor, Jefferson Davis, who had shot holes through the Stars and Stripes, two white men, Flournoy and Eggleston were considered. But the Negroes and whites that made up the body decided that these white men did not possess the intellectual qualifications to represent them or the state and the Rev. Hiram Rhoades Revels, a Negro college graduate, was sent to Washington to fill out the short senatorial term, Feb. 23, 1870 to March 3, 1871. In referring to Revels' presence in the U. S. Senate, Senator Morton obtained the floor and declared that the Senate, in getting Revels in Jeff Davis' place "had lost nothing in intelligence while it had gained much in patriotism and loyalty." Sat. 7-27-46

IT IS well to compare what the Negro voters of Mississippi sent to the U. S. Senate and House of Representatives to represent their state shortly after the Civil War and what the white voters of that state are sending there now. Senator Eastland, the junior senator, is a backwoods lawyer who practically operates a peonage farm. He attacked the draft law because it began to take poorly paid Negroes off his plantation. Rankin is still delivering Memorial Day speeches in Mississippi praising the acts of traitors, the Confederates, who put bullet holes in the American flag. He is a sourpuss and fascist of the worst type. He is crude and uncouth, and a deliberate muckraker. You know Bilbo. The term "perfect rascal" describes him. Every paper in Mississippi agrees on this. These men are sent to represent "white Mississippi." Let's turn the pages back and see what the Negroes sent to represent "colored Mississippi."

Hiram Rhoades Revels, who the Negroes elected to represent them as their first Senator, was born in Fayettesville, N. C., Sept. 27, 1827. He attended the Quaker Seminary, Union county, Indiana, and Drake County Seminary, Ohio. He graduated from Knox College, Bloomington, Ill., and was ordained a minister in the AME church at Baltimore, Md., in 1845. He lectured and preached in Indiana, Illinois, Kansas, Kentucky, Tennessee and Missouri. At the early stages of the Civil War he assisted in organizing the first two colored regiments in Maryland to help serve the Union and served himself at Vicksburg, during Grants' raid, as chaplain to these outfits. He settled in Natchez, became alderman in that city in 1868, and was later elected to the state senate. He founded a school in St. Louis. He helped organize the Freedmen's Bureau, which was a sort of WPA to former slaves. He was elected U. S. senator. After his retirement, he returned to his state and was appointed Secretary of State ad-interim in 1873. He was made president of Alcorn Agricultural College, 1876-1882. He was District Superintendent of the AME church. He died in Aberdeen, Miss., Jan. 16, 1901, while attending a church conference. Both white and colored attended his funeral; yes, in Mississippi. We don't know where Bilbo will die, but judging from his wife's record of him, it will probably be in a tavern or worse.

NOWHERE can be found among the legends of white historians the marvelous records of Senators Blanche K. Bruce or Hiram R. Revels. It was Bruce, the Negro senator, who first introduced in the U. S. Senate a national prohibition law. It did not pass. That was in 1879. Mr. Volstead came with his law many, many years later than the Negro senator. It was Senator Revels who fought for the improvement of the Mississippi levees and the cotton farmers. A Southern senator remarked from the floor in praise of the dignity of Revels said this: "Although it seems the popular thing for congressmen to abuse Jefferson Davis, it is pleasant, my colleagues, to note that Senator Revels does not join in this practice."

When the better elements of Negroes and whites throughout the South begin to join hands for a better government, and the days of Talmadge and Bilbo are at end, these smothered facts of Negro political history will see the light of dawn. But not until the Southern Negro takes his pen in hand and becomes the historian of his own race. So far, public school historians have been a fraud insofar as the black man is concerned.

Jerome Robinson, who has long held top "colored" job, has been promoted to Chief of Employment Program for Germany, putting him in charge of hundreds of white workers.

In Liberia, U.S. Minister R. O'Hara Lanier, having already gotten Frank Pinder job as Agriculture Attache, has persuaded State to create a Public Relations job on the Diplomatic Staff. Constance Daniel, one of three names suggested, has turned it down. Search is still on for right person. Salary $4,900 plus $1,500 maintenance.

In Agriculture, Ernest Norris' resignation from the personnel spot formerly held by Tom Roberts, leaves Sherman Briscoe (Ag. Info.) considered and Reuben Simmons wanting it. Herb Henegan who shares the Negro Adviser spot in Farm Security (now Farmers' Home Admin) with Simmons, looks the best qualified inasmuch as he is actually doing personnel work now. He can get it if he pushes and his friends aid.

Otherwise—Cornelius King, long-time Asst. to Farm Credit Chief (Henry Hunt's old job) has been reduced from CAF 12 salary to CAF 9, and his assistant Hovey Washington crowded out entirely in economy move . . . Ralph Bunche who could have any one of three State jobs is presently Director of Division of Trusteeship with United Nations at Hunter College.

Worst in Years, Congress Record

Pittsburgh, Pa.

45c Sat. 8-10-46

The worst Congress in recent years, in respect to the rights and interest of Negroes and other minorities, ended last Friday. It was the first Congress dominated by a coalition of Northern Republicans and Southern Democrats.

Nominally, the Democratic Party is in control of both branches of Congress. In the Senate there are fifty-six Democrats and thirty-nine Republicans. In the House there are 242 Democrats and 190 Republicans.

Actually, twenty Democratic Senators and sixty Democratic Congressmen of the deep South consistently voted with the Republican Party on all measures affecting the rights of Negroes and liberal legislation. This has put this Republican - Southern Democratic coalition in charge of the Congress. This is particularly true because these Southern Democrats also hold most of the committee chairmanships, and in Congress a committee chairman is the most important figure in matters referred to his committee.

This coalition of Southern Democrats and Northern Republicans has also had the majority of votes in the various committees and have used its influence to stifle and suppress liberal and race legislation. The responsibility for the legislative debacle of the Seventy-ninth Congress, therefore, must be borne by the Republicans and Southern Democrats.

RACIAL MEASURES

The most important legislative casualty which Negroes suffered during the last Congress was the death of the FEPC bill. Discrimination against Negro employes has been rampant ever since FEPC was wiped out, and this discrimination is now as great at is was prior to the war. In almost every metropolitan center Negroes have again been reduced to unskilled laborers.

The anti-poll tax bill was blocked by a Southern Democratic filibuster with the connivance of both the Republican and Democratic Parties. This bill passed the House but was talked to death in the Senate. These party leaders refused to limit debate by imposing cloture and made it as easy as possible for the filibuster to succeed. Early adjournments of the Senate were allowed while the filibuster continued and there was no effort made to confine the filibusters to the issues under discussion. The presiding officer of the Senate during this travesty was Senator McKellar of Tennessee, who violated every Senate rule to favor the filibusters.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

ANTI-LYNCH BILL PIGEON-HOLED

The anti-lynch bill, which provided fines and imprisonment for members of lynch mobs, also passed the House but was pigeon-holed in the Senate Judiciary Committee when a threat of filibuster was made against this bill.

These three racial measures apparently have no chance of enactment by any future Congress which is dominated by a similar coalition or by a Congress whose important chairmanships are held by Southern Democrats.

Sat. 8-10-46

SOCIAL LEGISLATION

The last Congress killed other legislation which was not racial but was just as important to the well-being of Negro people. The Wagner-Ellender-Taft Housing Bill which called for an annual construction of one million 250 thousand homes for the next ten years, with emphasis on low-rental units, was permitted to die in the committee of the House. There is probably no legislation which more vitally affects Negroes than that which is calculated to improve the housing conditions of persons in low-income groups.

A bill providing for pre-paid medical care and a comprehensive health program was also stranded in committee. This bill was designed to improve medical facilities for the poor and needy and would have greatly aided Negro health.

A bill providing a 65-cent minimum wage was also permitted to die in committee. The chief objection against this bill came from Southern Democrats who refused to permit a 65-cent minimum to be given Negro workers of the South. Southern Negroes are now paid as low as 20 cents an hour.

A bill which provided for supplementary unemployment insurance benefits met a similar fate. Here again Negroes would have been among the chief beneficiaries, as there are proportionately more Negroes unemployed than any other racial group. Negroes are more subject to the vaccilations of the labor market than any other elements, ast hey are the last hired and the first fired.

MR. TRUMAN FRIENDLY

The hostile attitude of Congress to Negroes and liberal legislation certainly cannot be attributed to President Truman who has been forthright in his support of all liberal legislation and bills affecting the interest of Negroes. He was for a permanent FEPC, an anti-lynch bill, and anti-poll tax legislation. It was his liberal program which was recommended to the Congress that was either killed or emasculated. Negroes are beginning to put more faith in the President than in Congress.

A DILEMMA

The Negro people face a dilemma in this year's election when the control of Congress will be decided by the voters. If the Republican Party is voted in power, there is indication that the liberal domestic program which involves the interest of Negroes, will be suppressed and that racial legislation will fare no better if entrusted to the control of the Republicans than when controlled by a Republican and Southern Democratic coalition.

It does, however, seem absolutely necessary to oust Southern Democrats from control of chairmanships in the House and Senate. This can only be done by giving the Republican majorities in the House and Senate. It would therefore appear that Negroes must vote for Northern Republicans and take the risk of Republican indifference and hostility. This would seem warranted, because it is certain no racial or liberal legislation can be enacted so long as Southern Democrats control the committees to which this legislation is referred.

It is conceivable that if the Republican Party had full responsibility of national legislation that racial pressure may change the attitude of the Republican leaders, but there is no foreseeable power that can change the racial attitude of Southern legislators.

"Jim Crow" in Congress

The News and Courier, Charleston, S.C.

A reason leading The News and Courier to rest in the happy conclusion that the common men have come into their own and that they are masters in the United States is that they address one another in letters, public documents too, as "Harry", "Clint", "Jimmy", "Izzy", 'Gene, "Sammy" and so on with the abbreviations of first names. The great men in the United States have adopted the manners of speech to one another that Senator Bilbo has long ago practiced in mingling with such of his constituents in Mississippi as would let him mingle. Bilbonian manners are now popular and prevalent in the North and the West. Next thing we know, statesmen will be taking liberties with Henry Wallace, Esq., and Colonel James Roosevelt by writing to them, "Dear Hank" and "Dear Jeems."

Mon. 9-23-46

It appears that in congress "Jim Crow" is still practiced, as we have not heard of either of the two colored congressman, both "Democrats", addressing the president, a member of the cabinet, representative, or senator, by their first names. We suspect that most of the white "Democrats" are guilty of "race discrimination" as to them.

Talmadge, DuPonts Are Old Friends

By Harold Mehling

Daily Worker

Ten and a half years ago, Gene Talmadge, then Governor, now Govenor-elect, of Georgia, figured in another attempt to impose the lynch brand of fascism on the United States.

That was in 1936, the year picked by the openly fascist representatives of American Big Business for their ill-fated putsch, via Alf Landon, Herbert Hoover, Al Smith, the Liberty League—

Jus. 8-6-46

And gallus-snapping Gene Talmadge.

For it was in January of that year that Talmadge stood at the helm of a movement that sent chills down the spines of Americans who realized what fascism meant. It can happen here, they decided, when they saw the lineup alongside the Georgian. New York

There was Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, who said of the anti-lynching bill then up in Congress (Yes, they were trying to pass an anti-lynching bill long, long ago): "I denounce this bill as an infamous outrage."

There was Thomas L. Dixon, of New York and South Carolina, author of The Klansman, who said of the anti-lynch bill: "Infamous tyranny." There was Col. Henry Beckinridge, America Firster Charles A. Lindbergh's attorney.

But these, just as Talmadge, were only the irrepressibles—the native American fascists who writhe when they think of Negroes, Jews, Catholics, Italians, and how many others, living within our borders.

More interesting are the real captains of the campaign, those who financed Talmadge's "grass roots" convention held in Macon, Ga., Jan. 29, 1936, where Talmadge was implored by some 3,500 delegates to run for President against Franklin Roosevelt. Jus. 8-6-46

Pierre duPont sent $5,000. John J. Raskob, one of the U. S.'s biggest capitalists, sent his $5,000. And the rest of the moneyed backers of American fascism.

Lamont and Irenee duPont; O. C. Huffman, president, Continental Can Co.; Odgen L. Mills, Secretary of the Treasury under Hoover; Alfred P. Sloan and Alvan Macauley, Liberty Leaguers; Frank B. Kellogg, Secretary of State under Coolidge; W. E. Smith, Standard Oil Co.; John F. Neylan, general counsel of the Hearst newspapers, and H. C. Hopson, head of the huge power trust, the Associated Gas & Electric Co.

They were the men behind the scenes of the formation, in July, 1935, of the Southern Committee to Uphold the Constitution. Chairman was John Henry Kirby, wealthy Texas oil and lumberman, past president of the National Association of Manufacturers. Kirby's assistant was Vance Muse, Ku Klux Klansman. Jus. Day 8-6-46

TALMADGE

When Muse distributed, at the "grass roots" convention, copies of the Georgia Woman's World, showing Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt being escorted to an automobile by Negro members of the ROTC at Howard University, Kirby said, this distribution "is not to be condemned in Dixieland."

They were ready to take over—to send anti-Roosevelt delegates to the 1936 national Democratic convention—or not to hold a state preferential primary at all. Kirby said if things went wrong in Texas and pro-Roosevelt forces were elected, he would gather "those who hold similar views" to contest their seats in Philadelphia later that year. He had 50 hotel rooms reserved in Philadelphia for the occasion.

The committee's counterpart in the North, the Liberty League, had a similar list of financial backers. Talmadge told "delegates" to his conference people in the North who held views similar to his could find a leader in men like Al Smith. Smith's Liberty League received $924,974.84 from these: New York.

DuPont Family	$204,045.00
DuPont Associates	152,622.68
Pitcairn Family	100,250.00
J. P. Morgan Associates	68,226.00
Mellon Associates	60,752.55
Rockefeller Associates	49,852.56
Hutton, E. F. Associates	40,671.28
Sun Oil Associates	37,260.00
Banks and Brokers	184,224.83
Utility Companies	27,069.94

Most of this material was uncovered by the Hugo Black Senate Committee in hearings in the spring of 1936. It leads the Daily Worker to wonder what light might be shed on the inner workings of Talmadge lynchdom today if the Department of Justice were to dig down and have a look today. Jus. 8-6-46

GEORGIA HAS ALWAYS HONORED ITS SCOUNDRELS

Savannah, Ga.

THE Massacre at Monroe, Ga., is the natural outcropping of what has been brewing in Georgia ever since 1936, to be exact. The minds of the people of that state had begun, in a manner, to accept the liberalism of Franklin Roosevelt, and to follow the program of the New Deal. Mr. Edward Rivers, then governor of Georgia, had labeled his administration the "Little New Deal." Eugene Talmadge, the "cuspidor-spitting expert" was out of power, and was barking commands at his poorly paid Negro farm workers who were laboring in the hot sun on the plantation he had inherited from a well-to-do widow near McRea. Talmadge was seeking for some event to take place along interracial lines that he could fan into the flame of race hatred and thereby regain his previous popularity. President Roosevelt, unknowingly supplied the spark. Over 20,000 Georgians flocked to hear him at Gainesville at the dedication of a square honoring his part in rehabilitating the mill city after it had been devastated by a tornado in April 1936. He utilized the occasion to make a plea for enactment of the wage-hour law, through which lowly paid Negroes and poor whites would profit, and he also set the stage for the coming Georgia primary. This is what he said:

Lucius C. Harper

Defender

"I speak to you of conditions in this, my other state," began the President, alluding to Warm Springs as his "second home" for 14 years. "The buying power of the people of Georgia and that of the people of many other States is still so low that the people of these States cannot purchase the products of industry . . . Let us remember that buying power means many other kinds of better things — better schools, better health, better hospitals, better highways, etc. These things will not come to us in the South if we oppose progress, if we believe in our hearts that the feudal system is still the best system . . . When you come down to it, there is little difference between the feudal system and the Fascist system. If you believe in the one, you lean to the other." That was all that Talmade and his crowd needed to stir the hillbilly red-necks into action. He was the first to refer to the President's affliction, saying: "President Roosevelt is so that he can't walk around and get first-hand information; he has to take his from his secretaries. If he thinks he's gonna destroy our so-called feudal system, and elevate the N - - - - to the plane of a white man, he's sadly mistaken, and we'll show'm." Defender

TALMADGE communicated with all the known enemies of the New Deal in the North. They sent him contributions. Then he announced that he would run for the U. S. Senate against the incumbent, Walter F. George, who sadly is not one whit better and has fought the anti-lynch bill along with other Southern demagogues. Talmadge called a "Grass Root Convention of Southern Democrats" at Macon with the object of lining up Dixie in a solid anti-Roosevelt bloc. John Henry Kirby, wealthy Texas lumberman and friend of Vice President Garner joined in. Talmadge sent to Louisiana for the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, a master at stirring up race hatred, and added to the list every known race-baiter in the state. For a week this crowd revelled in denouncing the Negro and whites who were friendly to him. They issued a propaganda newssheet known as the Georgia Woman's World, and the prize exhibit flaunted by this scurrilious paper was a picture of Mrs. Roosevelt being escorted to her car by a Negro faculty member and a Negro student of Howard University. And as Talmadge described it: "It is the great Mrs. Roosevelt, our president's wife, who wants to tell us how to run Georgia, going to some N - - - - meeting with two escorts, N- - - -s on each arm." And the crowd booed in scorn. Talmadge was here making fertile the ground that finally produced its crop in the Massacre at Monroe.

In this campaign of race hatred Talmadge was aided and abetted by Northern industrial leaders who had a heavy financial interest in the defeat of the New Deal. The Georgia Power Company is practically Northern-owned and has powerful influence in Georgia politics. Kirby, the Talmadge business agent, later admitted that John J. Raskob gave $5,000 to the Macon race-baiting committee; Pierre S. duPont, the Delaware powder manufacturer, gave $5,000. Other Northerners on the list of contributors were Lamont, Henry and Irene duPont; Alfred P. Sloan of General Motors, who gave $1,000, and who is notoriously anti-union; L. S. Mudge of Weirton Steel; General Mills, the International Milling Company, and many Southern industrialists and mill owners whose financial well-being is tied to Wall Street. These Northerners paid for this hatred to be preached throughout the South for the purpose of stemming the tide of liberalism that Roosevelt had launched. Hatred of the Negroes and every form of progress was the keynote of the Macon meeting. Hamilton Basso, Southern novelist and journalist, wrote in the New Republic: "Talmadge's Macon convention is one of those things that every decent man and woman in the South would like to forget." Yet, it was paid for by Northerners.

Chicago, Ill.

THE Negro is the football of Georgia politics; more so now that he has the right to vote. Ever since the coming of Gov. Hoke Smith around 1904 and 1906, he has been indiscriminately burned alive, murdered and lynched during or after every hot political campaign. Georgia was the first to burn Negroes at the stake. On Aug. 16, 1904 it shocked the world by burning Paul Reed and Will Cato alive in the public square at Statesboro. A photographer made a picture of the mob at its work; showed clearly the faces of the lynchers, but they never were arrested or brought to trial. One of the lynchers gathered up a few charred remnants of bones of the burned men and actually gave them to the judge who presided at the trial of Cato and Reed. He accepted them as a souvenir. The two men had been accused, but not convicted, of murdering a well-to-do farmer named Henry Hodges. Two years after this Hoke Smith, running for the governorship, so enraged the people of Georgia over the race issue that the Atlanta Riot broke out in September 1906. Before the year ended, Georgia had lynched nine Negroes in remote counties. In 1907 when Smith got a little ashamed of its lynching record, it decreased the number to six. Sat. 8-11-46

The lynch record took an upgrade when Thomas W. Hardwick, a race-baiting Sandersville lawyer, beat Smith for the governorship. Hardwick said once: "I don't talk to these Georgians on the tariff; they'd go to sleep. I keep'm awake on the Negro." He finally went to the United States Senate, but was lost in its intellectual environment. He died just recently, practically unnoticed. Georgia, however, has always rewarded those politicians who have caused the state to be bathed in and disgraced by crime. It has, likewise, punished those who have sought to be fair and liberal. It once ran a governor from office for commuting the sentence of Leo Frank, a Jewish manufacturer, who had been convicted of murdering a white girl, Mary Phagan. It was the rabble-rouser, Tom Watson, who caused Frank to be taken from a Milledgeville prison and lynched in a nearby town. Watson called the lynchers the "Vigilante" and so glorified them for their act that the voters of Georgia later elected him to the United States Senate. It was he who caused the mob to go to the state capitol to lynch Gov. Slaton, who had to flee north to save his life.

Talmadge's Negro Appointees

Eugene Talmadge shouts from the stumps that we shall surely have Negroes in public office unless he is elected to preserve white supremacy.

But the words of Talmadge, the prophet of doom, are outweighed by the acts of Talmadge, the governor.

When he was last in office this man, who changes with ease from prophet to dictator as soon as he gets settled in the gubernaorial chair, brought about the very thing which he now attempts to use to frighten people into casting their ballots for him.

For the great champion of white supremacy appointed two Negroes as special employes of the Department of Public Safety in 1941 and ordered them to investigate cattle rustling in Telfair and Monroe counties.

We have no way of knowing whether the fact that Talmadge operates farms in these two counties had anything to do with the assignment.

The two were Claude Malcom and James White, and an auditor's report on their activities reveals that these two Negro appointeees of Eugene Talmadge used state expense money—money contributd by taxpayers like you and me—to buy whiskey, perfume, liniment and a lot of "miscellaneous," which is a term covering most anything.

Page 24 of the report of examination of finances of the Department of Public Safety as of June 30, 1941, shows that Malcom spent $15 for meals and miscellaneous expenses on May 10, 1941, -(Voucher No. 2970).

Other vouchers show that on 1941, he spent $10 for [illegible] from Atlanta to Forsyth [illegible] Jackson and then to [illegible]. On May 20 he paid out $20 in state cash for "miscellaneous."

On June 12, Malcom spent $13.88 for mileage to Talmadge's home town of McRae. And on the next day, the mileage and miscellaneous bill on a trip to Darien took another $68.34 of the taxpayers' money.

On June 14 (voucher 3695) there was an expenditure of $48.20 for bus fare to Forsyth, for hiring a car, for three quarts of whisky and as pay for one "B. Williams," who helped for five days.

The total expense account of Claude Malcom, who went out to catch the cattle thieves for Eugene Talmadge, was $175.42. In addition, he was paid $194,66 for two and one-half months of personal service.

The other Negro appointee, James White, was paid $22.50 for personal services from June 6 to June 13.

This man turned in only one expense voucher, and according to the report of the state auditor, this indicated that White purchased 12 bottles of perfume and four bottles of liniment.

The official record of the activities of Talmadge's Negro appointees may be found in the report of examination of the Department of Public Safety for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941, as rendered by State Auditor B. E. Thrasher, Jr., on August 12, 1941, to Eugene Talmadge himself, who was then [illegible]

Editor Constitution: The State Democratic Convention adopted a platform. In that platform it said: "Mr. Talmadge's election to a fourth term is indeed significant when it is recalled that never before in the long history of this great state has a Georgian ever been honored by being selected as Governor four times. This convention proclaims this fact to the rest of this nation." Sat.

We've Had Negro Officeholders

It was not only in Reconstruction Days that Negroes held office in Georgia. Long after the last federal military unit had left this state Negroes held various offices. Georgia was the last of the states of the Southern Confederacy to be readmitted to the union. That was in 1870, five years after Appomattox.

The Negro officeholder was no stranger in Dougherty County. Not only were Negro coroners elected a number of times, with both white and Negro voters giving them title to the office, but Negroes also represented this county in the state legislature.

In the 1870's Dougherty County had two representatives in the legislature. That was long before the day of the white primary; and all males of 21 years and over were entitled to vote. As there were many more Negroes than whites resident in the county, an arrangement was worked out whereby one white man and one Negro were several times elected. In every election there would be at least one Negro candidate, sometimes several.

The elections themselves were battles royal, with vote buying taken for granted. This county had Negro representatives in the legislatures of 1877, and 1880-'81. In the latter year Capt. John T. Hester, Confederate veteran and an oft-honored citizen, went to the legislature with Ishmael Lonon, a Negro blacksmith, as the co-representative.

But under the census of 1880 Dougherty County lost one of its two representatives, and the burning question then was whether a white man or a Negro would be the lone representative from this county. Ishmael Lonon had announced that he would be a candidate, and stated that "if us colored folks will stick together, I will be elected."

H. M. McIntosh, then editor of the Albany News and Advertiser and who in 1891 founded The Herald, was picked by white political leaders of the county to make the race against Lonon. It was a bitter battle in which enough Negro voters were persuaded to vote against the blacksmith to defeat him, and he was never again a candidate for public office.

The census of 1870 showed that there were more than six Negroes to every white person living in Dougherty County. Each succeeding census has shown white gains, and it is quite possible that the 19[illegible] census will show an even score for the first time since the county was created.

Reveals Ga. Had Negro Officeholders After '80s

Daily World Atlanta Ga. Thurs.

ALBANY, Ga. — (ANP) — Editorial columns of the Albany Herald's edition of Sunday, October 13, carried a refutation to recent statements that Georgia has had no Negro office holders since Reconstruction days. This assertion was made by H. M. McIntosh, president and editor of the Herald Publishing Company here.

McIntosh tells that the Negro officeholder could be found in Dougherty County and the state long after the last federal military unit had left Georgia. Pointing out that Georgia was the last of the states of the Southern Confederacy to be readmitted to the union—in 1870, five years after Appomatox—he declared that not only were Negro coroners elected a number of times, with both white and Negro voters giving them title to the office, but Negroes also represented Dougherty County in the state legislature.

Battle Royals

All this happened before the days of the white primary, when all males of 21 years and over were entitled to vote. In 1870, the county had two representatives in the state legislature, at a time when there were many more Negroes than whites resident in the county. An agreement was worked out whereby one white man and one Negro were several times elected. In every election, there would be at least one Negro candidate, sometimes several. The elections themselves were battle royals, with vote buying taken for granted.

During 1877 and 1880-81, Dougherty County had Negro representatives in the legislature. In 1881, Capt. John T. Hester, white Confederate veteran, was sent to the legislature with Ishmael Lenon, a Negro blacksmith, as co-representative.

According to the "History and Reminiscenses of Dougherty County," compiled by the Throneteeska Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, one Negro is listed as having served four times as coroner and another one term; though the race of the office holders are not listed, these two Negroes are said to be remembered by the older residents of Albany.

The first Negro coroner is said to have been Granderson Wynn, elected in January, 1883, and serving until April, 1884. He was reelected for the terms January, 1889, to February, 1890; January, 1891, to January, 1893, and January, 1893 to February 1895. All told he held that office for 77 months.

Varied Support

It was said of him that Wynn was elected without opposition on one or more occasions, and once, when he had a foe in a coroner's race, he polled a majority of the white votes.

The other Negro coroner was said to have been Brison Hill, who served from January, 1895, to October, 1896. No other Negro coroners followed him.

CENSUS OF 1880

In the state legislature race, Dougherty County lost one of its two representatives as a result of the census of 1880 and the question arose as to whether a Negro or white man would be the lone representative of the county. Lonon announced his candidacy by saying "if us colored folks will stick together, I will be elected." However, McIntosh, then editor of the Albany News and Advertiser, was picked by white political leaders to compete for the office against Lonon, which resulted in enough Negro voters being persuaded to vote against the blacksmith. With this defeat, he was never again a candidate for public office.

The 1870 census showed that there were more than six Negroes to every white person living in the county, but each succeeding census has shown white gains.

MRS. MANKIN'S VICTORY

The recent special election in the Fifth Congressional district reveals several things which we wish to call attention to: (1) that Negroes are becoming more and more aware of the fact that they are citizens who must take part in the affairs of government; (2) that they must register and be prepared to vote under intelligent guidance; (3) that they must become informed as to the mechanics of participation in government through the franchise; (4) the Negroes of Atlanta followed the leadership of their best men and women; (5) that Negroes can serve as efficient managers in an election. Whether their votes elected Mrs. Mankin is not important at the moment. She does not consider it important to acknowledge it as being so, despite the fact that she was running behind before the count from Precinct B was in. Two very significant things stand out in this election which should serve as patterns to other communities. Stokes states these things so clearly that we quote from him: "This election experience followed a thorough course of preparation by the intelligent Negro leadership which is taking its obligations seriously. They recognize their opportunity and want nothing to happen that will mar it or set back progress toward full citizenship. Leaders in Atlanta's several Negro colleges and universities have emphasied the obligations and responsibilities of citizenship, so that keen interest has been aroused among the students." While we have a college in Savannah, it shows no such interest in the political welfare of Negroes in Savannah and Chatham county. We could not depend upon it for leadership. But the most striking thing is the fact that "Negro ministers and churches have been active. Sunday evening forums on public affairs have become a regular part of church activity." Now we have in Savannah more churches and ministers per square mile, perhaps, than in any other Georgia city, and, to say nothing of holding forums on public affairs, some of our ministers have refused to stress registering and voting. The matter of registering and becoming informed in the necessary rudiments of politics should be high up in the scale of things a citizen should do, and we must depend in the main upon those who claim to be our leaders to guide us.

We say again that if the ministers took the registration of TEN THOUSAND VOTERS seriously and worked earnestly at it, 10,000 names on the voters' list would be an easy job. The fact is, it could have been accomplished already. It is difficult to discover the reason why our ministers are so reluctant to do this practical job of leadership, a job that will bring rich returns—social, economic and political, to everybody, to every church, to the entire community. The teachers, the ministers, and just plain citizens of Atlanta have set a pattern for Negroes everywhere to follow. We shall continue to urge that institutes in citizenship be set up so that our people can become politically literate, certainly in the elements of voting. This is necessary if the TEN THOUSAND voters we hope to get are not to be mere pawns in the hands of unscrupulous politicians.

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—Helen Douglas Mankin, newly elected Congresswoman from Georgia, arrived in town last week and immediately held a press conference. Newsmen were eager to see the white woman elected to Congress from Georgia by Negro votes, although she herself said it was the CIO vote that won the seat.

Accrediting the votes to the fact that in her law practice she had a number of Negro clients with whom she had been fair and square, Mrs. Mankin talked briefly on the Negro question. She did not amplify her statement that she believed in a fair and square deal for Negroes.

HAZY ON FEPC Sat 3-9-46

Of the FEPC she was hazy, her excuse being that she had been blacked out from national affairs for the past few months but if the FEPC was as bad a piece of legislation as she had been led to believe from reading newspaper accounts, she opposed it. But first, she said, she would have to read the statement.

Poll tax she considered a Southern States' question, saying that the people of various States admitted it was wrong and they would in turn repeal it.

Helen Mankin Ends Campaign

N.Y. Times New York, N.Y.
By United Press

ATLANTA, Ga., July 16.—Rep. Helen Douglas Mankin (D., Ga.) who was elected to serve the unexpired term of Robert Ramspeck from Georgia's 5th Congressional District, rounded out her campaign today for a full two-year term. She has been a supporter of OPA and terminal leave for enlisted men.

Mrs. Mankin's two opponents in tomorrow's State Democratic primary are Judge James C. Davis, veteran De Kalb County Superior Court Judge, and Capt. W. C. Lowe. Julio 7-16-46

Mrs. Mankin's strength is concentrated in Atlanta (Fulton County) where a heavy Negro vote in her favor gave her the necessary majority over 18 opponents last Spring when she was first elected.

The 5th District also includes DeKalb and Rockdale counties, much smaller in population.

Several weeks ago the Democratic Committee in the district voted to enforce the unit vote system in the Congressional race. Under this system, Fulton and DeKalb counties will have six unit votes each and Rockdale two.

Thus Mrs. Mankin may easily poll a popular majority but lose.

Good News Down South

New Republic 3-4-46

HOPEFUL CRACKS in the political fences of Southern reactionaries were made by the voters of Atlanta and New Orleans in recent elections. In both cases, record registrations preceded progressive victories.

Mrs. Mankin is a successful lawyer and has served five successive terms in the Georgia legislature. Her record in the legislature has been consistently progressive and was commended by Governor Arnall at the beginning of her campaign. Her strongest opponent in a field of seventeen 3-4-46 men was Mr. Tom Camp, former secretary to Representative Ramspeck and executive secretary of the Georgia Railroad Association, who had the support of various special interests.

Several new factors in the Georgia political scene which helped to elect Mrs. Mankin were: (1) the elimination of the poll tax; (2) the fact that this was a by-election, not subject to the restrictions governing Democratic primaries; (3) Negro votes, which played an important role in the victory. In addition, she carried on an imaginative campaign which brought the vital issues home to the people. Thus with the support of women's and church groups, organized labor, progressive individuals and organizations, and helped by a heavy turnout at the polls, she demonstrated that liberal sentiments can find political expression in the South. This is the third election in Georgia in which the Negroes voted for the candidates who were being supported by the church groups and the forward-looking citizens of good will.

A six weeks' whirlwind campaign in New Orleans ended in the defeat of Robert S. Maestri, who has exercised one-man boss rule in the Crescent City for twelve years and represents the last strong remnant of Huey Long's regime. The new mayor of New Orleans is 34-year-old Colonel Morrison, whose victory can be compared to that of a liberal sweeping Frank Hague out of Jersey City. The vote was close—67,028 to 62,017.

Morrison was elected by the combined support of an aroused citizenry, a very active women's committee, organized labor, veterans and Negroes. Although he made no platform commitments for widening the economic opportunities or the franchise rights of Negroes, the Citizens' Committee of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People estimates that most of the more than two thousand Negroes voting cast their ballots for Morrison on the basis of his generally progressive program. 3-4-46

His labor support came largely as the result of radio addresses in which he pledged himself to the industrialization of New Orleans, to the defense of the Wagner Act and to the appointment of a Labor Advisory Committee to help him plan for the future of the city. He made very progressive commitments about the place of women in a modern American city and announced that he would make appointments according to merit rather than sex.

If the anti-poll-tax bill now before the Senate is passed, the citizens of seven more Southern states will be given the chance to show the country that the Bilbos and Byrds are not the choice of the majority.

Atlanta Voters Give Georgia 1st Elected Congresswoman

Baltimore, Md

ATLANTA—(NNPA)—Joe Allen, city councilman, one of 17 defeated male candidates, last week protested to Governor Ellis Arnall the election of Mrs. Helen Douglas Mankin, State legislator, to succeed Rep. Robert Ramspeck, resigned, of the Fifth Georgia District, on Feb. 12.

Allen requested an investigation of returns from Precinct B in the Third ward, predominately colored, which gave Mrs. Mankin 956 votes to Camp's 16. It was the first time since Reconstruction days that colored persons served here as precinct managers and clerks in a Congressional election.

Mrs. Mankin, backed by the CIO, and regarded as a liberal, received 11,099 votes to 10,329 for Thomas L. Camp, former secretary to Ramshpeck. Camp led by 146 votes until returns from Precinct B swept Mrs. Mankin into office.

Says Georgia Negroes Decided Congress Race

ATLANTA, Feb. 13 (AP)—The Atlanta Daily World, a Negro newspaper, asserted today that the Negro vote decided the race for Congress in the Fifth Georgia District, won by Mrs. Douglas Mankin, State legislator, over seventeen male candidates. Times 2-14-46

Mrs. Mankin, backed by the CIO, received 11,099 votes to win a close race with Thomas L. Camp, former secretary to Robert Ramspeck, whom Mrs. Mankin succeeds. Camp got 10,329 votes.

The newspaper said Negroes served as precinct managers and clerks in Atlanta for the first time in a Congressional election. All of the candidates were Democrats. Negroes vote in general elections in Georgia and a court test is underway which seek to give them the ballot in primaries.

Woman Legislator Loses Ga. Primary

The Afro-American

ATLANTA — Representative Helen Douglas Mankin, whom votes by colored citizens placed in Congress for an interim period, was apparently unseated in last week's primary by Superior Court Judge James C. Davis of Clarkston.

Although she gained a plurality of votes, under the unit vote system of Georgia, she appears to be defeated by an 8-6 count.

With returns still incomplete, she had gleaned 44,718 votes to Judge Davis's 34,196. A third candidate, Capt. W. C. Lowe, polled just 6,332. Baltimore, Md.

To Claim Renomination

Mrs. Mankin told newspapermen, last week end, that she would claim renomination from the South Democratic Executive Committee on the basis of the popular vote cast in the Fifth Congressional District. Sat. 7-27-46

The district comprises three counties. She won her plurality in Fulton County, which contains Atlanta, where the colored vote is heaviest, and lost in DeKalb and Rockdale Counties.

3 Incumbents Win

In other State races for Congressional posts, the following nominations appeared certain:

Seventh District, Henderson Lanham; Ninth District, Rep. John S. Wood; Sixth District, Rep. Carl Vinson; Eighth District, Rep. John Gibson.

The First and Second Districts races can only be decided on the basis of the final returns as votes between candidates are very close.

In the First District, Rep. Hugh Peterson and Prince Preston were running neck and neck; and in the Second, Rep. Eugene Cox and J. N. Peacock were tied at 12 unit votes apiece.

Underground Tactics Send Ga. Woman to Congress

Baltimore, Md.

AFRO-American

ATLANTA—In New York, Philadelphia, Detroit or Chicago, a "wardheeler" carries around a thousand votes in his vest pocket and thinks nothing of it, but down here in Atlanta, 956 votes have turned an election and shaken the foundations of the entire South.

These 956 votes were polled in the Fourth Ward and helped send Mrs. Helen Douglas Mankin to Congress by defeating 17 other aspirants to the seat of former Congressman Robert Ramspeck. The occasion was the first in which colored voters had participated in the Democratic primary with their own tellers and watchers.

Won More Than Expected

Behind the scenes, this was perhaps one of the most unorthodox campaigns ever staged in America, with the group which controlled the balance of power expecting to win nothing but the right to participate in an election and exercise their franchise.

The candidate who won their solid strength not only promised the colored voters nothing, but is admittedly embarrassed by their support.

The race issue being the hot potato it is in Georgia, Mrs. Mankin, who faces another test in the regular primary this fall in order to hold the seat she won, is in a dilemma of the devil's own making. 3-2-46

On the Spot

If she acknowledges or makes any attempt to repay her colored voters by the slightest suggestion of liberality in Congress, the reactionary forces of ex-Governor Talmadge will use it to crucify her between now and September. If she fails, she runs the risk of alienating the only people who can assure her continuance in office.

The election was unorthodox because of this very race issue. The colored campaign was carried on underground, and came as a distinct surprise to Mrs. Mankin's opponents, so much so that Joe Allen, Atlanta councilman, has demanded a probe of the election in a protest to Gov. Ellis Arnall.

But there was nothing either mysterious or crooked about the victory. It was the result of hard work by a group of strategists who were determined to make the influence of the group felt in their first opportunity to prove their solidarity.

Party Lines Forgotten

The campaign was not political in the truest sense of the word, but racial and civic because Republicans locked hands with Democrats, churchmen combined with underworld characters, and college professors worked with the unlettered to get the voters registered and to keep them informed.

The Mankin candidacy was not advocated from the soap box or at political rallies, but in hushed whispers and private telephone talks to thousands of homes.

Any open support in the colored neighborhood would have been to the candidate's detriment. The only campaign literature distributed was a small ticket the size of a calling card.

Had Best Record

The colored citizens rallied to Mrs. Mankin not because of any promises she had made on the race question, but on the basis of her 10-year record in the State Legislature, where she had supported most of the liberal legislation that backward Georgia has on the books.

She was backed not because she was a dreamy-eyed liberal on the race question, but because she was the best of a bad lot. And the colored voters of Atlanta wanted to prove that if a public servant does even half way right, they will meet him or her more than half way.

But back of this little drama is a story fraught with group and individual heroics.

Political Brain Trust

At the top level there was the "Brain Trust," headed by C. A. Bacot, authority on socio-politics at Atlanta University, with Ira DeA. Reid as the elder statesman.

Around them, helping to implement strategy, were:

C. A. Scott, editor of the Atlanta Daily World; C. L. Harper, president of the NAACP; John Wesley Dobbs, of the Alliance of Political and Civic League;

Grace Townes Hamilton, of the Atlanta Urban League; J. C. Long, of the West Side Republican Club; A. T. Walden, of the Georgia State Democratic Organization, and many others. 3-2-46

Church Plays Role

The church displayed a militancy seldom before seen in the South. Under the dynamic leadership of the Revs. M. S. King, pastor of Ebenezer Baptist Church; B. J. Johnson of Greater Mount Calvary, William Holmes Boarders of Wheat Street Baptist, and Maynard Jackson of Friendship, thousands of new voters were placed on the registration books.

In one big drive, the Rev. Mr. Johnson led 360 to the polls in a political revival service. Bishops of the Holiness churches also led their flocks to the registrar.

The Federal housing projects swung into line and the entire population, running into hundreds, was placed on the books, the residents placing neat cards over their doors reading, "I have registered."

If no sign appeared, the neighbors kept after the delinquents until they did. Sat.

One-Man Campaign

The greatest one-man campaign was waged by 70-year-old J. C. Long, retired engineer of Spelman College.

With a substantial private income from his Texas property, Mr. Long has made a hobby of getting colored voters registered, selling his program from door to door like a brush salesman.

Working around the clock, he rings doorbells, asks members of the family if they aren't tired of poor schools, badly paved streets, inadequate recreation facilities, and tells them that the only cure is the use of the ballot.

Not taking any chances on his sales talk cooling off, he offers to carry the prospective voter to the polls in his car. Making his appointments on a regular schedule, he carries dozens to the city hall every day.

If for some reason he cannot keep an appointment, he sees to it that one of his associates calls on the new citizen and delivers him on schedule. Although he is a Republican himself, Mr. Long does not try to influence the political views of his converts. His mission is to get colored people to use their ballot—the politics will take care of itself.

Spreading Throughout State

By this application of practical political techniques, the leaders contend that they have placed at least 7,000 new voters on the books since the last national election and interest is growing.

The technique is being duplicated in other urban centers of the State, with colored voters taking increased participation in Columbus, Savannah, Athens and Valdosta.

However, it will take all the votes they can muster to keep the Talmadge forces from staging a comeback with the departure of progressive Governor Ellis Arnall.

The Unit System

The unit system, which gives backward rural communities as much strength in determining the election as cities like Atlanta, generally swing t ohte most intolerant rabble rousers.

By the unit system, one vote in some of the tiny benighted counties is equal to 51 votes in the big cities. Echols County, with a population of only 2,964, has two unit votes, and Fulton County (Atlanta), with 392,886, has only six votes.

Next to the sensational resignation of Harold Ickes as Secretary of the Interior, the most important news on the politcal front last week was the election of Mrs. Helen Douglass Mankin in Georgia to succeed Rep. Robert Ramspect.

The occasion is not only the first time that a woman has been elected to Congress from Georgia but also the first time that the colored vote has held the balance of power in a Dixie primary.

Until the votes were counted in the dominantly colored third ward Mrs. Mankin was trailing her lead-opponent, Thomas L. Camp, by 146 votes. The colored ward gave Mrs. Mankin 956 votes to win.

The question now is just what affect will this have on the future politics of the South.

Can Mrs. Mankin come to Washington and take the traditional place beside her Dixie colleagues in opposing all liberal legislation affecting colored people such as the anti-lynching, the anti-poll tax and FEPC bills?

Already other States have offered their polls to colored voters in the primaries in compliance with the ruling of the Supreme Court. Will this new action be the curtain riser of a new day in Southern race relations, or frightened by the ominous implications in this election, will the South swing into worse reaction and attempt to establish more repressive measures to keep colored voter away from the polls?

This will bear watching.

Georgia Congresswoman Won on 'Own Merit'

Pa. Pittsburgh Courier

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—Fearing that Negroes might expect too much of her in Congress, Mrs. Helen Douglas Mankin is being defended by a number of writers who claim that the first Southern woman to be elected in her own right and not by appointment, won on her own merits.

Disclaiming the credit the Atlanta Daily World would give Negroes for their heavy vote for her, Mrs. Mankin is said to have won because she is a "liberal" and not "radical." 3-2-46

WON BY 770

At the time of the vote, Mrs. Mankin's opponent led by 147 votes but when the returns from Precinct B in the Third Ward, which is predominantly Negro, came in, Mrs. Mankin won 956 ballots and her opponent, Thomas L. Camp, 7. Her total plurality was 770.

Doris Fleesom, erstwhile New York Daily News writer, now with the Washington Star, wrote, "The Atlanta Daily World, a conservative Negro newspaper, quickly claimed that the Negro vote elected her. Of course, 770 white persons who voted for her also might claim it was their franchise that did the work. 3-2-46

"Indubitably she was backed by the CIO and indubitably somebody did a fine job of electioneering for her. Georgians profess themselves puzzled about where to assign c dit."

John Rankin when learning of the woman's victory said, "Atlanta fell before; it has fallen again."

Doris Fleesom said also, "Even before she can begin her term, an attempt is being made to hang around Mrs. Mankin's neck an albatross." She then comments on the Negro vote.

Another account says that "Mrs. Mankin's liberal record and sympathies as well as the nature of her opposition attracted a large number of Negro and CIO votes. Her opponents tried to make political capital of this support but she successfully resisted that charge that she was the candidate of any group or clique."

HELEN DOUGLAS MANKIN, a "freshman" Representative in Congress from Atlanta, is a successful lawyer who some years ago dedicated her career to the proposition that the championing of Southern women was not necessarily a man's job. The proposition has stood up under a series of telling tests.

First, back home she enjoyed a lively practice—mostly "small fees, but plenty of good people." Next, the Georgia Portia, with a mind for public matters and a voice for public speaking, got herself elected ten years ago to the State Legislature—hardly a woman's club—and stayed there five consecutive terms. Finally, in a special election in February, she got herself elected to Congress, defeating a field of seventeen men and becoming the first Georgia woman to be so honored.

Her explanation of how this last happened speaks for her confidence in her ability to fill the office she won: "I had the qualifications, and am a good speaker. They say I'm a hard worker, and I am."

4-28-46

MRS. MANKIN'S ten years in the Georgia Legislature were spent in building up what, in another locale, could safely be termed a "progressive" record. She identified herself with measures advancing State civil service, setting primary elections late enough to give all candidates a fair chance to campaign, providing for permanent registration of voters, taking the serial numbers off ballots in "secret" elections and equipping voting places with voting machines.

In Washington hardly long enough to get settled, the new Congresswoman is taking very seriously the job of filling the shoes of her predecessor, Robert Ramspeck, who left Congress to go into business and whose effectiveness as a Representative was generally regarded as better than average. Incidentally, she was immediately appointed to the Civil Service Committee where her predecessor won his reputation as a crusader for Government service by merit.

Besides civil service, she has been assigned to committees on revision of laws, on claims and on elections. When the House is in session visiting Atlantans in the gallery can count on finding their Representative on the floor closely following the proceedings.

"I'll bet Helen will get impatient here in Washington,"

SHE was born Atlanta, Georgia, is a city that formerly was called the "Gate City of the South", but it is not the gate through which a progressive and humanitarian Democratic lady can enter congress and stay there.

When Edward M. Sneed was inducted into office as Democratic County Commissioner Monday, it marked the third time he has been so honored which established a precedent not only in Chicago but the United States.

Commissioner Sneed took the oath of office amid oratory, flowers and received scores of telegrams from friends throughout the nation.

First elected in 1938, he has served continuously as the lone Negro member of the County Board and emerged victorious this year despite the Republican landslide.

In a brief address Commissioner Sneed said "I am the happiest man in the world and I want to take this opportunity to thank the people of Cook County, both Democrats and Republicans, for having cast their votes for him."

A native of Nashville, Tenn., Commissioner Sneed has been a resident of Chicago for 40 years. He has served as committeeman of the third ward for 16 years. He is married and has a 10-year-old son.

Dr. J. B. Martin, president of the Negro American Baseball League and owner of the American Giants, who became Chicago's first Negro trustee of the Sanitary District, took the oath of office Tuesday along with three other newly-elected Republican members. 12-14-46

Dr. Martin was showered with flowers and telegrams from friends who wished him well. He has rare distinction of being the first Negro ever to win the coveted honor.

In his address to the 500 or more persons who witnessed the induction Dr. Martin pledged himself to do everything in his power to prove himself worthy of the job and said Republicans believed in doing things the American way.

J. B. Martin Winner In Chicago Elections

The Courier

By A. N. FIELDS

Chicago's recent Republican landslide resulted in a political phenomenon not altogether characteristic of politics. Chief among the winners was the election of Dr. J. B. Martin, 4552 South Michigan Avenue, as one of the trustees of the Sanitary District. This position pays $10,000 a year and the term is for six years.

It must be noted first that Dr. Martin has been a resident of Chicago for only six years. He arrived here in 1940, and in 1942, as a method of becoming better acquainted with Chicago and its environment, he caused his name to be placed on the Republican ticket as candidate for Cook County Commissioner. In that particular year all the Republican candidates of Cook County lost.

Sat. 11-30-46

Pittsburgh, Pa.

LED TICKET IN 1944

Dr. Martin, unfeated. When the Republican political leaders were casting about for candidates for the 1946 campaign, Dr. Martin was again chosen and nominated for membership on the Sanitary Board. This election was fruitful and the Republicans smashed the Democratic organization in Cook County. Martin emerged not only as leading the ticket, but also beat Jim Whalen by a member of the board.

DUTIES INVOLVED

The sanitary district extends from the north line of Cook County south to 159th Street and from the Indiana State line west to the east end of DuPage County. Its area is 442.85 miles, including all of Chicago and sixty-two other incorporated cities and villages. So, it can be seen how involved the duties are which depend upon the thinking and actions of members of the sanitary board.

Dr. Martin was born in Holly Springs, Miss., on Sept. 24, 1888. At the age of twelve he was brought to Memphis and, after the usual early training in the country schools, he attended Le Moyne College, from there he studied at Walton University at Nashville, and later attended Meharry Pharmaceutical College, graduating in 1910.

He entered the drug business in South Memphis, a business which he has conducted for thirty-two years. Dr. Martin married Miss Lula McGuire of Chicago in 1909, and to them were born two sons: William Martin who carries on his father's business in Memphis and Dr. J. B. Martin Jr., a prominent and successful physician of Detroit, Mich. Dr. Martin also has a sister, Mrs. Hattie Callier, wife of Dr. Callier of Chattanooga. Others of the Martin family are his three brothers, Drs. W. S. Martin, A. T. Martin, and B. B. Martin. All of the three brothers reside in Memphis, Tenn.

BEGAN IN MEMPHIS

Dr. Martin's activities in politics began over thirty-five years ago in the City of Memphis in association with Robert R. Church, who, for many years has been a political leader of national repute. In talking to the writer, Dr. Martin made the observation that he regards Mr. Church not only as one of his closest friends, but as one whose pattern in Republican politics he accepted years ago as his own and has found it successful.

While operating his drug business in Memphis, Martin found it convenient to take an active part in the activities of baseball, and for twenty-three years he has been part owner of the Memphis Red Sox as well as president of the Southern Baseball League, president of the Negro American League, and is also owner of the American Giants. All these ventures have been fruitful, so much so, that Dr. Martin is to be regarded as one of our wealthy members of the race.

Ky. Legislator Now Asst. State Attorney

Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

Thurs 4-11-46

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — (SNS) — Charles W. Anderson, Jr., Louisville attorney and member of the Kentucky Legislature for the past ten years was this week appointed Asst. Commonwealth Attorney for the Judicial District embracing Louisville, Jefferson County, Ky.

The appointment of Mr. Anderson was made by the newly elected Republican Commonwealth Attorney, Frank M. Ropke. Mr. Ropke stated in appointing the Kentucky Legislator as a member of his legal staff, that he was doing so out of recognition of the legal ability of the attorney and in order to give recognition to the Negro people of Louiscille by having one of their race on his staff; that the appointment of Mr. Anderson as Asst. Commonwealths Attorney was the first time in the history of Kentucky that a Negro lawyer had ever been appointed to such a position, and that, in his opinion, no other state in the South has a Negro as a member of the State Attorney's office.

INDUCTION MAY 1

While the appointment was announced this week, Mr. Anderson will not be sworn into office until Wednesday morning, May 1, at 10 a. m., in the criminal courtroom of the Louisville Circuit Court, presided over by Judge Loraine Mix.

Anderson was first elected to the Legislature as a Republican in 1936, and has been re-elected for six consecutive times, and in 1945 was re-elected to office without either Republican or Democratic opposition. He is a former president of the National Bar Association, a member of the National Legal Committee of the NAACP, and of the Board of Directors of the National Urban League.

Anderson stated, in reference to the appointment, that the Kentucky Legislature does not meet again until January, 1948, in which event he would have to be re-elected in 1947 if he desired to continue as a member of the Legislature. The appointment as Asst. Common wealths Attorney is for a period of six (6) years and pays a salary of $4,000.00 per year, with the right for the attorney to continue his civil law practice and that the appointment spells further progress and integration of the Negro people of Louisville in the governmental affairs of the community.

Negro Social Worker for U. S. Lauds State Child Welfare Division

Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

Mon. 4-29-46

Staff Praised For Its Work

Only Negro professional worker in the Social Service Division of the United States Department of Labor's Children's Bureau, Mrs. Annie Lee Davis, Louisville, yesterday complimented the Child Welfare Division of the Kentucky Department of Welfare for its "real desire" to extend services to Negro children.

Mrs. Davis, daughter of Mrs. M. G. Kirkpatrick, 2216 W. Chestnut, discussed problems of minority groups in Kentucky with the State staff in Frankfort Thursday and Friday in her first visit to Kentucky since her Washington appointment last March.

She declared that approaches to the problems of Negroes in Kentucky are "sound" and praised the State staff for its work while handicapped by "limited funds."

Tells of Minority Problems.

Mrs. Davis, special consultant to states confronted with minority problems, noted the position of the Negro is much the same as that of the Indian, the Mexican or the Chinese who finds himself on the low end of the wage scale and is forced to live in slum areas.

Speaking generally and not referring specifically to any one state, Mrs. Davis said this situation in some instances breaks up the home and because of lack of financial assistance, mothers turn to institutions for the care of their children. However, maintenance of these institutions, Mrs. Davis pointed out, is far more expensive to the State and more harmful to the child's welfare than if financial help could be given the individual family through a broad general relief program.

Taught School Here.

Mrs. Davis also assailed the lack of medical services available for children throughout the United States but emphasized that before adequate public services could be set up community interest in the problems must be awakened. 4-29-46

A former teacher at the Samuel C. Taylor School here, Mrs. Davis received her bachelor of philosophy and master's degrees from the University of Chicago. She worked at the Joint Service Bureau, a child-placement agency, of the Juvenile Court in Chicago; as case worker and assistant supervisor for Cook County, and as a psychiatric social worker at Provident Hospital, Chicago. She also was executive secretary for the child-placing agency of Sangamon County, Illinois, and one of six social-work consultants for the State of Illinois.

G.O.P. Nominee Seeks To Ease Racial Tension

William E. Porter, Hopkinsville, suggested here yesterday that Attorney General Eldon S. Dummit appoint a Negro from Kentucky's First Congressional District as an assistant attorney general.

Porter, unopposed candidate for Republican nomination to Congress from the First District in Saturday's primary, made his suggestion in a letter he said he sent to Dummit at Frankfort.

Porter declared in the letter, "Racial tension has been tight and the South is receiving much unfavorable publicity throughout the nation.

"Such an appointment at this time would show the people of America that there is a sincere desire for the creation of cooperation and good will between the two races and that the real people representing the majority are intelligently trying to solve a touchy problem."

At Frankfort Dummit said he had not received Porter's letter. He declined further comment.

Lester Walton's Record

LESTER T. WALTON has retired as United States Minister to Liberia after serving from 1935 to 1945, 11 years, a longer period than any other American Minister has ever held this office. This is a record which ought to be known. Mr. Walton left with the complete confidence of the Government of Liberia and of the Firestone interests. On his resignation he received the highest decoration of Liberia, the grand cordon of the Order of African Redemption, and in addition the warm commendation of the United States Department of State.

6-1-46

During his term he negotiated eight treaties and agreements concerning air power, the health mission of which John West is head, and the new port to be built by the United States Navy which for the first time in history will give an independent African nation a port where ships may call and anchor. This does not mean that conditions in Liberia are satisfactory but it does mean that there has been built up through Mr. Walton's efforts a condition of cordial relations between this government and the Liberian and a chance for economic progress. Chicago, Illinois

Relations Not Cordial

IT IS ONE of the acute tragedies of the situation that the understanding between Liberia and American Negroes has never been as cordial as it should be. The causes are clear: American Negroes have always assumed that they had certain rights in Liberia, that in a sense they owned it and that their advice should always be taken and their criticism heeded. On the other hand, the Liberians have had a desperately hard row to hoe. They have had to fight the Africans themselves for their original foothold because they were foreigners. They have had continuous struggle with the English and the French who were determined to annex the country and from America they have had at first an attitude of disdain and lack of interest and finally the pressure of economic and military interference.

The great defense upon which Liberia today depends and has depended is the political power of the American Negro. But that political power ought to be backed by intelligent comprehension of Liberian history, difficulties and present condition. We Negroes in America have the common American fault of thinking if we visit a country for fifteen minutes or fifteen months we know all about it. No casual visit to West Africa can make any man, however intelligent, expert on its social conditions. So that when a Negro like Mr. Walton has had actual experience for 11 years being in that time intimately connected with the government and people of the country it is reassuring to have him vouched for the integrity of the leaders of Liberia and the possibility of its successful development.

Liberian Prosperity Vital 6-1-46 Sat

NOTHING would help the cause of American Negroes more than the increasing prosperity of Liberia, Haiti and Ethiopia. We could receive no greater blow to our aspirations than that these countries or any one of them should fail or retrograde. Yet Liberia is in the midst of an economic and social battle which could result in her defeat unless she has intelligent help. The small nations of the world no matter what their race and color who are struggling today against the great empires are at tremendous disadvantage. The battle for the laboring man centers there quite as much as it does in the trade unions of England and America. Chicago Ill

There should be a movement, and I trust Mr. Walton will head it, to interpret Liberia and its problems intelligently to the American public and especially to American Negroes.

Lanier Named Minister to Liberia; Replaces Walton

Afro-American (Balt.) Baltimore, Md. 3-5-46

WASHINGTON.

The appointment of R. O'Hara Lanier, special assistant in UNRRA and former acting president of Hampton, as minister to the Republic of Liberia was announced last week by President Truman.

A native of Winston-Salem, N. C., Mr. Lanier, who is 45 years old, will succeed Lester A. Walton, of New York, minister since 1935, who resigned last summer but returned to Liberia when Truman failed to take immediate action on his resignation.

Mr. Walton has been in ill health and returned to this country last fall for an operation and medical treatment.

Supported by Dawson

In commenting on the appointment, Congressman William L. Dawson, who supported Mr. Lanier for the post, said:

"He is the type of man who will not only enhance the close friendly relationship which has existed between America and Liberia in the past, but will carry to the people of Liberia the inspiration and knowledge needed to make Liberia a model republic."

Active Democrat for 12 Years

An active member of the Democratic party for over 12 years. Mr. Lanier is a graduate of Lincoln University, which also conferred an honorary doctorate on him, and received the M.A. degree from Stanford University.

He is a member of Phi Delta Kappa and Alpha Pi Mu honorary societies and Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity. He is married and has two children, Patricia, 8, and Betty, 9.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(N. N. P. A.)—Raphael O'Hara Lanier, of Texas, was sworn in last Friday as Minister to Liberia, to succeed Lester A. Walton, who recently resigned.

Formerly a special assistant to the Chief of the Bureau of Areas of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, Mr. Lanier will leave this country in April to take up his new duties in Africa.

His family, consisting of his wife and two daughters, aged eight and ten, will follow him to the African republic in May.

MANY WITNESS EVENT

Lanier Sworn In As Liberian Minister

Chicago, Ill. Chicago Defender (Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON—In a simple and impressive ceremony witnessed by State Department officials and a galaxy of important figures in the educational, social and political areas of American life, Dr. Raphael O'Hara Lanier last week took the oath of office as United States Minister to Liberia.

Succeeding Lester A. Walton, recently resigned from the post at Liberia after more than ten years of distinguished service, Dr. Lanier brings to this high office a fund of administrative ability acquired through many years of service in the field of education and educational administration.

Lauded By Notables

Dr. Channing Tobias, senior secretary of Colored Work, National Council, YMCA, himself prominently mentioned for the post, said of Dr. Lanier's appointment, "I think his whole record of constructive thinking and service fits him admirably for the delicate job of serving not only as representative of his government in Liberia, but for the friendly suggestive help that can be rendered by one of his disposition in connection with the difficult internal problems the Liberians face."

Dr. Ambrose Caliver, administrative specialist in the United States Office of Education, termed the Lanier appointment, "the beginning of a new era in the life of Liberia." 3-9-46

Rep. William Dawson, (D., Ill.), and vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, who has loyally supported President Truman's choice of Dr. Lanier for appointment to the Ministership of Liberia, said, "America needs Liberia. Liberia needs America. Lanier will formulate a connecting link between the two nations that will work to the best interest of them both."

Judge William H. Hastie, dean of the Howard University Law School who has been recently nominated by President Truman to be Governor of the Virgin Islands, the first time a Negro has been so nominated in the history of America, considers "Dr. Lanier's appointment as an encouraging recognition of merit above all other consideration in the selection of personnel for important governmental post. "I am confident," Judge Hastie stated, "that his ability and judgment will combine to make his service as minister both creditable to himself and advantageous to the American and Liberian people." 3-9-46

Education Experience

Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard University, long associated with Dr. Lanier in the educational field declared the choice "an excellent appointment."

"Mr. Lanier is a very able man," r. Johnson continued. "He is not only very able in general, but very able in the field of realistic education having to do with agriculture and industrial arts. I would believe the appearance of Lanier in Liberia in any capacity would be an asset, but the fact the United States Government has selected a man of such ability and sends him over in such a position indicates the American Government has very high regard for the Liberian peoples and their possibilities."

Dr. Marshall Shephard, District of Columbia Recorder of Deeds, and chairman of the Foreign Mission Board of the National Baptist Convention, Inc., presently spending hundreds of thousands of dollars in educational and health missions in Liberia said, "I am especially proud of Lanier's appointment because we will have a sympathetic person over there in our mission programs. I know of his ability to represent the best of America's hopes and aims for Liberia and the aspirations of the Liberian people."

Expressing his own gratitude to President Truman for the honor of the office to which he has been appointed, the new minister assured, "It shall be my constant endeavor to merit the confidence which the President has reposed in me and to discharge the high responsibilities of my office to the best of my ability." 3-9-46

Byrnes Commends Walton

Lanier said, "The United States has more than a sympathetic interest in Liberia. We have embarked on a program of helping Liberia to help itself in the development of its natural and human resources. . . . As a representative of the United States Government at the Capitol City of Monrovia, I shall do my best to maintain the good relations already established by my illustrious predecessors in this office and to strengthen further the traditional bonds of friendship between the peoples of the United States and Liberia."

In recognition of his immediate predecessor, Lester Walton, Secretary of State, James F. Byrnes had this to say, "You have served the department for more than ten years at that post, the longest encumbency in the history of our official relations with Liberia, and have done much to foster our friendly relations with that country and its people." 3-9-46

Journeying from Winston-Salem, N. C., to Washington to share with their daughter-in-law, Mrs. Garret Lanier, wife of the new minister in the amenities of the occasion were the parents of minister, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Lanier. The Laniers have two charming daughters, who with their mother expect to take up their new life in Liberia in June. The minister, by protocol requirements, must take up the duties of his office within 30 days after taking oath of office.

President Truman Makes Appointment

The Informer Houston Texas Sat 1-5-46

WASHINGTON — President Truman this week announced the appointment of Dr. R. O'Hara Lanier to the post of United States minister to the Republic of Liberia. This appointment displays once again President Truman's keen interest in building up fine relationships with other peoples of the world.

Dr. Lanier has won an enviable reputation as a distinguished educator, splendid administrator and a profound student of African affairs. He is the type of man who will not only enhance the close friendly relationship which has existed between America and Liberia in the past, but will carry to the people of Liberia the inspiration and knowledge needed to make Liberia a model Republic.

DR. O'HARA LANIER

Born in Winston-Salem, N. C., Dr Lanier is now 45 years old and is married to the former Miss Garriett Greene. The Laniers have two children, Patrica Ray, 8, and Betty Joe, 9. 1-5-46

Dr. Lanier received his A. B. degree from Lincoln university in 1922, A. M. degree from Stanford university in 1928, and doctor pedagogy from Lincoln university in 1941. He was granted General Education Board fellowship, Stanford university in 1927-28; Rosenwald fellowship, Howard university, 1931-32; General Education Board special travelling grant, New York university, 1944.

From 1923 to 1925 he served as instructor at Tuskegee Institute; as dean and director of summer and extension sessions of Florida A. & M. college, Tallahassee, Florida from 1925 to 1933; dean and director of summer school, Houston College for Negroes, Houston, Texas, 1933 to 1938; assistant director, Division of Negro Affairs, National Youth Administration; dean of instruction, acting president, dean of faculty, Hampton Institute, Hampton, Virginia, 1940 to 1945; special assistant, Bureau of Areas, United National Relief and Rehabilitation since April 9, 1945.

For 1944-45 Dr. Lanier was selected for membership in "Who's Who in Education," "Leaders In Education," "Who's Who in Negro Youth Conference," and "Who's Who In Western Hemisphere," and "Who's Who In Negro Schools, Colleges and State Teachers Colleges in America."

He is a member of Pi Gamma Mu, social science fraternity; Delta Zeta Kappa, scholarship; Alpha Pi Mu, debating fraternity; Phi Delta Alpha scholarship; and Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity.

He is also a member of the National Committee of National Urban League; Executive Board, Southern Negro Youth Congress; past president, National Association of Colleges and Registrars in Negro Schools, Florida State Teachers Association and has been active national committee of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Dr. Lanier has been an active member of the Democratic Party for over 12 years, having been a charter member of the Negro Democratic organization of Houston, Texas. 1-5-46

The Future of Liberia

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

Some observers have probably overlooked the significance of the recent selection of R. O'Hara Lanier as U.S. Minister to Liberia, the West African republic which next year will observe its centennial as a sovereign state.

That significance lies in the fact that much of Liberia's future depends upon its educational progress. No politician, the new Minister to Liberia is first and last an educator.

From 1923 at Tuskegee Institute, where he began his teaching career, to 1945 at Hampton Institute, where he served as acting president, Mr. Lanier has lived close to the field of education. It will not be unnatural for him then, if, as representative of our government, he devotes a portion of his time to the study of present practices and policies affecting education in Liberia.

3-16-46

In "Africa Advancing," a study of rural education and agriculture in West Africa and the Belgian Congo, prepared by Jackson Davis, Thomas M. Campbell and Miss Margaret Wrong, just released, this statement is made in the chapter on Liberia:

> The country cannot support an adequate system of education until it has greater economic wealth. On the other hand, it will not achieve greater economic wealth until the people are educated and learn to use modern science and technology in industrial fields and in health, government and welfare.

This report further points out the inadvisability of any short-term program of education, adding that the U.S. "could give great assistance" and hasten the country's educational development by "providing aid over a period of ten years or more."

Already Uncle Sam is giving assistance in the development of port facilities at Monrovia, the construction of highways and the prosecution of a public health program. The republic's agricultural development is also receiving more attention—because of the many products it has for export.

The importance of Liberia was emphasized in World War II when that nation supplied air bases and other essential needs and services necessary to safeguarding the Allied hold on North Africa. Liberia's position is no less strategic in peacetime.

3-16-46

Even closer cooperation between the West African republic and the U.S. may be expected since other world powers are not unmindful of this important position.

Our new Liberian minister will be confronted by many problems upon his arrival, but his recommendations regarding our future relations with Liberia will be respected, particularly those dealing with the part which education should play in U.S.-Liberian cooperation.

The New Liberian Minister

Daily Worker 1-3-46

President Truman's appointment of Dr. R. O'Hara Lanier to the post of United States Minister to the Liberian Republic will be widely approved by American Negroes. And while Dr. Lanier could not be expected to bring to bear upon his new assignment the same technical skill and knowledge as might be expected of a Ralph Bunche or a Rayford Logan, it cannot be doubted that his great practical experience and association with governmental service in Washington will more than compensate for what he may lack in the technical field.

It is good, therefore, to have the name of Dr. Lanier associated with what this paper hopes to be the inauguration and prosecution of a new and vigorous postwar development program for Africa. He has been special assistant with the Bureau of Areas of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration. He had served as Dean of instruction, acting president and dean of the faculty of Hampton Institute since 1940. And he is a native of North Carolina, educated at Stanford and Lincoln Universities, with a rich background of teaching extending back to Tuskegee, Florida A. and M. College, Houston, and assistant director of the Negro Division of Negro Affairs of the National Youth Administration.

Tribune Los Angeles, Calif.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Sen. Theodore Bilbo (D., Miss.) was quoted by the Commercial Appeal here this week as admitting that his recent operation was to "completely remove" a malignant infection on the lower gum in the right side of his mouth.

Bilbo was further quoted as saying that "all trace of the malignancy was removed, and to 'make sure' a part of his jawbone likewise was cut away". And he was sure he would be in Washington in January for the convening of the 80th Congress: "I'll be completely well, and my mouth healed in time to have my new plates early next month".

Sat. 11-30-46

Whose Man Is Bilbo?

By John Temple Graves

The News and Courier Charleston, S. C.

"It makes no difference if he is a hound, they gotta quit kickin' my dog around . . . "

It is natural to stand up for your own man against outsiders. But is Senator Bilbo our man? Is he the South's man? Is he Mississippi's? It is hard to see how any of us can think so after the testimony of sorry deals and dishonesties. That he happens to be aware of our race problem and of the impossibility of having it settled for us from Washington has nothing to do with his present case. There are plenty of other Southerners capable of representing that point of view, and without the sidelines of disgusting vulgarity and graft. It would be worse than childish of us to say we were not going to let a man like this be kicked around just because he happens to have operated in and upon our part of the country.

Mon. 12-30-46

We do well in the South to resent much of the outside criticism and meddling reform that's forever directed our way. Too often it is based on an illiteracy about the South worse than any illiteracy in the South. But we are grown-up enough, surely, not to let resentment hold us from reforms we ourselves should make and from judgments we ourselves should enter. We are old enough, and self-respecting enough, not to impose Bilbo on ourselves just because outsiders say he should go.

Outside meddlers can be denounced without defending the Bilbos. It is good to note my friend, Editor Hodding Carter, of The Greenville (Miss.) Delta Democrat Times, undaunted by his Pulitzer Prize, doing exactly that in a recent article in the Saturday Evening Post which Reader's Digest has reproduced. How refreshing it is to find a Southerner who will stand up for the South nationally even as he fights its evil things at home. Probably they would never have given him his Pulitzer Prize if they had known he would do this, but he is putting himself above Pulitzer Prizes. He is serving his state and region without regard to the national galleries so available to Southerners who sell out.

Be it known that Hodding Carter, the Southern liberal, with all his prizes and national publicity, with all his light in dark places, with all his battles against Bilbo and Bilboism, believes in race segregation. In a recent speech in Gulfport, Miss., he committed himself on that. He declared (according to The United Press) that it was "unrealistic" to think race relations in the South could be improved through elimination of segregation or achievement of "social equality" and that he didn't believe negroes desired these things. He stood, as all men of realism and light must in these parts, for a segregation line that will be more vertical, less horizontal: "I do believe," he was quoted, "that within the framework of segregation the Southern negro is entitled to decent housing, adequate medical care, equal educational opportunities, equal pay for equal services and equal justice in the courts."

Ten million amens! With a point of view like this, truly serving the South and the negro in the South, Hodding Carter puts himself in a class beyond Pulitzer Prizes. Let some "nation-minded" Atlantan have the prizes. Mr. Carter is for the way, the light, the truth and the South!

Another Southerner who, in genuine liberalism, is using a national attention he possesses to tell the nation we must be permitted to go ahead under our own lights, make our own reforms, be our own judge of what is truly reform and what just know-nothing sentimentality, is Robert Quillen. He made the point beautifully in a recent column, and his column goes all over the United States. Outside interference does not excuse us in the South, it only explains us, of course. Our real leaders into light are Southerners who neither sell out to meddlers nor make meddling an excuse.

Pitching Horseshoes

PM New York, N. Y.

"That Man" Bilbo has gotten me into a peck of trouble.

Here's the story.

A few months back, my secretary announced an architect from Washington. An impressive gent walked into my office with a brief case big enough to hold a sheep dog. He opened it, and carpeted my floor with blueprints. A minute later we were crawling around on our hands and knees, examining the plans for a gigantic stadium to be erected in Washington as a veterans' memorial.

I pointed to a design for a structure as big as Grand Central Terminal. "Is this the main arena?" I asked him.

My architect friend looked hurt. "That's the ladies' powder room," he said.

Mon. 12-30-46

Perhaps I exaggerate a little, but you get the idea—it was Some Stadium. It was to seat almost a quarter of a million people. A roof big enough to cover four Yankee Stadiums was to slide back and forth like the top of a convertible coupe. For good measure, he had thrown in several smaller auditoriums, the smallest a little bigger than Madison Square Garden.

I looked at this acre of paper sadly. "Here we go again," I said to myself. Since the Aquacade, if someone cooks up a plan to do a musical comedy with helicopters, I get it. But if someone writes a distinguished one-set show with four actors, the only way I ever see it is to buy a ticket.

Mr. Architect got up off the floor and announced. "A committee of Congressmen is sponsoring this stadium as a tribute to our boys. We're asking the government for twenty-five million."

"Don't you think our boys might appreciate a few cottages instead?" I asked.

I guess he didn't hear me, for he went on, "The committee asked me to find out if you would, as a patriotic gesture, serve as Entertainment Consultant."

Naturally I was flattered. I told him I'd be honored, and even held my finger on the knot while he tied up the blueprints. As he went out the door, the incident went out of my mind. Not that I wouldn't be tickled to work on such a project, but over the years I've learned there's a big gap between the blueprint and the steam shovel.

A month later, one of the Broadway keyhole brigade asked in his column, "How come Billy Rose is getting chummy with Bilbo?"

I blew my top. I phoned and asked the columnist what it was all about. He came back with some mumbo-jumbo about never revealing his sources of information, and hung up. Here I was, linked with Old Ape-face himself. I had always thought Mississippi sent him to Washington just to get him out of the state. I figured he was the guy the Senate chaplain looked at when he opened sessions by praying for the country.

After the item appeared, I might as well have been wearing a quarantine sign. When I walked up to some songwriters chatting in front of the RKO Building, they suddenly clammed up. After a moment they all remembered luncheon dates in different directions. The last one sneered as he walked away, "You don't want to talk to us. We haven't paid our poll tax."

Then the colored lad who operated the elevator in my theatre quit. Said he wouldn't work for a man who didn't believe in letting his people vote.

I still didn't get it. If someone was playing a joke on me, I wasn't laughing.

A letter this morning cleared up the mess. On my desk I found a communication from the Stadium Committee. Sure enough, down at the bottom I was listed as Entertainment Consultant. But on top, billed like Bing Crosby in "Blue Skies," was the name of the Committee chairman. You guessed it—Senator Theodore G. Bilbo of Mississippi. 12-30-46

By this time, the Committee must have my hot telegram of resignation. I told them I didn't want my name on the same piece of stationery with a man of his background. Bilbo's defense seems to be that only half the lies they tell about him are true.

I'm going to see another architect tomorrow. I want him to figure out a little contraption for my office. When he's finished with it, I'll be able to take care of any smoothie who asks me to serve on a committee. I'll press a little button, and a trap door will drop him down a chute to my cellar.

There he can state his case to a committee of six hungry lions.

Bilbo's Leave

Washington, D.C. Post

Dense irony must have befogged the Senate when it unanimously consented last week to struggle along with its legislative task for the next two months without the aid of Senator Theodore G. Bilbo. The Man from Mississippi had held the floor for three hours to deliver a tirade against the British loan and a magazine which had classified him as the worst man in the Senate. He had intended to "talk six months if necessary" to beat the loan bill. But his demagoguery was cut short, as he told the Senate, "because four peckerwoods down in Mississippi are trying to get my job." Holding its breath in fear that The Man might change his mind, the Senate bowed to the stronger claim of Mississippi politics. Tuesday

The striking thing about this episode is not the fact that the Senate has in its midst a little tin boss whose concept of democracy is the filibuster. Rather it is that the Senate is so feeble in dealing with the occasional bigoted windbag who finds his way into its midst. In a country as big and as varied as ours, the democratic process must be expected to turn up a few misfits who have no understanding of the national interest. They have to be tolerated until their constituents come to realize the boomerang tendencies of demagoguery. But there is no reason why the Senate should permit itself to be paralyzed by them, as it has often done in the past. 4-30-46

One is tempted to say that the legislative program has been saved by the sudden activity of "four peckerwoods" down in Missippi. Doubtless that would be exaggeration. But it is not exaggeration to say that the American people are disgusted by the continued helplessness of the Senate in the face of gab-fests sponsored by one or two or a handful of its members. The Senate itself cannot say that it would be happy to make permanent The Man Bilbo's leave of absence. But it can say that no one shall henceforth inflict his will upon the Senate by the device of endless talk. It can modify its rules to save itself from contempt at the hands of narrow and bigoted obstructionists, and the Senate ought to realize that it will never regain its prestige in the eyes of the people until this step has been taken.

Bilbo's Senatorial Campaign Condemned for 'Nastiness' of American

Baltimore, Md

POLARVILLE, Miss. — Threatened with losing his Congressional seat in the forthcoming elections, Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo (Dem., Miss.) is already injecting the race issue, "white supremacy," into his campaign. Ross A. Collins, representative for 18 years, his outstanding opponent, predicts a "nasty campaign."

"Segregation or Mongrelization," is the title of a book Bilbo plans to publish. It discloses his plan to deport non-white Americans to Africa, and advocates using machanical cotton pickers in the South because "they won't be demanding—social equality or intermarriage." Sat 3-23-46

Bilbo's other opponents for the Senate are Douglas Smith of Jackson, a comparative newcomer to Mississippi politics, and Lt. Comdr. Nelson Levings of Gulfport, a wealthy lawyer.

Sirs:

Life

Lordy, lordy, LIFE, you done done it again. That article on our senior senator is good for at least 40,000 votes. He is in again.

I can hear the Hon. Theodore Bilbo, in a few months, campaigning with his diamond stickpin and red suspenders, telling his constituents about that scandalous magazine, LIFE, that is owned by the Jews of Wall Street—that Negro-loving magazine (sometimes it seems you are).

Not all Mississippians are for Bilbo, but most of us are satisfied (more or less) as things are and any other man to be elected would have to support, in a general way, the theory of segregation of races.

Chicago, Ill.

If you Yankees don't quit pestering us, we are going to have to organize a society for the protection of Southerners. I still like your magazine.

Bilbo Is—Bilbo

The Birmingham Age-Herald

If there must be a Bilbo in the upper house of the national legislature—and most Americans will be inclined to say, with Voltaire, "I don't see the necessity of it"—it is perhaps fortunate that he should be so very Bilboish. For if the senator from Mississippi were inclined to sacrifice his personal interests to his misbegotten principles, he would be far more of a nuisance than he is now. At the opening of a great debate on so important a matter as the British loan, Bilbo was exasperatingly in character when he announced his intention of filibustering, of imposing his single will upon the American people and of limiting their horizon to his own. He was simply being Bilbo when he took up the time of the Senate with a pointless and tasteless defense of himself. But he was also being Bilbo when he called off his whole single-handed crusade against the British loan to go back to his state to engage in a primary fight for reelection. A six-month filibuster in defense of a Bilbo attitude lost all appeal when it appeared likely to cost a six-year Bilbo job.

Birmingham Ala.

So far as the country at large is concerned it may seem a pity that Bilbo should be confronted by this conflict between interest and principle. It would be far better if there were no filibusters by, no jobs for, the Bilbos. One may sincerely hope that his present sacrifice has been in vain, and that Mississippi, like the Senate, will give its "unanimous consent" that the "Negro's best friend" shall henceforth absent himself from the Capitol. His threat of mapping out his "plans for good government for the next six years" has an ominous ring. But there is at least the consolation that Bilbo will be no more of a stumbling block in the path of progress than consorts with his notion of what is good for Bilbo. He is a fanatic only within limits—in sum, he is a Bilbo.—The New York Herald-Tribune.

Collins Says Bilbo Opposed Poll Tax

News

Birmingham, Ala.

MERIDIAN, Miss., April 16—(AP)—Opening his senatorial campaign here last night, former Rep. Ross A. Collins pictured Sen. Theo G. Bilbo, outspoken advocate of "white supremacy," as an opponent of the poll tax and a backer of FEPC appropriations.

Collins will oppose Bilbo in the Democratic primary July 2.

Collins declared the Congressional Record of May 12, 1944, reported Bilbo as saying on the Senate floor: "Personally, I do not believe in the poll tax. I have been preaching the abolition of the poll tax in my state for five years. . . . The poll tax is wrong. It ought to be abolished." Tues 4-16-46

Collins referred to the poll tax as the sole barrier keeping Negroes from voting in party primary elections, and termed Bilbo "the only man in public life in Mississippi I have ever known that wanted to repeal our poll tax laws."

If Bilbo's wishes had prevailed, Collins continued, "Negroes would have been voting in the forthcoming election in large numbers and I dare say Bilbo would have today been begging them for their support and help."

Collins said Bilbo voted for a $500,000 FEPC appropriation in 1944 and the following year failed to protest an amendment to a war agencies appropriation bill giving the FEPC $250,000.

"On final passage of the bill, Bilbo, according to The Record, voted for it," Collins said.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Bilbo's Campaign

Washington Post, D.C.

IT REMAINED FOR Senator Bilbo, Mississippi's gift to the Nation, to add the final absurdity to the Communist tag when he called Representative Clare Boothe Luce and and her publisher husband, Henry R. Luce, "Communistic."

That carries it as far as it can be carried. If Henry Luce is a Communist, then so are Cardinal Spellman and Herbert Hoover. By definition, a Communist becomes anyone who disagrees with you, no matter how reactionary, narrow and bigoted your own views may be. Fri 5-3-46

In that fantastic and absurd speech, Bilbo was not talking just to hear the sound of his own voice. He had a very deliberate motive. The speech was meant to be a document in his campaign for reelection.

For even "The Man" must subject himself every six years to the will of the voters—a small proportion of the eligible voters—of his native State. Bilbo has gone back to Mississippi to campaign for the primary of July 2. The issue is the same as it was 75 years ago—the carpetbag, outside interference.

That is why Bilbo wanted to get his speech on the record. He wanted to convict hostile Northerners of trying to dictate to the people of Mississippi. That is why he bracketed such incongruous publications as Life, the New York Daily News, the New York Post, the Daily Worker and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

They are all in a conspiracy, these powerful instruments of Northern domination, to defeat the martyred, bleeding Bilbo. That's the theme "The Man" will sound in cruder and cruder form as he moves through rural Mississippi.

Many times in the past, this theme has been effective—and not only in the deep South. Once, when Representative Dewey Short was running for reelection in his Ozark district in Missouri, he made effective use of an attack on him that appeared in the newspaper PM. These Communists, said Short, no mean demagogue himself, were trying to tell the God-fearing people of Missouri how to vote. Fri 5-3-46

Indications are that Bilbo will be able to make potent use of this appeal in his current campaign. He is aiming, of course, at the Ku Klux Klan element.

A large campaign fund is said to have been made available to him. The money is reported to come from construction firms in Mississippi. With four opponents in the field, Bilbo would seem to have a good chance of reelection.

The carpetbag appeal is, of course, the other side of the States' rights argument. Behind the barrier of States' rights, the little courthouse ring in Mississippi holds on to its privileges and power. It is a guarantee that Mississippi will be at the bottom or near the bottom of the lists that show how the States stand on health, literacy, schools and so on.

That is the way the Bilbos want it. Change would threaten their supremacy. It is this legal barricade that makes the government of these United States so very difficult.

Mississippi will take favors from the Federal Government, and plenty of favors, if no conditions are attached. A notorious example was the effort of certain Mississippi politicians to staff cotton mills with relief workers paid at relief rates with Federal money. That occurred in the '30s when the late Harry L. Hopkins, as relief administrator, was trying to eke out scanty relief funds. Hopkins tried repeatedly to break through the barricade to enforce certain standards. But he was not conspicuously successful.

The same construction companies reported to be subsidizing Bilbo's campaign got large sums from the Federal Government. Bilbo has always been zealous at grabbing all the Federal patronage he could get.

Now something new is about to happen. Both the AFL and the CIO have announced large-scale organizing campaigns in the South. Even with labor divided and competing, this is bound to bring about great changes. It will certainly bring, too, bitter last-ditch resistance. Fri 5-3-46

Within the South itself, changes are taking place. Many newspapers have turned on the Bilbo mentality. Public officials such as Gov. Ellis Arnall of Georgia have opened the way to change. The Bilbos must know their day is nearly over. Perhaps that's why the Senator rushed off so frantically to start campaigning.

Petition Seeks To Remove Bilbo

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—(AP)—A petition requesting the impeachment and removal of Senator Bilbo (D-Miss.) from the senate was received today by the senate's special committee to investigate 1946 elections.

Riley W. Shanks, committeeed by T. B. Wilson, 1087 Lynch street, Jackson, Miss., counsel, said the petition bearing approximately 50 signatures and accompanied by supporting affidavits arrived with a letter signed by 50 Negroes who sought to incite the white population to commit acts of violence and intimidate Negroes who sought to vote in the Mississippi primary. The principal charge made in the petition was that Bilbo had

Bilbo, Hot Under Collar at Magazine Item, Lambasts 'Papa and Mama Luce' in Senate

Richmond Times-Dispatch Sat. 4-27-46

Richmond, Va.

WASHINGTON, April 26—(UP)—Senator Theodore G. Bilbo (D-Miss.) stood up in the Senate today and lambasted "Papa and Mama Luce"—the Congresswoman and the publisher—for what he charged were "lies and misrepresentations" spread about him.

Cause of the rotund Senator's ire was an unflattering article in the March 11 issue of Life magazine which characterized Bilbo as "worst man in the Senate," and a brace of speeches by Representative Clare Boothe Luce (R-Conn.) which attacked Bilbo's stand on the Negro question.

He referred to Life as a "pink, mongrel magazine." He termed the article which discussed the qualifications of 33 Senators up for re-election, "a nasty job" and "a dirty, contemptible article."

Mrs. Luce he described as "fickle and capricious." He referred to her frequently as "Clara," and said she was known as "Connecticut's Republican darling" who is "no longer a glamour girl."

And, he asserted, "the Communists should give old man Luce"—Henry R. Luce, editor-in-chief of Life—"a big fat check for services rendered" in publishing the article.

Last Speech

After his speech Bilbo revealed it will be his last in the Senate for at least two months. He asked and received permission from his colleagues to be absent until July 2. Because: 4-27-46

"Four peckerwoods down in Mississippi are trying to get my job. I've got to go home and do something about it."

Life's evaluation of Bilbo's political career read:

"Bilbo of Mississippi, Democrat, has been sent to jail, discredited as a complainant in a bribery scandal, voted by his own colleagues in the Mississippi State Legislature 'unfit to sit with honest, upright men in a respectable body,' and yet retains popularity among the independent farmers. The reason: He plays on their prejudices about Wall Street, Negroes, the North. His recent activity has been opposition to FEPC (Fair Employment Practices Committee). He got himself a flurry of publicity by writing a woman with an Italian name in Brooklyn 'My Dear Dago.' Said Senator Taft (Robert A. Taft, R-Ohio), 'He is a disgrace to the Senate.' Opinion: 'Worst man in the Senate.'"

Photo Painted

A photograph above this tumbnail sketch pictured Bilbo, wearing a dark suit and a dark hat, striding forth from the front door of a dwelling. He was walking on a rubber mat on which was painted in large white letters, "Dream House."

That article, Bilbo said, his voice reaching a high pitch, is "a collection of lies, views and misrepresentations . . . master-

Senator Bilbo
Clashes with Luces

minded by fickle and capricious Clara." Then he answered Life's statement thus:

Yes, he was sent to jail, but not for moral turpitude. It was for contempt. A lot of famous people have been in jail. John Milton wrote "Paradise Lost" in jail, and Tom Paine composed his "Age of Reason" while a convict.

The Mississippi resolution against him was compounded 36 years ago by "a handful of my political enemies." Regarding the "Dear Dago" letter, thousands of Mississippi's Italians are for Bilbo and think he did right in this instance. 4-27-46

Reply Awaited

As for Senator Taft's attack just watch the papers for his reply since the rules prevent him from replying now. And as for that "worst man" crack:

"At least I'm at the head of my class. Life may think I'm bad now, but when I'm re-elected in July for six years and get on with my plans for good government, they'll think I was an angel now."

Bitterly he assailed Life's statement that the "opinion" of each Senator came from a panel of top-ranking Washington correspondents, business associates and friends of the Senators.

"For 30 days I've had posted a $100 reward for a Washington reporter who would admit and prove that he was a member of that panel," Bilbo said. "Up to this hour, I've had no takers, nor can I or my colleagues find any who took part in the panel."

Two delegations from the magazine visited his home State to get material, Bilbo said, adding, more in sorrow than in anger:

"They enjoyed the hospitality of my home and ate my grub."

He charged that the Luces gave a "passing grade to only 10 of the 33 Senators discussed, including 60 per cent of the Republicans up for re-election, but only 13 per cent of the Democrats."

Bilbo Land Sale To U. S. Is Attacked By Collins

Birmingham News Birmingham, Ala.

TUPELO, Miss., May 18—(AP)—Ross A. Collins, candidate for Democratic nomination as U. S. senator, in an address here last night charged that Sen. Theo G. Bilbo, incumbent, had federal laws amended in 1939 to allow him to sell a piece of property in Poplarville to the federal government at a $650 profit.

The site, he said, was used for the Poplarville postoffice.

Federal law, he said, bars members of Congress from entering into contracts with the federal government for profit. Sat. 5-18-46

On March 8, 1939, he said, Bilbo introduced Senate bill 1725 which provided "that the criminal code of the United States 'shall not be applicable with respect to any contract or agreement entered into or by or on behalf of the United States for the acquisition of any part of the site for the postoffice building to be constructed in Poplarville, Miss.'"

Records in the office of the chancery clerk of Pearl River County, he said, show that Bilbo executed a warranty deed to the federal government conveying title to the site later used for the postoffice. The sale price, Collins said, was $1,000. Bilbo had $350 invested in the property, he said. Sat. 5-18-46

Bilbo's Opponent Pledges To Uphold White Supremacy

Louisiana Weekly New Orleans, La.

Sat 5-11-46

(By The Associated Negro Press)

Gulfport, Miss., May 8.—Although Nelson T. Levings, candidate for the United States Senate, asked Mississippi voters for their help in "extinguishing the Bilbonic plague" in his state, he pledged himself to "maintain white supremacy," to "fight with every influence I may command such evils as the anti-poll tax bill, the anti-lynching bill and the FEPC."

Terming these issues "our state's own business," Levings said he would support a veterans' bonus, maintenance of America's superiority in military and economic power, guarantee freedom of choice to join a union, equalization of freight rates, and an end to deficit spending by the national government.

In Mississippi

Montgomery Advertiser

There's never a dull moment in Mississippi politics. Whether that is an example of cause or effect, it would be hard to determine and must be left to the academicians. Were such diverse and arresting individuals as "Private John" Allen and John Sharp Williams, James K. Vardaman and Leroy Percy, Pat Harrison and Theodore G. Bilbo the products of a stormy sea of democracy, or was it their own unique, picturesque and individualistic personalities that blew the waves so high? We can only wonder, and look with avid interest to the campaign now in progress which centers upon whether or not the illustrious Bilbo shall return to his hot seat in the United States Senate. Ala. Mon 4-29-46

The campaign will run at least until July 2, on which date the first primary will be held. Since a majority is required and since candidates always are many, a second primary usually is necessitated.

Senator Bilbo, of course, is standing for renomination and promises to shell the woods, beginning on May 4. In the meantime, Ross Collins, who used to be a representative from the Fifth District, is conducting a vigorous campaign; Governor Tom Bailey has formally stated that he will not enter; Nelson T. Leverings has announced, and it is expected that Cecil Travis, a Jackson attorney, will seek to gather to himself the Bailey following.

Two issues have developed thus far. The first is, how much income tax has Senator Bilbo been paying from his $10,000-a-year salary and his mileage allowance? Candidate Collins declares that in the senator's 32 years of public service since 1913, he has shared with the Federal Government a total of only $72, an average of $2.25 per annum. To that allegation, the senator has maintained a dignified silence, though the powerful Jackson Daily News remarks from time to time that "if Theo has paid more than that, the other taxpayers in Mississippi would be glad to hear about it."

A second issue has arisen from an affidavit made by Edward Terry, who for several years was private secretary to Senator Bilbo. This sworn statement says that A. B. Friend, manager of the Bilbo campaign, sought out a conference with him and his wife and told him, "Ed, if you tell what you know about Bilbo in the senatorial race, you will be killed."

This, Mr. Friend denies, although Mrs. Terry reaffirmed her husband's statement, which leads the Daily News to say editorially: "Mr. Terry is a gentleman whose personal integrity and veracity have never been questioned. His statement is fully corroborated by Mrs. Terry, who is a woman of culture, refinement, much personal charm and the highest character. Any reflection on the veracity of either Mr. Terry or his splendid wife will be keenly resented throughout the state."

Will Senator Bilbo itemize his income tax payments and show a total of more than $72 in 32 years? Mon 4-29-46

Will Edward Terry tell what he knows about Senator Bilbo and risk assassination?

All Mississippi seems to be awaiting the answer to the $72 question. As to what Mr. Terry knows about his former employer, there is less curiosity, a situation perhaps attributable to the fact that Mr. Bilbo has lived in Mississippi a long time and is pretty well known to the electorate.

It seems Life magazine has appraised 32 doesn't somebody get up and answer him, you ask; why Senators up for reelection and called him the worst man doesn't somebody redeem the dignity of the Senate, of in the chamber. So Bilbo is being funny. Other Senators on him? Nobody does; "senawalk about uneasily with self-conscious smiles; girls in the America, by crying out upon him. . . . You go press gallery giggle hysterically as Bilbo calls himself "the torial courtesy," you know. Bilbo sits down. nigger's best friend." Representative Rankin has come out to the men's room and wash your hands. over from the House to see the fun. All the newspapers tomorrow will treat this as a great joke. Bilbo attacks "Papa and Mama Luce," and that is funny, isn't it? He is ingenious in bringing in all his phobias: references to Catholics in connection with Mrs. Luce; the "communism" of Life magazine, because it attacks high-ranking officials (Bilbo); the charge that the Luces are "nigger-

Bilbo's Mouth Made Bigger Than Ever

Courier 9-28-46

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 20—(AP)—Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo (D., Miss.) says his recent operation for inflamation of the mouth will prove of no advantage to political opponents:

"I just had my mouth reamed out and now I got more mouth than ever," Bilbo said here yesterday.

The Mississippian, here in connection with a meeting of Mississippi Valley congressmen to protest curtailment of flood control appropriations, said also that he wasn't "mad" at Mississippi citizens who signed a petition asking the Senate not to seat him.

"All they're trying to do," he said, "is to get me some publicity for my book on racial equality."

Bilbo referred to the petitioners as "my best friends." The petition, delivered to a Senate campaign expenditures subcommittee, was said by committee aids to charge Bilbo with inciting Mississippi whites against Negroes, urging the whites to keep the Negroes from voting, by violence, if necessary.

Speaking at an interview, Bilbo then disposed of the Truman-Wallace difficulties thus:

". . . It is about time for President Truman to send Henry Wallace back to his hybrid corn patch in Iowa. He's been a headache to the Democratic Party since they took him in. . . . The Republicans are welcome to him, but we hope they will treat him better than they treated Bob La Follette."

Poplarville, Miss., Nov. 13 (AP)—Senator Bilbo (D., Miss.), reelected in November, was shaken up and bruised last night in an automobile accident here and spent the night in Poplarville Hospital.

His secretary reported this morning the senator had suffered only a "bump on the nose" and that he would return ti his dream house today.

The accident occurred in Poplarville while Bilbo was driving his expensive car home after carrying some farm workers to their homes. The car crashed into the rear of a truck.

Dustin' off the NEWS

By LUCIUS C. HARPER

BILBO, "THE MAN," IS MENTALLY SICK; DOESN'T KNOW IT

THERE is not much to select from in any political campaign waged in Mississippi. All candidates for public offices, both local and national, are about on the same intellectual level. Even a Yale diploma didn't improve one—ex-Gov. Mike Conner, went through Yale but the culture at Yale didn't go through him. They all have been reared in the same cesspool of race hatred. From an outside observation, any result of a senatorial election there is just a matter of changing Clowns in Congress. If Senator Bilbo is re-elected or defeated, whoever represents Mississippi in the U. S. Senate will not, in the least, improve interracial matters or create national goodwill. Bilbo, Rankin and Eastland, who now pollute and degenerate our Congress, are the natural results of a vile and noxious environment, bred from the political stench of their predecessors such as Jefferson Davis, the notorious rebel and traitor who started the Civil War, the foul-mouthed James K. Vardaman, cantankerous John Sharpe Williams and that vituperative and slimy Pat Harrison of a later day. Whoever succeeds them will smell just as offensive and behave just as rowdy. New harness does not change the characteristics of a mule.

Lucius C. Harper

Mississippi is the most backward, stupid and half-civilized area, per square inch, of any state in the Union. In fact, it does not yet fully recognize the union of states. The whites there are in a more deplorable condition, believe it or not, than the blacks. It is the "Tobacco Road" of the world. Its school histories, such as they are, still contain laudable chapters on the Ku Klux Klan. Its appropriations for child education are scandalous and the most infinitesimal grants of any state: by per capita, eleven dollars a year for a white child and about two dollars for a colored. In a recent quiz in a white college there concerning "prominent men and what positions they occupy," many students listed Winston Churchill as "senator from England," and Thomas E. Dewey as "Mayor of California." Few recognized the name of Harry Truman, the President, and less than 10 in the senior class of 65 knew the name of the governor of their own state. Those in political power like the ignoble three: Bilbo, Rankin and Eastland, desire to keep Mississippi at a low scale in intellect for their own selfish motives and benefits. The state is the laughing-stock in educational circles and has been for many years.

IT WAS Bilbo who principally "blessed" Mississippi with ignorance. When he marched from the jailyard to the governorship he really dragged Mississippi education in the mud. He dismissed at one time 179 faculty members of state-controlled institutions and replaced them with far inferior teachers, some no less than political roustabouts and ragamuffins. A hack-driver, in his estimation, was as competent to teach Mississippians as a Ph. D. from Harvard. He appointed a discharged press agent of a local power and light company president of Mississippi A. and M. college; he made a real estate agent, without a degree, president of the University of Mississippi; he took an average student out of the graduating class of Mississippi State College for Women, without teaching experience and executive ability, and made him president of that college. And further, he established a new low in zero when he put a degreeless public stenographer as president of the State Teachers' college. He degraded the schools and colleges in such manner that educational associations in other states black-balled Mississippi and removed it from their accredited lists. These institutions were not reinstated until several years after Bilbo left state office. The pay for teachers in the state is pitiful. When Bilbo left the governorship the state was broke, so the teachers went broke. It was years before they and the state recovered from this maladministration. The Defender Chicago, Ill

Therefore, it isn't strange that all Negroes who hail from there admit their alliance with the state rather shame - facedly. They apologize for God's error in having them suffer the fate of being born there. No one, with any idea of decency, wishes to be even remotely identified with such a low, lewd character as Theodore Bilbo, scandal-monger, former jailbird, debaucher of public morals, confessed bribe-taker, and vicious liar. Finally, he has become so depraved that he is calling on Mississippians to stage mob violence to keep Negroes from voting against him in the senatorial election. Once conked with a pistol butt for an insulting remark, Bilbo now wants that same weapon used on a black man who approaches the ballot box. His threat may succeed this time, since black Mississippi hasn't been sufficiently awakened to its new political freedom, but the next six years will spell a different story in Bilbo's career, provided, however, that some higher force has not seen fit to relieve the world of the ravings of this paranoiac and removed him from our midst. Sat. 7-6-46

BILBO is actually a mentally sick man. If he were not vicious and so malicious in his activities, one could pity him. His every action bespeaks that he suffers from a disease known to a psychiatrist as Paranoia. Although this form of insanity is as old as the human race, it is, nevertheless, only a comparatively short time since its manifestations have been recognized as those of a disease. What makes this disease appear so remarkable, particularly to the layman, and so difficult for him to accept its manifestations as those of a mental disturbance, is the fact that the intelligence of the person in question is not necessarily impaired. Sometimes these people show an unusually high degree of intelligence and are often gifted and talented. They do not present any of the symptoms which the layman is accustomed to look for in the insane. They do not speak incoherently, do not chatter irrevently, do not act absurdly, have no attacks of fury, do not smash windows and mirrors, etc. No, nothing of all this. Apparently they are well-bred persons, who not infrequently make a decidedly favorable impression by their charm of manner and speech. The chief characteristic of Paranoia is their judgment on most subjects the existence of delusions of with which they are conversant grandeur, either alone or combined seems to be well thought out; they with hallucinations. Bilbo refers experience and feel as others do; to himself as "The Man." He talks and yet what a multitude of morbid of himself always in the third phychical phenomena lies hidden person, as if he were a God or under this seemingly normal some mythological figure. Any mental condition.

PARANOIA is a chronic, incurable disease, which, as a rule, persists throughout the entire life of the one suffering from it. The psychiatrist will tell you this is the first symptom of Paranoia. Bilbo is a Paranoiac; mentally sick, and doesn't know it.

45c 1946 Mississippi (Bilbo)

BILBO MUST GO!

The Courier, Pittsburgh, Pa. Sat. 8-31-46

As the sinister symbol of malevolent forces which aggressively seek to enthrone Adolf Hitler's lies in this Nation at the expense of Thomas Jefferson's great truths, written into the Declaration of Independence, Theodore Bilbo, if elected to the United States Senate by a majority of Mississippi's voters this November, should be rejected by the members of the Senate in January.

* * *

Theodore Bilbo is not an amusing spectacle, a monkey-like Buffoon from the most backward State in the Union. He is an evil genius, cunning, tireless, vainglorious and ambitious. He is the loudest voice, the most arrogant voice, the most-often-heard voice, the most prominently placed voice of intolerance, racial hatred, white supremacy, disunity and potential Nazism in this country.

* * *

This little gnome from Mississippi challenges the Nation. The voters in Mississippi renominated him for the United States Senate in the primary in July. That is, nine per cent of the eligible voters of the State did so. Some Mississippians voted for Bilbo in protest against what they defined as "outside" intereference with their right to choose whomever they wished as their Senator.

* * *

But a United States Senator is more than a servant of any particular State. He helps to shape legislation and make policy for the Nation. All the voters of all the States must be interested in all the men who help to shape their destiny through government. It is the responsibility of all Americans to try to keep the Congress clean, to see that no Hitler from Mississippi, preaching the doctrines of the Ku Klux Klan and the Nazi Party, makes an ideological conquest of the Nation's highest legislative body.

The United States Senate has the power to pass on the fitness of its members. It should apply the boot to Bilbo if he seeks to cross its threshold again.

* * *

Whether we will it or not, the test must soon come in this country between tolerance and intolerance, between fairplay and bigotry, between liberalism and reaction. Day by day, the lines are being clearly drawn for the battle.

* * *

There are some who give comfort and support to the cause of reaction because of their fear of Russia. Others fear labor. Others fear the growth of the Federal power. Others fear, distrust and hate the minorities.

* * *

All these groups with their special fears and hates find comfort in their misery by working together, by using one another. The representatives of a great cotton mill in Georgia, probably owned by Northern Republicans, told Carmichael, candidate for Governor, that they would support him if he would agree to take certain repressive action against labor. Carmichael would not agree. The support of these mill owners therefore was shifted to Talmadge, the advocate of "white supremacy." He sowed the seeds of racial discord, but it was the purpose of his masters to stop the forward march of labor.

The ultimate power and influence of men like Bilbo in this Nation cannot be foretold so long as there are interests which are willing to use them callously to stop Russia or to stop labor or to keep Jews in their place. Industrial interests of this same type used the Austrian paperhanger and wrecked Germany.

* * *

In Washington for a broadcast recently, Bilbo showed up with an impressive bodyguard, with all the trappings of a Hitler or a Mussolini. This is the familiar setting of blackguards on the way to power. They are transformed into heroes by their adulators. Some day this Bilbo may show up at a Democratic convention with this "guard of dishonor" and in his pocket he may carry all the strength of entrenched reaction in this land. If the Senate does not act to get rid of him now, he might issue the almost unthinkable challenge for absolute power then. Shades of Andrew Johnson!

The duty of the members of the Senate in January is clear.

Bilbo has admitted his membership in the Ku Klux Klan, whose demonstrated purpose is to set one class of American citizens against another, to sow discord based on race, color and creed.

* * *

It is impossible to practice Klan doctrine and uphold the Constitution of the United States at the same time. Bilbo has said he will not, cannot, give up the Klan. He must therefore discard the Constitution which members of the Senate are sworn to uphold.

* * *

Shamelessly, Bilbo exhorted his followers to use any means to keep black citizens from voting in the Mississippi primary. His advice meant to use violence or intimidation. Whichever was meant involved a violation of the spirit and letter of the Constitution. The Constitution says that no State shall take steps to abridge the right of any citizens to vote. The Federal Government is charged to see that this right of the citizen is not abridged. At the time Bilbo spoke, he was an officer of the Federal Government. He repudiated the responsibility placed upon him by the Constitution. He placed himself above it.

The United States Supreme Court has ruled that all citizens are entitled to vote in primary elections. Bilbo has openly asserted that he will work with others in Mississippi to deprive the Negro citizens of this right to vote.

* * *

These statements show what little regard this potential Hitler has for democracy and the Constitution of the United States.

They do not cover charges of venal corruption leveled at him in connection with war contracts. Sat. 8-31-46

They do not disclose the utter foulness of his mind and heart.

But they do show that he would be willing to disregard (as he has disregarded) the law of the land and the Constitution in a grab for power, to place his side on top in this Nation. He wants his gang to rule America.

THE PITTSBURGH COURIER SAYS THAT BILBO MUST GO!

The President of the United States should renounce Bilbo. Every self-respecting Senator, be he Democrat or Republican, of clean heart and clean nose, is obligated under the law of the land to vote against the seating of Bilbo.

* * *

Senators who believe in the law cannot honestly vote to seat a man who does not believe in the law, a man whom Senator Taft has described as "a disgrace to the Senate." They should vote to reject him.

America, The United Nations and Bilboism

The Pittsburgh Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

IN THOSE DARK DAYS, presently forgotten, when Hitler's hordes were on their way to Cairo and the Caspian, and the Japanese had crossed the Indian border, when the entire world quailed before the imminence of domination by the "master race" despots of Germany and Japan, America proclaimed the message of hope and freedom to all peoples everywhere. Sat. 7-13-46

Before the onrush of the Japanese armies in the East a vast empire had fallen, due partly to the might and skill of the Japanese warrior, but largely to the insidious exploitation of the arrogant role of the white man in his relationships with yellow and brown people. The yellow and brown peoples over whom the white man had lorded in years past, helped the Japanese to conquer.

Satellite states hastened to join the Nazi hosts in order to share victory and spoils with the herrenvolk.

Excepting America, the Germans and the Japanese were prepared to whip and enslave the entire world.

America stepped into the breach and repudiated the "master race" theory. It threw all that it had into a bloody global struggle to bring freedom to the common man of every race, color and clime. It made promises which won more and more moral support from the Nazi to the Allied cause. It pledged itself to do all in its power, once victory was won, to guarantee to all peoples freedom of speech, freedom of religion, freedom from fear and freedom from want. It repudiated the theory of "white supremacy."

This was the America of the Willkies, the Roosevelts, the Deweys, the Wallaces, etc.

In Java, in Burma, in China, in India, in Africa and Latin America, everywhere, the common man heard the voice of America beckoning him to come on over to our side.

He came, fifty-one nations of every race, and we won.

Today, these hundreds of millions look to America to make good on her promises, to fight to make real the ideals which she used to wage a war for survival.

The rest of the world does not know, as American Negroes know, that America has failed to destroy the evils at home which she promised to destroy abroad.

The Hitler of Berchtesgaden is gone (perhaps), but fouler Hitlers by far, snort fire and brimstone in these United States.

The Hitler idea was to establish his kind of whites above all other peoples. Who can deny that the Bilbos and the Rankins desire to establish their kind of whites (which probably excludes the Russians, the Jews and some others) above all other peoples.

We fought against Nazi and Japanese cruelties. What cruelty did they ever visit upon an enemy soldier that lynch mobs have not visited upon black men and women, fellow citizens, in these United States?

In Mississippi, innocent men have hanged from trees and holiday mobs have cut off their fingers and toes for souvenirs.

Pregnant mothers have been burned at the stake.

Men have been tied to trucks, dragged through the streets, doused with gasoline and set afire.

Secretary of State James F. Byrnes demanded the vote for the Bulgars. We send 600 Americans to Greece to supervise the Greek elections. Sat. 7-13-46

But here at home a United States Senator urges one class of Americans to keep another class of Americans from voting. That is advocating violence.

In an effort to keep our pledge made to all peoples in the heat of the struggle, we sponsored the United Nations organization. We helped to write into the charter of that body the ideals which had guided us in the war.

It is through the United Nations that the rest of the world expects us to make good, to validate the moral leadership we pledged. The majority of Americans hope for America to put her best foot forward through the United Nations. They fear a future and a world in which the ideals loudly and proudly proclaimed by America do not prevail.

Theodore G. Bilbo is a foe of every decent impulse that exists in America. As America tries to play the big role which the world expects of her, Bilbo and his kind hack away at the foundations on which she stands.

Bilbo is a traitor to the American Creed.

Bilbo is a greater menace to America as a whole than he is to black America.

He can only annoy black Americans, but in his fight against every high principle which has made this a great nation, he may destroy the house in which we all live.

No American can afford to overlook Bilbo and his larger significance. He can easily become the rallying point for the racial animosity and intolerance in the nation. Hitler's crowd in Germany was no larger than Bilbo's in this country. Hitler organized his gang and Bilbo can organize his.

Woe be unto America if something is not done to stop him now.

Bilbo is the white American's problem. They can save their tears and regrets over what he does to black Americans.

They must come to know what he is doing to them, to the nation they have helped to build.

Bilbo and his kind are the worst enemies of America, the peoples of the United Nations and the white race.

Whites themselves must either get rid of him (particularly in the United States Senate) or run the risk of him and his kind bringing on a new world war that will spell the doom of Western civilization. And it can start right here. Sat. 7-13-46

William C. Shrout-LIFE

SENATOR BILBO ON HIS MISSISSIPPI FARM

Fear & prejudice, cupidity & hunger.

POLITICAL NOTES

Time Chicago, Ill. 7-1-46

Prince of the Peckerwoods

During 38 years in Mississippi politics Theodore ("The Man") Bilbo has waded through sloughs of scandal which would have sucked down a dozen ordinary politicians. In 1910, as a drink-cadging state legislator, he heard the State Senate pronounce him "unfit to sit with upright men." He was jailed in 1923 for refusing to testify in a seduction suit against his political side-kick, Governor Lee M. Russell. He divorced his wife; she accused him of cruelty and a succession of infidelities, publicly begged Mississippi's women to vote against him.

But The Man always sloshed triumphantly through the mud. He was elected lieutenant governor, then governor. When his second term ended, the state was all but bankrupt. But Mississippi sent him to the U.S. Senate, sent him back again in 1940. Bilbo always told the poor, ill-educated, farm-bound "peckerwoods" what they wanted to hear, the way they wanted to hear it. Few Americans since Huey Long had turned men's fear, prejudice, cupidity and hunger for drama so successfully to his own ends.

Passion for Reds. Last week, campaigning for renomination and a third term in the Senate, he was at it again. At 68 he was an ugly little figure; sometimes, as he whirled across the countryside in his sleek, grey Cadillac, he wrapped a red scarf around his big, balding head to keep hoarseness away. Each morning he put on a fresh white shirt and a red tie; each night he slept in red pajamas. He made three speeches (averaging two hours each) and smoked nine cigars a day.

He had competition; three of his four opponents—a 44-year-old Navy Commander named Nelson Levings, 55-year-old ex-Supreme Court Clerk Thomas Quitman Ellis and 66-year-old ex-Congressman Ross A. Collins—were campaigning hard. But Bilbo paid no heed. Instead he howled a warning: "The white people of Mississippi are sitting on a volcano. . . . We are faced with a nationwide campaign to integrate the nigger with the social life of this country. . . ."

He described the new carpetbaggers—the "Communist hoodlums," the labor leaders—who would seize the South if Bilbo did not stand guard.

"Congresswoman Clare Boothe Luce is the greatest nigger-lover in the North—except Old Lady Eleanor Roosevelt. Yep, Old Lady Roosevelt is worse. . . . In Washington she forced our Southern girls to use the stools and the toilets of damn syphilitic nigger women. . . ." 7-1-46

Passion for Whites. He ranted of white supremacy: "The nigger is only 150 years from the jungles of Africa, where it was his great delight to cut him up some fried nigger steak for breakfast. . . . Over in Georgia a pambly-wambly governor named Ellis Arnall has sold his state down the river. There are 200,000 niggers registered and Georgia has gone to hell. . . ." Time

He bawled for violence: "I call on every red-blooded white man to use any means to keep the niggers away from the polls. If you don't understand what that means you are just plain dumb. . . ."

In town after sun-baked town crowds gathered, listened with hot-eyed intentness, and cheered The Man. Even planters in the rich Delta country who had always opposed him would vote for him this time. They thought him a knave but they knew he would filibuster to death any Congressional threat to "white man's supremacy" such as FEPC (the Fair Employment Practice Committee). Nothing short of a miracle would keep Bilbo from renomination, election, six more noisy years in the nation's capital. 7-1-46

Who Will Package Bilbo's Poison?

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

By SAMUEL SILLEN

Who is going to publish Bilbo's new book? What American publisher will package Bilbo's Ku Klux poison and peddle it around the country?

This is not an academic question. Bilbo himself claims his manuscript of murder is now in a publisher's hands. Somebody is planning to issue his appeal for a national lynching bee.

And we want to know who.

We want to know the name of the publisher who will sponsor this Mein Kampf out of Mississippi—no doubt in the interests of "free speech."

Bilbo says that his book "proves that if the mongrelization my opponents are trying to hasten continues, the nation will be completely mongrel in 300 years. They will be yellow half-breeds, mulattos, octoroons and high yellows."

In some editorial office this fascist racism is being considered with an eye to its best-seller possibilities. Wed 7-6-4

Somebody is working up the "free press" alibi—freedom to incite to murder, freedom to plump for fascism, freedom to preach the "extermination" of the Negro people.

Somebody is working on the angle that publication of Bilbo's book is a "public service" since it will "expose" the Ku Klux Senator from Mississippi

Somebody is working on the "publicity" angles In fact, Bilbo himself last week hailed an attack on him as "publicity" for his new book.

This was his answer to the Mississippians who signed a petition asking the Senate not to seat him. The petition points out the well-known truth that Bilbo incited whites to commit acts of violence against Negroes and that he sought to terrorize Negroes planning to vote in the Mississippi primary in which his own candidacy was at stake.

BILBO recently had an operation for inflammation of the mouth. This is the logical operation for his kind. But the operation was not successful. The surgeon was inept. Bilbo says: "I just had my mouth reamed out and now I've got more mouth than ever."

That enlarged mouth will be supplied with a megaphone by the publisher who contemplates release of his "anti-mongrelization" book.

Let that publisher have no illusions. Every decent-minded American will fight the release of Bilbo's book every inch of the way. It is not going to be easy to palm off a Mein Kampf on this country.

No publisher is "free" to incite to lynching.

No publisher is "free" to peddle fascist poison with an editorial note "dissociating" himself from the opinions of the author.

No publisher will fool anybody with the claim that he is helping to "expose" Bilbo. This is the argument advanced by the radio sponsors (WOR) of a recent program in which Bilbo held forth to an audience of millions. It is a phony argument. Hitler didn't "expose" himself with Mein Kampf. The Hitlers and Bilbos love to be "exposed" by themselves with the aid of publishers and radio producers.

Bilbo brags that he is a member of the Ku Klux Klan. His local Klan post carries his name. Isn't that exposure enough?

We don't want to give this Ku Kluxer a platform, whether over the radio, in a book, or on the floor of the United States Senate.

The publisher who plans to issue his book will be an active accomplice in a monstrous crime against the people of this country.

No public announcement of the book has yet been made except by Bilbo himself. What publishing firm will have the moral degeneracy to verify this announcement?

Bilbo Says He Belongs To Klan, Named for Him

Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

From Wire Dispatches.

Washington, Aug. 9.—Senator Theodore G. Bilbo (D.-Miss.) admitted tonight that he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan and that a Mississippi post of the Klan was named after him.

"I am a member of Bilbo Klan No. 40, Mississippi," he said. "I attended one meeting and have not attended it since, because I was not in sympathy with some of the things in it."

Bilbo was interviewed by four newspaper and magazine correspondents on Mutual's "Meet the Press" program. 8-10-46

Expects Klan's Support.

He said he did not know what the present Klan stands for, but he expected to receive support from the organization.

"No man can leave the Klan," he said. "He takes an oath not to do that. Once a Ku Klux, always a Ku Klux." While Bilbo spoke, several hundred pickets organized by the National Negro Congress marched before the Mutual stations in New York and Washington protesting his appearance on the network.

Bilbo admitted he had brought with him to "some gentlemen" as a matter of precaution" against possible violence. 8-10-46

Bilbo was under sharp questioning by the four interviewers he agreed with the opinion of their verdict every time I have asked for the job—three times," Bilbo replied.

Bilbo, the Stinker

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 7-13-46

If prayer is of any value in making people well, pray Bilbo sick, and thank God when he dies.

After all, he can't live overlong. Look at Blease, Tillman, Vardaman and all the other foul-smelling demagogues. Leaders of hate are in their graves and probably in hell, if there is one. None of us remembers them in kindness.

Runt Bilbo, thirty-eight years in politics, in scandals involving sex and money, was re-nominated to the U.S. Senate from Mississippi. He is quoted as saying:

"Congresswoman Clare Boothe Luce is the greatest n----r lover in the North except old lady Eleanor Roosevelt. Yep, old lady Roosevelt is worse. In Washington she forced our Southern girls to use the stools and toilets of damned n----r women."

Like Westbrook Pegler, Bilbo's chief asset is his nasty anti-social tongue, his violent language and his hatred of Catholics, Jews, foreigners and colored people.

He is a real stinker. Let us pray.

The Constitution

This Could Develop Into a Film-i-Buster

Atlanta, Ga. Mon. 8-19-46

Sen. Bilbo, of Mississippi, has been offered a part in a forthcoming motion picture.

That comes as a surprise. One has heard the Senator called a number of things, but never an actor.

My first reaction was that Hollywood must be endeavoring to appeal to the superannuated bobby-soxers with a sort of gaitered-Gable. Mon. 8-19-46

It develops, however, that The Man has been offered a role in a forthcoming effort starring Sen. Claghorn, the only successful Confederate.

Claghorn isn't the only unreconstructed rebel with a trunkful of money. It's just that nobody else's is negotiable.

At any rate, it'll be some picture with those two great comedians—Claghorn the professional and Bilbo the unintentional.

Claghorn represent the deep South, Bilbo the dense.

But a picture starring them would have appeal the nation over. Not even the best-stocked butcher shops have that much ham on display.

$5,000 Rise Voted Bilbo, So He Spurns Film Offer

Times New York N.Y.

WASHINGTON, July 29 (AP)—Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, Democrat, of Mississippi, said today he was not interested in a movie offer of $500 a week and expenses, made by Bryan Foy, film producer, to take part in a picture featuring the "Senator Claghorn" character portrayed by Kenny Delmar, with Mr. Bilbo appearing as a Southern public figure.

In a prepared statement, Mr. Bilbo said he considered the actor's efforts to "take off' a Southern Senator "silly and puerile." Tuesday 7-30-46

"Now as to the proposition from the film company in Hollywood," Mr. Bilbo added: "I'm not now interested, because over my protest the Congress has just raised my salary $5,000 a year and I most certainly am not interested in playing the role of a Southern Senator defeated by a man of 'Senator Claghorn's' character. 7-30-46

"With the help of the good people of Mississippi I've just defeated all of the Senator Claghorns north of the Mason-Dixon line as well as four local potential Claghorns—peckerwoods—because that is just about the role they would have played if they had been successful."

New York N.Y.

The bill for the pay rise referred to by Mr. Bilbo has passed both Houses and is awaiting the President's signature.

Interviewers Evoke Ridiculous Answers

WASHINGTON

Senator Theodore Bilbo (Dem., Miss.) dashed out of a back cellar with his bodyguards in order to escape a picket line waiting outside of the Mutual Broadcasting Station, WOL, Friday night.

During an interview with four newspaper and magazine correspondents on the 'Meet the Press" program, he admitted the following:

1. That he is a member of the Ku Klux Klan (he pronounced it Que Cluck Clan) Klavern No. 40 which is named for him:

2. That because he took an oath to support the ideals of the Klan for life, he will always be a member: The Afro-American

3. That he will get Klan support in his election:

4. That he doesn't know what the present Klan stands for but he is sure it is not to undermine the government:

Says He Upholds Constitution

5. That whiskey, money and women are used by the whites in Mississippi to win the elections:

Definite Sign of Fear

In answer to a question from one of his interviewers regarding the presence of so many guards, he admitted fear, stating that he had realized that his planned appearance at the radio station had been publicized fully.

Then, when asked whether the escorts (in addition to his office staff) were armed, he retorted that he didn't know, for, 'I didn't search them."

6. That he believes he is sworn to uphold the Constitution including the 14th and 15th Amendments and he thinks he is doing so when he violates them:

7. That the Supreme Court order directing the States not to interfere with colored people voting in the Democratic primaries interferes with the State of Mississippi's program to keep colored people away from the polls and that the white people have a right to do anything they can to nullify the Supreme Court's decision.

Ordered to Respect All

He was rebuked by the announcer interviewing him for using epithets and was instructed that no terms derogatory to any race would be permitted on the air.

While Bilbo did his best to comply with the order, he lapsed repeatedly because newspaper men asked such pointed questions that he would explain the results of the educational tests given in the Army which showed that only Afri-literacy figures of Poles and Jews are among the white nations and that only Afri-ge are 14 per cent that colored people of New York made a median score of 45.02 and ppi 30 percent. Forced to Back Down

Asked whether he was not violating the Constitution and inciting Mississippi to mob violence when he made a public address before the last primary election in which he said that the way to stop colored people from voting was to stop them the night before.

Bilbo said he didn't say that.

Bert Andrews of the New York Herald Tribune virtually called Bilbo a liar and said all of the newspaper reporters agreed on what he said and he would take their word before he would take Bilbo's.

Just Talk—He Says

Bilbo, thereupon, lamely admitted that what he actually said was that the best way to keep the colored man from the polls was to see him the night before.

He explained what he meant by "see him the night before" was to tell him he had no right to vote.

It was an obvious lie, and didn't fool anybody, because Bilbo on the next breath declared that you may call what he did intimidation or what you may, but he believes in doing anything he can to keep colored people from voting and to maintain white supremacy in the State.

Asked also why he had made the racial issue the dominant one in his campaign for re-election to the Senate, he admitted fear of the effect of labor's drive to guarantee the vote to colored and other persecuted peoples.

300 Unable to March Stand By

Marching two abreast, about 200 pickets paraded in front of the studio headquarters, carrying anti-Bilbo signs while another 300, unable to join the line because of police restrictions, stood silently across the street.

Trade union members, including a predominance of AFL and CIO representatives, constituted the majority of the pickets with civic community and individual pickets also in evidence.

One Benedict Arnold Enough

Pickets carried signs reading "Senator Bilbo Betrays our Democracy, One Benedict Arnold is Enough," "Tell it to me Senator, I was a G.I.;" "We Veterans Fought to Free Europe of Hitlerism, we will free America of Bilboism."

Newsmen on the program who queried the Senator were Bert Andrews, New York Herald Tribune; Ernest Lindley, Newsweek; Lawrence Spivak, editor of American Mercury, and Cecil B. Dixon, Gannett Publications.

The entire demonstration including the picket line, was sponsored by the National Negro Council, led by Mrs. Marie Harris, executive secretary of the Washington branch.

Now 'The Man' Bilbo Is Writing Book On What The South Owes Him

The News Birmingham, Ala.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 28—(AP)— Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo's latest dispute with a Southern newspaper is a controversy with The New Orleans States over what kind of a "debt" the South owes to the Mississippi senator.

Bilbo, in a letter to The States editor, W. H. Fitzpatrick, says he is finishing a book which will explain "the debt you and the rest of the South owe me."

An an answering editorial The States says "the debt the South owes Sen. Bilbo is well known," and "is being paid daily in fear and prejudice and bigotry."

The senator, who spent much of his recent successful renomination campaign replying to criticism by newspapers in his own state, wrote the letter in response to a previous States editorial which described Bilbo and Gov-Elect Eugene Talmadge, of Georgia, as "two of the worst demagogues the South has had in recent years."

BILBO'S LETTER, PUBLISHED in The States today, said:

"Your editorial was so mean and nasty toward me until I started to answer it, but I am just going to wait and answer it with a book to which I am putting the finishing touches this week. You need to know the truth, then you will understand more about the debt you and the rest of the South owe me.

"Of course, I know that your bosses at the top (I understand they live in New York) direct the policy of your paper, but maybe when you are set straight you can even influence them."

Fitzpatrick replied in today's editorial:

"The (previous) editorial said that outsiders, when they thought of the South, thought of Uncle Tom's Cabin and Tobacco Road; that they forgot Harlem's hovels and Detroit's race riot; that when outsiders thought of the South, they thought of Bilbo and Talmadge, and that their interference helped in the election of those two.

"It pointed out that America was represented at the Paris Peace Conference by (James R.) Byrnes, of South Carolina; (Jefferson) Caffery, of Louisiana, and (Will) Clayton, of Texas, and added that they too were Southerners. Naturally, Sen. Bilbo suffered by comparison.

"IN HIS LETTER, SEN. BILBO says that he understands that the 'bosses at the top' of this newspaper live in New York. 'Boss at the top' is L. K. Nicholson, a native and lifelong resident of New Orleans.

"Sen. Bilbo says his forthcoming book will make us understand the debt the South owes to him. We have no need to read the book. The debt the South owes to Bilbo is well known. It is being paid daily in fear and prejudice and bigotry."

Says All America Is Responsible For Race-Baiter Bilbo

Black dispatch Oklahoma City

CHICAGO — (ANP) — Responsibility for Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo's race baiting election demogogery was placed upon the shoulders of every American citizen Monday by the Chicago Sun, Marshall Field's progressive daily newspaper, in an editorial headed "Who's ~~to Blame for~~ Bilbo?" 7-14-46

The Sun said:

'Nobody in the north escapes responsibility for Sen. Bilbo merely because that infamous mountebank represents the state of Mississi. Every American shares culpability for the fact that Sen. Bilbo can campaign for renomination on the basis of open instigations to violence and terrorism against Mississippi Negro citizens.

"Northern congressmen could end the south's poll taxes if they chose. Non-southern citizens could take the offensive against social, educational and economic discrimination now tolerated in varying degrees, everywhere. They could support the many southerners who are desperately ashamed of Bilboism and are working, with zeal and courage, for a decent solution of the race problem. They could speak out, in company with Sen. Taylor of Idaho, in protetst against Bilbo. The department of justice could order a grand jury investigation of Fascist terrorism in Mississippi and haul Bilbo himself before that grand jury to determine whether inflamatory speeches form an indictable offense of laws protecting the civil rights of citizens. Sat 7.13.46

"The evil that Sen. Bilbo commits is not confined to Mississippi. It taints the stream of American life. He is not just Mississippi problem, but the nation's."

Bilbo Not Fit For Congress

The Call Kansas City, Mo. 8-23-46

White Daily Brands 'The Man' In Editorial

Friday

CHICAGO. — (ANP) — Theodore G. Bilbo's qualifications for senator took another nose dive in an editorial published Monday by the Chicago Sun, Marshall Field's progressive daily newspaper, on "Bilbo's Klan Admission."

Bilbo told the nation Friday during an interview over Mutual Broadcasting company's "Meet the Press" program that he is a member of "the Ku Klux Klan No. 40, called the Bilbo Klan No. 4, Mississippi." 8-23-46

"I attended one meeting and have not attended it since, because I was not in sympathy with some of the things in it," he informed four newspapermen.

"It is interesting to have confirmation from Sen. Bilbo that he is a member of the Ku Klux Klan," the Sun's editorial said. "But the news will surprise no one who has the least familiarity with the Mississippi demagogue's record.

MEMBER OF KLAN

"The klan is not only a formal organization but also a state of mind It is a state of mind hostile to the basic premises on which the nation was founded. which elevates ignorance and intolerance and fear to the level of principles. It is a state of mind which glorifies and revels in hatred, bigotry and violence.

"No one on the national scene, certainly, has been a more blatant champion of that frame of mind than has Sen. Bilbo. On the radio broadcast which occassioned Bilbo's declaration of klan membership he was asked how he reconciled membership in the klan, which 'secretly undermines the law,' with his senatorial oath to uphold the laws of his state and of the nation. Bilbo's answer to that qualifies as the prize understatement of the year. Said he, 'I am not informed that the klan, as I know it, is seeking to undermine the government.' But how about American legal and constitutional principles? If congress ever should get around to using belief in them as a criterion for qualification, Bilbo would be one of the first candidates for expulsion."

During the broadcast, Lawrence Spivak of American Mercury Magazine asked Bilbo whether he thought he "would get any klan support now?"

"I do," said the senator.

"You never left the klan, in effect?"

"No man can leave the klan He takes an oath not to do that Once a Ku Klux, always a Ku Klux."

HAROLD ICKES

Congress Should Purge Bilbo

The Constitution Atlanta, Ga. 8-17-46

The Senate of the United States can hardly expect the people to have more respect for it than it has for itself. And the Senate's respect for itself, if its attitude toward Theodore G. Bilbo be any yardstick, can be measured in fractions of inches.

By the Constitution, the Senate is the judge of the fitness of its own members. If, in the opinion of the Senate, a collegue is an unfit associate, then he can be taken by the scruff of his neck and the seat of his pants and thrown out. This can be done even when a Senator has been elected by a majority vote in his State and certainly there is nothing to prevent the regurgitation of a man like Sen. Bilbo, of Mississippi, who, six years ago, was elected by five percent of the voters of his State.

The diluted Mr. Bilbo is regarded as the leading ranter of the State that is the lowest in literacy. Metaphorically speaking, despite his 68 years, he seems to be able to stand his 95 colleagues on their heads, to roll them downstairs in a barrel, turn their pockets inside out, throw dirt in their eyes and jerk out their shirttails without their being able to do anything about it, either singly or in concert. Wed. 7-17-46

OVERLOOKING Bilbo's offensiveness as a member of the Senate, let us consider his record. Probably few Senators remember that as a State Senator of Mississippi, Bilbo on one occasion confessed to having taken $645 (merely to satisfy his curiosity, he averred) to vote for Leroy Percy for United States Senator against James K. Vardaman. According to an article printed in PM on June 30, the Senate of Mississippi, which on this occasion seemed to have more self-respect than does the Senate of the United States, after an investigation, condemned Bilbo's "entire bribery charge and the statement of the role played by himself as detective and decoy as unworthy of belief." The Senate of Mississippi (not the United States!) proceeded to declare that "said Bilbo was unfit to sit with honest, upright men in a respectable legislative body." He was accordingly asked to resign. A resolution to this effect was adopted, 25 to 1. The absent and not voting, including Bilbo of course, constituted 19. But Bilbo, being Bilbo, did not resign. Taking advantage of the curious political standards of Mississippi, he went on to become Lieutenant Governor and then Governor for two terms, although the voters of his State did not have even the flimsy excuse that they resented attempted "outside interference." Now, in effect, he has been elected to his third term as United States Senator and, so far as I know, there isn't a single colleague who holds his nose when he passes Bilbo's seat.

In his campaign for re-election, as usual, Bilbo again spewed race hate and prejudice. He was saturated with political bile. In violation of his oath to uphold the Constitution of the United Sttaes, he called upon the white people of Mississippi to prevent Negroes from voting by any means and in defiant disregard of their legal rights. Be it said to the credit of Sen. Glen H. Taylor, of Idaho, that he promptly demanded an investigation of Bilbo's irrationalities by the Committee on Privileges and Elections of the Senate. 7-17-46

BUT this is not enough. Why does not the Senate undertake to determine whether this five percent Senator is fit to sit with the other 95 at all—at least unless he goes through purification rites be-

Bilbo Voices Final Absurdity

Birmingham News

By Marquis Childs

WASHINGTON, May 2 — It remained for Sen. Bilbo, Mississippi's gift to the nation, to add the final absurdity to the Communist tag when he called Rep. Clare Boothe Luce and her publisher husband, Henry R. Luce, "communistic." B'ham.

That carries it as far as it can be carried. If Henry Luce is a Communist, then so are Cardinal Spellman and Herbert Hoover. By definition, a Communist becomes anyone who disagrees with you, no matter how reactionary, narrow and bigoted your own views may be.

IN THAT FANTASTIC AND ABSURD SPEECH, Bilbo was not talking just to hear the sound of his own voice. He had a very deliberate motive. The speech was meant to be a document in his campaign for reelection.

For even "The Man" must subject himself every six years to the will of the voters of his native state, Bilbo has gone back to Mississippi to campaign for the primary of July 2. The issue is the same as it was 75 years ago—the carpetbag, outside interference.

That is why Bilbo wanted to get his speech on the record. He wanted to convict hostile Northerners of trying to dictate to the people of Mississippi. That is why he bracketed such incongruous publications as Life, The New York Daily News, the New York Post, The Daily Worker and The St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

They are all in a conspiracy, these powerful instruments of Northern Domination, to defeat the martyred, bleeding Bilbo. That's the theme "The Man" will sound in cruder and cruder form as he moves through rural Mississippi. 5-2-46

MANY TIMES IN THE PAST, this theme has been effective—and not only in the Deep South. Once, when Rep. Dewey Short was running for reelection in his Ozark district in Missouri, he made effective use of an attack on him that appeared in the newspaper PM. These Communists, said Short, no mean demagogue himself, were trying to tell the God-fearing people of Missouri how to vote.

Indications are that Bilbo will be able to make potent use of this appeal in his current campaign. He is aiming, of course, at the Ku Klux Klan element.

A large campaign fund is said to have been made available to him. The money is reported to come from construction firms in Mississippi. With four opponents in the field, Bilbo would seem to have a good chance of reelection. 5-2-46

THE CARPETBAG APPEAL is, of course, the other side of the states rights argument. Behind the barrier of states rights, the little courthouse ring in Mississippi holds on to its privileges and power. It is a guarantee that Mississippi will be at the bottom or near the bottom of the lists that show how the states stand on health, literacy, schools and so on.

That is the way the Bilbos want it. Change would threaten their supremacy. It is this legal barricade that makes the government of these United States so very difficult. Birmingham, Ala.

Mississippi will take favors from the federal government, and plenty of favors, if no conditions are attached. A notorious example was the effort of certain Mississippi politicians to staff cotton mills with relief workers paid at relief rates with federal money. That occurred in the '30s when the late Harry L. Hopkins, as relief administrator, was trying to eke out scanty relief funds. Hopkins tried repeatedly to break through the barricade to enforce certain standards. But he was not conspicuously successful.

The same construction companies reported to be subsidizing Bilbo's campaign got large sums from the federal government. Bilbo has always been zealous at grabbing all the federal patronage he could get.

NOW SOMETHING NEW IS ABOUT TO HAPPEN. Both the AFL and the CIO have announced large-scale organizing campaigns in the South. Even with labor divided and competing, this is bound to bring about great changes. It will certainly bring, too, bitter last-ditch resistance.

Within the South itself, changes are taking place. Many newspapers have turned on the Bilbo mentality. Public officials such as Gov. Ellis Arnall, of Georgia, have opened the way to change. The Bilbos must know their day is nearly over. Perhaps that's why the senator rushed off so frantically to start campaigning.—©.

"The Man" Bilbo Is Off To the Wars of 1946

Louisville Ky. Courier-Journal

UNTIL after July 4, the United States Senate will have to struggle along without the services, if you want to call his participation that, of "The Man" BILBO. The Great Filibusterer, who has been categorically labelled "the worst man in the Senate"—and that on evidence to which his own colleagues contributed substantially—has obtained leave of absence to go home and campaign for renomination. The dispatches, taking note of this extension of grace, did not record that there were any outspoken objections to his departure, or any cordial wishes of good luck. Mon 4-29-46

It appears, however, that the Senator's decision to hie him to the hustings was reached none too soon. The impending primary election in Mississippi is a kind of Armageddon for THEO F. BILBO, and no less for his State. There is ample testimony to the effect that a great many people in Mississippi recognize the fatefulness of the decision, whether to permit themselves to be stuck for six more years with BILBO and to accept the disagreeable connotations of that result, or whether to retire him to pasture, perhaps belatedly for their best interests and prestige, and pick a successor who, whatever his limitations might be, at least won't be named BILBO.

Asking for leave, the Senator was reported as saying that four peckerwoods are trying to get his job, "peckerwood," in the Mississippi lingo, being a derogatory epithet meaning an uncouth fellow, a redneck, a yokel. It is not too much to say that the Senator at least hopes there will be four or more, because that will give him the advantage of a divided opposition and perhaps a victory in the first primary.

There are at least two active opponents, neither a peckerwood despite the Senator, who could give him a race to remember and perhaps, though not certainly, win if either ran alone. These are CECIL TRAVIS, a lawyer who is personally well-heeled and popular, and ROSS COLLINS, a former Congressman. Governor BAILEY, who might have proved an even more formidable opponent than either of these, has decided not to run, and may support TRAVIS.

The substance of this opposition is encouraging to citizens elsewhere who have become rather nauseated by a surfeit of BILBO-ism, but not so much can be said for the nature of the issues that have been aired to date. The most startling of these is the allegation that BILBO, in all the years of his public life, has paid a total of only $72 in income taxes. It it unlikely that there will be even an effort to warm over the old, grimy scandals in his career—the bribe charges, the BILBO love life, the jail term for refusing to give testimony in an unsavory case because he might have incriminated himself. The income tax item is new, and the Senator so far having maintained a dignified and thunderous silence on the subject, one may look for his opponents to give it a big play. Mon 4-29-46

What the rest of the country doubtless would like to hear is a serious discussion of the legitimate political concerns of the nation, of progress, of real democracy, of our relationships with the world—and of BILBO's reactionary attitude and primordial expressions as to them. Unless this occurs, and if BILBO is allowed to call the tune, to set the tone of the campaign, it will hold little hope, whatever the result. As a matter of fact, the campaign is a thing to be watched more fearfully than hopefully, for the Senator is on record as saying that if he is re-elected, his past behavior will be only a mild breeze compared to the storm he will blow up. We are alarmed by the doubt whether Mississippi will accept this as a threat or a promise.

If He Tells 'What He Knows'

Bilbo's Ex-Secretary Charges Death Threat

Pittsburgh Courier

Pittsburgh, Pa. Sat. 4-20-46

MERIDIAN, Miss.—Edward Terry, who served as Senator Theodore (The Man) Bilbo's secretary for seven years, charged last Friday that he had been threatened with death if he "told what he knew" during the Senator's summer re-election campaign.

In an affidavit issued by Terry, he laid the alleged death threat to A. B. Friend, Bilbo's campaign manager. Friend promptly denied having made the threat.

The threat was allegedly made when Terry and Friend dined together in a Jackson, Miss., restaurant.

"After we placed our order," Terry said, "Friend turned to me and my wife and said, 'Ed, if you tell what you know about Bilbo in the Senatorial race, you will be killed." Sat. 4-20-46

SAYS WIFE WARNED

"Then he repeated the statement, and warned my wife and me to leave Mississippi and not to participate in the campaign."

Terry said he was issuing his statement to the press because "it is the best way to protect myself."

In Jackson, Friend denied the charges as "untrue." He said, "The people of Missisippi are fully aware of the far-fetched tactics resorted to in a political campaign designed to defeat the constructive, liberal and democratic policies of Senator Bilbo."

MOVIE ROLE FOR BILBO

Times

$500 a Week, Plus Expenses, Is Offered Mississippi Senator

New York N.Y.

HOLLYWOOD, July 28 (AP)—Senator Theodore G. Bilbo of Mississippi received an offer today of a film role at $500 a week, plus expenses. Monday 7-30-46

Bryan Foy, producer, wired the Senator that he "had been quoted as bitterly resenting the manner in which Kenny Delmar has depicted southern office-holders" in his radio character of Senator Claghorn.

Mr. Foy said he was preparing to film a picture in which Delmar, as Claghorn, defeats a rival for office, and urged Senator Bilbo to accept a part because it "would enable you to portray a public figure from the South in a manner you deem fitting and proper."

Membership in the Screen Actors Guild would be necessary, Mr. Foy said, but he believed that could be worked out.

The Makers of Bilbo

The News and Courier Charleston, S.C.

The senator of Mississippi, Mr. Bilbo, is not representative of the Southern opinion and manner of which The News and Courier is a spokesman. The News and Courier tries to track in the footsteps of Lamar, Walthall, Hooker, Percy and John Sharpe Williams. The popularity of Senator Bilbo is in large part of foreign manufacture. The pharisees, the Uplifters, the pickets and the stinkpot throwers who reside outside of the South are constantly renewing the vitality of Mr. Bilbo and his fellow and kindred successes in Southern politics. (They even picket his home.) Some states beyond Southern borders have in congress at this time members or senators not more admirable and savory than is Mr. Bilbo. That is none of our business. Tues 7-2-46

Negro Leaders Seek Ouster of Bilbo

FOUR prominent negro leaders want Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo, Mississippi Democrat, ousted from the senate in January. They said Bilbo's admitted membership in the Ku Klux Klan and his efforts to block negro suffrage in the South have automatically disqualified him.

RALPH McGILL

Technique Of the Smear

Sen. Teddy Bilbo (The Man), of Mississipp delivered himself of a tirade in the Senate chamber last week.

He abused Life magazine and its publisher, Henry R. Luce, as either Communists or in the hire of Communists. He declared Clare Boothe-Luce, wife of the publisher and Republican Congresswoman from Connecticut, was a "nigger lover."

His reasons?

Life magazine had published a symposium of opinion from Washington news correspondents. It was an estimate of the Senators up for re-election based upon the day-to-day experience of the newsmen covering the Congress.

Of Teddy Bilbo the consensus was:

"Bilbo, of Mississippi, Democrat, has been sent to jail, discredited as a complainant in a bribery scandal, voted by his own colleagues in the Mississippi State Legislature 'unfit to sit with honest, upright men in a respectable legislative body,' and yet retains popularity among the independent (small) farmers. The reason: He plays on their prejudices about Wall Street, Negroes, the North. His recent activity has been opposition to FEPC. He got himself a flurry of publicity by writing a woman with an Italian name in Brooklyn, 'My dear Dago.' Said Sen. Taft (Robert A. Taft, Republican, of Ohio), 'He is a disgrace to the Senate.' Opinion: 'Worst man in the Senate.'"

Congresswoman Luce had criticized Teddy Bilbo's racial prejudice speeches; had asked for a fair deal for the Negro in education and employment.

This was the background of Sen. Bilbo's attack.

Study It is interesting to study this bit of political science and demagoguery. Abhorring and opposing Communism as I do, it seems to me a fine case study of the "smear."

It exposes the reckless and ruthless disregard for facts which any and all demagogues employ. Publisher Henry R. Luce needs no defense from a Bilbo attack, but the facts remain of interest.

They expose the utter fallacy of Bilbo's reasoning.

Life magazine has been called many things, good and bad. But never before has it been called "Communist." It stood editorially for the Chiang Kai-shek government and for our armed participation in China to put down the Communist government of that country. This fact badly distressed many of the staff and many other newsmen who, while not Communist by any means, nevertheless regarded Chiang Kai-shek as a Fascist of the first water. It has been very critical of Russian policy in Manchuria. And so on.

Yet, in the face of facts, Bilbo flings "Communist" charges.

This is getting to be a common practice. It is not alarming. It is the way of demagogues who, it seems, have always been with us. Euripides, who wrote on Greek politics some 400 years B. C., knew them well. Demagogues were one of his favorite subjects. Of them he said:

"A man of loose tongue, intemperate, trusting to tumult, leading the populace to mischief with empty words . . . a wise fellow, who is also worthless, always charms the masses . . . his qualities are a foul mouth . . . a low and cunning character."

South Here in the South, the demagogues are very free indeed with "Communist" charges. Anyone who disagrees with them is, ergo, a Communist. Anyone who openly opposes their falseness and lies is either in the hire of Communists or is one. That is the pattern of the smear technique. Sen. Bilbo follows it.

Mrs. Luce, whose politics at times distresses me, and whose political views often seem a bit strained, did not at all speak of social equality or anything else of that nature.

Yet, following the accepted smear pattern, Sen. Bilbo denounced her for it and recklessly declared she approved.

Here in the South, the same procedure is followed.

Any person who declares the Negro has a right to fair treatment in the courts and at the hands of police, which he too often does not have; who asks that he be given a fair share of housing, parks, education and public health; who suggests he has a right to use his skills in industry—that person is sure to be called a "nigger lover." He also is sure to be charged with favoring social equality, the interpretation of which is never given; and, of course, he is a "Communist." He also will be charged with having violated Southern traditions, with fouling his own nest, and so on and on.

This is not alarming. It always works with a few people, but it is working every day, every month, every year with fewer and fewer persons.

Sen. Bilbo's attack so perfectly illustrates the technique, it is herewith presented as a warning to any thoughtful person who may be confused by the smear technique.

JACK TARVER

Bilbo Himself A One-Man Epidemic

Sen. Bilbo, of Mississippi, has been operated upon for "inflammation of the mouth."

It shouldn't have required a specialist to diagnose that ailment.

He's been parading all the symptoms through the halls of Congress for more years than friends of democracy like to recall.

In fact, he's the only man in history to use the Congressional Record as his personal fever chart.

"Inflammation of the mouth" is characterized, one supposes, by recurring delirium, frequent filibusters and a preponderance of bile.

We can be thankful it isn't contagious. One case in the Senate is bad enough . . . much less 96.

One trouble with this nation today is that we have too many men in Congress with high blood pressure and low mentality.

Bilbo As Statesman; It's a Joke, Son

MISSISSIPPI'S Senator THEO BILBO has been called a lot of things but nobody has ever seriously challenged his oft repeated campaign assertion that he favors protection of the honor of Southern womanhood. However, it has taken the ridiculing talents of his radio prototype, Senator Claghorn, as evoked by KENNY DELMAR on the FRED ALLEN show, to make Senator BILBO a protector of the "honor of Southern manhood" as well.

Senator BILBO, apparently, sees an uncomplimentary similarity between himself and Senator Claghorn, and doesn't believe it's entirely coincidental. In forceful Claghorn style, the Mississippi Senator has declared the radio character holds Southern "statesmen up to ridicule, contempt and scorn." By that, of course, Senator BILBO means to convey the idea that he is a "Southern statesmen"—a point of view that may be open to some question. Claghorn, he says, "sullies the honor of Southern manhood."

But the point is that Senator Claghorn has achieved one of those triumphs of press agentry which deserve and receive joyous acclaim. He has offered Senator BILBO a part on a Hollywood movie, playing a Southern statesman, for $500 a week.

DELMAR and BRYAN FOY, president of the company making the film, have communicated their offer to Senator BILBO in a telegram in perfectly dead-pan vein: "It would enable you to portray a public figure from the South in a manner you deem fitting and proper . . . Of course you would have to join the Screen Actors' Guild, but I believe we could work this out on your arrival here."

One feels real regret that chances of Senator BILBO's forsaking the Senate for the screen are remote. But if he were to do it, the title of the DELMAR-FOY movie seems to augur well for the Senator's success in it. The film will be called It's a Joke, Son.

"THE MAN" WRITES ANOTHER NOTE

Many a newspaper editor in these United States of America is scratching his head trying to figure out what the editor of the Miami Daily News has that he hasn't "got." Senator Theodore G. Bilbo threatens to introduce a bill in the Congress to "outlaw and suppress" the Miami paper simply because "The Man" doesn't like the editorial tone of the Daily News.

Senator Bilbo has a gift for cheap publicity. The note to the Miami paper informing it of the Senator's displeasure is on a par with his now famous "Dear Dago" note to a woman who happened to get under the Mississippian's thick skin. Both show the same lack of regard for the commonly accepted rules of courtesy and fair play, and both attest to the shockingly warped mind of their author.

Of course no one can for a moment do other than laugh at Senator Bilbo's threat to suppress the Miami Daily News. But this indicates what he would do if there were enough men as small as he in the United States Congress. If Bilbo had the power and the following, not only the Miami Daily News, but a vast majority of America's free press would be "outlawed and suppressed."

Bilbo Has Spoken, Judge Him, America

Editor, Daily Worker:

I have heard young, strong voices singing "Sweet land of liberty—let freedom ring." I have seen labor and science, tears and joys of men of all origins who have paved the roads of great America. I believe that governments are instituted to preserve and further freedom, justice, peace and well-being — governments created so that all of us are responsible both to ourselves and to all for our common welfare.

All this is denied by Mississippi's Senator Bilbo. Frauds, lies, he called everything. All that he said can be taken to its logical conclusion—and it would mean ignorance, violence, destruction of culture and dignity.

Just as fascism abroad decided who was to live and who was to enter gas chambers, so Bilbo and his fellow Klaners decided who is to live. The Negro's neck that has stretched from barren tree limbs are the conclusion of Bilboism.

The sneers at all that is good fill the airwaves; this must teach us to hate this parasitic mentality. We must hate and fight it as it sits in the U. S. Senate.

What can happen if the atomic age is to be ruled by this dark form of ignorance.

Judge him for youreslf, America. You have heard him spak.

JOSEPHINE PICCOLO

— WASHINGTON NOTES —

'Peckerwoods' and Bilbo

Daily Worker, New York, N.Y. Sat. 5-4-46

— by Rob F. Hall —

By ROBERT HALL

WASHINGTON

THERE was a mild flurry in the press gallery last Friday when Theodore G. Bilbo asked permission of the Senate to be absent until July 2. There was no emotion but relief when, "without objection," the consent of the Senate was granted. The Senator needed 60 days, he said, because "there are four peckerwoods down in Mississippi trying to take my job away from me."

Bilbo spoke of his opponents as "peckerwoods," a term usually used to refer to the common people, to express his scorn and contempt. But there is reason to believe that the Senator is at last facing a tough fight to hold his Senate seat and that he is aware of the fact. Sat. 5-4-46

Already entered in the Democratic Party primary in Mississippi, which will take place July 2, are Ross Collins, former Congressman and a well known political figure, and a former naval officer, J. L. Levings of Gulfport. At least two others are expected to file before the books close May 2. Even if Bilbo leads in the primary count, he will not be declared winner unless he has more than 50 percent of the vote. Failing that he will be forced into a runoff Aug. 20. If all his opponents combine to support the highest anti-Bilbo candidate, prospects for removing the Shame of the Senate would be fairly bright.

Bilbo showed concern for his election prospects last month when his campaign manager, A. B. Friend, rushed into print to deny some very damaging charges from a former secretary of the Senator. Edward Terry, who served with Bilbo for seven years, told newsmen in Meridian that Friend threatened to kill him if he told what he knew about Bilbo. During the old days Bilbo would simply have yelled that Terry was "a liar and a crook," made some comment about Terry's female relatives, and let it go at that.

But Bilbo even went to the length of inserting into the Congressional Record an unusually long testimonial to his "constructive" statesmanship, signed by several hundred citizens of the state. An examination of the list reveals that the same names come from less than a dozen small towns and is no way representative of the state or the voters.

CIO President Philip Murray declared in a speech in Atlantic City last Thursday that a by-product of the southern organizing drive will be the elimination of such men as Bilbo and Rankin from Congress. This is true. But no one should expect that the drive, just now getting underway, will plow up enough ground in Mississippi to affect the primaries in July and August.

Such influence as labor will exert in the anti-Bilbo race this summer will be as a result of the growth and development of the working class in Mississippi during the war years. The Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, CIO, have a strong local at Hattiesburg. The Food and Tobacco Workers have spread along the Mississippi River, although much of their strength is among Negro workers who do not yet have the franchise. At Pascagoula the shipyard workers members of the AFL, are an important factor. Sat. 5-4-46

But perhaps the most significant bloc of anti-Bilbo voters are rural workers who during the war were employed in the industries in Mobile, Birminghanm, Memphis and New Orleans, and who have returned to the state since V-E Day. They learned a lot about unionism and progressive political action during their work in industry, and they have brought this liberating message to thousands of their neighbors who as small farmers constitute the bulk of the state's voters. Sat. 5-4-46

The key to the defeat of Bilbo, therefore, is an alliance between these workers and farmers on the one hand and other anti-Bilbo elements who come from all walks of life. An important section of business men in the state are out to defeat Bilbo. It is primarily for these men that Bilbo's opponents speak.

It woud be incorrect, therefore to expect the Mississippi elections to revolve around the most important issues or principles. Bilbo will charge that his opponents are fighting him with "millions of dollars supplied by Communists, Negroes, PAC, CIO and other ungodly elements." His opponents will deny the charge and do a little red-baiting and Negro-baiting to prove their point.

Their main case against Bilbo will be largely charges of corruption which have long characterized Mississippi politics. For real progressives, these phases of the campaign will leave much to be desired

Nevertheless a defeat of Bilbo would be an enormously healthy thing for American political life. It would be interpreted—and correctly—to mean that the people of Mississippi repudiated the main things for which Bilbo stands, rank reaction, corrupt feudalism, and ruthless suppression of the rights of the people.

So here's to the "peckerwoods" of Mississippi! Sen. Bilbo may find that instead of only four, their number is legion.

Bilbo Is a Symptom

Richmond, Va.

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

With reference to your editorial on April 28, "Zany on the Defensive," regarding Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, it looks as though "everybody wants to get in da act." I refer to the increasing number of Southern newspapers which pray for the defeat of the Mississippi Senator in the next election. Times Dispatch

Now, for a Negro to defend Senator Bilbo may seem, at first, as incongruous as for the Jews to uphold Hitler, the Chinese, Tojo, etc., but we are not against the man—we are fighting the principles which he advocates—the principles of race hatred, prejudice, intolerance and bigotry. It is interesting to note that the Southern papers which cry out most vehemently for his scalp fail to attack the principles which Bilbo upholds, for the simple reason that, by and large, they and the majority of their readers hold to the same belief.

To me, one Bilbo, Rankin or Eastland in our Congress is worth half a dozen more reticent, but equally intolerant, Southern Senators who fully believe in the creed upheld by the above gentleman but who confine their utterances to their constituents.

Senator Bilbo clearly demonstrates that when bigotry is nourished and permitted to flourish, it confines itself to no one race but can take on with equal vigor "Kikes," "Dagos," "Chinks," "Polacks," "Niggers," "Frogs" and "Limies." Senator Bilbo has brought into the open, for the whole United States, for all the United Nations, for the whole world to see, the great flaw in our democracy. When Senator Bilbo speaks, he speaks for 95 per cent of all Mississippians (white), for 94 per cent of all Caucasians below the Mason-Dixon Line and for too large a percentage of the entire United States. Ned 5-1-46

We have junior Bilbos in Virginia, too. They're the people who force Negroes to the rear of the buses, to the 1892 coaches on railroad trains, to the rat-infested ghettos, to the most menial of labor, to the poor schools. They're the people who put up a white-marble drinking fountain for whites and a black-porcelain fountain for colored; who address no married Negro woman as "Mrs."

Let's devote more energy to attacking the social order that produces men and women like Bilbo, and let's begin here in Virginia.

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

I have just finished reading a reprint of your editorial lamenting the jokes of Senator Claghorn, which was inserted in the Congressional Record. 5-2-46

Now that cognizance has been taken (officially, that is) of the fact that you feel sorry for yourselves, how about some of you fellows who are not "morons and degenerates a la Tobacco Road, or banjo-picking mammy singers" doing something about correcting the distorted picture of the South which we in the North always seem to have? Va.

After having been through the South (west as well as east) and seen it, on several occasions from its side roads as well as the main ones, and listened to some of its back-door gossip, I'm inclined to think that Allen's writers were going sort of easy with this Claghorn character, I mean. 5-2-46

A Southern Senator to lampoon? By gad, those writers didn't have to rack their brains to dream one up, and the fact that this Claghorn fellow does seem to have the redeeming characteristic of a charming sense of humor does sort of prove that his inspiration wasn't exactly documentary.

Claghorn indeed! Billboard's the name (or could have been) Billboard, that is! Why, down South they had a jailbird once, and they took a picture of this jailbird—right out of the rogue's gallery, I guess. They transposed that jailbird's picture to a billboard—to a lot of billboards. Gosh, that must have been a right purty picture! Do you know what happened, son? Why, that Billboard picture wound up in Washington one day and took itself a seat in the United States Senate, and it's been there ever since. That ain't no joke, son! Claghorn indeed—Billboard's the name—Billboard, that is! Times

Washington Post

Voteless Washington has become the subject of a rip-snorting campaign out in Mississippi. That great statesman who won the chairmanship of the Senate District Committee by dint of seniority, Senator Bilbo, is telling his constituents that they must send him back to Washington so that he can prevent the restoration of suffrage here. And his leading opponent, former Representative Ross A. Collins, is making a slashing attack upon the self-styled ex-officio Mayor of Washington, using as one of his chief weapons the charge that Mr. Bilbo spends his time passing municipal ordinances for the far-away Capital. Tue. 5-14-46

Here is an ironical commentary on the status of this political paradox of a city. It may very well be that the fate of democracy in what has virtually become the capital of the democratic world will be decided by this contest in rural Mississippi. Senator Bilbo says frankly he is not in favor of letting Negroes vote. Because a little more than one fourth of the local population is colored, he insists that nearly a million Americans shall remain disfranchised. Rather than yield to the current demand for self-rule in the District, he indicates that he will filibuster to the last breath in his lungs.

It seems inconceivable to us that the voters of Mississippi will choose a Senator for the sake of imposing benighted and bigoted rule on a far-away city. Nor can we see that Mr. Bilbo's offer to rescue from the city jail all visiting Mississippians who come to Washington and get into trouble should be important enough to put him over. But strange is the way of politics. The grim fact of the matter is that the chairman of the Senate District Committee had to have some argument to counteract his leading opponent's charge that he is only a petty ordinance maker for the District of Columbia—that he is neglecting the home folk to serve outlanders on the far-distant bank of the Potomac. Tue. 5-14-46

We cannot help reflecting upon the upheaval that would ensue if the people of the District undertook to elect the mayor of Jackson, Miss., giving preference to the candidate which promised to impose the severest tyrannies on that city, which, after all, has only a small fraction of the population of Washington. What is happening in Mississippi is thus a good measure of the Capital's political degradation. We used to be only a football of politics in distant places. Now we have degenerated into a mat on which absentee politicians stamp their slimy boots at election time.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Richmond Times Dispatch

WASHINGTON—It remained for Senator Bilbo, Mississippi's gift to the nation, to add the final absurdity to the Communist tag when he called Representative Clare Boothe Luce and her publisher husband, Henry R. Luce, "Communistic."

That carries it as far as it can be carried. If Henry Luce is a Communist, then so are Cardinal Spellman and HerbertHoover. By definition, a Communist becomes anyone who disagrees with you, no matter how reactionary, narrow and bigoted your own views may be.

In that fantastic and absurd speech, Bilbo was not talking just to hear the sound of his own voice. He had a very deliberate motive. The speech was meant to be a document in his campaign for re-election. Times.

For even "The Man" must subject himself every six years to the will of the voters—a small proportion of the eligible voters of his native State. Milbo has gone back to Mississippi to campaign for the primary of July 2. The issue is the same as it was 75 years ago—the carpetbag, outside interference.

That is why Bilbo wanted to get his speech on the record. He wanted to convict hostile Northerners of trying to dictate to the people of Mississippi. That is why he bracketed such incongruous publications as Life, the New York Daily News, the New York Post, the Daily Worker and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

5-2-46

THEY are all in a conspiracy, these powerful instruments of Northern domination, to defeat the martyred, bleeding Bilbo. That's the theme "The Man" will sound in cruder and cruder form as he moves through rural Mississippi.

Many times in the past, this theme has been effective—and not only in the Deep South. Once, when Representative Dewey Short was running for re-election in his Ozark district in Missouri, he made effective use of an attack on him that appeared in the newspaper PM. These Communists, said Short, no mean demagogue himself, were trying to tell the God-fearing people of Missouri how to vote.

Indications are that Bilbo will be able to make potent use of this appeal in his current campaign. He is aiming, of course, at the Ku-Klux Klan element.

A large campaign fund is said to have been made available to him. The money is reported to come from construction firms in Mississippi.

The carpetbag appeal is, of course, the other side of the States' rights argument. Behind the barrier of States' rights, the little courthouse ring in Mississippi holds on to its privileges and power. It is a guarantee that Mississippi will be at the bottom or near the bottom of the lists that show how the States stand on health, literacy, schools, and so on.

That is the way the Bilbos want it. Change would threaten their supremacy. It is this legal barricade that makes the government of these United States so very difficult. 5-2-46

MISSISSIPPI will take favors from the Federal government, and plenty of favors, if no conditions are attached. A notorious example was the effort of certain Mississippi politicians to staff cotton mills with relief workers paid at relief rates with Federal money. That occurred in the '30s when the late Harry L. Hopkins, as relief administrator, was trying to eke out scanty relief funds. Hopkins tried repeatedly to break through the barricade to enforce certain standards. But he was not conspicuously successful.

The same construction companies reported to be subsidizing Bilbo's campaign got large sums from the Federal government. Bilbo has always been zealous at grabbing all the Federal patronage he could get.

Now something new is about to happen. Both the AFL and the CIO have announced large-scale organizing campaigns in the South. Even with labor divided and competing, this is bound to bring about great changes. It will certainly bring, too, bitter last-ditch resistance.

Within the South itself, changes are taking place. Many newspapers have turned on the Bilbo mentality. Public officials such as Governor Ellis Arnall, of Georgia, have opened the way to change. The Bilbos must know their day is nearly over. Perhaps that's why the Senator rushed off so frantically to start campaigning.

This Evening

Birmingham News

BILBO IS SCARED

The "Man" Bilbo made his opening campaign speech at Pontotoc, Miss., last Saturday. What he said there is not available to this columnist at the moment. We may take it for granted that nothing he said was relevant to the issue of whether he should be retained as United States senator. That, as a matter of fact, is a closed issue. Bilbo's record speaks, or should speak, more persuasively than anything he can say on the stump. Life recently quoted a consensus of Washington correspondents to the effect that he is the "worst" man in the Senate. That is a distinction which Mississippians should take away from Bilbo with the least possible delay. Birmingham Ala

He is an agitated man these days, which indicates that he does not feel secure. He is an agitated man, because his words belie his actions so plainly that any Mississippi redneck can see the difference. Thus, in advance of his Pontotoc speech, he offered the "conservative" estimate that he will receive approximately four-fifths of the votes to be cast in the July primary. But, if that is the outlook, why did he leave Washington so hastily to launch a two-months' campaign at home? If that is the case, why does he threaten to put the knife to Ross Collins' aspirations? Unmistakably, something is stirring among the folks which has thrown the "Man" into a panic. Mem. 5-6-46

That is the only explanation for the abrupt way in which he gave up the attack he started on the British loan bill. Only the most urgent pressure could have forced him to drop a cause so close to his heart. That was his grand opportunity to stand his ground against such "Communists" as Henry Luce, against the whole array of "furriners" who have had the audacity to pick on him. But he gave it up because, as he put it, some "peckerwoods" at home had to be dealt with. They evidently threaten him seriously. Which means that the people of Mississippi are turning against Bilbo.

It is to be hoped that this is really a revolt against vulgar benightedness. What other state than Mississippi can boast a trio like Bilbo, Rankin and Eastland, running neck-and-neck for the honor of being the leading anti-Semite and Negro-baiter in Congress? If there is a chance to get rid of Bilbo, every enlightened soul in his state should join the column marching against him. His defeat would be a spur to other Southern states to improve the quality of their national spokesmen. This is Mississippi's hour to lead the procession of decency. 5-6-46

"THAT MAN" BILBO

To the Editor of The News: News

Ever and anon the Birmingham daily newspapers cast a slur at Sen. Bilbo on account of his positive stand for white supremacy in the South, the most recent attacks springing from his effective opposition to the FEPA bill, a measure designed to mongrelize the white South, first industrially, then socially.

This newspaper hostility takes form in efforts to "show up" the Mississippi senator as a mental lightweight, without standing in his own state or influence in Washington—referring to him generally as "that man." Those newspaper editors have access to The Congressional Record, so let us examine that record in relation to the so-called "filibuster" against the FEPA bill and bring out some pertinent facts the editors have ignored.

When the New Mexican, Sen. Chavez (he admits having Mexican blood in his veins), gave notice of intention to introduce the FEP bill, he waited for weeks until the matter was forgotten; then, catching the Democrats napping, introduced the bill without immediate notice. Of all the senators from the South, Bilbo was the first to sense the nature of this threat to white supremacy, and immediately engaged Chavez in a colloquy that allowed him to take the floor from the sponsor, and he held it to the bitter end—bitter for Chavez! 5-3-46

Nor did Sen. Bilbo yield (except for a question that did not take him off the floor) to any except his own kind of senators—men like Russell, Bankhead, Hill, McMillan and others who were as determined to ward off this threat to mongrelize the South as was Bilbo himself. Every speech in the Senate against the FEP bill was made on Bilbo's time, portions of which were allotted to his colleagues as they desired to speak, the floor becoming his own again at their conclusion.

Sen. Bilbo's acumen in detecting the poison in the bill, his intelligent, tenacious handling of the parliamentary situation enveloping the measure give him the credit for holding the line for the white South against the onslaughts of an opposition that would mongrelize this section. This distinction places Sen. Bilbo, in the eyes of 100 per cent white Southerners, as a fit companion in honor with "Horatious at the Bridge" or the "Little Dutch Boy at the Leaking Dike." That honor will remain his and enshrine his memory in the hearts of the white people of the South long after the jimson weeds have gone to seed on the graves of the mulatto-minded editors who see nothing good in white supremacy—a policy that even met the approval of Abraham Lincoln in his broad Americanism. Future reference in their columns to Sen. Bilbo as "that man" should set the word "man" in capitals—MAN. Birmingham Ala.

WASHINGTON, Apr. 27.—Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo (D., Miss.) stood up in the Senate yesterday and lambasted "Papa and Mama Luce" — the Congresswoman and the publisher—for what he charged were "lies and misrepresentations" spread about him.

Cause of the rotund Senator's ire was an unflattering article in the March 11 issue of Life magazine, which characterized Bilbo as the "worst man in the Senate," and a brace of speeches by Rep. Clare Boothe Luce (R., Conn.) which attacked Bilbo's stand on the Negro question. June 4-28-46

He referred to Life as a "pink, mongrel magazine." He termed the article which discussed the qualifications of 33 Senators up for re-

"I am attacked because I believe in segregation. I don't believe in social equality for the Negro. I don't believe in mongrelization," Bilbo said.

Life's evaluation of Bilbo's political career read:

"Bilbo of Mississippi, Democrat, has been sent to jail, discredited as a complainant in a bribery scandal, voted by his own colleagues in the Mississippi State Legislature 'unfit to sit with honest, upright men in a respectable legislative body,' and yet retains popularity among the independent farmers. The reason: He plays on their prejudices about Wall St., Negroes, The North. His recent activity has been opposition to FEPC (Fair

Bilbo Given $25,000 By War Contractors

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

THE WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By Drew Pearson

Washington.

GNARLED, knotty-faced Senator Theodore Bilbo of Mississippi long has been known as the No. 1 rabble-rouser of the U. S. A. Few, however, have realized that he was also the No. 1 gouger of war contractors and had stacked up a neat little pile for himself as a result.

In the early days of war preparation, Senator Bilbo seemed to know his way around the War Department and was instrumental in getting several lucrative contracts for Mississippi friends—including Key Field at Meridian and Keesler Field at Biloxi. The Mississippi contractors who profited were chiefly Newton-Glenn of Hattiesburg and Morrissy-Knost of Pass Christian.

The latter firm got war contracts totaling $3,527,268.39 in 1943. Both firms were in on the Keesler Field construction at a total cost of $11,748,620. Their fixed-fee profit out of this was $265,000, part of it shared with the J. A. Jones Company of Charlotte, N. C.

What these gentlemen from Mississippi promised the Senator from Mississippi in return for his help in getting lush contracts is their secret. However, whatever they promised, they delivered a lot. And this column is now able to set forth in detail what they ponied up—some of it apparently in violation of criminal statutes which say that a member of Congress cannot receive a fee for lobbying on any matter pertaining to the Federal Government.

PONY No. 1—One of the first things the contractors ponied up for Senator Bilbo was an artificial lake, with an island in the middle, and a nice house built on the island. These were built by F. T. Newton of the Newton-Glenn Company and by Michael T. Morrissy of Morrissy-Knost, both profiting from Keesler Field at Biloxi.

Newton and Morrissy dug out Bilbo's lake originally at a cost to the U. S. taxpayer of $3,672.91. Reason the U. S. taxpayer was to be out of pocket was that Morrissy charged the expense of the lake up to one of his war contracts. Later, however, he changed it to an account receivable from Bilbo. Bilbo has never paid him, however, so perhaps will be deducted from income taxes as a bad debt, which means the taxpayer will foot most of the bill just the same.

Cost of Bilbo's house on the island, now called "Dream House No. 2," has not been ascertained. The men and equipment employed in digging the lake were being used on a war contract at that time.

HAVING fixed up the lake, island and dream house, Newton and Morrissy even went so far as to give their benefactor the furniture to equip his house. This was presented on Christmas Eve, 1941, the furniture costing $1,000. On top of this Morrissy gave Bilbo a $1,912 Cadillac.

Originally Morrissy deducted the cost of the car from his 1941 income tax return as a contribution, but later filed an amended return omitting this deduction.

Pony No. 2—In addition to the lake, dream house, automobile and furniture, the two contractors also ponied up $2,400 to Senator Bilbo on November 7, 1941. The money was split in two parts. F. T. Newton gave Bilbo $1,200, while D. L. Knost of the Morrissy-Knost Company also gave him $1,200. The money was handed over in Bilbo's office in Washington.

Pony No. 3—This was the biggest Bilbo windfall of all—totaling $25,000. It was paid under interesting if not peculiar circumstances. The highly profitable Keesler Field contract at Biloxi had been awarded to Bilbo's friends on June 13, 1941. Their various other cash payments and dream-house favors had come in the latter part of 1941. But meanwhile other war contracts were in the offing.

So, about one year later, on September 7, 1942, in the Royal Hotel in Jackson, Miss., F. T. Newton of the Newton-Glenn Company handed Benefactor Bilbo four checks totaling $25,000.

THREE checks were for $5,000 each, with one for $10,000, all of them checks of the Newton-Glenn Company but drawn against four different banks where the company kept accounts. On its books, the company charged this $25,000 expense to the cost of the war contracts which Senator Bilbo had assisted the company in obtaining.

Later, however, the war contractors apparently got scared and changed their books. Twenty thousand dollars was charged to the drawing accounts of the two partners, Newton and F. S. Glenn, as a debt to Bilbo. The remaining $5,000, however, was charged directly to the cost of a Government contract.

This in itself would appear to be evidence that Bilbo had violated the statute making it a crime for a Senator to obtain money in connection with any Federal Government matter.

When internal revenue agents questioned Mr. Newton about this he refused to make any statement. His partner, Glenn, however, said he had no knowledge of the payment until about two months after it was made, when Newton told him it was a contribution to the Wall Doxey Senatorial campaign. However, it is also illegal for a corporation to contribute to any political campaign.

Because of the $25,000 payment to Bilbo, Glenn later demanded dissolution of his partnership with Newton.

AFTER the checks for $25,000 were handed to Bilbo in the Royal Hotel in Jackson, Robert Gandy, one of Bilbo's henchmen, went out and cashed them, giving the Senator the $25,000 in currency. Later Gandy said he thought the money was spent in Doxey's primary campaign. However, both Doxey and his campaign manager, Lee D. Hall, together with Leland Speed, a member of Doxey's campaign finance committee, all said no such amount was expended.

Bilbo was operating separate headquarters for Doxey, but Ed Terry, Bilbo's former secretary, and A. B. Friend, who had charge of these headquarters, state that not more than $1,500 was expended through that headquarters. This would leave more than $20,000 to be accounted for.

The war-contract activities of the Senator from Mississippi were so multitudinous and so varied that not all can be told here. Another sensational chapter will be revealed by this columnist on the radio tomorrow—all of it going to show that the man who hurled foul names at minority Americans and who stymied important legislation by prolonged filibusters might better belong in jail than in the august Senate of the United States.

Columnist Enmeshes Bilbo in War Contract Scandals

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

Senate May Oust Exponent of Race Hatred on That Score or on Campaign Irregularities

WASHINGTON — (NNPA) — Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo (D., Miss.) who capitalizes on race and religious prejudices, is enmeshed in war contract scandals.

If these latest charges, in addition to charges that his nomination in the Mississippi Democratic primary of July 2 was tainted with fraud, duress and illegality, are proved, the Senate may oust him.

According to Drew Pearson, a syndicated columnist, Bilbo obtained large construction contracts for Mississippi construction firms in connection with Key Field at Meridian and Keesler Field at Bilexi.

Rewarded for Aid

In return, the contractors are said to have built for Bilbo an artificial lake, with an island in the middle, on which a fine house was constructed.

Besides, two contractors are said to have given Bilbo $2,400 on Nov. 7, 1941, and one of the contractors is said to have given him $25,000 in a Jackson, Miss., hotel on Sept. 7, 1942.

Intimidated Voters

Charges that Bilbo, last spring, carried on a vicious campaign designed to keep colored voters from casting ballots already are pending before the Senate Committees to Investigate Campaign Expenditures and on Elections and Privileges.

It was charged by one of his defeated opponents that had it not been for the suppression of colored votes in the Mississippi Democratic primary of July 2, the bigoted Senator would not have achieved nomination to the post,

Bilbo Says New York's Crimes Are Horrible

Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

'Worse Than Any' Laid to Klan

Wed 8-21-46

Washington, Aug. 20 (AP)—Senator Bilbo (D., Miss.) lashed back at Governor Thomas E. Dewey today with a statement that "There have been more horrible crimes committed by the organized gangsters of New York than were ever chargeable to the Ku Klux Klan."

Bilbo said he had read in the papers that "ex-presidential candidate Dewey" had pledged an A.F.L. convention at Rochester yesterday that "there will be no Bilboism" in New York while he is Governor.

Returns Compliment.

"I can return the compliment and extend the time," Bilbo declared. "There will be no Deweyism in Mississippi as long as I live.

"Deweyism to the people of my state means F.E.P.C., Negro social equality, intermarriage between whites and blacks, hoodlumism, gangsterism, rape, and the life of some poor Negro, on

Bilbo Is No Laughing Matter

Bilbo told a reporter he takes no stock in reports that an effort will be made to deny him a seat in the next Congress. He said such talk represents "agitation by a bunch of damn Communists."

Doesn't Fear Talk.

"While I haven't associated with the Ku Klux Klan in more than 35 years," the senator said, "my recollection is that the Klan has always stood for the American flag, constitutional Government and the American way of life."

The startling admission of Klan membership by Theodore Bilbo, Mississippi's 7 percent Senator, has caused little more than a ripple in anti-fascist America.

A Senator of the United States, sworn to uphold the "noble" principles of American democracy, boasted on a nation-wide radio hook-up that he holds his oath to a fascist body higher than American laws, its Constitution and its Bill of Rights! Such is his boast at a time when everyone knows that 14,000,000 Negro Americans are involved in the deepest political struggle for their very lives, below and above the Mason-Dixon line, facing the most vicious lynch terror drive in the history of the land.

Yet, up to the present moment, the UAW-CIO international board is alone among the great trade union bodies who have demanded action to impeach Bilbo! This is the same Bilbo who has repeatedly ranted in the vilest fascist manner against Italians, Jews, Puerto Ricans and organized labor—to say nothing of his "white supremacist" election incitements to violence against Negroes.

HOW CAN WE explain the indifference that civilized anti-fascist America and its great trade unions have shown to this open admission of Klan membership on Bilbo's part? By the fact that in our country the rotten "white supremacist" race theories, consciously nurtured by the American imperialists, have so long prevailed. 8-25-46

These "white supremacist" ideas and practices are today part and parcel of the technique required by "our" imperialists to brutalize the American people, the "better" to prepare them for an anti-Soviet atomic war for world conquest.

It has become almost axiomatic to expect periodic demonstration to the world of the unique American pogrom—lynching of Americans with black skins. But now, such lynchings and such "race supremacist" theories and practices have become the crass and boastful means through which a fascist system can be foisted on America. Hence, Bilbo's admis-

Newton and Morrissy dug out Bilbo's lake originally at a cost to the U. S. taxpayer of $3,672.91. Reason the U. S. taxpayer was to be out of pocket was that Morrissy charged the expense of the lake up to one of his war contracts. Later, however, he changed it to an account receivable from Bilbo. Bilbo has never paid him, however, so perhaps it will be deducted from income taxes as a bad debt, which means the taxpayer will foot most of the bill just the same.

Cost of Bilbo's house on the island, now called "Dream House No. 2," has not been ascertained. The men and equipment employed in digging the lake were being used on a war contract at that time.

HAVING fixed up the lake, island and dream house, Newton and Morrissy factor the furniture to equip his house. This was presented on Christmas Eve, 1941, the furniture costing $1,000. On top of this Morrissy gave Bilbo a $1,912 Cadillac.

Originally Morrissy deducted the cost of the car from his 1941 income tax return as a contribution, but later filed an amended return omitting this deduction.

Pony No. 2—In addition to the lake, dream house, automobile and furniture, the two contractors also ponied up $2,400 to Senator Bilbo on November 7, 1941. The money was split in two parts. F. T. Newton gave Bilbo $1,200, while D. L. Knost of the Morrissy-Knost Company also gave him $1,200. The money was handed over in Bilbo's office in Washington.

Pony No. 3—This was the biggest Bilbo windfall of all—totaling $25,000. It was paid under interesting if not peculiar circumstances. The highly profitable Keesler Field contract at Biloxi had been awarded to Bilbo's friends on June 13, 1941. Their various other cash payments and dream-house favors had come in the latter part of 1941. But meanwhile other war contracts were in the offing.

So, about one year later, on September 7, 1942, in the Royal Hotel in Jackson, Miss., F. T. Newton of the Newton-Glenn Company handed Benefactor Bilbo four checks totaling $25,000.

THREE checks were for $5,000 each, with one for $10,000, all of them checks of the Newton-Glenn Company but drawn against four different banks where the company kept accounts. On its books, the company charged this $25,000 expense to the cost of the war contracts which Senator Bilbo had assisted the company in obtaining.

Later, however, the war contractors apparently got scared and changed their books. Twenty thousand dollars was charged to the drawing accounts of the two partners, Newton and F. S. Glenn, as a debt to Bilbo. The remaining $5,000, however, was charged directly to the cost of a Government contract.

This in itself would appear to be evidence that Bilbo had violated the statute making it a crime for a Senator to obtain money in connection with any Federal Government matter.

When internal revenue agents questioned Mr. Newton about this he refused to make any statement. His partner, Glenn, however, said he had no knowledge of the payment until about two months after it was made, when Newton told him it was a contribution to the Wall Doxey Senatorial campaign. However, it is also illegal for a corporation to contribute to any political campaign.

Because of the $25,000 payment to Bilbo, Glenn later demanded dissolution of his partnership with Newton.

AFTER the checks for $25,000 were handed to Bilbo in the Royal Hotel in Jackson, Robert Gandy, one of Bilbo's henchmen, went out and cashed them, giving the Senator the $25,000 in currency. Later Gandy said he thought the money was spent in Doxey's primary campaign. However, both Doxey and his campaign manager, Lee D. Hall, together with Leland Speed, a member of Doxey's campaign finance committee, all said no such amount was expended.

Bilbo was operating separate headquarters for Doxey, but Ed Terry, Bilbo's former secretary, and A. B. Friend, who had charge of these headquarters, state that not more than $1,500 was expended through that headquarters. This would leave more than $20,000 to be accounted for.

The war-contract activities of the Senator from Mississippi were so multitudinous and so varied that not all can be told here. Another sensational chapter will be revealed by this columnist on the radio tomorrow—all of it going to show that the man who hurled foul names at minority Americans and who stymied important legislation by prolonged filibusters might better belong in jail than in the august Senate of the United States.

Columnist Enmeshes Bilbo in War Contract Scandals

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

Senate May Oust Exponent of Race Hatred on That Score or on Campaign Irregularities

Sat. 11-2-46

WASHINGTON — (NNPA) — Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo (D., Miss.) who capitalizes on race and religious prejudices, is enmeshed in war contract scandals.

If these latest charges, in addition to charges that his nomination in the Mississippi Democratic primary of July 2 was tainted with fraud, duress and illegality, are proved, the Senate may oust him.

According to Drew Pearson, a syndicated columnist, Bilbo obtained large construction contracts for Mississippi construction firms in connection with Key Field at Meridian and Keesler Field at Bilexi.

Rewarded for Aid

In return, the contractors are said to have built for Bilbo an artificial lake, with an island in the middle, on which a fine house was constructed.

Besides, two contractors are said to have given Bilbo $2,400 on Nov. 7, 1941, and one of the contractors is said to have given him $25,000 in a Jackson, Miss., hotel on Sept. 7, 1942.

Intimidated Voters

Charges that Bilbo, last spring, carried on a vicious campaign designed to keep colored voters from casting ballots already are pending before the Senate Committees to Investigate Campaign Expenditures and on Elections and Privileges.

It was charged by one of his defeated opponents that had it not been for the suppression of colored votes in the Mississippi Democratic primary of July 2, the big-voted Senator would not have achieved nomination to the post.

Bilbo Says New York's Crimes Are Horrible

Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

'Worse Than Any' Laid to Klan

Wed 8-21-46

Washington, Aug. 20 (AP)—Senator Bilbo (D., Miss.) lashed back at Governor Thomas E. Dewey today with a statement that "There have been more horrible crimes committed by the organized gangsters of New York than were ever chargeable to the Ku Klux Klan."

Bilbo said he had read in the papers that "ex-presidential candidate Dewey" had pledged an A.F.L. convention at Rochester yesterday that "there will be no Bilboism" in New York while he is Governor.

Returns Compliment.

"I can return the compliment and extend the time," Bilbo declared. "There will be no Deweyism in Mississippi as long as I live.

"Deweyism to the people of my state means F.E.P.C., Negro social equality, intermarriage between whites and blacks, hoodlumism, gangsterism, rape, and the life of some poor Negro, on an average of one a night, year-round, snuffed out in blackest Harlem."

Bilbo noted that Dewey had promised that the Ku Klux Klan "or any group like it" will not hold a meeting in New York as long as he is Governor.

Doesn't Fear Talk.

"While I haven't associated with the Ku Klux Klan in more than 35 years," the senator said, "my recollection is that the Klan has always stood for the American flag, constitutional Government and the American way of life."

Bilbo Is No Laughing Matter

The startling admission of Klan membership by Theodore Bilbo, Mississippi's 7 percent Senator, has caused little more than a ripple in anti-fascist America.

A Senator of the United States, sworn to uphold the "noble" principles of American democracy, boasted on a nation-wide radio hook-up that he holds his oath to a fascist body higher than American laws, its Constitution and its Bill of Rights! Such is his boast at a time when everyone knows that 14,000,000 Negro Americans are involved in the deepest political struggle for their very lives, below and above the Mason-Dixon line, facing the most vicious lynch terror drive in the history of the land.

Yet, up to the present moment, the UAW-CIO international board is alone among the great trade union bodies who have demanded action to impeach Bilbo! This is the same Bilbo who has repeatedly ranted in the vilest fascist manner against Italians, Jews, Puerto Ricans and organized labor —to say nothing of his "white supremacist" election incitements to violence against Negroes.

HOW CAN WE explain the indifference that civilized anti-fascist America and its great trade unions have shown to this open admission of Klan membership on in our country the rotten "white atomic war for world conquest.

It has become almost axiomatic to expect periodic demonstration to the world of the unique American pogrom—lynching of Americans with black skins. But now, supremacist" race theories, consciously nurtured by the American imperialists, have so long prevailed.

These "white supremacist" ideas such lynchings and such "race and practices are today part and supremacist" theories and practices are the technique required tices have become the crass and parcel of the brutalize boastful means through which a by "our" imperialists to brutalize boastful means through which a the American people, the "better" fascist system can be foisted on the rest of Soviet America. Hence, Bilbo's admission of Klan membership is tantamount to the early boastful admission of Hitler's Bund and Stormtroopers who pillaged and raped Germany; who terrorized and murdered 6,000,000 European Jews; destroyed labor unions and other democratic institutions; brought death and destruction and terror to millions.

LET IT NOT be forgotten that a German paperhanger, once the laughing stock of the world, moved more and more openly, to strengthen his power, until he destroyed the democratic liberties of a whole nation, in his aim to achieve world conquest. Nor should it be forgotten that our South, with its backward feudalist practices and conditions; its systematic denial of even the most elementary civil and democratic rights to 10,000,000 Negroes and poor whites, is fertile ground—even as was Germany—for nurturing the fierce fascist terror, spawned by the German Junker landlord class and aided by the most modern scientific techniques of German imperialism.

FOR BILBO IS NO LAUGHING STOCK! 8-25-46

It has long been the technique of the American capitalist press and its leaders to present the Bilbos, Eastlands and Rankins as "amusing" figures. So long as this continues unchallenged, just so long will such fascist characters utilize every inch of immunity from the serious measures required by the body politic against their polluting sores.

Bilbo counts on this, as does the imperialist bourgeoisie and its mouthpiece. New York, N.Y.

The imperialists count on open familiarity with the Bilbonic plague to bread a special kind of contempt—a light, inactive one.

EVEN OUR OWN paper—leading anti-fascist paper of the country—recently reflected this light manner of dealing with Bilbo and allowed a "cuckoo's egg" to creep into our pages. "At least he's out in the open," stated a caption under Bilbo's picture, which accompanied an excellent piece by our popular columnist, Mike Gold, on lynch terror against Negroes! Does it make it "less" dangerous, or more so—that "he's out in the open?" It's unnecessary to belabor the point. The Worker

Suffice it to state that, while we learn from our self-criticism and take rapid steps to self-correction, we likewise stress the same for all anti-fascists—especially labor. For much of this thinking has served to court inaction—on this issue, based on lack of fundamental appraisal of the anti-Negro drive. This we shall analyze in tomorrow's article.

WMCA Puts Bilbo on Carpet

The Senate Campaign Investigating Committee, soon to look into anti-Negro charges against Sen. Bilbo, would do well to read The Gentleman from Mississippi, a radio drama presented last night on WMCA.

This play revealed many striking things about the past of this "people's representative":

¶ In 1909 when he was a member of the State Senate of Mississippi, Bilbo was accused of accepting a bribe of $645 to change his vote. When this charge was aired, the State Senate passed a resolution that "Theodore Gilmore Bilbo is unfit to sit with honest, upright men in a respectable legislaive body."

¶ In 1912, Bilbo was elected lieutenant-governor of the State. His first act, as chairman of the State Senate, was to have the resolution against him stricken from the records.

¶ In 1923, in a civilian lawsuit, Bilbo was cited for contempt of court, fined $100 and given 30 days in jail. Bilbo asked the judge to see him. When the judge came to the jail, Bilbo was not there. He served his time in the sheriff's house, the sheriff and his family moving out to accommodate him. Bilbo's meals were brought in to him by the President of the University of Mississippi.

¶ In 1928 Bilbo was elected governor of the state. His opponent had once called out the National Guard to save a Negro from being lynched. Bilbo hinted no Negro was worth calling out the National Guard to protect. That got him Ku Klux Klan support.

¶ During his four years as governor, Bilbo replaced 179 members of the faculties of state universities and colleges. As a result, all educational institutions in the state of Mississippi were banned from the Southern Association of Colleges.

When Bilbo left the governorship in 1932, the state was in the red—$11,500,000. There was cash on hand in the Treasury to the tune of $1326.27.

"That's all right," said Bilbo. "I'm broke, too."

During his governorship he said, "What Mississippi needs is . . . a Mussolini!" In 1929 a mob burned a Negro at the stake. Petitions for an investigation were rejected by Bilbo. "I have neither the time nor the money to investigate 2000 people," he said bluntly.

The Gentleman from Mississippi, written by Ira Marion for WMCA's New World A-Coming series, told of Bilbo's election to the United State's Senate in 1934. In his campaign he called his opponent "a cross between a hyena and a mongrel . . . begotten in a Negro graveyard at midnight, suckled by a sow and educated by a fool."

The judge who committed Bilbo to jail in 1923 was called before a Senate Committee in 1934. He told of his conversation with Bilbo thus:

"Bilbo gave me an account of his pecan orchard, how the pecan nuts are gathered every Fall by little Negroes; how he had to muzzle them while they were at work, search them after they had finished, as they would eat a pound a day, and carry off another in their pockets. And pecans at that time were worth nearly $1 a pound."

In 1938, Washington correspondents voted Bilbo the second most useless man in Washington. They failed to nominate a first choice.

The Gentleman from Mississippi cited these statements by Bilbo, made during his stay in the Senate:

¶ "The Germans appreciate the importance of race values. They understand that racial improvement is the greatest asset any country can have." Wed.-10-9-46

¶ "Let's send the Negroes in this country back to Africa."

¶ "Some Catholics in this country are lined up with some rabbis trying to bring racial equality to the Negroes."

¶ "The best way to keep the Negro from voting is visit him the night before."

¶ "I'm not interested in the N gro vote. The Negro doesn't vot Mississippi and he's not goi vote."

Bilbo Faces Loss of 'Mayor' Post

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — There is hope that Theodore G Bilbo may be ousted as chairman of the Senate committee for the District when Congress convenes. A recent congressional act reducing the number of committees in the Senate from 30 to 15 (including the District Committee) will result in a strict enforcement of the seniority rule for chairmanships.

The 15 senior Democratic seniors—assuming the party remains in power—will have first claim to chairmanships. As the list now stands, Biblo is 20th in the line of continuous service. He has been there since January 1935.

The Reorganization act also limits each Senator to membership on just two committees, not including the District Committee, and Bilbo is a member of the rules, pensions, library, commerce and agriculture committees.

Sat. 9-14-46

Bilbo's only chance to keep his District Committee chairmanship is for some other Senator with seniority to renounce his claim and this keen observers feel they will not do.

Bilbo acquired the title "mayor" of the district after assuming the chairmanship when two other Senators with seniority refused. But with the elimination of these committies, the senior Senators will fall back to other committees which they steered clear of in the past in order to retain chairmanships. Bilbo Flayed in Drama Presented Over N.Y. Radio

Voted 'Most Useless' by Washington Newsmen

Unfit to Sit With Honest Men in Legislature

NEW YORK—Among the many facts renewed about the character of Bilbo in the recent radio drama "The Gentleman from Mississippi," here over WMCA on Oct. 8 was that in 1938 Washington correspondents voted him the most useless man in Washington.

In 1909 when as a member of the State legislature, he accepted a bribe to change his vote, the State Senate passed a resolution saying, "Bilbo is unfit to sit with honest men in a respectable legislature," the script reported.

During his governership, he is quoted as saying, "What Mississippi needs is a Mussolini." When a mob lynched a non-white citizen and an investigation was demanded, the senator said, "I have neither the time nor money to investigate 2,000 people."

Cite Statements

"The Gentleman From Mississippi" cited these statements by Bilbo "The Germans appreciate the importance of race values. They understand that racial improvement is the greatest asset to any country."

According to the play, Bilbo was arrested for contempt of court in a civilian lawsuit in 1923, fined $100 and given 30 days in jail. He served his time in the sheriff's house, the sheriff and his family moving out to accommodate him.

Fired Faculty Members

During his four years as governor of Mississippi, Bilbo replaced 171 members of the faculty of State Universities and as a result the Southern Association of Colleges dropped them from their roll.

He is quoted as saying, "Some Catholics in this country are lined up with some rabbis trying to bring racial equality to the colored people. I am not interested in the colored vote. The colored man doesn't vote in Mississippi and he's not going to vote."

'Negro Loves You,' Memphis Cleric Tells Mr. Bilbo

Defender Chicago, Ill. Sat. 9-14-46

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—"The Negro loves you," race baiting Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo of Mississippi was informed recently by Rev. G. A. Long, well known Baptist cleric of this city.

This startling bit of information that must have surprised even Bilbo, was contained in a letter addressed to the Senator by Reverend Long who is corresponding secretary-treasurer of the Evangelical Board of the National Baptist Convention of America.

The self ordained spokesman of the race had some other things to say in his letter that was a plea to the senator to lay off "the helpless Negro."

"Negroes are not seeking social equality," Reverend Long wrote. In concluding, the minister asked apparently with all sincerity: "Why not spend your time promoting better relations between the whites and the blacks?"

Bilbo's response to Reverend Long's letter has not yet been received.

He Says Don't Mix Races; I'd Rather, Says Bilbo's 'Niece'

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 11-9-46

DETROIT—(ANP)—Apparently indifferent to her "uncle's" theory that racial mixing leads to mongrelization, a white woman, said to be living with a colored man here, last week contended that she is the niece of Sen. Theodore Bilbo of Msisissippi, the infamous race baiter.

According to her story which has evoked much laughter and caustic comment, the woman, Mrs. Pearl F. Albright, says that her mother is Bilbo's sister.

One comment stated, "If true, Bilbo, who constantly suffers from a severe case of running off at the mouth in the Senate and in his home State, has not done such a good job after all with his white supremacy rabble rousing."

Shades of Chanel No. 5, Bilbo says Negro women stink!

Los Angeles California

Los Angeles Tribune

In an exchange of correspondence with a recently discharged Navy man, now living in Los Angeles, Theodore G. Bilbo, maniacal senator from Mississippi, sank to a new low when he declared that Negro women stink and advised white men who like the odor "to smell on."

Cal

Bilbo's letter, written to Guy H. Raner, Jr., of 551 Norwich drive, Los Angeles, accused Raner of having a "sweetie who has the odoriferous odor of the jungle."

1-14-46

"Of course, if you like it, smell on," Bilbo admonished Raner.

Raner began the correspondence with a letter castigating Bilbo for bringing shame upon the state of Mississippi, where the ex-serviceman was born. He attended the University of Mississippi for three years, Raner told the senator, adding, "but I have been lucky enough to have had the opportunity of living in 8 other states in the South, North, East and West, and while in the Navy to live for varying periods in Brazil and Hawaii and also to have attended two other Universities.

"It is naturally of great concern to me, not only that you should be doing this (spreading the racial ideas which caused the destruction of the Germans), but that there should be people in Mississippi who apparently think the same as you do to elect you to such a high position," Raner wrote.

Continuing, Raner said, "I wonder if the people of Mississippi realize . . . that merely mentioning the fact that one is from Mississippi now casts a social stigma in many circles, as though one would say, 'I am a Nazi' . . . and puts that person on the defensive to prove he is a self-respecting member of society, in spite of having lived in Mississippi."

1-14-46

In his reply, Bilbo, spewing his usual venom, advised his fellow stateman to "quit associating with Negroes, mongrels, half-breeds, communists, etc."

Expressing pity for the young man whom he described as "the type that would bring about the mongrelization of the races," Bilbo thanked Raner for writing him because his letter "shows just what funny types make up this world."

Bilbo Has Opposition For His Senate Seat

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 14—(AP)—Former Rep. Ross A. Collins has announced his candidacy for the U. S. Senate seat now held by Sen. Theo Bilbo in the Democratic primary of July 2.

Bilbo already has announced his candidacy for reelection.

Collins, who left the House in 1943 after 18 years service there from the Fifth Mississippi District, said in a statement that he "realized fully the vile wrath and denunciation that this announcement will provoke from the incumbent." He said he would pursue a course "to acquaint the people with all the facts."

"Our country is facing a tremendous challenge," Collins' statement said. "We hold the torch and the people of the world are looking to us to lead them from the ways of selfishness and destruction to the glory of permanent and God-given peace."

Industrial development in this country must go forward without interruption, Collins said, and each state must share in its prosperity.

The Times

MISSISSIPPI Just Two More Times

New York, N.Y.

Mississippi's Senator Theodore Gilmore ("The Man") Bilbo, still champion of white supremacy at 68, had an important communiqué for the waiting world. He smoothed his bright red necktie, adjusted the diamond horseshoe stickpin that he bought for $92.50 at a 1916 auction. Then he announced:

1-7-46

"After long meditation, cogitation and rumination, I have definitely made up my mind to run for re-election [to a third term]. . . . I am ready to wage the most strenuous fight of my life in an effort to defeat the Fair Employment Practices Commission, the anti-poll tax bill, the anti-lynching bill and the $4 billion loan to England."

Thereupon he threw open his campaign headquarters in Jackson's Royal Hotel, which gained his undying gratitude by extending credit when he was down on his luck in 1932. As one of 1946's first avowed candidates, he gladly spread his political philosophy on the record.

Universal military training? No, sir! Boys of 18 and 19 should not be taken out of school; they are "the seed corn of the Republic and the leaders of tomorrow." Besides, "if you draft Negro boys into the army, give them three good meals a day, a good uniform and let them shoot craps and drink liquor around the barracks for a year, they won't be worth a tinker's damn thereafter."

1-7-46

Those pickets around his Washington apartment? Humph! "When those poor scums read my new book—entitled Separation or Mongrelization, Take Your Choice—I'll bet they'll throw up a picket line a mile long. . . 1-4-46

"Those poor scums say they are going to picket my place every day that I sit in the Senate. I told them the other day they might as well get ready for 13 more years, because I have one more year to serve under my present term, and I intend to run for re-election two more times."

Negro Actor Requests Expulsion Of Bilbo

Montgomery Advertiser 2-1-46

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—(AP)—Canada Lee, Negro actor, petitioned New York's senators today to move for the expulsion from the Senate of Senator Bilbo (D), Mississippi, for his part in the filibuster against a Fair Employment Practices Commission.

A petition urging the expulsion and signed, Lee said, by 25,000 New York residents, was to be presented by him to Senator Mead (D), New York, later today.

The plea, specifically urging Bilbo's removal on the ground that his conduct is "unbecoming to a senator," also was addressed to Senator Wagner (D), New York, absent from his office because of illness.

2-1-46

"Senator Bilbo's entrance into the present filibuster against FEPC further confirms the fact that his presence in our Congress is a disservice to American institutions," Lee told a news conference.

Bilbo's 'Prejudices' Criticized By Savage In Congress Review

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5 — (AP) — Rep. Savage (D., Wash.) criticized Sen. Bilbo (D., Miss.) Friday for what he called Bilbo's "fantastic prejudices" and said he hoped Mississippi would "see to it that he (Bilbo) does not have a further opportunity to spread his mischief after the next election."

Savage included his criticism in a review of the work of the last Congress which he said had done a splendid job on international affairs but had failed the people "shamefully" on housing and other domestic problems.

1-5-46

"The Congress appeared to feel that its rights had been trampled upon every time the president asked for progressive legislation," Savage said in his statement.

"I cannot blame the people of the country for being discouraged with such failures of Congress, but I hope they understand that many of us have been trying to enact a liberal, progressive American program but have been overwhelmed by reactionary forces in and out of Congress, spearheaded by tories like Sen. Bilbo, of Mississippi.

"Bilbo, himself . . . has little actual influence, but he does serve as a figurehead and inspiration for other more subtle and more dangerous reactionaries who are encouraged by the fact that Bilbo can do and say the things he does and still remain in Congress. . . .

"The people of this nation cannot expect to get a progressive program from Congress when they continue to return these reactionaries to office year after year.

"It is these reactionary elements who cry out the loudest for free elections in Europe and yet continue to deny their own people at home the right to vote by blocking the anti-poll tax bill. This affects all of America and is the business of all the American people."

A Mississippi Critic Of Senator Bilbo

An Editorial from the Pascagoula, Miss., Chronicle-Star.

ALMOST every time Senator Bilbo opens his mouth in Washington, he damages the name and prestige of the State of Mississippi where it really counts, and that is in the opinions and the feelings of the well-meaning people of America, wherever they may be.

His "dago" and "kike" letters were a disgrace and an outrage. He is going to find out that this kind of business actually turns the stomach of many a young Mississippi service man now returning.

They are going to remember "dagoes" like John Basilone of the Marine Corps, the Medal of Honor winner, who went back to die on Okinawa from a safe job in Washington. And they are going to remember the Jewish star symbols among the Christian crosses which show where the "kikes" are buried. Even civilians can see them. Just look at the pictures of the war graveyards that come out in news magazines.

Our Mississippi boys have not been out there fighting for the worst in our national character, but for the best, knowing we have not always lived up to it, but hoping at least that it would grow stronger, here in Mississippi and in the nation. Bilbo represents and speaks for the worst that is in us—for the residue of suspicion, meanness, unfairness, that exists to some degree in every human heart, and which the good instincts are constantly struggling to control and put down.

Bilbo is going to find out to his surprise the simple human decency that exists among the remote country people whose remoteness he depends on to bamboozle them with his agitation of the race question.

The war has filled these farmers with some sense of the ideals for which it was fought, and their returning sons are going to help them understand. We have actually talked to enough boys who feel this way, and enough of their fathers, to give rise to our belief that Bilbo in 1946 may very likely get the decisive political beating he has deserved since his corrupt administrations as Governor.

We are going to have the gratitude and congratulations of the rest of the South the day we retire this bad actor. Those are going to be the feelings of many of Mississippi's service men, who from the point of vantage of foreign service were able to see for the first time the real smallness and meanness of this man who professed to be the friend of the common man; and who learned for the first time the general contempt in which he is held, and the disgrace he has brought to Mississippi in the eyes of the world.

Bilbo Replies Savagely To Criticism By Savage

Poplarville, Miss., Jan. 4 (AP)—Senator Bilbo (D., Miss.) replied today to an attack upon him by Representative Savage (D., Wash.) with the declaration that Savage ought to go wash his mouth," and a boast that as long as he was in the Senate "carpetbaggers" would "never invade the South again."

Savage, reviewing the work of the past Congress, had said that efforts to enact a "liberal, progressive American program," had been "overwhelmed by reactionary forces in and out of Congress, spearheaded by tories like Senator Bilbo of Mississippi."

"Tell his to go wash his mouth," said Bilbo, at his home here, "It's dirty."

"Never Heard of Him."

"I have no reply to make to a man so inconsequential in the House that after being in Washington 11 years I have never even heard of him.

"If he thinks he can run the affairs of the South he is without doubt the biggest fool in Congress. He had better clean up his own front yard before he undertakes to dictate to the South."

Savage, in his Washington statement, criticized what he called Bilbo's "fantastic prejudices" and said he hoped Mississippi would "see to it that he does not have a further opportunity to spread his mischief after the next election."

People...

Mississippi's Senator Bilbo warms his hands before a fire in his 27-room 'dream house.' An orchid and black tile bathroom for the Senator is not the least of the house's 'advantages.'

Negro Actor Asks Expulsion Of Bilbo

Richmond, Va.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31—(AP)—Canada Lee, Negro actor, petitioned New York's Senators today to move for the expulsion from the Senate of Senator Bilbo (D-Miss.) for his part in the filibuster against a fair employment practices commission. 2-1-46

A petition urging the expulsion and signed, Lee said, by 25,000 New York City residents, was to be presented by him to Senator Mead (D-N. Y.) later today.

The plea, specifically urging Bilbo's removal on the ground that his conduct is "unbecoming to a Senator," also was addressed to Senator Wagner (D-NY), absent from his office because of illness.

"Senator Bilbo's entrance into the present filibuster against FEPC further confirms the fact that his presence in our Congress is a disservice to American institutions," Lee told a news conference.

"He has served notice," the actor continued, "that he cares nothing for the principle of majority rule provided by the Constitution which all Senators are sworn to defend. 2-1-46

"Enforce Majority Will"

"The citizens of New York call upon the Senate to meet this challenge, to enforce the will of the Senate majority, and enact the permanent fair employment practices commission.

"The national leaders of the Republican and Democratic parties have a responsibility to the American people to restore majority rule to the Senate."

The petition, circulated by the Citizens Commitee of the Upper West Side, New York City, stated:

"Bilbo has no place in a Congress which is pledged to extend democracy throughout the nation and the world. All his actions are against democracy.

"Bilbo is spreading racial and religious prejudice through his slanders against Italians, Negroes, Jews and Catholics. He attacks not only these but every democratic-minded person in the country. His rabid outbursts incite violence and terror in New York City, in the State and nation.

"Bilbo should be brought up on charges in the Senate for conduct unbecoming a member of Congress and expelled from that body." 2-1-46

"To make the worse appear the better cause."

Rev. Herald Ala

True Bilbo, of Mississippi, to make the better cause appear the worse. The Lord gave him to us in the South for humility's sake, I suspect, to make us wonder if we are right even when we are. This section has certain interests so delicate and special that federal interfering is intolerable. They are so vital in our estimate that when interference is proposed there is every right to the filibuster and any other measure or maneuver that may prevent it. But from the Potomac to the Rio Grande—including the banks of the Mississippi—our sense of great right in great cause must be dimmed when Bilbo takes the floor and we see ourselves as he makes us be seen.

* * * 2-4-46

Probably Mr. Bilbo is assuring his reelection to the Senate with his part against the FEPC bill. He is on the right side and it is a dramatic issue and Mississippians naturally thrill to championship by their own man. But Mississippians might note that other men of the South a million miles from Bilbo in manner, point of view, self-control, sincerity and light, are in this fight, too. All is not Bilbo that filibusters at Washington. Let us pray that our Mississippi brothers will so observe.

* * *

If Mr. Bilbo undertakes to filibuster against the loan to Britain, as he says he will, here's hoping and believing his fellow Southerners will let him know the filibuster is a rare and special weapon, not for use whenever he doesn't like anything. Here's hoping, too, that a South which derives more from Britain, depends more on Britain, has more kinship with Britain, than any other part of this country, is not going to contribute to defeat of this loan on which England's future place as a great power may depend. In our American business as a great power we need Britain as one, too. In fact, we can't get along without her. 2-4-46

Dear Editor:

Former Congressman Ross Collins, of Mississippi, has charged that Sen. Bilbo has paid only a total of $72 in income taxes to the Federal Government from 1913 to 1946. Collins ought to know that there's a clothing shortage and that it takes a lot of money to buy bedsheets to wear when you go out burning crosses. 2-30-46

Bilbo Faces Roughhouse Brawl

Sunday-Star Herald 2-3-46

By Rod Sparrow
AP Newsfeature Writer

POPLARVILLE, MISS.—Senator Theo. G. Bilbo, of the red necktie and diamond stickpin, the unabashed prejudices and uninhibited tongue, faces a roughhouse fight this year to hold the United States Senate chair he has occupied for Mississippi since 1934.

Mississippi, which takes its campaign oratory straight, has no reason to disagree with Bilbo opponents, who are predicting "a nasty campaign" preceding the July Democratic primary.

Former Representative Ross A. Collins, latest opponent to announce, did so with the remarking that "I realize fully the wrath and denunciation that this announcement will provoke from the incumbent."

Collins, who was a Congressman for 18 years, is confident he is capable of standing up to the Bilbo broadsides and firing back.

issue, he knows exactly what he is doing, that he doesn't figure he's hurting himself with the followers who drop in to talk when he comes home to sit on the porch of his "dream house."

But within the limits of what is considered debatable in a campaign, his opponents expect to find plenty of Mississippi campaign rules are no rules ammunition. There are personalities here against dealing in personalities of candidates. Politics here are based upon men ditionally are based upon men and their followings rather than upon machines.

Bilbo's personality, and its appeal to large numbers of voters, perhaps can best be understood against the background of the State. He has created for himself, there is something about him—"I realize it easier to talk to them."

For instance, the "dream house." It is a handsome, spacious, brick mansion, which reminds one at first glance of a Colonial style mansion, which deals with the Negro question.

The second book will be entitled "Mississippi Politics," and begins to get the feel of his audience of crinoline titled "Mississippi Politics," and begins to get the feel of his audiences as he becomes more vigorous.

Other announced opponents are Douglas Smith, of Jackson, a comparative newcomer to politics, and Lieutenant-Commander Nelson Levings, USNR, of Gulfport, who has said he would file formally after his release from its active duty. Levings is a lawyer, with property and connections on the gulf coast and in the "delta" cotton empire in the northwest part of the State.

The campaign may not be along the lines the rest of the country might expect from reading of the reactions Bilbo has inspired in Washington. All politically wise Mississippians respect the fact that Bilbo's tactics have kept him in public office almost continuously since 1915.

Mississippi's Bilbonic, Eastland and Rankin Plague

Sat 2-23-46

BECAUSE the State of Mississippi, from time immemorial, has been afflicted with the Bilbonic, Eastland and Rankin Plagues, it has come in for more than its share of unfavorable publicity. It is most unfortunate that this is true inasmuch as there MUST undoubtedly be some good inhabitants of the commonwealth who are immune to the virus of racial prejudice.

MR. HINTON

But it is axiomatic that the good in some instances, must indeed suffer along with the bad, and the Commonwealth of Mississippi is a case in point.

But let's "give the devil his due," even if, as in this instance, his name happens to be Mississippi. For at last something good has come out of the state. Messrs. Bilbo, Rankin and Eastland won't like this, but the leading role in this little drama is played by a Negro Mississippian whose existence the "Unholy Three" probably won't even acknowledge.

There is a slim chance, however, that they've heard of Mound Bayou, a half-century-old all-Negro community in their beloved Mississippi, even if Dr. T. R. M. Howard is a perfect stranger to them. At that, it might do the trio good to make his acquaintance since the good doctor is doing his level best to remove from his state the stigma of the Bilbonic, Eastland and Rankin Plagues.

* * * *

Among other things, Dr. Howard is head of Mound Bayou's Taborian Hospital. The "other things" referred to include the new Good Will Park, a $40,000 recreational development, just one of a number of things Negroes of Mound Bayou are doing to enhance better living conditions under the leadership of the civic-minded young surgeon.

For Negro Mississippians to have a swimming pool of their own is something new under the sun, to say nothing of a recreation park where one may play tennis or croquet, build sand houses, watch a dozen monkeys perform, or hear a parrot talk.

How it all came about is told by Dr. Howard:

"Last fall, Mrs. Howard and I were having a brooder house built. After the sand and gravel had been brought in for the floor, each day the children from the community would come to play in the sand. But when I or some of the workmen would go toward the sand pile, the children would stop their play and stand with bowed heads as though they had committed an awful crime. Sat 2-23-46

"The thought came to me that the children of our community should have a sand pile where they could play and not have to feel a crime had been committed because they did so.

Dr. Howard's idea in founding the Park was to make living in Mississippi so good for Negroes that they would not feel the need to migrate to other sections in order to live fully.

"Since being in Mississippi," he continued, "I have talked to thousands of Negro youths, and have noted that the overwhelming majority of them state that they can only see hope for themselves in other parts of our nation. I have absolute faith in Mississippi and its tremendous possibilities. I want the Negro youth of Mississippi to see the green pastures of opportunity right here in Mississippi.

"There is nothing wrong with Mississippi that hard work, an improved educational system, a practical application of the religion of Jesus Christ, and real Jeffersonian democracy cannot solve."

* * * *

I am intrigued by the term "real Jeffersonian Democracy," which Dr. Howard is doing his best to exemplify. And by the same token, it is quite evident that Messrs. Bilbo, Eastland and Rankin haven't the slightest conception of its meaning.

But there is abundant hope, even for Mississippi, as long as time-tested liberals like author Thomas Sancton, with whom I had a pleasant chat about a year ago at a meeting of the Committee of Editors and Writers of the South in Atlanta, Ga., and others of his ilk, call the commonwealth home.

And there is hope, too, in the fact that no less than three of Bilbo's fellow Mississippians have dared to challenge "The Man" to mortal combat at the polls in the July Democratic primary in a try for the Senate seat he has held since 1934.

Congress-Inspired

Dear Editor:

On the night of Feb. 13 in Sunnyside, L. I., the plate-glass windows of the store occupied by the Russian Relief were smeared in red paint with the word Jude, the Star of David, the hammer and sickle symbol, and the Swastika.

The neighbors were thoroughly aroused. Within 24 hours, several hundred of them turned out to a meeting and, determined to see that it does not happen again, they organized as the Citizens Emergency Committee.

It was the feeling of this meeting that this latest outrage was, in good part, inspired by the recent shameful outbursts in Congress against the Jewish people. We therefore urged our Congressmen to challenge all such insulting remarks made in the Congressional chambers. We urged this because we believe vigorous and steadfast opposition on the part of the Congressmen to the un-American speeches and conduct of the Rankins and Bilbos will go far toward discouraging the subversive forces at home.

Nothing is more despicable than to hear a representative of the people clearly show his prejudice toward a particular group.

The sooner guys like Rankin are "kicked out" of Congress, the sooner the country will begin to approach a democracy.

POLITICAL NOTES

Time Chicago, Ill.

"Buttinsky Damyankees . . ."

Outside Mississippi, their names were a byword and a hissing. But if any outsiders thought that national contempt could defeat ugly little Theodore Gilmore ("The Man") Bilbo, 68, or frenetic John E. Rankin, 64, in Mississippi's Democratic primary, they were ignorant of Mississippi—and the South.

Last week, the returns were in, and the most sinister buffoons in the Congress of the U.S. were re-elected. Despite the scandal that has marked his 38-year political career, "The Man" had beaten four opponents to win a third Senate term by a 3,824 majority (fewer than 200,000 of Mississippi's 632,500 whites over 21 voted). Natty, ranting, John Rankin, who had not bothered to stump his district, was returned to the House for the 14th time.

Those who lost are happy too, for they have the satisfaction of knowing that Walter Winchell and a lot of his ilk failed to impress Mississippians . . . from without: BUTTINSKY DAMYANKEES OF NORTH, EAST, PLUS C.I.O., FAIL TO STOP STORMY PETREL.

For those outsiders who wondered what the answer was, Oliver Emmerich of the McComb, Miss. Enterprise-Journal, who had fought Bilbo on his editorial page, out." Headline on his editorial: had an illuminating one. Said he: "Those individuals who won with Bilbo are happy.

Senator Claghorn—Magnolia Cum Laude

Times Dispatch

SOMEBODY predicted recently that Senator Beauregard Claghorn — the radio character, that is—would soon fade from view because there aren't enough gags expressing his fervent admiration for the South to keep him going indefinitely. But this statesman who never looks at a compass because it points to the North, who picks his teeth only with Southern pine, who refuses to visit the Yankee Stadium, and who wears only Norfolk jackets, is going strong. Indeed, when we tuned him in, as usual, on Sunday evening, he was going stronger than ever. Richmond, Va.

"When Ah went to college in the Deep South," boomed the Senator, "Ah was voted the member of the senior class most likely to secede. Ah was graduated magnolia cum laude." There was also a rather priceless college yell which we were unable to grasp in its entirety, but which contained something about "black-eyed peas" and "Confederacies" (rhyming with one another), and it came to a stirring climax in "Hit that line—MASON and DIXON, that is!" Tues 4-30-46

All of which is highly diverting. Claghorn is really in a class by himself. As we said in an editorial on March 22, "all this is amusing, certainly, to Southerners, who know what nonsense it is." We also said at another point that CLAGHORN "is a laughable cuss, surely." But wurrah, wurrah! CONGRESSMAN HENRY D. LARCADE, JR., of Louisiana, somehow got hold of an abbreviated version of the editorial, which omitted the two paragraphs containing our complimentary references to the Senator. Not only so, but he read the truncated version into the Congressional Record. Then PM, of New York, carried a story based on the Record. The result, as our readers may have noticed, is that we have beeen getting letters from such places as Los Angeles, Brooklyn, Hartford, etc., etc., belaboring us for not having a sense of humor and for making an "attack" on Senator Claghorn for the purpose of diverting attention from BILBO, RANKIN and other ornaments of Southern statesmanship!

It seems almost futile to try and straighten out so many misconceptions. In the first place, the original editorial was not intended as a serious discussion of anything. It was written more in the nature of a divertissement, both for the writer and, it was hoped, for the reader. It did express the hope, in somewhat facetious language, that Northerners would not get the idea that all Southerners went around "roaring in the Claghorn manner," and that we would not all be written down as "nitwits and foghorns like Senator Claghorn."

Obviously the Senator is a caricature, one of the most delightful caricatures we have ever encountered, and he is probably more fully appreciated in Dixie than anywhere else. Some have seen in him an effective antidote to such clowns as BILBO and RANKIN, but we are unable to take him that seriously. He is simply the archetype of the professional Southerner, without any of the professional Southerner's disagreeable characteristics — the julep-sipping, seegar-smoking colonel in broad brimmed black hat, who knows that one Southerner can lick 10 Yankees, raised to the Nth degree.

In this chaotic postwar world, torn with strife and threatened with atomic bombs, Senator Claghorn is like a refreshing breeze, a Dixie breeze, that is.

Miss. Publisher Says Voters Share Bias of Bilbo, Rankin

Balto. American

Baltimore, Md.

NEW YORK.—As advocates of racial prejudice and class hatreds, Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo and Congressman John Rankin are representative of Mississippi's voting majority, an analysis by a native son reveals in the May issue of Salute, new veterans' magazine and civilian successor to the famed army magazine Yank. 5-11-46

The writer, Hodding Carter, Greenville, Miss., publisher and former officer is charge of Yank's Middle East Bureau in Cairo, Egypt, pulls no punches, but warns that it would be "dangerously misleading to present Rankin and Bilbo as ignorant, violent men—and nothing more." 5-11-46

Conflict Feared

The article says that to know Bilbo and Rankin better, one must know what Mississippi and its voters are like and why.

"In Mississippi," Carter says, "the man with a foreign name and alien features is suspected, together with Catholicism, inquisitive Yankees and higher education for colored people:" and "a very real expectation and fear of imminent racial conflict exists "among even the more liberal white Southerners." 5-11-46

This conflict is blamed on "the Southern white demagogues on the one side, and, on the other, the colored and white spokesman for the colored race who make proposals or demands presently impossible for Southern acceptance."

MISSISSIPPI'S TWIN STATESMEN HAVE GROWN

The Nation New York, N.Y. Sat. 11-23-46

so used to playing on the wrong side of the aisle in Congress that it took more than a week for them to discover that, like Democrats everywhere else, they were on the losing end of the affair of November 5. That pertinent fact has now been driven home to them by two arresting incidents. First, the Republican steering committee has decided that it will challenge the right of Senator Bilbo to take the oath when Congress convenes in January. Charges that he intimidated Negro voters in the primary campaign and took a toll in graft from war contractors will then be referred to the Rules Committee. Whereas a two-thirds' vote would be required to oust him once the oath were taken, a simple majority is all that is required to keep him from taking his seat in the first instance—and the Republicans, perhaps with an eye on the Negro vote in 1948, apparently intend to use their newly won majority for that purpose. The second blow of the week for the Mississippi coalitionists came in the form of a slap at John Rankin by J. Parnell Thomas, which is news of the dog-bites-dog variety. Mr. Thomas, who is slated to become chairman of the Committee on Un-American Activities when the Republicans take over, condemned the "star-chamber proceedings" in which Rankin, sitting as a tyrannical one-man subcommittee, subjected that very distinguished scientist, Dr. Harlow Shapley, to his usual bullying tactics. When Dr. Shapley very properly resisted this invasion of his rights as a citizen, Rankin threatened to cite him with contempt of Congress. But this time the Mississippian overshot the mark and, finding even his usual supporters joining his critics, was forced to back down.

Mississippi's Gift To The Nation

Mississippi's second greatest statesman, Congr. Rankin, has scared himself half to death. He's found a couple of Russian boogey-men. One is hiding in Oak Ridge. The other meets with Sen. McMahon's atomic control committee. If Rankin has his way, he'll save the country from them both. His committee on un-American activities is on the alert. Too bad the FBI didn't get there first. If only Hoover depended on tips from Rankin!

The McMahon bill is now before the House, and the committee members discussing it there seem to be in a great dither. Congr. May, who has another slight worry on his mind, says he thought he was doing what the Army wanted when he demanded that at least one member of the permanent commission be a military man. Maybe he forgot that the commander in chief, the secretary of war, the secretary of the navy and the chief of staff all agreed on civilian control as the best policy. There are so many things that May would like to forget that his memory must play him embarrassing tricks these days.

Sen. Millikin and Sen. Hart, an ex-admiral, are on the McMahon committee. They've had a new experience. They've been called fellow travelers. By whom? You'll never guess. By, of all people, Mrs. Luce. Had those gentlemen lived to be 100, they never could have expected that sort of attack. Well, boys, live and learn.

But, as you might suppose, that shoutin' Mississippian, that lover of American rights, that protector of white supremacy—Rankin—has made the most noise. His stooge, Ernie Adamson, an investigator for the un-American committee, is rushing back to Washington from Oak Ridge with the dope. He's found out that some of the scientists there have been in contact with foreign powers. Maybe he's just heard of the Physical Review which carries learned articles on nuclear physics and is read all over Europe, including, presumably, Russia. It makes no difference to Rankin that the one body in the world most likely to know what's going on in Oak Ridge, the Society of Oak Ridge Scientists and Engineers, has sent a telegram to Speaker Rayburn charging that Rankin and his friends are "maliciously trying to mislead their fellow congressmen." If the charges have the slightest bit of truth to them, says the telegram, then "obviously military control is no solution and a change must be made, since military control has always existed in Oak Ridge." But Rankin is a wise man and knows best. He wants an Army man on the commission because he trusts the Army; he never heard, he says, of a traitor in the Army. Is it possible that Mississippi has never heard of Benedict Arnold?

But the situation is too serious for jocular treatment, really. The un-American committee hasn't yet proved to sensible citizens that it's worth what it costs. If, instead of looking for Communists under scientists' beds, it spent a little of its time and money looking for Fascists under a sheet, it would do more good. But Rankin ignores the re-emergence of the K. K. K. as a factor in American life. Is it because it's too much of a factor in his own life? Most of us see far less danger to the world in McMahon's bill than we do in the mouthings of a little old man from Mississippi.

Rankin, Unhappy at Vet Report, Asks for Another

P.M. New York Wed. 3-13-46

By WILBUR H. BALDINGER
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Mar. 13—Rep. John E. Rankin (D., Miss.), the tireless tick from Tupelo, started all over again today to try to get his unruly House Veterans Committee to say what he wants it to say against charges that patients have been mistreated in veterans' hospitals.

The shock-haired little poll-taxer, losing an intra-committee attempt to blame abuse of the patients on "conscientious objectors and Negro troops" assigned to Veterans Administration hospitals, said he would name a new subcommittee to prepare a new report on last year's investigation of VA facilities.

The committee headed by Rankin turned down a subcommittee report submitted by Rep. John S. Gibson (D., Ga.). It contained some critical passages which pained Rankin, but ended up with non-sequitur praise for VA policies and practices under the former administration of Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, for whom Rankin has been a chief advocate.

Explaining that the committee felt Gibson's report was "too detailed," Rankin said yesterday the new subcommittee would work out "more of a general statement of what we found out" about such VA charges as those documented in PM by Albert Deutsch in a series of stories last year.

As drafted by Gibson, the first findings said that Army assignment of COs and Negroes to duty at VA hospitals "has caused some mistreatment and maltreatment of patients." Wed. 3-13-46

The subcommittee at the same time recommended wide reforms in hospital administration and said the VA should make periodic undercover investigations of its neuropsychiatric facilities.

Such Rankin opponents on the committee as Rep. William J. Green, Jr. (D., Pa.), and Rep. Leo F. Rayfiel (D., N. Y.) objected to the Gibson group's findings as too uncritical. And they did not accept the proposition that blame for hospital brutality should be traced to COs and Negro attendants instead of to the supervisory VA staff under Hines.

It was expected that Rankin would now try to stack his new subcommittee so that its report would be a boiling-down of charges and findings to fit into a bucket of whitewash. In this process, embarrassing details could be eliminated.

MR. RANKIN GROWS RANKER

John Rankin, of Mississippi, who seems to try his best to represent violently the very worst thinking of the Magnolia State, does not mellow with time. He still throws emotional fits when people say or do things that displease him—and Mr. Rankin is hardly ever pleased. Birmingham News

When Jimmy Roosevelt recently was quoted as saying, "The other side can have Bilbo and Rankin, of Mississippi," the Mississippi gadfly came back with a hot one across the back fence. He said, "Poor Jimmy, he may not know it, but he is no longer in a position to speak for the Democratic party. He has now joined the Communists." Ala.

This bad-tempered reply from Congressman Rankin probably did not bother Jimmy Roosevelt. But it came in bad grace from the little mop-haired demagogue from Mississippi, who spends more time on the Republican side of the House than with the Democrats.

Rankin is used by the Republican leadership in the Congress. And he seems to get some of his ideas from people that the Republican chieftains would disown. There is a gross similarity between some of Rankin's wild tirades and the hate poisons that are being spread by some people who would foment all sorts of religious and racial strife.

Rankin belongs to Mississippi—but he does damage to the whole South. 3-25-46

For a decade or so the South was without a storming voice that made Southerners shiver in their boots in sheer embarrassment. But Rankin emerged as the whirlwind with a Southern accent. Monday.

It is too bad he wasn't born in Minnesota or Maine. Then we Southerners could laugh at his antics rather than trying to close our eyes.—Gadsden Times.

Probe The KKK? 'Nonsense,' Says Poll-Taxer Rankin

Bulletin

WASHINGTON—If Rep. John Rankin (D., Miss.) is right, a Congressional appointed committee departed this week on a "nonsensical" mission to Georgia.

Investigators for the House un-American Activities Committee were scheduled to leave early in the week for on-the-spot study of the Ku Klux Klan's menacing revival in the deep South. Queried last week, red-baiting Committee Chairman Rankin hailed investigation of the CIO-PAC and Communist activity, but termed an inquiry on the "hate everybody" Kluxers as nonsense.

Rep. Landis (R., Ind.) cautiously commented that "some complaints" received by the committee resulted in the investigators being dispatched for a preliminary study to "see what's behind the revival." Chicago

Vote With Poll-Taxer in Attacks on Liberal Colleagues

By MILTON MURRAY
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—An "open for business under new management" sign has not yet been hung on the Republican Party headquarters. But for three hours yesterday Republican Representatives rallied to the leadership of anti-Negro, anti-Semitic John E. Rankin, Tupelo, Miss., Democrat.

By a series of thunderous votes Communists" and anyone else who and in almost a solid bloc, the Re- criticizes the Un-American Activi- publicans enabled Rankin to rule ties Committee. the roost for an attack upon Rep. Adolph J. Sabath (D., Ill.), "the head of conflict with Speaker Sam Rayburn. At another he was shouting challenges interpreted as "the verge of blows" at Majority Leader John W. McCormack.

Highlight of the fray came when Rankin failed by only two votes to apply a parliamentary throttle to the Representative he had attacked, a gag that would have prevented Sabath from giving either defense or reply.

Roll Call Switch

Republicans choked a little on this one. When a roll call was demanded that put them on record, Congress. The blank check power

49 abandoned Rankin—nine switching their votes after the roll had been called.

While Rankin raged and the House raveled its way through a series of parliamentary snarls, the top-priority Housing Bill intended to provide homes for 2,700,000 American families—most veterans'—was sidetracked.

Rankin bounced into action after Rep. Helen Gahagan Douglas (D., Cal.) had given a one-minute speech warning that conduct of the Un-American Activities Committee is undermining confidence in voted the Committee is being used, Mrs. Douglas said, "to attack innocent people, to villify them, frighten and intimidate them."

Mrs. Douglas brought up the charge that Chester J. Niklas, a recently-added Committee investigator, had warned Prof. Clyde Miller of Teachers' College, Columbia University:

"You should tell your Jewish friends that the Jews in Germany stuck their necks out too far and Hitler took good care of them and that the same thing will happen here unless they watch their step."

Starts Rankin Off

At mention of the pet committee he fathered on the opening day of Congress with a parliamentary trick, Rankin whooped to his feet with a demand for an hour to reply to "personal attacks."

Ruled out of order by Speaker Rayburn, Rankin appealed the decision of the chair. When Majority Leader McCormack moved to table the Rankin appeal, Rankin frothed at McCormack that he would "take you on anytime." McCormack accepted the invitation but the contest was kept at the verbal stage.

Rankin withdrew his appeal from Rayburn's decision but took the floor on a point of order that Sabath had violated House rules by insertion into the Congressional

Rep. John E. Rankin
Who's Un-American?

Record of Feb. 19 of a criticism of the Un-American Activities Committee.

Rankin accused Sabath of following the Communist Party "line" in deleting the word "activities" from the committee title and in accusing it of "witch-hunting."

Crying that the Committee was seeking "to preserve the Nation and protect the American way of life," Rankin moved that Sabath's criticism be stricken from the Record.

A motion to table—which would have shut off the Un-American Committee discussion and permitted the House to proceed with its scheduled business—was twice voted down. Thur. 2-28-46

Rankin then carried on with his blast that the critics of the Committee were all following the Communist line. He defended Niklas and argued that Professor Miller was allied with Communists.

Defending the sounding board offered Gerald L. K. Smith, Rankin said the Committee would "cross-examine any witness that comes before it." And when a Congressman is to be investigated "that member will be notified in advance," he promised.

Rankin did not indicate which members of Congress the Committee may have in mind to investigate.

Defending the Committee's attempt to get the scripts of unfriendly radio commentators, Rankin jumped off onto one of his favorite subjects. Ignoring any record established by Hitler, Rankin shouted:

"Walter Winchell is doing the Jews more harm than any man who ever lived."

(Because of his Congressional immunity, Rankin cannot be sued for such statements.)

As he finished his attack, Rankin, a master parliamentarian, moved the previous question. This motion, if carried, would have ended all debate, preventing Sabath or anyone else from speaking.

With Rankin pointing his finger at the proper time, Republicans rose with only six exceptions to support his gag motion which carried, 139 to 80. But on the following roll call putting House members on record, the gag was beaten, 185 to 161, after 12 members had switched from "yes" or "present" to "no."

Sabath was applauded when he said he had stricken voluntarily from the Record any parts of his criticism that could have been taken as personal by Committee members. He stuck to his complaints against agents of the Committee and charged that Rankin has led the Committee away from "investigation of really subversive elements."

The entire brawl collapsed when Rankin then withdrew his motion to delete Sabath's letter from the Record. Three hours behind schedule the House took up the question of housing. (See Story, Page [redacted])

An Alien! His Folks Came Here in 1634

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

By LOUISE MITCHELL Sat 4-13-46

There are congratulatory wires, thank you wires, singing wires and sad news wires. But Ernie Adamson, fingerman for the Rankin Un-American Activities Committee, yesterday received a wire that thumbs its nose at the recipient.

It was sent by Augustus L. Richards of Remsen, N. Y. who told Adamson that he sent a $5 donation to the National Committee to Combat Anti-Semitism and now the bloodhounds can come and get him.

Remsen, a retired Wall Street lawyer whose ancestors, he said, were foreigners who came here in 1634, told Adamson that he hoped Congress would repudiate the Rankin committee. He submitted a series of questions and answers on himself and his family to assist Adamson, who is snooping to find the financial backer of the said National Committee to Combat Anti-Semitism.

"Hearing that you are in search of all sources of financing of National Committee to Combat Anti-Semitism," Remsen wired, "beg to advise I have just sent a check for $5 to that organization, together with petitions to Congress signed by self and family on form number 25131, praying that body repudiate your committee by passing the Dickstein House Concurrent Resolution 89 condemning the un-American activities you are engaged in."

"Glad any time to submit myself to examination by your committee," stated the wire, "but to save you trouble and expense of coming up here will answer questionnaire by wire, as follows:" Sat 4-13-46

Rankin Funds

An Editorial in The Washington Post

It cannot be doubted that behind the House grant of a $75,000 appropriation to the Committee on Un-American Activities there lies a sincere apprehension about the efforts of Communists to subvert the American political system. The apprehension being so genuine, the House ought to have found a better instrument for dealing with the problem. The Wood group has had status as a standing committee for nearly a year and a half and has given the House exactly nothing for its money. There has come out of its investigations not a single legislative recommendation which the House has seen fit to approve. There has not even been anything which could be called a report. There have been wild announcements of intention to probe subversion in Hollywood, in UNRRA, in OPA— and all of them have come to naught. There have been endless hearings and smearings—but not a single constructive proposal, not a single indictment, not even an exposure of anything that hasn't been common gossip for a decade. 6-1-46

If the House really wants an investigation of un-American activities, it will have to begin by finding investigators who have some understanding of what is and what is not un-American. The present group takes a somewhat oversimplified view of the problem. Its settled policy seems to be, as Representative Celler put it, that "anyone who disagrees with the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. Rankin) is a Communist or un-American." Mr. Rankin himself offered proof of this appraisal in the course of the debate on Friday. "I hold in my hand," he said, "a letter written to a man and his wife in New York by a communistic group asking them to raise $50,000 to send down into my district to defeat me for reelection to the Congress." A desire to see Mr. Rankin retired from Congress seems to us less than proof positive of Communist affiliation. B'ham, Ala.

In giving the Wood Committee a new appropriation, the House has done something a good deal more serious than the patent dissipation of public funds which is entailed. It has acted to nourish an incubus fastened upon its own back. Its own prestige cannot fail to suffer so long as the committee's antics are carried on in its name.

Hill Takes Seat As Lone Negro In Jersey Assembly

The Journal & Guide
Norfolk Va
1-19-46

Staff Correspondence

TRENTON, N. J.—The lone Negro member of the State Legislature, Dr. J. O. Hill, was sworn in here last week. The Assemblyman, a Newark physician and civic leader, was presented several floral pieces by numerous well-wishers from Essex County, the county-seat of Newark.

Dr. Hill who sponsored the anti-discrimination legislation which created the State FEPC (Division Against Discrimination of the Department of Education), is a native of South Carolina, and a graduate of S. C. State College and Meharry Medical College.

In addition to his political chores, Assemblyman Hill is affiliated with the Bethany Baptist Church, Newark, where he is president of the Men's 400 Club; member of the executive board of the Newark YMCA and for several years has served as chairman of the board of management to the Court St. Branch Y.—VW. 1-12-46

Vernon Riddick, 7th N.Y. Negro Judge, Sworn In

Chicago Defender, The 2-9-46

NEW YORK—Vernon G. Riddick, New York's second Negro magistrate, was sworn into office Friday by Mayor William O'Dwyer at City Hall.

The 48-year-old lawyer said after the brief ceremony that he realized the responsibility he had been given and would do everything in his power to deserve it.

A former lieutenant-colonel in the Army, Riddick begins a ten-year ten at a yearly salary of $10,000. He was the new administration's first major Negro appointment.

Seventh Negro Serving

Riddick is the seventh Negro now serving in the city's courts. In 1930 Charles E. Toney and James S. Watson were elected to the Municipal Court and share the distinction of being the first colored judges. They were both reelected in 1940 for another ten years.

Justice Myles A. Paige, of Special Sessions, was appointed by former Mayor F. H. LaGuardia in 1936. The first Negro women to serve the courts is Justice Jane M. Bolin, of the Court of Domestic Relations, who was appointed in 1939 for 10 years. Justice Hubert T. Delany also serves this court.

Highest paid Negro judge is Justice Francis E. Rivers. He was elected in 1943 to the Manhattan City Court at a salary of $17,500 per year.

The new magistrate was an assistant attorney general for New York from 1937 until he joined the Army in 1941. He was in the Central Pacific from 1942 to 1944 as commanding officer of the 359th Anti-Aircraft Battalion. A member of the 389th National Guard before the war, Riddick rose to the rank of lieutenant-colonel before he was placed on inactive duty on Nov. 2, 1944. 2-9-46

Riddick is a graduate of Howard University and Howard Law School and the senior partner of the law firm of Riddick, Doles and Gill at 209 W. 125th st. During the recent mayoralty campaign, he served as executive director of the Independent Citizens Committee for O'Dwyer in Harlem.

President of the Carver Democratic Club, Riddick lives with his wife and two children, Gail, six years old, and Vernon C. Jr., six months old, at 40 Morningside ave. He is a native of Portsmouth, Va.

NY Pastor Named School Trustee

Afro American, Baltimore, Md. Sat 5-11-46

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. — The Rev. Clarence M. Long, pastor of Bethesda Baptist Church, last week became the first non-white person to be appointed to the local board of education, when Mayor Stanley W. Church named him to succeed Edward D. Loughman, who requested retirement. The new school trustee was among six prominent colored representatives whose names were presented for consideration by the Mayor's Interracial Committee. The others were:

Dr. William A. Burton, physician; Dr. Uriel S. Gunthorpe, dentist; Thurman O. Hunt, grocery store manager; Dr. Frederick W. Pierce, physician; and Dr. Leon W. Scott, dentist.

Mrs. Minton Almost In

Another strong candidate for the position, backed by an independent group and supported unofficially by the P-TA of Lincoln

REV. CLARENCE M. LONG,

School, was Mrs. Bertram F. Minton, recommended because of her consistent work on behalf of colored children in the city.

While not proposed by the Interracial Committee, it was understood that the fact that three women are already members of the board, militated against Mrs. Minton's appointment, although she was among those favorably considered.

Mayor's Tribute

Mayor Church said of the Rev. Mr. Long:

"He is ably qualified for this position. His experience in several states in education, I believe, will contribute much to the continued efficiency of our school system.

"His distinguished service as a member of the War Council, where he served with Lee J. Eastman, has proven his value to the community, and his unflagging interest in civic affairs."

Fruitful Career

The Rev. Mr. Long, a native of Victoria, Tex., attended and was formerly an instructor in printing at Bishop College, Marshall, Tex., and was an honor student at Upsala Swedish College in East Orange, N.J., being the first non-white graduate there.

He studied theology at Virginia Union University, Richmond; received his master's degree from Drew University in New Jersey; and his doctorate in Sacred Theology in 1929 from Virginia Union.

The Rev. Mr. Long formerly pastored historic Bank Street Baptist Church in Norfolk, Va., where he was active in civic and interracial affairs.

Champions Good Schools

He was a member of the citizens' committee which fought successfully for construction of the $500,000 Booker T. Washington High School, and was their spokesman when the request was made to the Norfolk city council.

In Charlottesville, Va., he led a consistent drive while pastor of the First Baptist Church there for erection of a high school which bore fruit after he was called elsewhere.

He pastored also in Hampton, Va., East Orange, N.J., and St. Louis, in all of which cities he played a stellar role for better schools, and worked zealously with the courts and juvenile officers to reduce juvenile crime and delinquency. Sat 5-11-46

The Rev. Mr. Long is current secretary and former president of the Interracial Inter-denominational Ministers' Alliance here, and member of the Mayor's Interracial Committee. He is the father of three grown children.

Dewey's Chain Gang Politics

Let's Face It

By Max Gordon

Daily Worker, New York 5-24-46

LORENZO REED, escaped prisoner, is back on a Florida chain gang, condemned to years of hard labor, torture and possible murder because of the political ambitions of the Governor of New York.

Reed is not the first Negro victim of Southern barbarism to be sacrificed to those ambitions. In 1948, despite powerful popular protest, George Burrows was sent back to Mississippi by Gov. Dewey.

Last year, James Corley was returned to South Carolina after Dewey had signed extradition papers. A hundred years ago, New Yorkers did not behave that way. They were sending escaped Negro slaves not back to the South, but on to Canada and freedom, despite oppressive federal laws that made a state FEPC. The proposal, in the form of a couple of bills, languished in committee.

Members of the commission, including Dr. Channing H. Tobias, at that time Negro member of the national board of the YMCA and politax had a prominent Republican, made desperate efforts to communicate with the Governor by phone, wire and direct visit, to get him to move out the bill. They found every avenue barred to them.

In the final days of the legislative session, when public clamor for the bill had become terrific and it was about to be forced onto the floor, Dewey sent a message up proposing another commission to "study" the proposals of his own commission. That killed action for 1944. Fri. 5-24-46

Dr. Tobias and eight other members of the Governor's commission thereupon resigned. Later, Dr. Tobias revealed that at the very time the commission had submitted the bill to the Legislature, Lt. Gov. Joe R. Hanley was in the South lining up Republican convention delegates to support Dewey, and the North Carolina Republican Committee had on that day voted unanimously for a "Draft Dewey" movement.

Dr. Tobias charged flatly that Dewey did nothing to back the bills of his own commission "because he did not care to incur the displeasure of the Southern Republican organizations."

THE GOP may not have many voters down South but it does have a good-sized group of delegates to the GOP national convention who frequently vote as a bloc.

No one can doubt that to the great mass of New Yorkers today, the Governor's actions in returning Negroes to the hell of political "justice" are revolting. Where they had a chance to fight, as in the Burrows case, there was a strong protest movement. Usually, however, the Governor tries to slip the dirty job over quickly and quietly, hoping no one will learn about it. The newly-organized Civil Rights Congress got wind of the Reed case at the last minute. Fri 5-24-46

WHAT makes Dewey behave this way? The answer can be found in a sensational story of two years ago, when the first battle for a state FEPC took place in the Legislature.

A state anti-discrimination commission, set up by Gov. Lehman, and continued, with new personnel, by Gov. Dewey, had proposed the Legislature early in 1944 that it establish a state FEPC.

Dewey is still in the race for the GOP Presidential nomination and still wants the backing of southern GOP delegations, as Burrows and Reed have good reason to know.

Fri. 5-24-46

The same political motives are behind Dewey's refusal to intervene in the Freeport case. There can be no excuse for a Governor not to investigate publicly when a Negro GI in uniform and two of his brothers, one a vet, are shot down by a cop, as in Freeport. When the Army and Navy give the soldier and his wounded sailor brother a clean bill of health, the failure to act is even more shocking.

But Freeport is in Nassau County, which gave Dewey perhaps the largest plurality in the nation in 1944. It is THE Republican stronghold in the state and District Attorney James N. Gehrig, the man Dewey is covering, is a power in county politics. Nassau County boss, J. Russell Sprague, is a close pal of Gehrig and, as the Republican National Committeeman from New York, is the man Dewey is counting on to put him over in 1948 as he did in 1944. Fri. 5-24-46

So Dewey is keeping hands off Freeport.

Politics is also the reason Dewey has put the wraps on the state FEPC. It was passed in 1945 after the greatest popular movement behind a legislative measure the state has ever seen. That pressure could not be denied, especially after the outburst of popular anger following Dewey's 1944 betrayal.

But its passage got Dewey into trouble with some of his Republican and big business cronies. It made things tougher for him as far as the Southern GOP is concerned. He is now engaged in impressing his reactionary associates, who provide the political base for his operations, that the measure is really harmless when administered by the "proper" people with the "right perspective."

N.Y. Welfare Appointment Regarded as Mayor's Best

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md

Sat. 8-24-46

Dr. Heningburg, on Job Three Months, Aids in Handling 100,000 Persons on Relief Roll

DR. ALPHONSE HENINGBURG

NEW YORK — When Mayor O'Dwyer named Dr. Alphonse Heningburg, a lecturer in the School of Education of New York University, to be secretary to the Department of Welfare, approval everywhere signified that this appointment was the Mayor's best since he took office.

No other local person is better suited to handle this important job in a department which is known as one of the most liberal and democratic, where colored employees are fully integrated into all positions and classifications.

$6,000 a Year Job

Dr. Heningburg's term, which began May 31, is four years and carries an annual salary of $6,000. Upon taking office, he fell heir to a backlog of two years' work that needed immediate attention.

"One of the striking facts about the department's work is that the New Yorker, generally, is uninformed on the tremendously important minorities which constitute our present relief load," he said.

"It is extremely difficult for the average citizen to realize that we are working with more than 100,000 persons, all of whom have a definite claim on our services and sympathies."

Specific Duties

Dr. Heningburg's work is threefold: he is in charge of staff and community relations, and represents the department in negotiations to obtain co-operation of other city departments and social agencies in handling community situations.

As director of staff relations, he holds sessions with representatives of grievance committees with relation to problems of the staff.

In the field of community relations, he explained: "It is part of our job to see that relief clients are not exploited, to keep the community informed of what is going on, so that when prices go up, we can state our case for more money for our clients."

He described schemes used against relief clients, and efforts made by the office to rout the would-be-exploiters. For instance, chiselers tell those on relief that if they will give them $5 they'll "fix things" so that they will receive $10 in relief appropriations.

1st Secretary

The Department of Welfare never had a secretary before Dr. Heningburg, the work being handled by a staff relations director.

He has a secretarial staff of three persons. Miss Ella Scott, who is in charge of his office, is a veteran of seven years of experience in the depatment and highly efficient in her work.

The course which Dr. Heningburg offers at New York University is called "Racial Contributions to American Culture." Indicative of his interest in community services is his relationship to the following organizations:

Member of the advisory board of the East-West Association; board member of the People's Institute on Applied Religion, and advisory board member of the One-World Book Club.

Native Alabaman

Dr. Heningburg is 44. He was born in Whistler, Ala. He is a graduate of Tuskegee Institute, Grinnell College, an honor graduate of the University of Paris, and holds the degree of doctor of philosophy in educational administration from New York University.

Prior to his present position, Dr. Heningburg served as personnel director of Tuskegee, headed Department of Education at North Carolina College and was affiliated with the National Urban League.

Hobbies are cabinet making, gardening, fishing and camping. He is married and lives at 112-27 176th St., St. Albans, Queens, with his wife, Willa Mae, and his two sons, Gustav, 16, and Michael, 8.

Dewey Attacks N.Y. Democrats

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md

Hits FEPC Pledge, Denounces Bilbo

Sat. 9-14-46

ENDORSES IRVING

Democrats Reaffirm Civil Rights Program

ALBANY, N.Y. (NNPA) — Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, Republican candidate to succeed himself, on Sept. 5 attacked the plank respecting a fair employment practices commission in the Democratic platform and denounced Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo (Dem., Miss.)

Quoting the Democratic declaration in favor of a FEPC, the Governor said that a similar pledge was made in the 1944 national platform and that nothing was done about it.

With respect to Bilbo, he asserted, "They condemn Bilbo but he is theirs and they can't get rid of him."

Liberal Platform Pledges

The platform adopted by the Democratic State Convention, Sept. 5, contained planks pledging the State Democratic party, to support President Truman's "progressive" domestic legislative program.

It also pledged the party to work for the enactment of a permanent fair employment practices act, a Federal antilynching law and abolition of the poll tax throughout the United States.

Bilbo's Elimination Pledged

The Democratic convention also went on record as favoring the dissolution of "the Dies-Wood-Rankin" un-American activities committee, and in the same paragraph added:

"We denounce Bilbo and Bilboism and will support measures legally to eliminate Bilbo from Federal office and influence."

With respect to civil rights, the Democratic platform reaffirmed determination in all its forms.

Governor Dewey's endorsement of Assemblyman Irving M. Ives, sponsor of the Ives-Quinn anti-discrimination law, as candidate for U.S. Senator was approved by the Republican State Convention.

Sen. Jams M. Mead was chosen as candidate for Governor by the Democrats; and former-Gov. Herbert H. Lehman was nominated as candidate for the U.S. Senate.

N.Y. Vet Gets Probation Post

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

NEW YORK—Joseph R. Dorsey, former captain in the South Pacific, recently was sworn in here as an assistant deputy chief probation officer. All others who have held that post in this city have been white.

Mr. Dorsey, who has been attached to the Probation Department since 1936, was born in Omaha, Neb., and was graduated from Western Reserve University. He was connected with the State Division of Parole for two years.

He spent five years in the Army and at the time of his discharge last year, was assistant to the Commanding General of the Transportation Corp at the Port of Embarkation in San Francisco.

New Deal for Harlem

The News and Courier Tues. 1-7-47

The New York Herald Tribune commends this sanctimonious statement of Mayor O'Dwyer:

"Mississippi is a long way from New York, but God knows it is not far enough away". Charleston, S. C.

The newspaper's editorial was praising appointment of a negro as deputy commissioner of housing and buildings in Harlem, with special instructions to be the mayor's general observer and special reporter. The appointment, says The Herald Tribune, "is an important step up for him (J. Raymond Jones) as well as another significant recognition of the negro's right to important public office. The latter, of course, has become almost commonplace in New York, but it is worth recalling".

The new deputy commissioner is a Tammany district leader, and the appointment, so long as the negro constituents of the segregated district known as Harlem are an important voting bloc, is a deserved political reward. The democratic leaders in the South would be passing out plums too if they counted on negro votes to elect them to office. Tues. 1-7-47

Mayor O'Dwyer's instructions to Commissioner Jones are to "spread the word that Harlem is entitled to a decent deal". The inference is that to date, Harlem has not been getting a decent deal, a situation amply verified by reports of squalor and violence long emanating from that quarter.

The News and Courier

If Mayor O'Dwyer succeeds in producing a model city for negroes, with the assistance of New York taxpayers, he will not only pay a political debt, but he will create a haven to draw increasing numbers of discontented negroes. Mississippi may be a long way from New York, as Mayor O'Dwyer says, but it is not too far to travel from by train, bus and airplane. Charleston, S. C. Tues. 1-7-47 His words should be spread among those who care to accept the implied invitation to his city.

Former Lt. Col. Vernon C. Riddick is shown taking the oath from Mayor William O'Dwyer last Friday to become New York's seventh judicial official. Magistrate Riddick's term extends for ten years at a salary of $10,000. The ceremonies were held in the Mayor's office.

New York

BISHOP R. R. WRIGHT, JR., former president of Wilberforce University and executive secretary of the Fraternal Council of Negro Churches, has been appointed an official delegate to the food conference of the United Nations Rehabilitation and Relief Administration to meet in Atlantic City March 15. His appointment was announced last week by the State Department.

Dr. Tobias' Blank Check to Governor Dewey

The Worker N.Y.

by Benjamin J. Davis

DR. CHANNING H. TOBIAS, former senior secretary in charge of Negro work of the YMCA, played an important and constructive role in the 1944 elections. Long a Republican, he took an independent position and substantially helped to expose the reactionary Dewey-Bricker ticket of his own party. When Dewey ditched the New York state FEPC early in 1944, he publicly resigned from Dewey's commission and then went on to give factual evidence that Dewey's move was part of a plan to garner polltax support in the deep South for his personal presidential ambitions. Dr. Tobias supported President Roosevelt. Dr. Tobias thus made a contribution to the cause of the Negro, to the alliance of the Negro with labor and other progressives, and to the general progress of the country.

Life moves on, and other events have transpired with respect to Dr. Tobias. He has now become one of the directors of the philanthropic Phelps-Stokes Fund. But most interesting, it seems to me, was his exclusive interview on Jan. 12, in the Amsterdam News, unofficial Dewey-Republican weekly in Harlem. Said he of Gov. Dewey: "He has done an excellent job. He deserves great credit. Gov. Dewey has met the test in three major areas: in housing, in employment and in his appointments. The record is there; no one can deny it." Since Dewey is still running for office, the implications of Dr. Tobias' statement are clear.

FIRST, housing: Isn't it true that Dewey has refused to appropriate all of the funds earmarked for housing in the state treasury? Isn't it true that "Stuyvesant Town" is being built as an anti-Negro housing project because Gov. Dewey signed the housing redevelopment law without safeguards against racial and religious discrimination? Isn't it true that Dewey's Republican legislature refuses to enact a law barring discrimination in privately-owned apartments and residences? Why must we have large slum areas with $500,000,000 in Dewey's state coffers?

2-3-46

Second, employment: Isn't it true that unemployment is growing throughout New York, while Dewey thinks only of oiling his Republican machine upstate with tens of millions in road building? Isn't it true that there's widespread job discrimination in New York, right under the nose of the state FEPC? Has Dewey, titular head of the GOP, raised his voice to the Republicans in Congress to sign the discharge petition for a permanent federal FEPC? Isn't it true that we did not get the state FEPC until delegations of thousands pressured Dewey and his Republican legislature in Albany? Isn't it true that the Negro people and other racial and religious minorities, plus labor and progressives got the state FEPC—and not Dewey? What has Dewey said in support of the present wage and full employment struggles of the trade unions?

Third, appointments: Is Dr. Tobias satisfied with Dewey's appointments? The number Negroes have received? Have they helped the conditions of the people? Suppose he had given twice the number to Negroes—as important as that would be—does that solve the problem of the vet looking for home and job, or the worker on the picket line, or the Negro who gets the door of discrimination slammed in his face?

DR. TOBIAS is right: no one can deny Dewey's record. But it is hardly "excellent," and I have given here only a part of the Dewey record. The vote for Dewey's candidate, Goldstein, scarcely gave Dewey a vote of confidence. Nothing, it seems to me, has appeared in Dewey's record in the last year which would justify Dr. Tobias in issuing a blank check of endorsement to the man he justly denounced 12 months ago, and ought still to be denouncing. 2-3-46

It is understandable how Dr. Tobias, and tens of thousands of other Negroes, are fully disillusioned and disgusted with the Truman-Democratic administration. But that does not mean jumping from the frying pan back into the fire. On the contrary, it requires carrying independent political action a little further for the 1946 congressional elections, so that in 1948 a national third party can save the people from a Truman frying pan or a Dewey fire. Otherwise, the fundamental lesson of 1944—that it, the need to build the Negro-labor-progressive alliance—will be tragically missed.

Wishful Thinking, Reactionary Style

by Benjamin J. Davis

A HANDFUL of self-appointed "guardians of the people" who are short on common sense but crudely reactionary have been asking that Mike Quill, American Labor Party Councilman, be removed from the Council. One may be astounded by their nerve, but perhaps they intend to pursue their wishful thinking further. The information that such an insane proposal exists has already been mentioned on the floor of the Council.

I have received from the City Club of New York a long letter quoting numerous sections of the city charter purporting to "justify" the removal of Councilman Quill. There was, of course, nothing in this document citing any sections of the charter to show what could be done to give the transit workers decent pay, or to eliminate racial discrimination—or to do anything else to make New York a better place to live in. That, it appears, does not interest the City Club. Sun. 3-3-46

MEANWHILE a Brooklyn Catholic priest in the same vein denounced Councilman Quill simply because he is on the progressive side of public issues and because he is not a red-baiter. In the course of this pronunciamento, the priest went on to say quite gratuitously that one couldn't be a Catholic and a member of the Communist Party. Sun. 3-3-46

It is quite clear that with his reactionary views, this priest would never be accepted into the Communist Party. But there is no reason for him to impute his reactionary views to all other Catholics. For there are millions of progressive Catholics in this country and there are some who are members of the Communist Party.

This development shows that once a Frank Fay is permitted to use his Catholic creed to cover outright fascists and reactionaries, it eventually extends to denouncing Catholics who are progressive. Religious freedom must be upheld in this country—we don't have enough of it. Yet when men of the cloth begin to speak politically, not religiously, they must slug it out politically with those who differ from their political views—which is another American freedom we don't have enough of. Sun. 3-3-46

I WONDER if the City Club happens to know that Councilman Quill is an elected official of New York, receiving over 75,000 votes of the people. I wonder also how many members of the City Club have been elected as "spokesmen" by the people of this city. Mike is a fighter for the interests of labor and the people. Who is the City Club? No doubt powerful interests are behind it.

Needless to say, Councilman Cacchione and myself and other Councilmen will oppose tooth and nail the absurd proposal of the City Club. And this club, incidentally, can take this expression of my views as a reply to its preposterous letter.

* * *

Next week, I shall announce the name of this column. Thanks to all who sent in so many very good proposals.

New York City Pays Its Negro Judges $85,000 Annually

The Amsterdam News, Mar. 30, 1946

Detroit — The recent appointment of Vernon Riddick as a justice by Mayor William O'Dwyer brought New York City's judges up to seven and their salaries to over $85,000 annually.

Justice Francis E. Rivers of the City Court is the highest paid of the seven, receiving $17,500 in his yearly pay check. The only woman among the seven is Justice Jane Bolin of the Court of Domestic Relations whose salary is $12,000. Justices Myles Paige of the Special Sessions Court and Hubert Delany of the Court of Domestic Relations also receive $12,000 per annum.

The two of New York's Negro judges who were first to serve on the bench, Justices James S. Watson and Charles L. Toney, each receives $10,840 per year. They and Justice Rivers hold elective offices while the other four judges were appointees of the mayor of the city. Justices Bolin, Delany, and Paige were appointed by former Mayor LaGuardia. Newest judge, Vernon L. Riddick, receives a salary of $10,000. Thurs. 3-28-46

Headlines and Pictures in its March issue presents the stories of New York's seven municipal judges. Informal pictures of the judges illustrate the story.

HOME TERM COURT OPENS TOMORROW

New York Times, N.Y.

Tues 4-30-46

Newly Established Part of the Magistrates Bench to Handle Only Marital Tensions

KROSS IS NAMED TO SIT

Playroom to Care for Children as Parents Are Interviewed on Their Difficulties

A "progressive step" in court operation is to be made tomorrow when the newly established Home Term Court will open at 300 Mulberry Street. Designed to handle only cases involving martial difficulties, the Home Term, part of the Magistrates Court, is making a complete departure from legal formalism without loss of dignity or decorum.

Preliminary inspection of the court was permitted yesterday by Chief Magistrate Edgar Bromberger who showed the seven rooms comprising the Home Term to Acting Mayor Vincent Impellitteri and Police Commissioner Arthur W. Wallander.

Furnished at a cost of more than $2,000 by the B'nai B'rith Metropolitan Council, the court has four consultation rooms, a reception room, a playroom for children, and a kitchen.

Magistrate Kross Assigned

Chief Magistrate Bromberger, who revealed that Magistrate Anna M. Kross had been assigned to the court indefinitely, explained how it will operate. He said married couples suffering from "post-war tension difficulties" would be interviewed in the consultation rooms. The court's jurisdiction extends to all family disturbances, other than felonies, finding their way into the Magistrates Courts, either through arrest or by issuance of a summons.

If there are children, they will be cared for by a hired staff of social workers in either the playroom or an adjacent outdoor playground equipped with sandboxes and swings, while the parents are discussing their troubles.

The playroom is decorated to fit a child's dream. Two huge play pens, small tables and chairs, comic books, a phonograph, dozens of dolls, high chairs, and other toys complete the lively furnishings.

Old Vault Now a Kitchen

Tues 4-30-46

An old vault now serves as a kitchen where milk can be prepared for the children. In the consultation rooms, plush red, green and blue chairs provide a comfortable atmosphere where family troubles may be explored with less tension than was possible before.

Plans for the establishment of the Home Term were drawn by the Home Advisory Council, composed of a number of social and religious groups, in cooperation with Mr. Bromberger. The court will seek to descover fundamental causes for the differences between the couple and attempt to apply a solution that will preserve the home and assure a proper atmosphere for the children.

A panel of magistrates eventually will be assigned to care for the 3,000 to 4,000 cases expected annually. At present the court will serve only Manhattan, but should it prove successful, similar Home Terms will be set up in the other four boroughs.

Once Police Headquarters

The rooms used by the court served as police headquarters from 1862 to 1910, then as the chief magistrate's office, and through the war as offices for the City Patrol Corps, air raid warden groups, other civilian defense services, and for the Police Athletic League.

"If the plan proves effective," Mr. Bromberger declared, "it will serve as a typical method of approaching the great social problems involved in marital difficulties, and will exert a beneficial influence in the community by restoring harmonious conditions in numerous homes torn by dissension.

"The influence it will exert on children will be of incalculable value when harmony is substituted for discord." Tues 4-30-46

Commisioner Wallander concurred, saying that the court was a "progressive step in the right direction." Also present at the ceremonies were Leonard Probst, Commissioner of Probation; Fannie Hurst, the novelist, and representatives of the advisory council.

Dean Named To Post In United Nations

The Defender, Chicago, Ill.

Sat. 10-12-46

NEW YORK—Dr. William H. Dean, member of the National Urban League's executive staff and formerly OPA price executive for the Virgin Islands, last week joined the United Nations secretariat as economic affairs officer specializing in the development of backward areas.

In accepting the United Nations post, Dr. Dean resigned as director of the Urban League's community relations project, a position he has held for the last two years.

A top-flight economist in the field of location of industry and economic development, Dr. Dean's writings on the subject have been assigned to students in economic history courses at Harvard and Yale. He read a paper on the technical aspects of locational theory before the Economic History Association at Williamstown, Mass., in 1942.

The new United Nations secretariat member is a graduate of Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Me., summa cum laude, Phi Beta Kappa. He received his Ph.D., from Harvard, where he held the university's highest award in economics—the Henry Lee Memorial Fellowship.

After serving on the Atlanta University faculty from 1933 until 1942, he became a senior OPA economist and later price executive for the Virgin Islands from 1942 to 1944. While price executive for the Virgin Islands, he installed the islands' price control program and acted as OPA liaison officer with the Agricultural Marketing Administration in arranging shipments of food and essentials into Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands during the war.

In 1939 Dr. Dean served on the faculty of the City College of New York as lecturer in economics. In 1940 and 1941 he was consultant to the National Resources Planning Board, a New Deal agency.

New York Labor Sec. Diggs 'Is Doing a Tough Job Well'

Amsterdam News New York

2-16-46

Nearly two years have passed since the appointment of Mrs. Bertha Diggs to the post of Secretary of the Department of Labor. Many things have happened since that time both in the field of labor and in the department itself.

Working in direct cooperation with the Industrial Commissioner, Edward Corsi, Mrs. Diggs is an administrator in the Department. In the huge organization, which influences and supervises the entire State in the field of labor, she functions as a direct link between the office of the Commissioner and the assistant administrators.

Lesson in Democracy

In her large office in the State Building here Mrs. Diggs talked about some of the high points in her work since she took office in 1944.

"As a member of the Industrial Council," she said, "there is a real lesson in the democracy in our department, evidenced silently by the mere fact that I am at present in a position to aid in the formation of policy."

She explained that the Council was composed of representatives of labor, industry and a group of physicians (the latter important because of the part they play in the administration of Unemployment Compensation.) With these men, and the Commissioner, Mrs. Diggs aids in the mapping out of all-over policy for the Labor Department.

Her Daily Routine

"We work on many things here," Secretary Diggs stated. "Under us, the laws governing labor in the State, including wages and hours, industrial hygiene, safety devices and standards for apprentices, are administrated."

This was just a part of the list of things which come to the attention of Mrs. Diggs each day. There is the Division of Industrial Relations, which includes laws protecting women and children. The Labor Relations Board, Board of Mediation, Workmen's Compensation and the Board of Standards are all a part of her department's field.

Mrs. Diggs laughed when she told of some of the jobs which the department supervises. "We even give a great deal of attention to mattresses,' she said. In order to clear up any doubts that this was a job of the department, she explained that there are certain standards which must be maintained, under the law in all industry. If a mattress, for instance, is marked "all new material" and the analysts in the department find that the statement is not true—charges are brought and an unlawful situation cleard up.

Covers Broad Scope

"We are not concerned only with members of labor unions and management," she added. "Our work touches every person in the State, in one way or another." After the explanation concerning the mattress this was not too hard to believe.

2-16-46

The Department of Labor is so large, so intricately set up, that only those who took time out to make a detailed study of it would be able to understand all of its branches. One thing is obvious, however, even from a short visit. Mrs. Diggs is handling a big job and doing it with gusto.

In the words of Commissioner Corsi, "She is getting a tough job done well." What more could anyone ask?—C. C.

LAUDED: Mrs. Bertha Diggs, Secretary of the New York Department of Labor, "is getting a tough job done well," says Labor Commissioner Corsi. 2-16-46

Appointed Supervisor In New York VA

The Defender Chicago Ill. Sat.

NEW YORK — (ANP) — Appointment of George H. Bennett as supervisor in the advisement and guidance division of the New York State branch office of the Veterans' Administration was announced last week by David P. Page, acting deputy administrator for veterans in New York. 10-19-46

Bennett, the top Negro supervisor in this branch, was former chief of the advisement and guidance center for veterans at City College here. He will be responsible for management, organization and operation of centers throughout New York, under guidance of the chief of that section.

Newest New York City Judge Poses With Family

Here's an intimate close-up of New York City's newest judge, Justice Vernon Cornelius Riddick, a native of Portsmouth, Va., who was sworn in on Jan. 31, 1946, as a magistrate by Mayor O'Dwyer. Left is daughter Gail, age six. Mrs. Riddick, a registered nurse, holds the younger Riddick, six-months-old Vernon C. Jr. Judge Riddick and family live in Harlem. Judge Riddick was appointed to the post for ten years at ten thousand dollars per year.

Virginia-Born Former Army Officer Gets 10-Year Term, $10,000 Salary

NEW YORK—Vernon C. Riddick, 48, a reserve Army officer and a former state assistant attorney general, was sworn in as a magistrate by Mayor O'Dwyer in a special ceremony before his wife, family, friends, and city officials Friday afternoon. 2-9-46

This is the first colored appointment of the new administration, and marks the first time in the history of the city of New York that a colored magistrate has been appointed by the Democratic Party, the other six having been elected or appointed by other political parties.

It is a 10-year-job and carries an annual salary of $10,000. Colonel Riddick is severing connections with the law firm of Riddick, Doles and Gill, of which he is a member, and was scheduled to report for assignment to the chief magistrate the following day.

"I am very pleased at being appointed," he told the AFRO, "and feel very happy both for myself and my family. I will do all in my power to see that the trust placed in me is upheld." 2-9-46

Have Two Children

Colonel Riddick and his wife, Dorothy, reside at 40 Morningside Ave. They have two children: Gail, 6, and Vernon C. Jr., age 6 months. All were present at the ceremonies, as well as Riddick's mother, Mrs. Mary Ann Riddick. The crowd got a big kick out of the mayor shaking hands with Gail, and posing for the photographers with all the members of the new magistrate's family.

Mrs. Dorothy Riddick was flushed with happiness. "I hope he'll prove to be everything that is expected of him," she told the AFRO after the ceremony.

Colonel Riddick was released from the service on Nov. 2, 1944, and placed on inactive duty status, after two years of duty in Hawaii, during which he was promoted from the rank of captain to lieutenant colonel and commanded an anti-aircraft battalion in the Central Pacific area.

Prior to that, he held the rank of major in the 369th Infantry Regiment of the New York National Guard. On Jan., 1941, he entered the Army of the U.S. as the first volunteer from the attorney general's office.

Born in Virginia

Born on Nov. 23, 1897, in Portsmouth, Va., he attended grade school, high school, and was graduated from the Norfolk Mission College, a Presbyterian private school, in 1915. 2-9-46

In 1919, he received an A.B. degree from Howard University; and entered its law school, from which he was graduated three years later. While a student at Howard, he engaged in all extra curricular activities, sports, debating, and literary clubs. After graduation, he taught school for one year in Portsmouth, and played with an orchestra for two years.

Coming to New York in 1924, he served clerkship and was admitted to the New York State Bar in 1926. He engaged in the general practice of law, particularly in the Court of General Sessions of the Peace. In 1937, he was appointed an assistant attorney general of the State of New York and was attached to the Criminal Law Division of the General Bureau.

He appeared numerous times in courts on behalf of the attorney general, testing writs of habeas corpus and other matters of criminal jurisdiction.

Belongs to Legion

He is a Methodist; a member of the Veterans' Corps, 15th Regiment; Charles Young Post of the American Legion; Fox Conmet Post Veteran of Foreign Wars (Hawaii); Grand Street Boys' Club; Omega Psi Phi Fraternity; Carver Democratic, of which he is president; Harlem Committee of the NYC Defense Recreation Committee; and during the recent mayoralty campaign served as executive director of the Independent Citizens' Committee for O'Dwyer in Harlem. He has also been very active in the YMCA.

His wife was born in Montclair, N.J.; and was raised there by her aunt, Mrs. Lulu Sims.

Their 14th wedding anniversary day was Thursday, Jan. 31, exactly the day before Riddick was sworn in as magistrate.

Rev. John Coleman First Negro Named To Important Unit

Atlanta Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.
Tues 3-12-46

NEW YORK—((NNPA)—Rev John M. Coleman, forty-three-year-old son of a railroad brakeman, was appointed last Tuesday to the Board of Higher Education.

Mr. Coleman, who is the rector of St. Phillip's Protestant Episcopal Church, 265 Decatur Street, Brooklyn, is the first colored person to be named to the twenty-one-member board, which supervises the administration of the four city colleges—City College, Hunter College, Brooklyn College and Queens College. The position is non-salaried.

Specific Duties

Mr. Coleman said that among his specific duties will be that of serving with the Brooklyn members of the board who counsel with the faculty of Brooklyn College and represent the faculty in general meetings of the board.

Appointment of Mr. Coleman, who was sworn in last Tuesday by Mayor William O'Dwyer in a brief ceremony in the Mayor's office, followed several weeks of campaigning by local organizations which demanded that a colored person be named by the Mayor to the board.

The term of Mr. Coleman, who succeeds Harry S. Rogers, resigned, will expire on June 30, 1952.

Son of Portsmouth Tailor To Preside On New York Bench

By VAN WALTERS

Special to Journal and Guide

NEW YORK — On Thursday, Jan. 31, 1946, another milestone in the progressive march of America's largest minority will be passed, when Vernon Cornelius Riddick is sworn in as a magistrate, bringing up to seven the total number of Negro judges currently sitting on the bench in New York City.

William O'Dwyer, who was sworn in as the City's 100th mayor on January 1, named Attorney Riddick for a magistrate's post during the first week of January, but the announcement was officially withheld pending clearance by the Bar Association. On January 19 the Association announced its approval of the Harlemite, who will be sworn in by Mayor O'Dwyer in City Hall, Thursday, January 31, 1946. 2-2-46

The appointment is for 10 years and pays $10,000 a year. Other Negro judges currently sitting on the bench here are Rivers, Paige, Bolin (the only woman among the group), Delany, Watson, and Toney, of the City, Special Session, Domestic Relations, Domestic Relations, Municipal and Municipal Courts, respectively.

MEET THE NEW JUDGE!

Riddick, who stands six feet and tips the scales at 195 pounds was born at Portsmouth, Va., November 23, 1897—the son of William C. Riddick, a tailor, and Mary A., a housewife; attended graded school and graduated in 1915 from the High School of the Norfolk Mission College, a Presbyterian Private School.

Although he has given up the piano, he played professional music with orchestras in Washington, D. C., to help finance his schooling at Howard University where he graduated from the College of Arts and Sciences with a degree of A.B. in 1919, and from the Law School, 1922, with the degree of LL.B. While a student at Howard, Riddick was exceedingly active; participating in all extra curricula activities — sports, debating and literary clubs.

After leaving Howard, he turned his hand at teaching history and economics at the I. C. Norcom High School, Portsmouth, during 1922-1923, but gave it up after one year and came to New York in 1924 to try out his legal mind.

FROM CLERK TO JUDGE

In 1926 he was admitted to the Bar of the State of New York. Since then he has engaged in the general practice of law and practised extensively in the Court of General Sessions of the Peace. In 1937, he was appointed an Assistant Attorney General of the State of New York and was attached to the Criminal Law division of the General Bureau—appearing numerous times in Courts on behalf of the Attorney General testing writs of Habeas Corpus and other matters of criminal jurisdiction.

Since "the Army is the only hobby I've had in the last 17 years," having been a member of the famed 369th since 1927, when it was a National Guard, it was only natural that in January, 1941, he entered the Army of the United States as the first volunteer from the Attorney General's Office. He won a promotion from the rank of Captain to Lieutenant Colonel and commanded an anti-aircraft battalion in the Central Pacific area from 1942 to 1944. On November 2, 1944, he was placed on inactive duty status and returned to the practice of law with the firm of Riddick, Doles and Gill at 209 West 125 street in Harlem, from which he will leave Thursday to devote his entire legal services to the magistrate court. 2-2-46

HIS ASSOCIATIONS

The latest Negro to ascend to the bench in New York City is a Methodist member of the Grand Street Boys Club; Carver Democratic Club; Veteran's Corps, 15th Regiment, Charles Young Post American Legion; Omega Psi Phi Fraternity; Harlem Committee of the New York City Defense Recreation Committee; Fox Commet Post Veteran of Foreign Waters (Hawaii).

In 1932 he married Miss Dorothy Bailey of Montclair, N. J. They reside in Harlem at 40 Morningside avenue, and have two children—a girl, Gail, 6, and a boy, Vernon Cornelius Jr., six-months-old.—V. W.

Council Gangs Up on Davis Over Spellman Resolution

Daily Worker New York, New York

Wed 3-6-46

By MICHAEL SINGER

Benjamin J. Davis, Jr., Communist councilman from Manhattan, yesterday challenged the reactionary political activities of the Catholic hierarchy in opposing a City Council resolution to greet Francis Cardinal Spellman, who arrived from Franco Spain yesterday. Davis' position, a restatement of the fundamental democratic principle of separating the church and state, evoked the most demagogic, violent anti-Soviet and red-baiting rampage ever heard in the Council.

The attacks against Davis ranged from an open threat of personal violence against the courageous Negro Councilman by Joseph McCarthy, Brooklyn Democrat, to a call for war against Communists from Hugh Quinn, Queens Democrat. Quinn has always leaned for his support from Coughlinite, anti-Semitic groups in that borough.

The storm in the Council broke shortly after Joseph T. Sharkey, council majority leader, admitted that the Democrats had snared two anti-discrimination resolutions from Davis and Peter V. Cacchione, Brooklyn Communist Councilman. The Democrats palmed off resolutions urging FEPC legislation and a non-bias state university as their own.

Wed 3-6-46

Following the reading of the resolution welcoming Cardinal Spellman, Councilman Davis arose and read the following statement:

"The City Council of New York is a legislative body. As such, it should be guided by the fundamental and democratic American tradition which includes as a basic principle the separation of church and state. The council would violate this principle if it endorses in one way or another a particular creed, or if it officially places itself on record on the relative importance or rank of a position in a particular church.

"I wish to make clear that I respect the right of all people to worship as they see fit and I respect and uphold freedom of conscience for all peoples. But I cannot remain indifferent to the political activities of any person or church leader.

"The only way in which the Council has the power to endorse Cardinal Spellman, through congratulations or otherwise, would be a matter of state—that is, on political grounds. Since there are tens of thousands of New York citizens of all faiths—including Catholics—who are strongly opposed to Cardinal Spellman's political views on foreign policy, I consider it unwise and unrepresentative for this body to adopt this resolution.

BEN DAVIS

"I regret that the gentleman of the majority have forced this issue, but having done so I have no recourse but to vote NO."

With the exception of Stanley Isaacs, Independent Republican from Manhattan, Eugene Connolly and Michael J. Quill, American Labor Party councilmen and the Liberal Party members every other councilman either raved, hurled threats at Davis and the Communist Party or slandered the Soviet Union.

Wed 3-6-46

Quill, while disagreeing with Davis' point of view and supporting the Cardinal's welcome, attacked the red-baiters and the frenzy of the attack.

Seated with Cacchione, Davis listened to the barrage without flinching. His cool, quiet demeanor was in sharp contrast with the oratorical venom surpassing anything veteran City Hall reporters had ever witnessed in those chambers.

None of the speakers who attacked Davis, including Anthony Di Giovanni, Brooklyn Democrat, who led the assault, accepted Davis' challenge on the issues.

Earlier in the session Davis had forced a change in the City Calendar text which referred to Negroes with a small 'n.'

Foster Greets Davis' Service

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

William Z. Foster yesterday greeted City Councilman Benjamin J. Davis, Jr., on his third anniversary in the city body, which will be celebrated on Davis' birthday, Dec. 7, at the Golden Gate Ballroom.

The national chairman of the Communist Party said both Councilmen Davis and Peter V. Cacchione were "tribunes" of the people of New York in the fight for peace and economic security.

"Ben Davis, by his activity," said Foster, "had made outstanding contributions not only to the Negro people, but towards building a strong workingclass movement and unifying all stratas of the population.

Wed. 12-4-46

"In the important fight ahead to defend the peoples living standards and liberty, all of us will indeed be grateful that we are represented in the City Council by such an able, fighting Councilman."

By MICHAEL SINGER

Three times during yesterday's City Council session a jammed gallery heard Councilman Benjamin J. Davis, Jr., stand up and give the red-baiters a lesson in progressive politics. The Manhattan Communist councilman with his Brooklyn colleague, Peter V. Cacchione:

● Introduced a resolution condemning Winston Churchill's speech at Fulton, Mo., on March 5 as "an incitation to World War III, as a threat to the peace and well-being of our country and the world, and as a threat to the very existence of the UNO which our late Commander - in - Chief, Franklin D. Roosevelt, was a prime architect."

● Denounced the red-baiting outbreak in the Council last week and linked the Council's anti-Soviet attacks with "Churchill's war inciting address and the whole drive by the reactionary forces in America to incite war against the Soviet Union."

● Forced the deletion from the record of a violent speech against Michael J. Quill by Councilman A. S. Philips, Queens Republican, who introduced a resolution to oust the CIO transit leader from the Council.

ANSWERS SHEAHAN

The resolution was sent to the Committee on Rules, Privileges and Elections.

Davis' first counter-attack against the Council die-hards came after the reading of a letter from John J. Sheahan, chairman of the St. Patrick's Day Parade Committee of Arrangements. Sheahan asked the Council to exclude Davis and Peter V. Cacchione, Brooklyn Communist member, from the St. Patrick's Day Parade on Saturday afternoon, March 16.

Sheahan based his request on Davis' and Cacchione's opposition to the resolution in the Council last week welcoming Cardinal Spellman upon his return from Rome and Madrid.

Wed 3-13-46

The Council red-baiters tried but failed to repeat their fanatical spree of last week.

Councilman Stanley M. Isaacs, Manhattan Independent Republican, assailed the attempt to put the Sheahan letter in the records. He said he would protest such action by "not marching" in the parade.

Even Brooklyn Democrat Councilman Walter Hart, who led the reactionary assault last week, was forced to object to placing Sheahan's letter in the record.

DEFENDS RIGHT TO SPEAK

Davis, however denounced the move to "spread the letter in the minutes" as unwarranted interference in his personal rights to speak out on issues.

He pointed out that last week's expressions were "used first by Hitler and now are connected with the red-baiting drive expressed by Churchill in his speech."

Then, hammering his desk with his fist, Davis said:

"I shall fight as I see fit. Nobody will intimidate me, nobody. If I did any less I would be unworthy of the people who elected me to this Council. I shall continue to speak up on what I think is right or wrong as my conscience sees fit and nobody here or any place else is going to intimidate me into silence."

A Good Example For Pamphlet Writers

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

Milwaukee, Wis.

Editor, Daily Worker:

Bob Minor's pamphlet, Tell the People How Ben Davis Was Elected, has set an example for writers of popular pamphlets. In 24 pages he conveys the story in very simple language, as if he were talking to a small group of workers or farmers gathered around a stove.

Mon 4-22-46

Particularly striking is the way he described the election of Negroes to office at different periods of history. The description showed the three methods used: 1. During the reconstrutcion period, on the basis of Negro-white unity and suppression of the slaveholders; 2, those who gained office on the basis of elections from segregated districts, and 3, the way Ben Davis achieved office, on the basis of Negro-white unity against the reactionaries of today.

In the course of this description he gives a vivid picture of the history of the Negro people impressing on the reader the part played in the development of America by such Negro leaders as Frederick Douglass and Senators Bruce and Revels.

Although Bob Minor's pamphlet has an especial appeal to southern people it is of equal interest to us in the North. It should be read and sold by every comrade. Wide distribution of this fine exact contents, are difficult for the average person to read. Some pamphlet should be build up a resistance to our party. New members reading pamphlets because of this.

Davis Grilled by Cops; Councilman Protests Anti-Negro Act to Commissioner Wallander

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

Fri 5-10-46

Is the New York City Police Department trying to set up a "pass system" for Negro citizens on the model of the British imperialists in South Africa? Is it aiming to copy the infamous ghetto restrictions for Negroes in Miami, where permits are needed "after hours" in the "white section" of town?

Is it illegal in New York for Negroes and whites to associate together peaceably?

These questions were hurled bluntly at Police Commissioner Arthur Wallander yesterday in an open letter by City Councilman Benjamin J. Davis Jr., Manhattan Communist, following the stopping of his car on "suspicion" early Tuesday morning.

Councilman Davis was driving on 16th St. near 7th Ave. about 1:45 a.m. Tuesday. With him were George Blake Charney, secretary of the Communist Party of Manhattan, and Robert Campbell, executive secretary of the Communist Party of Harlem, both World War II veterans. Charney is white, Campbell, Negro.

A police car, driven by Patrolmen Baker and Selakowsky of the 10th precinct, stopped them and there followed a series of questions and a search of the car. When asked why that particular car was considered suspicious, the patrolmen said they were "doing their duty" and refused to comment further.

WALLANDER—NO COMMENT

Queried yesterday by the Daily Worker, the Police Commissioner's office had no comment to make. The office acknowledged receipt of Councilman Davis' letter and said the matter "was being investigated."

The open letter, released yesterday to the general press, says in part:

I cannot account for such unjustifiable treatment of citizens. There was nothing "suspicious" about the car. It was an ordinary Chevrolet sedan, in no wise unusual in appearance. I was driving in a lawful manner and at a lawful rate of speed. We were in no wise disorderly, nor was our conduct in any way unusual. The policeman made no such claims.

In my judgment, my car was stopped only because it was in a "white section" of the city at an early hour in the morning and, further, because one of the passengers in the car was white. Other cars passed mine about the same time the police stopped us, but, apparently because their occupants were white, they were not considered "suspicious," nor were they told to "pull over to the curb." Fri 5-10-46

Apparently there is a policy of the Police Department to consider Negro citizens who are outside of the Negro ghetto and in the so-called "white section" of the city as "suspicious" and, therefore, subject to accosting by the police. Apparently, further, Negro and white citizens lawfully and peacefully associated together in various sections of the city are subject to charges of "suspicion."

I wish to protest this policy and procedure of the Police Department as an infringement of the democratic rights of Negro citizens, and also as an abridgement of the rights of white citizens. I charge that it is an attack upon the constitutional right of citizens to go anywhere in this city they wish, and to associate and fraternize with whom they wish.

I would like to know whether the Police Department is trying to bring to New York the imperialist pass system which obtains in South Africa, where the British authorities require that native Africans secure passes before they go from one section of the territory to another. I should like to know whether we are to have, in New York, the fascist-like system used in Miami, Florida, where Negro citizens are required to have special permits if they are found in the "white section" of the city "after hours" in the evening.

We do not intend to permit such fascist-like policies in New York City, and I prefer to believe that the Police Department does not want such policies either. However, the insulting, undemocratic treatment received by me and my friends on May 7 points in the other direction, especially in view of the fact that white citizens have been arrested for being in Harlem "after hours."

I urge you to clarify this situation and to repudiate any such undemocratic and anti-Negro policy being pursued by the Police Department. Inasmuch as many complaints of a similar nature have been brought to my attention, and because this letter is being made public, I urge you to make your announcement public.

COUNCILMAN DAVIS

People & Issues

The Worker New York, N.Y.

Communist Councilman, Borough of Manhattan

AFTER BEING CALLED a "menace to civilization" by a fellow member of the City Council a couple of days before, it was a pleasant relief to meet with a slightly different reception in Detroit during my trip there last weekend. I had an opportunity to attend the State Election convention of the Communist Party of Michigan, where they adopted a fighting program, nominated a slate of stalwart candidates —Negro and white—women and men—and prepared to build a strong labor-progressive coalition, including the determination to break some records in registering a big Communist vote. It was a real honor to be the guest at a swell Daily Worker picnic.

This was preceded by a reception given by a citizens committee of trade unionists, CIO and AFL, Negro and white leaders, and members of all political parties, religious persuasions and national origins. This affair took place in the Lucy Thurman YWCA in the Negro community and, I am told, was highly successful from the point of view of the Daily Worker which was the theme of the evening. Sun. 7-7-46

Personally I had a grand time and I must say, felt unworthy of the honor thrust upon me, which included a specially prepared scroll containing the names of more than a hundred trade unionists, women and youth leaders, judges and state officials, and representatives of all types of organizations. Then there was a huge union-made cake, which, I know, tasted better than anybody's non-union cake. These honors I accepted in the name of the Negro people of Harlem and their labor-progressive allies.

IT IS MY PAINFUL DUTY to inform Mr. A. J. Phillips, the Hoover-Republican Councilman who gave me the new title of "Menace to civilization," that what I found in the city of Detroit does not bode well for civilization at all. Mr. Phillips gave me this title because on the floor of the Council I pointed out that he regards anyone as a "menace" who is opposed to Dewey, Hoover's fair-haired boy of reaction. I spoke several times in Detroit and talked to many types of people—although I confess I was not banqueted by the Henry Fords—and pretty nearly all I found were "menaces to civilization." There weren't any more good words for Dewey than there were for Dewey's reactionary counterparts among the Democrats. If Mr. Phillips could pull himself away from the coat-tails of Dewey long enough, he might find a lot of "menaces" right here, especially in the ranks of the labor and progressive movement.

I think Mr. Phillips got a little mixed up in his oratorical flurry. What he meant was that the Communists, as a part of the labor and progressive movement, are a menace to the political aspirations and fortunes of Dewey as they are to the Northern Farley and Southern Bilbo Democrats. Trade unionists and progressives are laying the basis through independent political action in this year's election so that they will not have to choose between a Dewey and a Truman in 1948. To all of this, the Communists are among the most guilty. Sun. 7-7-46

DURING MY TRIP TO DETROIT, I found abundant evidence that the workers are fed up with the moves of the Truman Administration toward war against the Soviet Union on the one hand, and the double-talking, reactionary policies of the administration at home. Last Sunday was a "black Sunday" for Detroit as it was for America. With the atom bomb test, our Wall Street dominated government was rattling the sword for imperialist World War III. The OPA expired, opening wide the gates for a disastrous economic crisis of mass suffering, while the FEPC went the way of all flesh. Not once did Truman call a special session of Congress to take any emergency action on the OPA or the FEPC, although he was quick to mobilize them for his own strike-breaking bill against the trade unions.

These are the issues of the campaign and the people will not forget them in the coming primaries and elections this year.

45c 1946 New York (Ferdinand Q. Morton)

FERDINAND Q. MORTON

Ferdinand Q. Morton An Ice-Breaker

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

Sat. 8-24-46

By RICHARD DIER

Occupying one of the most important posts in the N.Y.C. administration is 65-year-old Ferdinand Q. Morton, who was chosen July 17 to become president of the Municipal Civil Service Commission after 24 years of meritorious service with that agency. Until his appointment all commission presidents were white.

Mr. Morton is used to being the first to break the ice in key city jobs. He broke a precedent in Jan. 1, 1906, when he was appointed to the office of District Attorney for New York County.

When he left that position in 1922 to become a Civil Service commissioner, he was assistant in charge of the Indictment Bureau, the largest bureau in that office.

Name by Hyland

Mayor Hyland named him to the commission in 1922 and he has been reappointed by each succeeding mayor, even being one of the few Tammany supporters to survive LaGuardia's tenure.

He was chosen by his fellow commissioners to head that body succeeding Harry W. Marsh, whose term expired last May. He will serve until June 1, 1948, and receive $8,500 a year.

The problems which beset that office have increased three-fold since the war, now that thousands of city employees have returned from the Armed forces and are clamoring for increments in pay which they lost while in the service, promotional opportunities, and new examinations.

An experienced hand like Mr. Morton knows that all these will have to be taken in stride and that the difficulties won't all be ironed out in one day.

Aids Returning Vets

"There are hundreds of questions posed by returning veterans," he told the AFRO in an exclusive interview, in his busy offices at 299 Broadway. "We will have them with us for the next five or ten years.

"Every employee who missed promotional exams while in the service is entitled to special examinations, with the result that thousands of them will have to be given. Remember, there were about 18,000 city employees in the Armed forces."

If any were in the increment group and entitled to regular increases annually, they will get them too.

"Veterans' problems are considered about the most important ones here," he continued. "However, there are equally important and urgent problems, such as general promotional exams. We refrained from holding them during the war because of the absence of so many people. There were also at least 13,000 or more temporary employees appointed during that period. Now we've got to hold open competitive exams to fill these vacancies."

Believes in Merit Plan

Mr. Morton is a firm believer in the merit system: "I think the merit system has done more for the ideals of democracy and for our governmental institutions than any other agent," he pointed out.

He is a heavy smoker. His offices are always crowded with advisers and employees with special problems.

Mr. Morton knows all there is to know about the commission's policies, and he answers all questions slowly and carefully, an art that can only be acquired with years of experience. Outside in the lobby, there are always a score of people waiting to get in to see him.

He has no great plans for any radical changes in the workings of the commission:

"The commission is about 50 years old, pretty well established; and civil service regulations require competitive exams and promotions according to the merit system. We have the basic provisions to go by. There could not be any radical reorganization of the commission."

Democrat 38 Years

An enrolled Democrat for the past 38 years, Mr. Morton has been very active in political life. In 1911, he became a member of the United Colored Democracy, becoming its leader in 1915, and serving until it was abolished in 1930.

He continued political activity in an advisory capacity to the county leader until 1938, when the new charter was adopted, which prohibited political activity on the part of members of the commission.

"When I took over the leadership, the Democratic party was receiving only 5% or 6% of the colored vote, and at the conclusion of my leadership, we were a majority party," he said.

He is an avid baseball fan, and a regular attendant at Sunday ball games. He has lent support in the fight against jim-crow baseball, and talked with major league baseball managers in an effort to get them to drop the color ban.

A decade ago, Mr. Morton was known as the "czar of baseball teams," serving in an honorary capacity for several seasons. His best friends include prominent theatrical entertainers, such as Cab Calloway and Duke Ellington.

Lover of Poetry

He loves to read poetry, and occasionally writes a few lines himself.

Born in Mississippi on Sept. 9, 1881, he moved to Washington with his parents ten years later. His father was employed there in the Federal Government.

After public schools in Washington, he went to Phillips Exeter Academy; then to Harvard College for three years. He left in 1905, completed his work at Boston University Law School, where he was a member of the debating team.

He came to New York in 1907; finished the study of law in a New York law office, and was admitted to the bar in 1914. He is a bachelor and lives at 108 W. 111th St.

Morton Heads Up N.Y. Civil Service

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

NEW YORK (ANP).—Ferdinand Q. Morton, 65, after 24 years service with the municipal civil service commission, was chosen president of the agency at a special meeting last week, thus becoming the first of his race to hold such a post in the nation.

He succeeds Harry W. Marsh, whose term expired on May 31. Mayor O'Dwyer named Joseph A. McNamara of Brooklyn to succeed Marsh on the commission.

Mr. Morton, who is single, was first appointed to the commission by Mayor John Hylan on Jan. 1, 1922, and was reappointed by Mayors James J. Walker and F. H. LaGuardia.

Sat. 7-27-46

He was one of the few colored persons to hold a high municipal office in the old Tammany days and also one of the few Tammany appointees to survive the LaGuardia administration.

He had been a staunch Democrat and one of Tammany's most ardent leaders in Harlem until 1930 when he transferred his allegiance to the American Labor Party, the group supported by Mr. LaGuardia. Since that time, Mr. Morton has made little political news. Sat.

He was born in Macon, Miss., attended Phillips Exeter Academy in New Hampshire, graduated in 1909 at Harvard, studied law at Boston University, and was in private practice until 1916. 7-27-46

He became one of the first members of his race to be named an assistant district attorney in the New York County as head of the indictment bureau. He remained there until Mayor John F. (Red Mike) Hylan appointed him to the commission. The Afro-American

Mr. Morton will receive $8,500 yearly as commission president instead of $8,000 which has been his salary. His term expires May 31, 1948, when he is expected to retire on a pension. Baltimore Md

The municipal civil service is one of the largest employers in the country, having 18,000 police and 12,000 firemen and an almost as large number of teachers.

Able, Sincere, Ferdinand Morton Modest About Job

Defender Chicago, Ill. Sat. 8-10-46

NEW YORK—Bachelor, nature lover, amateur poet and avid baseball fan with a love for debating and no capacity for hatred; this is the picture of Ferdinand Quinton Morton, first Negro president of the New York Municipal Service Commission.

This is the picture known and loved by his many friends, but it is not complete. Under the easy good nature, and affable manner is a Morton with an amazing capacity for work and a penchant for efficiency. After 24 years of dogged effort on the city Civil Service Commission, paralleled by an almost equal interest in politics and baseball, the 60-year-old, baldish Morton was named head of the agency where he spent most of his career.

Stocky, and sporting a slight paunch, Morton takes a humorous view of his appetite, which is just what one would expect of a man who uses up so much energy. "I am quite a hearty eater," with beefsteak number one on the bill. Occasionally I go in for amateur cooking," Morton, who is fond of anecdotes and cigarettes, confesses with a twinkle in his eye.

One can readily understand Morton's absorption in his work. His career has been a long and arduous one. Born in Mississippi, he worked his way through school as a waiter. He attended Philips Exeter Academy and Boston University, where he won a law degree. He was a member of the debating teams at both schools.

After graduating he practiced law, and became one of the first Negroes to join the New York district attorney's staff. He was also the first Negro named to the Civil Service commission. Now, as president of the commission, he in-book handy. Every Sunday he is apply all his drive and energy to the new job.

I have no grandiose statement to make about changes and methods in the commission, he says. It has been the commission's policy not to interfere with the work of examiners who are all experts in their fields. It takes years to make a good examiner. About the commission itself, Morton says that the merit system has contributed more to developing democratic institutions, than any other single thing.

Speaking of his fondness for politics, Morton revealed that he has been a Democrat for 38 years. He likes to make campaign speeches, and can deliver as many as seven or eight in a single evening.

Although he met with more than his share of prejudice in his career as a lawyer, Morton said, "I do not think I have ever hated anybody, just the things people have been taught to believe sometimes."

Several years ago, he was known as the "Landis" of Negro baseball. Still an ardent fan, the commissioner always keeps a rule known and loved by his friends, the Harlem barbershop quartet. Some of his best friends are musicians, even though he has long relinquished the art. Every time Duke Ellington, or Cab Calloway, two of his friends, see him they greet him familiarly with "His commish," because everybody likes Ferdinand Q. Morton.

Jokes About Appetite

O'Dwyer Pledges 'No Politics', Davis in 2 Key Council Posts

Daily Worker

New York, N.Y.

By HARRY RAYMOND

A pledge that no "partisanship or politics" will sway his administration was made by Mayor O'Dwyer yesterday in his message to the first 1946 session of the City Council.

He told the councilmen his sole interest during the next four years would be to give the people "the best kind of administration."

The Mayor warned, however, that extension of municipal services will depend on availability of funds. He repeated his appeal made last Sunday to State Comptroller Frank Moore for a one percent increase in the sales tax for subway rehabilitation and a general increase in the city's share of state tax funds.

VOWS WAR ON BIAS 1-10-46

Part of the Mayor's message dealt with racial and religious bias and what he called "some tendencies toward intolerance." He said:

"I intend to do all I can to eliminate them. The churches and synagogues are doing their share. The city must get to the root of the evils of intolerance right in the schools. We can do that."

O'Dwyer told the Council he will appoint a Commission on Group Relations — a continuing commission that will be alert to "wrongs of intolerance." He said if any further legislation was necessary to carry out a program against any form of discrimination he would recommend it to the Council.

The Mayor arrived in the Council chamber at 1:40 p.m. after the council concluded a brief organizational session in which Joseph T. Sharkey, Brooklyn Democrat, was reelected vice-chairman and majority leader and Mrs. Genevieve B. Earle, Brooklyn Republican, was again designated minority leader. Thos. S.

DAVIS ON KEY GROUPS

Two key Council committees were elected—the rules and finance committees—and Councilman Benjamin J. Davis, Manhattan Communist, was elected as a minority member to both.

Members of the Rules comittee are: Walter R. Hart, chairman, Frederick Schick, Hugh Quinn, Samuel DiFalco, Charles Keegan, Edward Vogel (all Democrats), Benjamin J. Davis (Communist) and A. J. Phillips (Republican).

Elected to the finance committee were Charles E. Keegan, chairman, Frederick Schick, Anthony DiGiovanna, Hugh Quinn, Edward Vogel, William Carroll (all Democrats), Benjamin J. Davis (Communist) and Stanley M. Isaacs (Republican).

Due to the pressure of strike news we are compelled to eliminate the radio in this issue.

Later the Council accepted the resignation of Carroll from the body. He resigned to take an appointment as Deputy City Clerk, a post vacated by Murray Stand. Stand was elected by the Council as Chief City Clerk. Former chief city clerk H. Warren Hubbard is retiring. Carroll, a Manhattan Democrat, will be replaced in the Council by a person designated by the Democratic organization and approved by vote of the Council.

SHARKEY EDGES OUT EARLE

When the election of Council vice-chairman took place two Democrats, DiGiovanna and L. G. Clemente, were absent and J. A. Phillips and Hugh Quinn, Queens Democrats, declined to vote. Thus Sharkey won the post by one vote, he receiving 10 votes and Mrs. Earle nine. DiGiovanna arrived at the meeting later, cast his vote for Sharkey, giving the later 14 votes or a two vote edge over Mrs. Earle.

The Queens Democrats, it was learned, refused to vote for Sharkey because they were insisting the majority leadership and vice-chairmanship go to Quinn. Quinn, however, was elected to represent the Council at hearings outside of the body on the capital budget. Councilman Keegan will represent the Council at executive budget hearings. 1-10-46

City Council President Vincent Impelliteri told the municipal legislators their main problems were subway conditions, housing, general social and industrial unrest, unemployment, juvenile delinquency and crime.

FINANCIAL PICTURE

Mayor O'Dwyer painted a not-too-happy financial picture for the councilmen. He said Mayor LaGuardia had left him a budget deficit of $6,000,000 which might grow to $13,000,000 if the state does not assume at least 80 per cent of unemployment relief expenditures.

The next budget, the Mayor said, will have to be $65,000,000 higher, pension contributions will have to be raised $9,000,000, debt service will increase $15,000,000 and 2,000,000 must be provided to replace outworn automobile equipment.

He called for department increases totaling $26,000,000. He said the three-platoon (eight-hour day) system be restored in the Fire Department.

At the same time O'Dwyer told the councilmen: "We must cut our cloth to fit our means."

He said he would not be swayed in his course because it does not have unanimous support, or "because some toes are trodden on, or some vested interest of one kind or another disturbed." He warned the councilmen not to introduce legislation that would increase the cost of government. 1-10-46

The only piece of legislation introduced at yesterday's session was a majority bill to create the post of City Construction Coordinator. O'Dwyer said he proposes to appoint Park Commissioner Moses to this post. Under this proposal, Moses would become the boss of all city capital construction and at the same time maintain his job as Park Commissioner and be member of the City Planning Commission.

POWELL BREAKS TIES WITH HARLEM PAPER

The Times
New York, N.Y.

Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. announced yesterday that he "completely severs all connection" with The People's Voice, a weekly newspaper circulated in Harlem.

Friends of Mr. Powell said his decision to withdraw from association with the paper followed a conference last week with Negro national political leaders who advised him to end his ties with all left-wing groups. Many of Mr. Powell's supporters expressed the view that any connection with organizations of Communist persuasion would handicap his activities in the next Congress, which will be under Republican control.

In announcing his withdrawal from The People's Voice, which has been accused by its critics of following the Communist party line, Mr. Powell said that most readers regarded the paper as being under his personal supervision.

"This is not true and has not been for the past year and a half," Mr. Powell said. "Now that the Eightieth Congress is about to convene I am divorcing myself from all activities except minister of the Abyssinian Baptist Church and chairman of the People's Committee." Wed. 12-25-46

Mr. Powell said his sole partner in The People's Voice at the time it was organized in 1941 was Charles Buchanan, now general manager of the Savoy Ballroom. The present general manager of the paper is Dr. Doxey Wilkerson and the treasurer of the Powell-Buchanan Publishing Corporation is Max Yergan. Both are active in the promotion of the National Negro Congress and the Congress on African Affairs.

Adam and Hazel Buy Riverside Drive Apartment

Miami Herald Sat. 4-6-46

NEW YORK.—(ANP)—Adam Clayton Powell and his pianist wife, Hazel Scott, are joint purchasers of a 10-story apartment house on swank Riverside drive. The property, measuring 99.11 by 105 feet, contains 49 apartments. Its assessed value is $345,000 and the sale was made for cash above a first mortgage of $228,000 held by the Metropolitan Life Insurance company.

The building was purchased from Owner Albert H. Graham through the brokerage firm of D. H. Smith, who handled the transaction. Sat. 4-6-46

Thus the congressman becomes one of the first Negro holders on Riverside Drive and it is possible that his house will contain mixed tenants. No announcement has been made concerning the house which is fully occupied at present, although it may be expected that the congressman will have as his tenants New York's upper crust who will be able to carry the freight in rentals. No mention is made of the size of the apartments in the building. Further, no information as to disposition of the present tenants has been made public. The sale was consummated Tuesday, March 26.

Powell Says He Won't Vote For Truman In '48

Chicago, Ill. Chicago Defender

COLUMBUS, O.—(ANP)—Addressing a capacity crowd of persons attending the Vanguard League mass meeting Sunday afternoon in St. Paul A.M.E. Church, Congressman Adam Clayton Powell of New York City, declared, "My mind is not made up on some things, but there is one thing of which I am certain. I will not vote for Harry Truman for President in 1948." Sat 3-2-46

"So many mistakes have been made that an old saying is being revised into, 'To err is Truman'." Powell severely criticized Truman's advisers, directing most of it toward George Allen.

Speaking on the subject, "What's Going On in Washington," Congressman Powell stated that, "We are now going through the period of the second Missouri compromise. The death of the FEPC bill is a terrible blot on our record. We had an FEPC during the war and can't have one during the peace. Evidently it is more profitable to have war."

CIO Rejects Powell Support In Drive South

Chicago Defender Sat 4-27-46

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON—The CIO has asked Rep. Adam C. Powell, (D. N.Y.) to keep out of its one-million dollar southern organizing drive.

In cold uncompromising terms, Van A. Bittner, director of the drive to organize workers in the South, flatly rejected support from the newly organized "Help Organize the South" group, headed by Powell and took a broadside crack at assistance from other organizations outside the CIO, including the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. Chicago, Illinois

Powell's organization has planned a parade and a unity rally ned a parade and a unity rally to be held in Harlem on May 5 to raise funds for the CIO's drive. They have asked Allan S. Haywood, CIO organizational director to be the main speaker at the affair which has been endorsed by the Greater New York Industrial Union Council, CIO.

'Members' Only

At a news conference here Bittner declared that "no crowd whether Communist, Socialists or anybody else, will be permitted to 'mix up' in the campaign." He added, "that goes for the Southern Conference for Human Welfare and any other organization living off the CIO." He said, "this is a CIO affair. We don't want people to get us mixed up with all these organizations." Sat 4-27-46

In a letter to M. Moran Weston, coordinator for the "Help the South" group. Bittner stated: "We will tolerate no interferences from organizations outside the CIO," adding, "your so-called committee has no connection with the CIO . . . we do not need your money."

Continuing, he said, "I want to get our position to the people of New York especially so they won't give funds to this orgarization under the impression that they will be turned over to the CIO."

Bittner said he wanted to emphasize the CIO organizing drive has "one purpose and one purpose only—getting unorganized workers into unions affiliated with the CIO." Sat 4-27-46

Question CIO Policy

Bittner's broad assertion against the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, pioneering organization for political and economic equality for Negroes in the South, has raised the question in some quarters here as to the real intentions of the campaign as far as Negroes are concerned in a section where certain CIO unions have been credited with downright discrimination, and their policies designated as decidedly reactionary.

The Textile Workers Union, strongest CIO union in the South, said to control CIO policy in that section, reportedly sponsors a union policy which excludes Negro textile employees from other than menial employment. According to reliable information, there is not a single Negro employed as an operator in the southern textile industry regardless of seniority or other qualifications. It is moreover charged that opportunity for Negroes to advance in this industry are virtually nil.

In Birmingham, Ala., heavy industrial section of the South where the CIO organizing campaign is scheduled to be launched, it is reported on good authority that the CIO backed Eugene "Bull" Conner for Police Commissioner. Conner's record in Birmingham with respect to police brutalities against Negroes is said to be lousy. Under his term of office, several Negro veterans are reported to have been unjustifiably killed by police with the murdering officers being exonerated on the grounds of "justifiable homicide."

POWELL VOTES AGAINST DRAFT EXTENSION BILL

WASHINGTON (NNPA). — Adam Powell, New York representative, voted against the bill to extend the draft nine months after its expiration May 15, exempting those under 20 years of age. 4-27-46

Powell Against Case Bill; Dawson Silent

The Call

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA) — The votes of Representatives William L. Dawson, of Illinois, and Adam C. Powell Jr., of New York, both Democrats, on the important roll-call vote on the House resolution accepting the Senate amendments to the Case strike-control bill and sending the measure to the White House, adopted 230 to 106, were as follows:

Dawson, not voting; Powell, "nay." Kansas City

The Case bill as finally adopted would create a Federal Mediation Board, under whose authority unions working in industries affecting interstate commerce would be required to "cool off" for 60 days, after asking a collective bargaining conference, before they could strike or engage in a "concerted slow-down." 6-7-46

Violation of this provision would mean the loss by the strikers of their status as employes and their protection under the Wagner Act.

Congressman Powell made the following speech before the House of Representatives on Thursday:

Pittsburgh Courier

THE SUPREME COURT of the United States has just handed down a decision which marks the most important step towards winning the peace since the conclusion of the war. The decision abolishes separation of races on interstate transportation. It strikes at the heart of the un-Christian, un-Democratic hypocrisy of some Americans. The eminent Justice of Alabama, Mr. Hugo Black, in his concurring opinion, said it was to be regretted that such action had not been taken by Congress. This morning's Washington Post, in editorial, stated likewise. I agree with them. Sat 6-15-46

It so happens that on February 1, 1945 I submitted a bill—H.R. 1925—to this Congress to abolish jimcro on interstate transportation. That bill was referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. I wrote the Chairman of that Committee, after waiting for many months, asking for a hearing. He replied that the Committee was "too busy." I have talked to members of that Committee and they assure me that they would have been willing to have met at any time to have considered that bill. I am now asking the chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce to give Congress a chance to act. If I do not receive favorable word within the next few days I will place discharge petition on the Speaker's desk.

It is ridiculous that Negro veterans who have fought all over the earth for democracy, returning to the United States must ride in inferior, separate jimcro cars while prisoners of war from Germany are allowed first-class accommodations on all trains. It is a travesty that we can fight two wars to make a world safe for democracy in one generation and do nothing whatsoever about our own democracy here. When I say here, I mean here in the Halls of Congress.

We have not passed a single Win-the-peace law since the conclusion of the war. We have sat by and allowed the Supreme Court to do what we are paid to do. The salaries of Congressmen should not be increased one bit until we are ready to get down to the business of earning what we get now. Filibustering, gagging at and swallowing camels, is not earning ten thousand a year. One reason why we have not increased our pay is because our own consciences have not allowed us to do it. There's going to be a lot of changes made in this body before the next Congress rolls around. In the language of Abraham Lincoln, "You can fool some of the people some of the time but not all of the people all of the time."

Powell has been attacked on several issues by Reynolds, who last week blasted the incumbent for not being present when the Truman Anti-Strike bill came up in the House two weeks ago.

James Ford, Powell's right hand man, reported last week that the Harlem Representative has been named as the Democratic candidate for re-election, and has also been endorsed by the American Labor Party. In 1944 Powell easily won the GOP Democratic and ALP primaries. Chicago

Powell Will Not Enter GOP Primary In Harlem Battle

Afro-American

NEW YORK — Congressman Adam C. Powell has announced he will enter the race for the Republican nomination in the June primaries in an attempt to repeat his tri-party victory of 1944. Sat

This was the opening gun in what political observers predict will be a hotly waged battle between Powell and Grant Reynolds, former chaplain and now a parole commissioner. Reynolds has been designated by the GOP as its candidate for Congress.

Meanwhile, after much bickering it was announced by James Pemberton, Harlem's 14th district leader, that Congressman Vito Marcantonio, ALP chieftain, has been assured the support of Tammany Hall for reelection. Pemberton said that this would have to campaign without active backing from Tammany. Marcantonio told reporters several days ago that he intends to invade both the Democratic and GOP primaries. Like Powell in 1944 he won handily in these two, also.

This spiked rumors that Marcantonio would have to campaign without active backing from Tammany. Marcantonio told reporters several days ago that he intends to invade both the Democratic and GOP primaries. Like Powell in 1944 he won handily in these two, also.

Introducin' Adam, III

Introducing for the first time Adam Clayton Powell 3rd, first child of Congressman and Mrs. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. The youngest of the Powell clan will be a month old next Saturday. His mother, pianist and singing star of Broadway night clubs, is Hazel Scott. Baby Powell, who is perhaps one of the most talked about babies in New York, started out in life with plenty of social security in the form of gifts (financial and otherwise) from his famous parents' many friends.

Barney Josephson, Miss Scott's former employer, reportedly gave Adam 3rd a $1,000 bill and sportsman Johnny Walker, of Sugar Hill, sent along a gold spoon with the explanation that most scions of prominent parents are born with "silver spoons" but Adam 3rd had to be different.

What Powell Earns

Have you ever stopped to figure out just how much being a Congressman is worth? Let's take the case of Adam Powell, Harlem's gift to Washington.

In addition to his $15,000 per year legislative salary, Powell preaches on the side, draws another $10,000 from Abyssinia Baptist Church. The Afro-American

He also draws both dividends and salary from his newspaper—The People's Voice Baltimore, Md.

He collects anywhere from $100 to $300 every time he makes a speech, employing a top-flight booking agency to handle his engagements, and royalties from his recent book, "Marching Blacks," run into several figures.

He is allowed a total of $15,000 per year for office help in the House Office Building. Sat. 8-10-46

Last week in presenting his record he listed the following employees: Mrs. Phoebe Nelson, $4,500; Mrs. Hattie Freeman Dodson, $3,500; Miss Wilhelmina Adams, $2,000 and Corliss Crocker, $2.000. have never seen anybody there but Mrs. Nelson.

Furthermore, it is said that Mrs. Dodson is also secretary at Abyssinia, Mrs. Adams operates a flower shop in Harlem and Corliss Crocker is not known to me.

Moreover, Powell has been busy collecting campaign contributions from everybody that he can.

In addition to all this, Mrs. Powell (the former Hazel Scott) pulls down around $75,000 annually for her concerts which of course were stopped when the heir apparent to the Powell throne arrived.

This isn't bad chicken-feed for two bright young people.

Powell's Record in House Revealed

18 Months' Work Told by N. Y. Congressman

INTRODUCED 11 BILLS

Assistance to GI's, Workers Detailed

Baltimore, Md.

NEW YORK.—A comprehensive review of the activities of Rep. Adam C. Powell (Dem., N.Y.) during his first 18 months as a Congressman is given in a release sent out from his office here on July 16.

In it, Representative Powell, the first colored person elected to the Congress from the Eastern Seaboard, is cited as the first colored Congressman since Reconstruction to have any legislation passed by both Houses and signed by the President.

The measure in question was the Powell Amendment to the Flanagan School Lunch Bill which [illegible]red distribution of $100,000,000 to any State which discriminated against colored school children.

'Firsts' Listed

The release also points to the successful nomination of Cadet Wesley Brown to Annapolis and Mr. Powell's raising of the question of segregation in Federal prisons, a practice later abolished in Danbury, Conn.

Among "firsts" attributed to him are: Sat. 7-27-46

Consideration of DAR discrimination, a vote on the question of segregation in the District of Columbia, insistence that a colored journalist be seated in the Senate and House Press galleries;

Introduction of a bill to abolish jim crow in transportation, and of a bill to prohibit segregation in the armed forces.

Introduced 11 Bills

During the 79th Congress, Mr. Powell also introduced 11 bills calling for:

Permanent FEPC, naturalization of Filipinos, naturalization of Virgin Islanders, naturalization of Indians, abolition of lynching, naturalization of Koreans;

Abolition of jim crow in transportation, abolition of poll tax, abolition of jim crow in armed forces, pension for Matthew Henson, and sick and annual leave for war service postal employees.

Aided GI's Cause

Also pointed out is favorable action guaranteed in some 800 cases of court-martial injustices sent to the Congressman. Some of the most popular cases and changes effected included:

The freeing of two sentenced to death for criminal assault; the restoration to duty of former Capt. Leroy Clay, sentenced to 50 years;

The case of the 18 men court-martialed because of an incident in North Africa, some of whom were given an opportunity to re-enlist in the service, and others' sentences reduced;

Led to Appointment of Davis

The reduction of sentences given 100 officers at Seymour, Ind., given by Colonel Selway at Freeman Field and Colonel Selway's replacement by Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr.;

The restoration to duty of four Wacs in Massachusetts sentenced to one year hard labor and dishonorable discharges; the freeing of eight men condemned to death in Germany for mutiny;

The reinstatement of Bernard J. Mason, sentenced to life for an incident which occurred in Pazkin, Iran, and the reduction of sentences of five soldiers court-martialed at Camp Claiborne, La., for mutiny, with possible restoration to duty for some.

Helped Others Advance

In addition, the release lists the Congressman's activity in obtain[illegible]tter paying jobs for several [illegible]deral workers, including the [illegible]owing:

Wilhelmina Adams, $3,500; Corliss Crocker, $2,000, all in the House Office Building.

Dodson, $2,000: [illegible]

Thomasina Johnson, director of minority section, USES, $7,500.

J. Ida Jiggetts, medical and psychiatric social worker, Veterans' Administration Hospital, $4,500.

Appoint Woman Police Prosecutor

The Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa. Sat. 12-14-46

By CAPERS DUNMORE

CLEVELAND—Attorney Jean Murrell Capers was appointed assistant police prosecutor for the City of Cleveland last week by Mayor Thomas A. Burke. This is believed to be the first time that a Negro woman has been named to such a position in the United States.

This attractive 33-year-old attorney first attracted local and national prominence when she missed being the first Negro Councilwoman in Cleveland and the Nation by a slim margin of 140 odd votes when she was defeated by the incumbent Councilman Augustus Parker as representative of the Twelfth Ward. Political prognosticators had predicted that she would be a sure shot for this position in the coming elections.

In appointing her to the post as assistant police prosecutor Mayor Burke stated that because of her contributions to the community it was felt that she deserved a place in the city government. "This appointment," the Mayor said, "is also in recognition of the service Negro women have given towards better city government" Pittsburgh, Pa.

FROM TEACHING TO LAW.

The modern Portia has taken a keen inters in the social problems of her community. A graduate of Western Reserve School of Education, she entered the Cleveland elementary school system as a teacher in 1932 and in 1934 became the first Negro Physical education instructor in the City's High School System. She held this position in her high school alma mater, Central High.

On the advice of a close friend, Atty. Clarence Sharpe, prominent member of the Clevand Bar, she turned her talents to the pursuit of law. Graduating from Cleveland Law School in the class of '45, she took the Ohio State Bar Examination in June of 1945 and was admitted to the Bar in July, 1945. Since that time she has maintained offices as a practising attorney and intends to further her studies in law, specializing in labor and real estate law. The Courier

SPORTS FIGURE

Fostered perhaps by her work in physical education, Attorney Capers is a keen devotee of sports. She was Cleveland Citywide tennis champion of 1941, and with Hazel Franch won the national badmition doubles champion at the Chicago meet in 1941. She was also a member of one of Cleveland's leading girls basketball teams and is rated among Cleveland's top flight bowlers. Next season her athletic talents will be put to work on the golf links where she will play in competitive matches.

Attorney Capers has always taken part in the civic life of her community. She has served as physical ed director of the Phillis Wheatley Association and had worked with the NAACP, Future Outlook League, Urban League, League of Women Voters and Town Meeting of Greater Cleaveland. Sat. 12-14-46

She was also the first Negro in the editorial department of the World Publishing Co., holding the position of editorial assistant. As a writer she has also done work for The Pittsburg Courier and the Call and Post.

Rainey Wed to White Divorcee

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

Flies to Vermont in Surprise Ceremony

BURLINGTON, Vt.—Magistrate Joseph H. Rainey of Philadelphia was married here Friday morning to the former Mrs. Evelyn Titus Coplin, white, of 506 W. Coulter St., Germantown.

Mr. Rainey was divorced last week in Philadelphia by Mrs. Frances Wright Rainey, his third wife, on the grounds of indignities to the person, after having been married nine years.

The marriage was performed by Judge Wilkie E. Brisbin, who waived Vermont's usual five-day waiting period. The only witness was Miss Elizabeth Daniels, Canadian businesswoman. Both the jurist and Miss Daniels are long-time friends of Mr. Rainey.

Wife from Midwest

The new Mrs. Rainey is 31, the daughter of a Grand Rapids, Mich., physician and was formerly married to Sol Coplin of New York City. She has one child, 11-year-old William Coplin.

Mrs. Rainey was educated in Michigan and is a graduate of the University of Michigan.

Honeymoon in Canada

After staying here until Saturday the couple left for Quebec, Canada, where they will spend a seven-day honeymoon. On returning to Philadelphia, the Raineys will live at 1709 Jefferson St.

The couple flew out of New York City early Friday morning, arriving here by Colonial Airlines airship several hours later and were immediately married. 3-16-46

"I'm Happy"

When reached at the Hotel Vermont after the ceremony, Mr. Rainey said, "Naturally I'm happy! I think I have found a person who is understanding and who understands me." Sun

Referring to the interracial side of the new union the 45-year-old member of Philadelphia's minor bench said:

"Regardless of who you are, people of the world can join hands to fight reaction if they see fit, and that means reaction wherever it's found, either here or abroad."

Not Sure of Reaction

When asked by the AFRO reporter what reaction he thought Philadelphia might receive the announcement, Mr. Rainey said, "I don't know—I'd better wait before making any statement in that regard."

Mr. Rainey was the first colored Democrat elected to a magistracy in Philadelphia and is now serving his second term at 2406 N. Broad St. 3-16-46

He is president of the local chapter of the NAACP and once served Pennsylvania as a secretary of the Athletic Commission. His name most recently has been mentioned as a possible Democratic candidate for Congress from the Fourth (North Philadelphia) District.

Norris Support Of Tax Hike Scored

Sat. 9-21-46

PHILADELPHIA — J. Austin Norris, $10,000-a-year Negro member of the Board of Revision of Taxes here, was virtually read out of the Democratic party recently by Congressman Michael J. Bradley, chairman of the Democratic City Committee.

Norris, long time Democratic leader and for the last three years editor of the Philadelphia Edition of the Pittsburgh Courier, was accused by Congressman Bradley last Thursday of "going over to the Philistines."

Bradley's blast followed Norris' urging increased real estate assessments for 1947. Most of the city Republican administration leaders favor hiking the tax rate for next year.

Shortly before Bradley's condemnation of Norris, Norris admitted:

"I favor this increase. As a matter of fact, I recommended an increase last year, in line with the tax rates generally in effect in cities of similar size and character."

Congressman Bradley said Norris did not consult him regarding the proposed increase in assessments, and added, "As far as I am concerned, the action is still reprehensible and unjustified. I had nothing to do with the appointment of Mr. Norris to the Board of Revision of Taxes."

U. S. Senator Joseph F. Guffey, Democrat, is being opposed for reelection by Gov. Edward Martin, Republican, and Democratic politicians fear resentment against Guffey may be created by Norris' action.

Nelson Takes Office In Philadelphia

Sat. 6-22-46

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—Robert J. Nelson, 61, this week was sworn into office as assistant director of public safety, the post left vacant when Herbert E. Millen, first Negro to hold the $4,250-a-year job, resigned recently.

The ceremony took place in the office of Director of Public Safety James H. Malone, who administered the oath. Also present were Superintendent of Police Howard P. Sutton; Assistant City Solicitor James Ryan; Detective Captain Joseph Kerns; and Harry Battis, personal friend of Nelson.

Nelson, the second Negro to serve as State Athletic Director, is a veteran Republican politician.

"Double-Cross" Charged

He replaces Millen, who resigned in a huff June 4 charging the GOP city and state leadership with double-crossing him on what he claimed was a promised appointment to a municipal court judgeship.

A few hours before Nelson was sworn in, Millen was closeted with Mayor Bernard Samuel for twenty minutes in what was reported as a last minute effort by Samuel to persuade Millen to withdraw his resignation. After the conference neither would make any comment.

Nelson began his political career 30 years ago in Harrisburg, working in the State Treasurer's office before World War I. Years later, for a brief period, he transferred his political activity to Wilmington, Del., where he lined up with the DuPonts. He published the Wilmington Advocate, which was influential among Negroes throughout the state.

Weds Poet's Widow

Returning to Philadelphia when former Governor Pinchot was rising to power, he was sponsored by Stephen Stahlnecker, Pinchot's former secretary, and headed Pinchot's campaigning among Negroes throughout Pennsylvania. Both Nelson and Stahlnecker are natives of Reading, Pa.

Payoff for Nelson during Pinchot's second term was his appointment as State Athletic Commissioner in 1932, a post he held until 1935.

A widower, Nelson's wife was the former Alice Dunbar, widow of Paul Laurence Dunbar, noted Negro poet. A school here at 12th st. and Columbia ave. is named in honor of Dunbar.

Sen. Claghorn Makes Record

Congressional, We Mean, And It's No Joke

WASHINGTON, Apr. 11.—Sen. Beauregard Claghorn (NBC) has finally been admitted by Congress and by unanimous consent.

The Dixie foghorn has ceased to be a joke down below that Mason and Dixon's Line that he's been riding on Fred Allen's Sunday night radio show.

A Joke, Son

It all happened when Rep. Henry D. Dar-cade, Jr., a Southerner from the old school—Opelousas, La., that is—asked permission of the House to reprint in the Congressional Record an editorial attack on Claghorn by the Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch. The House agreed unanimously, as it does to all such requests.

Here's what the Times-Dispatch had to say about Claghorn:

"For years, yes, decades, we've been battling to bring some measure of rationality into the fried-chicken - watermelon-mammy-magnolia-moonlight-mocking bird-moon June-croon school of thinking on Southern problems, and now we've run up against the toughest proposition yet. We refer, of course, to that bombastic blumbling, brou-ha-ha of the air waves, Sen. Beauregard Claghorn, 'from the Deep South, that is,' whom a writer in Life has just referred to as 'the most-quoted man in the Nation.'

"This amazing character on the Sunday evening Fred Allen program must have given millions in the North and West the notion that Southern Senators spend their time in making frightful puns, and bellowing 'that's a joke, son!'

"We 'Southronehs' have been kept sufficiently busy asserting to our Northern friends that we aren't all morons and degenerates a la Tocabbo Road, or banjo-picking mammy-singers, a la Jolson, but now we have to go around protesting that we aren't all raucous nitwits and foghorns like Sen. Claghorn, 'from the South, that is.' Cad!"

Helpful, That Is

[Cincinnati Enquirer]

WE beg to differ from the Richmond Times-Dispatch, which is a bit disheartened by the meteoric popularity of radio's "Senator Claghorn," because of the implication that all Southern Congressmen are like that, and because it makes just one more thing for Southerners to contend with, after all these years of "Tobacco Road" and other not-so-true-to-type depictions of what life is like in the South.

In the first place, the radio characterization is gently satirical. It does not inspire a cruel laugh at the South—and we've always believed being the butt of a good-humored laugh does no one any harm—quite the contrary. It's our guess that the net result of Claghorn's career (which necessarily will be limited by the available stock of North-South puns) will be a better feeling between North and South. Perhaps a little more laughter a la the Claghorn and "damyankee" variety would have gotten feelings in their proper proportion some years back. When we can laugh at and with each other, it's a good cement of friendship. Only the laughter of sarcasm—which isn't true humor anyhow—makes enmities worse.

Anyhow, for our money, Senator Claghorn is a better typification of a Southern member of Congress than some of the specimens who have been and are still on Capitol Hill from below the Mason-Dixon Line. To name but one of each category, there was Huey Long and there is "That Man" Bilbo.

So, of a friendship rooted in the South, we say to Claghorn, keep on staying away from the "Union Stations" and "thee Yankee Stadium" and avoiding those "Northern winds"; we think you're doing good. Good, that is.

The South Will Knuckle Under

Southern politicians take themselves seriously, but no one else will much longer. They talk too much to do so little. They shout that they will not obey the supreme court's decrees about Negroes, and then knuckle under.

A while back it was Negroes' right to vote that the court acted on. Promptly these beneficiaries of the southern system of politics that disfranchises whites as well as blacks, went into their act—only over their dead bodies should Negroes go to the polls. Negroes are voting and there have been no suicides.

A few days ago segregation drew the high court's scrutiny. It ordered no more separating of passengers travelling interstate by bus. Promptly the politicians made their bid for attention. They declared segregation would go on. They did that though they know separating travelers is an expense, uncompensated.

Segregation in travel imposes dual facilities and inflicts a corresponding loss of service. These champions of hate would see that if they could think. But think or not, in ten years Negroes will be out of gun shot of the devil of prejudice. The ballot will armor them against attack by law. Once the law makes all equal, the American people will share common carriers with Negroes, as freely as they now share streets and highways.

BEHIND THE SCENES

The Afro-American, Baltimore, Md.

WITH RALPH MATTHEWS

SOMEWHERE IN THE SOUTH—The most ironic and amusing thing I have discovered about the South is the attitudes of the people of one Southern State toward those of another. A taxi driver in Atlanta, carrying me to the airport was deeply annoyed when I told him I was going to Jackson, Miss. "You're surely not going down there among those crackers," he said, "Well take care of yourself."

Ralph Matthews

It was amusing, for I had just finished reading some of the speeches of Gene Talmadge who is running for governor of Georgia which were more imflamatory than Bilbo's worse tirades.

Talmadge had gone to great lengths in a half-page ad explaining just how he planned to circumvent the Supreme Court and the Constitution to keep colored voters from participating in Georgia's elections.

Other aspirants for office were equally vehement in their tirades against all but whites. But still my taxi driver felt very sorry because I had to go into a dreadful State like Mississippi.

Pot Calls Kettle Black

By the time I reached Birmingham, I found the same condition obtained. A distinguished citizen had me sit down and relate to her all of the terrible things I had seen in Mississippi.

"It's just terrible over there," she said. "Mississippi is so backward," her tone was that of some one living in New York or Boston. She absolutely forgot that Alabama had given the country the infamous Scottsboro case and other national and international scandals.

Continuing on to Nashville, I found the people there keenly interested in the Bilbo case and deploring the fact that he had not been defeated.

"It's a shame that a man like that should be sent back to the Senate," they observed mournfully, forgetting that Tennessee's own Kenneth McKellar has been one of the worst enemies of civil liberities ever to serve in Washington and stands a good chance of going back if he keeps in with the Crump machine.

How Do They Think?

However, if the minds of the segregated Southerners are hard to fathom, the mentalities of whites are even more unpredictable. The Jackson (Mississippi) Daily News opposed the Bilbo candidacy. Examine its argument attests to its own weakness.

Editor Frank Sullens said editorially:

"Bilbo has got to go. Mississippi is entitled to, and should have a senior senator who will represent the State with decency, honor and ability.

"We have a junior senator who is doing that, and Senator Eastland is entitled to a colleague who will work with him in harmony and restore the prestige our State once held in the upper branch of the nation's lawmaking body.

"Today the name of Mississippi is spoken with derision and contempt throughout the nation and all because of the demagogy of Bilbo."

Poor, Innocent Eastland

How is that for a sense of values? It was Eastland, who in an attempt to out-Bilbo Bilbo, issued the blackest smear ever leveled against a minority when he told his evil lie about colored troops raping a whole town in France.

It was the same Eastland who stood for days reading the crime records of every city in the United States during the filibuster against FEPC trying to prove that colored citizens committed most of the crimes in the U.S.A. and the lawmakers were resorting to every subterfuge and technical device to keep all from registering. Bilbo's crime was that the sheer audacity of his challenge pelled some leaders to get back times bragged bone enough to resist those pressures. To this extent he was a quarterback.

Just a Passel of Skunks

But Bilbo was only the most odoriferous of a whole passel of smaller political skunks. All of the candidates ran on the artificial issue of white supremacy, varying only in degree.

Just how were the lawmaking bodies and the conservative leaders handling the situation? Well, his antics in Congress but Congressman Dan McGehee running for re-election in the Seventh District in a quarter-page ad said of himself:

"Dan McGehee has consistently fought the passage of the FEPC, anti-lynching, anti-poll tax and such other legislation so vital to the interests of Mississippi. He has fought and voted to qualify to keep going."

Mississippi Altruism

"It is different now. He charged that citizens by the number of times they had been up and failed to qualify. One man had failed after 46 trips, but he kept every day.

In addition, conservative leaders were calling leaders at businessmen and putting all of economic pressure on them to persuade their friends and followers to renounce their right to vote.

"Dan McGehee feels it is not necessary to state his record in Congress—it has been only in degree.

John Rankin gets most of the

has been good."

But here is McGehee's clincher which is vitally important:

"If Dan McGehee is not sent back to Congress, he will be replaced as chairman on important committees by a Northern member who does not have the interest of the South at heart.

"His place could not be taken by any new man from the Seventh District. A new man will go to the foot of every committee on which he is placed."

Between Two Fires

But did the voters of Mississippi have a choice in the Seventh District? Not on your life. Here is the advertisement of his opponent, John Bill Williams:

"I will fight with all the energy and resources at my command all legislation and measures designed to destroy our traditional white supremacy and government, such as FEPC, anti-poll tax, antilynching and such other bills.

"To the white Democratic voters of the Seventh Congressional District, I have fought a hard but clean campaign, if elected I will make the Seventh District a useful, active, unselfish and sober member of Congress."

Ignorance Out of Atlanta

The Times and Courier
Wed. 10-30-46

A loose and incorrect saying in an Associated Press dispatch, dated Atlanta, October 19, and telling that one Scott, a negro who had announced as a candidate for coroner, has been taken to a mental hospital is that "he stood a good chance of becoming the first negro officeholder in the Deep South since Reconstruction days". Those days ended in South Carolina in April, 1877, and negroes (not many) were office-holders in South Carolina until 1896. Negro Democrats were members of the general assembly from at least four counties in the 1880s and held other offices in two or three counties. The complete exclusion of negroes from elected offices was caused by the substitution of the primary for the convention system—and the negro "Democrats" are now struggling to get into the primary instead of asking for the restoration of the convention plan of making nominations. Presumably, the Associated Press was referring to state and county offices. Many negroes have held postmasterships and other federal offices. The capital city of South Carolina had a negro postmaster in the middle '80s. There were others. Charleston, S.C.

Jimmy Byrnes—1919 And Today

WASHINGTON — Continuing whirlpool of discord in the Paris Peace Conference of which State Secretary James F. Byrnes is the center may well be explained by the uncompromising anti-minority background which the former representative from South Carolina disclosed in Congress in 1919.

The Secretary of State is now demanding unity and self rule for the peoples of Germany. He has informed the Polish government that the U. S. feels justified in directing the conduct of its elections. And he has supported the Australian proposal for a Human Rights court to review the grievances of white minorities only in former enemy countries.

Paradox Over Greece

Since Secretary Byrnes loudly proclaims the democratic principle, it may be supposed he did not know, as Herbert Evatt admitted, that the Australian court proposal did not apply to non-white minorities. But a paradox reveals itself in his approval of the Greek elections. For four years the Greek people fought and died for freedom, while their king lived at ease in London. Secretary Byrnes now feels that it is the free will of the people that called the exiled monarch back to rule the masses. He even arranged for a U. S. aircraft carried to visit Piraevus, and for 143 planes to fly over Athens, congratulating the Greek people on their choice.

Byrnes, who was appointed to represent U. S. foreign policy, apparently is not far removed from his background. As a member of Congress after the last war, he launched a vicious attack against Negroes and Negro leaders, while decent people throughout the world and the nation were reacting with horror to the race riots in Washington and Chicago.

Pits God Against Negro

Speaking on the floor of the House, Aug. 25, 1919, Byrnes, fresh from South Carolina, said, "As to social equality, God Almighty never intended that a white race and a black race should live on terms of social equality, and that which the Creator did not intend, man cannot make possible."

With Secretary Byrnes, however, there are different types of violence. He continued in his remarks, "Whenever a Negro commits an assault on a white woman, the white man does not reason. He acts . . . It must be said that the mob rarely, if ever does violence to any but the guilty Negro. The mob may lynch the 'guilty' man, but the law-abiding Negro knows he is in no danger," he explained.

"If the two races are to live together in this country," he continued, "it may be well understood that the war has in no way changed the attitude of the white man toward the social and political equality of the Negro." Byrnes referred to World War I, which was fought against the same enemies with the exception of one, for the same principals. He has progressed from a Congressman to Secretary of State, and apparently his bias has expanded to include non-white populations of the whole world.

Hints Deportation

Byrnes told Congress that if the Negro had come out of the war with the determination not to live in the U. S. without social and political equality, then he should depart for some other country, and that his departure would be facilitated by whites, who desired "no disturbing factor in their midst."

". . . There are in this country, 90,000,000 white people determined not to extend political and social equality to the 10,000,000 Negroes . . . Neither political equality nor social equality is essential to the happiness of the Negro," Byrnes concluded.

This was in 1919, less than a year after the first war for world democracy. Now, 27 years later, the proponent of second class citizenship for colored people, as representative of U. S. foreign policy is in a position to apply his theories on a world wide scale. His record at the peace conference indicates that he is doing just that.

JAMES F. BYRNES OF "TOBACCO ROAD" SECRETARY OF STATE.

Chicago, Ill.

(This was written before Henry A. Wallace resigned.)

THE CONTROVERSY over what Secretary of Commerce Henry Wallace said on our foreign policy and what President Truman okayed at variance with the declared interest of Secretary of State James F. Byrnes recalls many such diplomatic slip-ups down through the years of political history centering around the White House. A Secretary of State really speaks "the mind" of the administration. A weak or even a strong Secretary can either make or break a president.

Lucius Harper

Sat. 9-28-46

It is conceded by best authority that at the most crucial hour in our nation's history we have the weakest Secretary of State. Sending James F. Byrnes of South Carolina to aid in establishing world peace is like assigning a jackass to do an elephant's job. His political training and association has actually fitted him to do everything contrary to the formation of a peace program. It just isn't in the man. He was long a troublesome cancer on every attempt to establish peace in South Carolina, and he was forever in the company of the worst demagogues that ever sat in the House and Senate. He was a bosom pal of Pat Harrison of Mississippi, and it was the Byrnes-Harrison combination that worked with clock-like precision in the third session of the Seventy-fifth Congress that filibustered the anti-lynch bill in January 1938.

Defender

Byrnes has always been a "Tobacco Road" politician. He betrayed President Roosevelt in 1936 when he told voters of South Carolina that "a vote for Byrnes is a vote for Roosevelt." When he won the senate seat for six more years, he immediately joined the reactionary group and fought the President's relief measures bitterly. On the Senate Appropriations committee of which the old Virginia fossil, Carter Glass was chairman. Byrnes was the dominating influence and the two stood as bottlenecks through which all relief appropriations were squeezed to the marrow. He always spoke for the Northern corporate and industrial wealth — then fighting Roosevelt — which has enslaved his own people in South Carolina.

Chicago, Ill.

THE NOW SECRETARY of State Byrnes, who is talking so loudly about bringing peace in Poland, the Balkans and the Middle East, where people are starving, actually tried to starve the laborer in this country by joining with Pat Harrison to defeat the wage-hour bill which passed the Senate over their bitter protest. When a member of the House, he could be relied upon to hold up government appropriations for Howard University. He delivered some of his most venomous tirades against the government "spending the taxpayers' money to educate a bunch of Negroes."

Sat. 9-28-46

For twenty-six days he stood in the midst of the fight to block passage of the anti-lynch bill, which cost the taxpayers $9,000 a day. Southern senators, led by Tom Connally of Texas, now head of our Foreign Relations committee, filibustered against the bill although the majority of the senators favored it. Byrnes and Connally (who, incidentally is trying to make the Balkans better, but not Texas) prevented the bill from coming to a vote. When Jimmy Roosevelt, then a presidential secretary, telephoned Byrnes and asked politely: "Father would like to know what likelihood there is of the filibuster's ending," Byrnes retorted, "Tell President Roosevelt not until the year 2038, unless the bill is withdrawn before then!" And this is our great Secretary of State who wants to save lives in the Balkans, but permit Negroes to be lynched in South Carolina. What a secretary!

HERE IS A SPEECH that Byrnes and Harrison prepared to defeat the anti-lynch bill, and delivered by Byrnes on the floor of the senate. "We see the people of the South," he began, "confronted with the terrible situation of a Democratic majority betraying the trust of the Southern people, destroying the things that they have idolized and in which they believe. I read the other day that the Negro representative from Illinois had introduced a bill to abolish Jim Crow car laws in the States, to abolish those laws which provide for the segregation of the races. The next thing, in all probability, will be a bill to provide that miscegenation of the races cannot be prohibited, and when that has been accomplished, they will come back here and seek the help of the majority party in power to take away from the states the right to say who shall vote in their elections, to say that every colored man in every southern state should take part in the primaries in the state." In the event there are any black people in the Balkans, this is the type of democracy our "great" Secretary of State, Mr. Byrnes, will bring them. Out of such "peace," Europe will be rebuilt.

Knowing Byrnes' record as he does, is there any wonder that a gentleman like Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace would try to save the world and President Truman from the lowly aims of this "Tobacco Road" politician? It is a tragedy in the annals of civilization that at the very hour when real men are needed at the helm of the government to promote progress and peace that such narrow-minded, prejudice - ridden souls as James Byrnes and Tom Connally are at the forefront. America, with such representation, has reduced our diplomatic relations with foreign countries to its lowest estate.

GO BACK OVER the list of Secretaries of State under former presidents and see how they compare with Byrnes of South Carolina. Theodore Roosevelt had the great New York lawyer, Elihu Root, a master at constitutional law; Taft had Philander Knox, the great Philadelphia lawyer and aristocrat; Wilson had William Jennings Bryan, free from smallness and bigtory; Harding had Charles Evans Hughes, later Chief Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court; Coolidge had Robert Lansing, gentleman and scholar; Franklin Roosevelt had Cordell Hull, Southern gentleman, diplomat, and free of prejudice. Now look at Byrnes, and die laughing.

By sending seven cents to The Lighthouse and Informer, a newspaper of negroes, 1022½ Washington street, Columbia, S. C. one may have a copy of its edition, November 3, containing a carefully compiled and comprehensive, though condensed, record of the deliverances of Dr. James F. Byrnes of Spartanburg, secretary of state in President Truman's cabinet, relating to the "negro question". The newspaper of the colored people is distinctly unfriendly to Dr. Byrnes, but that is not an argument of weight with us reactionaries to admit him to our fellowship. The disposition of the negro members of the New, or Rooseveltian, party toward Dr. Byrnes is evidence of dissensions in that party. The News and Courier does not contend that negroes' dislike for a white statesman makes him a good and great white statesman though it does count in one's favor in the minds of many white South Carolinians, especially if they are holders of offices.

Virginia Liberal Blames Carter Glass for State's Sorry Political Plight

John Locke Green Tells AFRO Reporter Why He Fought Deeds of Venerable Rebel

By RALPH MATTHEWS

ARLINGTON, Va. (AFRO National Bureau) — It was but a few short hours after 88-year-old Senator Carter Glass marched into eternity that I walked into the office of County Treasurer John Locke Green in Arlington County Courthouse.

The timing was almost perfect, because it was lanky John Locke Green who has for years carried on a one-man crusade against the deceased Senator.

Asked Displacement

Even as Carter Glass was giving up his long struggle for life, Treasurer Green was preparing another shot at his venerable head.

The attack was in the form of a letter to Senator Byrd — a letter which was never mailed — calling upon him to declare Glass's seat vacant.

The letter was the culmination of a long crusade to oust the aged Senator ever since he became inactive, more than four years ago.

But Mr. Green wanted to rid the State of Glass's influence not only because of his inability to serve, but also because he blames Glass for the backwardness of the State in general.

Sought Constitution Ban

Senator Glass began to wield an influence in Virginia politics as early as 1902, Mr. Green pointed out.

He was one of the fathers of the movement to renounce the Constitution under which the State was readmitted to the Union after the Civil War, Green said.

Writing of the period which ushered Glass into Virginia public affairs, Mr. Green had this to say:

"After the Civil War, with the reconstruction days behind her, Virginia began to recapture some of her past influence and importance in the Councils of the Nation.

Resurrected Mistakes

"However, the song of hate took over the song of Sherman's march to the sea.

"Those Virginians who sing the song of hate refuse to let the dead sleep. Even the peace and quiet of Hollywood Cemetery had no appeal for them in this direction.

"Not content to let the dead alone, they resurrected the mistakes and follies of their ancestors for political purposes.

"Then, as a result of this political hate there was conceived in iniquity a convention. It met in Richmond in 1901 and was in continuous session for over a year.

"It cost the Commonwealth over $100,000. At the conclusion of its deliberations, to make the scene of its action more complete, it was baptized in fraud.

"It returned the representative government of Virginia to caste rule, generally known as 'class rule.'"

Bill of Rights

The George Mason Bill of Rights, insuring civil liberties for all people of Virginia, was originally written into the Constitution.

Many of the delegates, however, balked at taking the oath to uphold the Constitution as long as the clause protecting the rights of white and black alike was a part of the document.

While others wavered, Carter Glass put all sham aside and, gaining the floor, declared:

"Mr. Chairman, . . . I desire to state a practical objection to taking this oath, which makes it a question of conscience with us.

"The oath proposed to be administered provides that we shall 'support and maintain the Constitution of the United States.'

"There can be no objection to that. But it further provides that we shall 'support and maintain the Constitution and laws of Virginia.'

"I can see a very serious objection to that. It means that we are to be bound by oath to 'support and maintain' an instrument that we were sent here to tear to pieces and reconstruct.

"It particularly means that we are to bind ourselves by oath to maintain, and not to alter, that very feature of the existing Constitution of Virginia which we were sent here to change radically.

"To illustrate: Article XII of the exisiting Constitution of Virginia (1867), providing for future changes and alterations in the Constitution says:

"'No amendment or revision shall be made which shall deny or in any way impair the right of suffrage or any civil or political right that is conferred by this Constitution, except for causes which apply to all persons and classes without distinction.'

Blocks Our Plans

"This provision of the existing Constitution (1867) stands directly across the purpose for which this convention was ordered.

"In short, it says in terms that this convention (1902) shall not do the exact thing for which it was designed; that we shall not perform the mission for which we were sent here.

"If we are not to alter the franchise clause of the existing Constitution (1867) without regard to the provision above quoted from Article XII, we had as well not alter it at all.

"If we are to change it, why in the name of reason should we be required to take an oath to support and maintain a thing which we propose deliberately to tear up by the roots?

'The chief purpose of this convention (1902) is to amend the suffrage clause of the existing Constitution (1867)."

This was the creation of the poll tax which disfranchised former slaves and poor whites.

Continued Glass:

"It does not require much prescience to foretell that the alterations which we shall make will not apply to 'all persons and classes without distinction.'

"We were sent here to make distinctions. We expect to make distinctions. We will make distinctions. Hence, I object to taking an oath which will bind me not to make distinctions.

"Indeed, I really believe I would sooner permit myself to be expelled from this convention than to bind myself by oath not to alter the suffrage clause of the Underwood Constitution.

"That Constitution was unquestionably designed to prevent the white people of Virginia from ever again getting possession of their government."

Must Be Repudiated

Mr. Green, who has been a noted liberal and long a battler for the rights of all citizens regardless of race, creed or color, concludes:

"The principle of government declared for by Carter Glass on the floor of the Constitutional Convention of 1902, and embodied in the Constitution of Virginia is solely responsible for Virginia's predicament of today.

"It is the reason why Virginia has only one Senator. That principal is why Virginia has had no son to serve on the Supreme Court of the United States since 1860.

"That principle, initiated by Carter Glass, and written into our State Constitution, is the direct cause why Virginia stands 42nd from the top in education.

"It is why it stands fifth from the top for tuberculosis, first place for Armed Forces turn-downs on account of illiteracy and bad health, and first and second place for major crimes committed.

"Until Glass's principle of distinctions is repudiated and destroyed by Virginians, which cannot be done until we have a new Constitutional Convention, we will continue to occupy the position as above stated."

OLD CARTER GLASS, FOE OF NEGROES, GOES "SOMEWHERE"

SENATOR Carter Glass of Virginia died in Washington last week at the age of 88. His death, of course, brought sadness in his immediate family circle, but beyond that it was a sort of blessing to America as a whole. He was actually clogging up a useful seat in the senate and was too hateful and contrary to resign and permit his state to be represented by someone with advanced and progressive ideas. He called himself an "Unreconstructed Rebel." He was that and more: he was a demagogue of the worst type. He never did represent the people who voted to elect him. He was the rich man's darling in politics.

Lucius Harper

He had no faith in the rank and file of humanity. He believed that the right to rule belonged to the aristocrats who had the wealth and leisure to cultivate the graces of life. His own humble beginning seemed to have intensified his respect for the wealthy, and likewise strengthened his contempt for the poor and underprivileged. In his youth, he admitted, he went to bed hungry many a night. He believed that democracy took a downward step when the people were given the right to vote directly for their senators. He clung to the old-fashioned idea that the state legislators were more competent to select a senator than the electorate at large. What he was actually confessing was that it was easier for rich men to buy their senators this way than to control general elections in the process of the purchase.

WHEN Roosevelt took over the government after the Hoover debacle, Senator Glass became his bitter enemy. He had a hatred for all the welfare programs Roosevelt instituted in behalf of the millions of unemployed. His lashing tongue was forever active in criticizing the president for his many alphabetical set-ups, especially the WPA. "I have lived too long," he said on his eightieth birthday. "It does not make a man happy to see his country repudiate his work. That is enough to make anyone sorry that his life has extended beyond the allotted span. Today we no longer have democracy; we have mobocracy. I shall remain an Unreconstructed Rebel until the policies of the government are changed." He was a small fellow, in both mind and height. He weighed just 100 pounds and was five feet, four inches tall. His habit of speaking from the extreme corner of his mouth prompted Woodrow Wilson to say: "Carter Glass is the only man I ever saw who can whisper in his own ear."

It was Carter Glass who actually disfranchised the Negroes of Virginia. After the Civil War there were approximately 700,000 whites and 510,000 Negroes in Virginia, with slightly more than 100,000 of the Negroes registered as voters. Usually the Negroes allied themselves with the poor white farmers to defeat the rule of the aristocrats. They were successful until the aristocrats in 1869 began a campaign of race hatred and split the Negro-white farmer coalition. They ruled for ten years until the Readjuster Movement and Populism shook the South, and the Negro-white farmer coalition was reunited. The cry of "Africanization" of Virginia went up, and again the alliance was broken. These tough political encounters convinced the Democrats of Virginia that the Negro must be disfranchised so that he could no longer tie up with the white farmers to overthrow the rule of the aristocrats.

BY 1900 disfranchisement was practically accomplished through dishonest elections and terrorism which kept the Negro voters from the polls, but the Bluebloods decided that legal disfranchisement would be safer and less likely to react against them than open corruption. To this end the Constitution Convention of 1901 was called, and there Carter Glass played his first major role in Virginia politics in ousting the Negro; taking away his citizenship. On June 12, 1901, the 100 delegates met in convention. Glass was in charge. The overwhelming opinion was that "no matter what the costs, no matter what the method, this one fact stands out supremely true: that the Anglo-Saxon race is now and forever will be master wherever it exists." The crux of their problem was to disfranchise the Negroes without alarming some delegates who were afraid that disfranchisement would be imposed on the poor whites beyond the Blue Ridge. Glass advocated a poll tax, and it was adopted. This seemed fair to all, but Glass added a second measure to save the whites and outlaw the Negroes. He introduced an "understanding clause" whereby the Negro applicants for the right to vote could be easily disqualified by white election officials for failure to understand and interpret constitutional questions, a legalized fraud that put learned Negroes at the mercy of ignorant white electors who kept them from voting.

Near the end of the convention Carter Glass took the platform and proudly announced: "In the midst of differing contentions and suggested perplexities, there stands out the uncontroverted fact that the law, of the law. Discrimination! Why, characteristics of the black race poor whites were tricked, too. precisely what we pro- and not against the 'race, color, or exactly is what this previous condition' of the people 1900, only 264,095 ballots were was elected for—to themselves. As has been said, we have accomplished our purpose strictly within the limitations of the Federal Constitution; that will be done "by any plan." In response to Negro voter as to the floor as to the disfranchisement of was not being done "by discrimination," Glass of the white electorate. By fraud, no; by discrim- been said, we have accomplished our purpose strictly within the letter of the Federal Constitution within the letter of itations of the Federal Constitution, its effect was and not in violation tution by legislating against the not limited to the Negro vote. It is fine discrimina- cast in the presidential election to the very extremity tion, indeed, that we have practiced under the limitations of the fraud that put learned Negroes at the mercy of ignorant white electors who kept them from voting.

AS A final blow to democratic government, the new constitution now proclaimed in force by the delegates and was never submitted for ratification by the Federal Constitution, its effect was not limited to the Negro vote. The poor whites were tricked, too. From a potential vote of 477,501 in 1900, only 264,095 ballots were cast in the presidential election that year. Four years later the number of votes cast in the national election shrank to 129,000, less than half. The Negro vote, thanks to Carter Glass, had been reduced to 25,000. Recently the figures showed that out of 25,000 potential colored voters in Richmond, for example, there were only about 1,800 Negroes eligible to vote under the "Carter Glass restrictions." Probably the recent decision by the U. S. Supreme court in outlawing strictly white primaries may relieve this situation. For this noble work in Virginia, Carter Glass was sent to Washington by the aristocrats who have controlled Virginia ever since. He remained there for 40 years or more until God removed him, not the voters of Virginia.

Carter Glass, who was as undemocratic in his ideals as any man who ever occupied a senate seat, now goes to join a fantastic parade of political charlatans who once joined in the chorus to drown democracy here. He will be at ease in the company of Ben Tillman, Cole Blease, Tom Watson, Tom Hardwick, James K. Vardaman, Pat Harrison, Tom Heflin and "Cotton Ed" Smith. Let us hope that their prejudices won't ruin Heaven or the other place, if once they gather around the fire and start debating the race issue.

Another 'Rebel' Passes On

Courier

The passing of Senator Carter Glass of Virginia will not be mourned by colored people.

Saturday

Actually dubbed "The Unreconstructed Rebel" by the late President Roosevelt, Carter Glass lived up to that designation throughout his life.

6-8-46

Born in 1858, his family's fortunes were lost during the Civil War and thereafter he was bitter against Negroes whom he apparently held responsible for his poverty.

As soon as he attained political office, he wrote Virginia's basic jim-crow law and throughout his life was insistent upon its enforcement.

Pittsburgh

He was the leader of the diehard Southern political band which lost no opportunity to smear and hamstring colored people in every way simply because they were colored.

Pennsylvania

He could always be counted upon for an anti-Negro speech or action and throughout his long service in both houses of the Congress he remained what he was when he first came on the scene, always riding with the Cole Bleases, the James K. Vardamans, the Tom Connallys and the Jimmy Byrneses.

Significant and comforting is the fact that men such as he are much more in the minority and much less influential than they were when he came to office, and that fact indicates that America is far closer to the democratic ideals it espouses than it was when he raged.

Virgin Islands

Judge Moore, of Virgin Islands, vacationing here

Los Angeles Sentinel

California

Federal Judge Herman E. Moore, of the district court at the Virgin Islands, is in Southern California on his first visit, resting and amusing himself by comparing the climatic attractions of the southland with his post, a United States territory in the Carribean.

"The Virgin Islands", he told reporters mischieviously, "have the kind of climate Southern California boasts about". He is stopping in Long Beach as the guest of his wife's sister, Mrs. Guy Weaver, 1458 Myrtle ave., but he is making the office of Attorney Loren Miller his Los Angeles headquarters. Mrs. Moore is with him.

Appointed to the federal bench in 1939 by the late President Roosevelt, Judge Moore had the honor of succeeding the recently appointed governor of the territory, former Judge William Hastie. Another recent Truman appointee, Federal Judge Irving Mollison, of the New York district, was for 15 years associated with Judge Moore as a law partner.

Judge Moore is between court sessions. Only federal jurist in the islands, he holds court every two months in each of the three principal islands, St. Thomas, St. John and St. Croix. His bench also serves as a superior or supreme court of appeal from the local or municipal courts and he hears from five to 600 cases a year. Sat 2-23-46

Native Mississippian, Judge Moore was an attorney for the Boston Transit system before going to Chicago. At the time of his appointment, he was a member of the Illinois Commerce commission.

The Virign Islands, Judge Moore considers more American" than any island in the Caribbean (which he pronounces Car-rib-bean). The natives seemed traditionally to have a proclivity for either the British or the Americans, despite the fact that the Danes first settled the islands.

The Danes, who brought in African slaves, were soon outnumbered by them four-to-one, Judge Moore pointed out. Passing up the language of their masters, the slaves learned English and soon their owners followed suit. In 1846, considerably before the freedom of the slaves in America, the Virgin island slaves rose up and overthrew their yoke.

Some of this initiative might be attributed, the jurist believes, to the fact that education was widespread in the islands. Where it was a crime for American slaves to be sent to school, it was mandatory in that territory. As a consequence, only two percent of the islands' population is illiterate today.

Quiet, meditative and urbane, Judge Moore is remarkably Oriental in appearance. He expressed great satisfaction with his post and amiably defended it against mainland condescension. Life in St. Thomas, the judge's headquarters, is very much like that of a small American town, he pointed out. There is no racial discrimination, although some of the whites do keep to themselves socially. The 35,000 persons living in the islands are largely Negro, some 85%; 5,000 are Puerto Rican, 2,000 Danish, 1,000 American white, and 1,000 pure French. The last is the lowest level of Virgin island society, the judge revealed; because of inter-marriage among themselves and consequent degeneration.

Conditions are not as bad in the islands as they are painted by American publications, Judge Moore asserted. Although the native wage scale is small ($12 to $14 per week), that is a remarkable advance over the period preceding the first world war when common labor was not worth 35 cents a day. The United States government is continually seeking to improve conditions there, he said.

The political set up, as outlined briefly by the spokesman for the islands, is as follows: the governor is appointed by the President. There is a separate legislature for each of the two largest (St. Thomas and St. John are combined for political purposes). The members are elected by the people to two year terms. Legislation, which is not contrary to federal law, can be passed over the veto of the governor, but must be sent to the President of the U. S. for confirmation. If he vetoes them, they may not be passed. Sat 2-23-46

Virgin islanders, the judge considers a fusion of the West Indian and the American Negro influence. American Negro publications are widely read in the islands, and the natives have come to feel that their welfare is linked with that of minority groups here.

The judge will be here two weeks, following which he will go East and embark from there to the islands.

Name Ex-332nd Sergeant to VI Municipal Council

AFRO Foreign Correspondent

CHARLOTTE, AMALIE, V.I.—Carlos A. Downing, a former sergeant with the 96th Service Unit of the 332nd Fighter Group, was elected to the Municipal Council here Tuesday. 3-16-46

The 37-year-old veteran received 536 of the 836 votes cast, twice as many as his two opponents, Louis Lindquist, who tallied 227, and Amadeo Francis, 45. There were 28 defective ballots.

Mr. Downing was elected to fill the unexpired term of Valdemar Hill, who was named tax assessor. His term expires in November when he and the other six members of the council will be up for reelection. 3-16-46

Before going overseas with the 332nd and serving two years in Italy, Mr. Downing was stationed in the States for three years. He is a native of St. Thomas and has four children.

CARLOS A. DOWNING, former sergeant with a service company attached to the 332nd Fighter Group, who was elected to the Municipal Council at Charlotte Amalie, V.I., last Tuesday.

Election day here was a holiday and resembled election day in any rural community except that taverns remained open and electioneering near the voting booth was not banned.

Polls opened at the town's police station (formerly Fort Christian, one of the town's landmarks built in 1671) at 8 a.m. and while 835 of the 1600 qualified voters had registered their choice at 6 p.m. when the polls closed, most waited until 4 p.m. to journey to the voting place.

Eligible for voting were all U.S. citizens 21 years of age and over who have resided here for a year and who had indicated their intention to vote 15 days before the election.

Voters used no machines. If their names were properly entered on the voting book, they were handed a slip and entered a curtained booth where they registered their choice with a pencil.

No Name-Calling

Absent was the name-calling and deep enmity found in many a U.S. election. The Photo News, a local paper, commenting on this angle, said editorially:

". . . the election has been surprisingly free of the billingsgate exchanges and guttersnipe tactics of previous campaigns. Perhaps we are beginning to learn that voters are not interested in such trivial matters . . ."

Counting of ballots, which took only three hours, began immediately after the polls closed at 6 p.m. and a crowd which gathered outside the police court room to watch, let out enthusiastic cheers when the results were announced.

The winner himself was on hand to thank voters for their action, restating his promise to serve all the people (no special interests), and to help secure better educational, recreational and hospital facilities; to aid returning veterans and work for the establishment of AC electric current.

(At present, St. Thomas has direct current requiring 220 volts instead of the usual 120 and necessitating special electrical equipment.)

Pay Is $7 a Day

In the Municipal Council, which represents the people of St. John as well as St. Thomas, Mr. Downing will receive $7 a day as well as $4 additional for membership on various committees. Six of the seven members represent St. Thomas and one St. John. St. Croix has an independent municipality.

However, all representatives of both municipalities come together once a year in the Legislative Council of the islands and can be called together at the will of the governor.

Baltimore, Md.

COLUMBUS, Ohio—Capt. Dudley W. Stevenson, provost marshal and chief of security and intelligence at Lockbourne Army Air Base, left this week for the Separation Center at Fort George G. Meade, Md., where he is to be given his discharge.

Following his separation from the service, Captain Stevenson will assume command of the police department at St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, to which he had been nominated by Gov. William Hastie several weeks ago. Sat.

A Washingtonian, Captain Stevenson attended Dunbar High School and Virginia State College. Appointed a flying cadet in Virginia in June, 1941, he later joined the 99th Fighter Squadron and spent 26 months overseas.

Col. B. O. Davis Jr., Lockbourne commanding officer, has appointed Capt. Gordon Southall, also from the "nation's capital," to replace Captain Stevenson in the provost marshall assignment.

Judge William H. Hastie, who has been nominated for governor of the Virgin Islands.

A hasty interview with Governor Hastie

JUDGE WILLIAM H. HASTIE, whose nomination as governor of the Virgin Islands was confirmed by the Senate Wednesday, was in town for a few hours Monday. It required some effort to track him down, for he was lost in a maze of appointments and meetings. We finally got him on the phone late in the afternoon, and he promised us a brief interview, after which he would have to rush off to more appointments, meetings, a dinner, and a late train for Washington.

We were to see him at 4 p.m. at the offices of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, but when we got there he was in conference with Walter White, the executive secretary, and other Association officials. (They were blocking out a program to combat educational inequalities in the South.)

The conference ended at 4:30 and Hastie, handsome and distinguished-looking, left the meeting room. He shook our hand, apologized for having kept us waiting. He was ready to talk with us, but, it seemed that there were no offices where we could have a private session.

"The ladies' sitting room is about the only place," said Walter White, who stood at Hastie's side.

The ladies sitting room, which had flowered upholstery and soft lights, looked all right and we had the interview there.

Hastie's appointment—which has made him the first Negro governor of a U. S. territory—had been opposed by the reactionaries in Congress. How did he feel about the Communist charges they had hurled against him?

"I suppose anyone would prefer an appointment of this kind to go through without opposition," he said, leaning forward and clasping his hands. "But I think the opposition was valuable in two respects. It aired the false red charges that literally thousands of people have been subjected to, and it resulted in an amazing stand of unity among the people of the Virgin Islands. They were unanimous in their resentment to the opposition in Congress. It was one of the most heartwarming experiences of my life."

Resigned in protest

In 1943 Hastie resigned as civilian aide to the Secretary of War in protest over the "discriminatory practices" against Negroes in the Army Air Forces. In view of this, did he think there would be some opposition to his nomination?

"No. As a matter of fact, I had no such suspicions until the New York Sun ran a three column story, indicating that I was believed to have Communist leanings, and that my nomination had caused trouble and disagreement in the ranks of the administration. There is nothing like reading about yourself in the newspapers," he added, thoughtfully.

There was a knock at the door and a pretty stenographer put her head in to say that Hastie had a telephone call. He sighed, gave us an apologetic look, and followed her out.

Hastie, who was born 41 years ago in Knoxville, Tenn., received his law degree at Harvard in 1930, and is at present dean of the Howard University Law School. In 1937 he was appointed by President Roosevelt to serve two years in the Virgin Islands as a Federal District judge.

When he returned from his telephone call, we asked what the Islands were like.

"That isn't very difficult to answer," he said, smiling. "You find a different and surprising kind of scenic beauty there. The sun is very brilliant, and the sea always seems very clear.

People with simple dignity

"The people? They have a simple dignity, good manners that would strike any observer. The Danes (from whom the U. S. A. purchased the Islands in 1917) left a heritage of continental manners. Gentlemen tip their hats to each other on the street, shake hands before and after every meeting. These formal observances are a very important part of their lives."

There was another telephone call, and Hastie went off to answer it, murmuring, "Oh, what a day." He returned a few minutes later and continued:

"During the war the Islands enjoyed a boom. The expansion of Army and Navy bases meant more civilian employment. There was a great war demand for sugar, a large proportion of the young men were in the Army. Everybody was relatively prosperous. But now," he said, looking worried and detached, "things have undoubtedly slackened, and I can't talk about reforms or plans until I see firsthand what the conditions really are."

Hastie looked at his watch and we made ready to leave. "It's five o'clock," he sighed, "and I've got to keep a four-thirty appointment."

HASTIE DENIES 'RED' CHARGE; HEARING ENDS

Pittsburgh Courier

Pittsburgh Pa. Sat. 4-13-46

WASHINGTON—In a stirring summation closing the hearing on his nomination to the Governorship of the Virgin Islands, William H. Hastie, dean of Howard University Law School, denied that he is a Communist and declared his appointment would not hinder business and tourist trade in the islands.

Addressing his statement to the Senate Territories and Insular Affairs sub-committee last Friday, Mr. Hastie warned that the branding of all liberal persons as Communists or communistic sympathizers "on questionable evidence will afford great danger to this country if there should be a break in friendly relations between the United States and Russia."

SOUTHERNERS ABSENT

Only one member of the subcommittee was present at the start of Mr. Hastie's statement. He was Senator Abe Murdock, Democrat of Utah and chairman of the body. Senator Warren G. Magnuson, Democrat of Washington, put in his appearance shortly after Mr. Hastie began talking, but left before the hearing was ended. Conspicuously absent were Senators Allen J. Ellender, Democrat of Louisiana; James O. Eastland Democrat of Mississippi, and Owen Brewster, Republican of Maine.

Upon finishing his summation, Mr. Hastie thanked the subcommittee, particularly Senator Murdock, for the patience, objectivity and fairness with which the hearing was conducted.

MURDOCK OFFERS THANKS

"My only regret is that the entire Senate of the United States could not have heard your statement," replied Senator Murdock in thanking Mr. Hastie.

In his rebuttal, Mr. Hastie limited himself to a discussion of the questions of whether his appointment would retard development of the tourist trade and expansion of business in the Virgin Islands, his ability to represent the Islands adequately before Congressional appropriation committees, and whether he had communistic leanings.

Mr. Hastie told the subcommittee what the Caribbean Committee is doing to stimulate the tourist trade throughout the West Indies and pointed out that the Caribbean areas—the French West Indies—had not suffered in the enjoyment of the tourist trade on that account.

THINKS ISLANDS WOULD PROSPER

He denied that his appointment would hinder business in the Virgin Islands and also denied that investors representing Danish capital had become alarmed and were liquidating their holdings because of his appointment. He said the Danish Minister, Henrik de Kauffmann, was enthusiastic about his nomination and expressed the belief that the islands would prosper under his administration.

Mr. Hastie also revealed that the trustee resident in the Virgin Islands of the Danish-Asiatic Company, which has investments in the islands, is his father-in-law.

In denying that he is a Communist, Mr. Hastie declared: "Categorically, I am not a Communist. Any statement to the contrary is a simple lie."

NOT A "RED BAITER"

He added that he has no intention of becoming a "red baiter" and said he disagrees sharply with the ideology and methodology of both the Communist party in America and the present regime in Russia.

"I disagree with the Communist party in America because it is my impression that the position and views of that party, by either coincidence or otherwise, seem to change when the views of the Russian government change on a particular situation. I could not be in agreement with a political group when it appears to me that such is the course of its policy," declared Mr. Hastie.

"I disagree with the present regime in Russia," he said, "because I do not believe the path to freedom and dignity and lasting prosperity of the people is through a totalitarian regime."

NO PROOF OFFERED

Mr. Hastie said he found nowhere in the record any charge that "my personal behavior, anything that I have said, any views I have expressed have been communistic or revealed a communistic ideology."

Senator Magnuson asked Mr. Hastie whether he would take any reprisals against any of his opponents if he became Governor of the Virgin Islands, as was intimated by Leslie F. Huntt, an opposition witness.

Mr. Hastie replied that he held no malice against any person who opposed his nomination, nor is he disposed to grant favors to those who have supported him.

TELLS OF OPPOSITION

Preceding Mr. Hastie as rebuttal witnesses were Frederick Dorsch, executive secretary of the Virgin Islands Chamber of Commerce, and Roy Gordon, chairman of the Municipal Council of St. Thomas and St. John.

Mr. Dorsch testified that United States Marshal Douglas Armstrong had been active in the islands in soliciting opposition to Mr. Hastie.

Testimony presented during the hearing charged that Mr. Hastie worked with groups alleged to be Communist or had members who were also members of the Communist party. Most of this testimony came from Senator Eastland who said he obtained his information from the House Un-American Activities Committee.

SUPPORTED ROOSEVELT

Mr. Hastie quoted from a speech he made at the annual conference of the NAACP in Philadelphia, June 21, 1940, to show that he favored the late President Roosevelt's defense program.

Referring to the summary of materials supposedly indicating he has communistic inclinations, given to Eastland by Representative John S. Wood, Democrat of Georgia, chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee, Mr. Hastie said he holds very different political and ideological views than those of James W. Ford, several times Communist Party candidate for Vice President of United States.

Mr. Hastie admitted he was a member of the National Negro Congress from 1935 to 1937 and during that period Benjamin J. Davis Jr., New York City Councilman, and Ford were active in the organization. Sat. 4-13-46

The National Negro Congress, he said, was organized to coordinate the activities of a great number of organizations. If the Congress is to be characterized by its active mmebership at that time, Hastie added, he thought it was pertinent to list the names of other well known members.

LISTS OTHER MEMBERS

Among the persons he mentioned as belonging to the Congress were Lester Granger, Bishops R. R. Wright, R. C. Ransome and William A. Fountain of the AME Church, Bishop Matthew W. Clair of the Methodist Church, Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr., Miss Marian Cuthbert of the national executive staff of the YWCA, and Judge Irving Mollison of the U. S. Customs Court.

He pointed out that the Supreme Court had held that the activities of the New Negro Alliance were wholly proper and not subject to judicial restraint.

Naming persons of unimpeachable character as active in the affairs of the National Lawyers Guild, including Chief Justice Harlan F. Stone and Associate Justice Stanley Reed of the Supreme Court, and a number of Senators, Mr. Hastie said he did not believe that such persons would associate themselves with a communist-front organization.

His position with reference to the Southern Conference for Human Welfare was similar.

Regarding the organizations with which he was charged with cooperating, Hastie said the Conference on Civil Liberties and the Conference on Constitutional Liberties were "exactly what the names indicated" and at these two conferences there wre no conclusions reached which were inconsistent with American traditions.

Howard U. Was a Nice Spot

Ex-Engineer Burns His Bridges

Post Washington, D.C.

By Frank I. Wheeler

THE Senate has confirmed Judge William Henry Hastie, 41, as first Negro Governor of the Virgin Islands.

Harold L. Ickes promoted his appointment while he headed the Interior Department, which supervises the 50 islands, islets and cays which make up the Virgin group.

The islands' 25,000 residents are 69 per cent Negro and 22 per cent mixed Negro and white. Ickes said he thought it was about time they had a chief executive representing the dominant race.

The islands have been under the flags of Spain, The Netherlands, England, France and Denmark. In 1917 we paid Denmark 25 million dollars for this "poorhouse of the Atlantic" to keep Kaiser Wilhelm's U-boats from nesting there.

Judge Hastie is deeply grateful for his appointment as an honor to his race, but he isn't jumping up and down about it. For six years he's been dean of Howard University Law School here, and he likes it. 5-14-46

Goethals Disciple

THE Judge struck match to a very serious pipe as he told me of the bee he had in his boyhood bonnet to be an engineer. It brought him from "back of the tracks" in Knoxville, Tenn., into a world that startled him.

His pharmacist father and his school teacher mother encouraged him. His mother spent long evenings telling him how the French had fought and failed to thrust a canal across the Isthmus of Panama and of the great battle President "Teddy" Roosevelt had with Congress to get authorization and funds to start it again.

He quit playground marbles and buckled down to hard study. He majored in mathematics at college, "firmly convinced I was going to build great canals and dams and stand the whole universe on its head with new and startling things."

A couple of lawyer cousins here got his feet back on the ground by helping finance what turned out to be a very profitable course in American jurisprudence. They made him read law in their offices and finally took him in as a practicing attorney . . . but first they made him get out and paint houses and do other hard jobs to help buy his education the tough way.

First on Bench

Sunday

HE was graduated A. B. magna cum laude from Amherst and won his LL.B. and S.J.D. at Harvard, where he was one of the few Negroes ever to serve on the Law Review.

In early New Deal days he was a protege of Justice Felix Frankfurter, who then was one of FDR's "brain-trusters." Ickes hired him as an assistant solicitor in his department.

At that time (1933-37) "The Ick" was up to his elbows in minority group problems and so was the White House. Hastie helped calm the waters. In 1937 FDR named him United States district judge for the Virgin Islands, the first Negro ever to sit on the Federal bench. 5-14-46

Former War Secretary Stimson persuaded Ickes to let him have Hastie as a civilian aide and adviser on Negro relations in the armed services when the war started. Right off the bat Hastie told Stimson it was a mistake to segregate black and white Army officers.

Half a Loaf

HASTIE smoothed out a lot of dissatisfaction, in large part by convincing Stimson that the Army should train Negro officers in the same camps with white officers. He said nothing about social equality. He simply said that it wasn't fair to the black soldiers for people to think that maybe the Negro officers had "different and inferior training."

The War Department pitched on his side as far as land officer training went. He walked out on his job when the Air Forces said "No." 5-14-46

Hastie is very proud of the battle record made by Negro flying officers trained at Tuskegee Institute, but he opposed their segregation.

Kitchen Exile

THE judge is a member of the African Methodist Episcopal Church. He is long and gangling (6 feet, 170 pounds), dresses in sharkskins and is equipped with a wide, high forehead and a pleasing personality. Wash. D.C.

He has a little curlicue mustache, which his wife likes. She sticks detective stories in his pockets when he travels and has to read himself to sleep . . . but she bumps him out of the kitchen when he gets delusions of grandeur about what fine omelets he can make. Sunday

Up North his voice has lost the soft cream of the Old South. He speaks with the crisp consonants of the hard and calculating world he has to battle.

Hastie's Answer to Dixie

Afro American Baltimore, Md.

Senators Eastland and Ellender, Dixie Democrats, were among those who opposed the Hastie nomination as Governor of the Virgin Islands on the grounds that follow:

1. He had Communist inclinations.
2. The tourist trade would fall off if he were Governor of the Virgin Islands. Sat 4-20-46
3. The outside interests would not invest so readily in island business if the Governor were colored.
4. Congress would not be so quick to make appropriations to the islands under a colored Governor.

Judge Hastie answered the last three points by saying that 90 per cent of the people of the Virgin Islands are colored and some of the wealthiest business men on the islands are colored; that agents for outside business interests are colored and it is inconceivable that Congress, which knows the Virgin Islanders are colored people, would be less generous because the Governor and chief representative to speak for the majority of the Virgin Islanders, happened to be colored.

The alleged Communist charges against Judge Hastie, made by Senators Eastland and Ellender, state that he had opposed the military preparedness program of President Roosevelt and that he belonged to such organizations as the NAACP, National Negro Congress, National Lawyers Guild, the New Negro Alliance and the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

Judge Hastie pointed out that Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas is a vice president of the NAACP and ex-Governor Herbert Lehman of New York is a member of the board of directors.

He said he had not been active in the National Negro Congress since 1937. In those days its membership included a number of bishops, clergymen and Urban League executives.

The Southern Conference for Human Welfare was termed an organization of Southerners principally devoted to the advance of the cause of liberalism. It too had the backing of such distinguished persons as the President of the U.S., Dr. Frank Graham of the University of North Carolina, Andrew Jackson Higgins of the Higgins Shipbuilding Company and Justice Hugo Black of the Supreme Court.

Judge Hastie pointed out that all of these organizations had large memberships and some Communists belonged to them.

Judge Hastie explained to the committee that colored people, regardless of politics, are confronted with segregation so that when they get together to combat race segregation they do not inquire of the political affiliation of those joining into the specific effort.

If the question is improving housing conditions among colored people and a person is willing to join in such a worthwhile effort we say to him, "Welcome, Brother. We are glad to have you; we are glad to work with you no matter whether you are Republican, Democrat, Socialist or a Communist."

As we see it, the Communist label means much less to us than it does to white people and it is their own fault. They lump us all together and then raise a howl when we unite for our own protection with others who have liberal and progressive leanings. Sat 4-20-46

If the crackpots and reactionaries who cry "Communist" at the sight of anything liberal would spend half as much time and energy in seeing that simple justice was accorded all individuals regardless of race, color or creed, there would be small need for them to keep dragging this red herring across the path of progress.

HASTIE TO U.S. SUPREME COURT, SAY DOPESTERS

The Chicago Defender Sat. 10-12-46

ST. THOMAS, Virgin Islands.—Within the next two years a Negro may be named to the United States Supreme Court, according to political dopesters here and in Puerto Rico.

The dopesters say he will be William H. Hastie, new governor of these islands, first Negro to hold such an appointment. Some say the matter is already settled, that Hastie is only here as a buildup for the Supreme Court appointment.

Political forecasters reason that shortly before the next general election a sweeping political bow must be made to the Negro vote. That bow, they feel, will take the form of the Supreme Court appointment, something Negro leaders long have advocated.

Though harsh words may fly over the racial issue, if these forecasters are correct, any attack on Hastie's mental or legal qualifications may meet a stiff stone wall. His professional rise has been little short of phenomenal for a man of any race.

In his short time here Hastie has earned the respect of both Negroes and whites.

He has steered a course completely clear of petty political bickerings of the municipal councils in the islands.

Virgin Islands (Hastie)

Island Mission

The new Governor of the Virgin Islands accepts the 'challenge of the Caribbean.'

New York Times Magazine N.Y.

By JAY WALZ

New York Times 1 Nov.

WASHINGTON.

WITHIN a few days after President Truman nominated him to be the first Negro Governor of the Virgin Islands, William Henry Hastie received in the mail a copy of a document assuring him a hearty welcome. In a resolution urging the Senate to confirm the appointment, which it did May 1, the municipal council of St. Thomas and St. John said Virgin Islanders were "jubilant over this great act of the President." Sun 5-12-46

The 41-year-old Governor, a law school dean and former Federal judge, expressed his happiness over this show of confidence —as might be expected—in more reserved language. But the feeling was certainly mutual.

A return to the islands, where for two years he presided over the United States Court, means for Hastie another chance to help meet what he calls the "challenge of the Caribbean." The development of effective cooperation among all the West Indian islands to fight a plague of poverty has "appealed strongly" to him for twelve years. During this time he has learned about life and conditions there, particularly those on the group of islands we acquired from Denmark as a defense measure in the first World War. The population of the isles, by the way, consists of about 2,000 whites, 17,000 Negroes and 5,500 of mixed origin.

Shortly after he left Harvard with a Doctor of Laws degree in 1933, Hastie was appointed assistant solicitor in the Department of the Interior. He worked on insular affairs and helped to set up the Virgin Island Corporation, a Government-owned company to rehabilitate the sugar industry on which the islands are economically dependent.

Sun 5-12-46

IN 1937 President Roosevelt sent the solicitor, then 33, to the islands to be judge of the Federal court. He returned to Washington in 1939 to become dean of the Howard University law school. At the outbreak of the war, the President assigned him to the Anglo-American Caribbean Commission and he attended a conference in Trinidad in 1942 to work out defense and other war problems in the West Indian area.

Governor Hastie hopes that the cooperation among the islands, advanced under the pressure of war emergency, can serve the people there in time of peace.

Its attractions notwithstanding, this new role in public life represents for Governor Hastie one more diversion from more cloistered personal interests. An early devotion to mathematics was later transferred to the technical aspects of law. The well-charted courses and the firm, reassuring answers to be found in these fields still hold a fascination for him. But the magnetic force of what he terms "human interests" and "human problems" has lately drawn him away from these pursuits. Sun 5-12-46

DURING a post-graduate year at Harvard in 1932-33, he had his first chance to tackle a "human problem." The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People sent him to North Carolina to help argue a suit filed against the State university for refusing to admit a Negro student to its pharmacy school. In the last twelve years, Hastie has taken time to handle many other cases for NAACP. He argued the Texas primary case before the United States Supreme Court, which later determined that the primaries in that State must be opened to Negro voters.

William Henry

Gov. William Henry Hastie.

Hastie was born in Knoxville, Tenn., Nov. 17, 1904, of parents who had both been school teachers. His father had decided, however, to make a career in government. Accordingly, he took a Civil Service examination for a vacant clerkship and received the appointment. According to the Hastie records, he was the first Negro clerk in the field offices of the Pension Bureau, later the Veterans Administration. He was in the Pension Bureau, first in Knoxville and later in Washington, for more than twenty-five years. Sun 5-12-46

The Governor's mother, who is living in Washington, may accompany her son when he takes up residence in Government House, St. Thomas. For his wife, the former Beryl Lockhart, the move south will be a homecoming. She is a Virgin Islander, whom Hastie met during his judgeship days. They were married in Washington on Christmas Day, 1943, and have a 15-month-old daughter, Karen.

Governor Hastie

Last Friday William H. Hastie was inaugurated as Governor of the Virgin Islands, the first colored American in history to assume such an important position.

Governor Hastie, a brilliant and worthy American citizen by any standard of appraisal, carries with him the prayerful good wishes of all people of good will who rejoice in the honor which has been bestowed upon him by the United States. 5-25-46 Saturday Rev

As area and people go, the Virgin Islands dependency is extremely small and relatively unimportant economically, but it will loom large politically from now on because the representation which has come to the colored people of the United States through this appointment is the type of recognition which all the surrounding island dependencies crave.

The British and French islands will see in the success of a Negro governor of the Virgin Islands an added argument for similar recognition from their respective imperial masters. Pittsburgh, Pa.

They will certainly regard it as incongruous if radical Socialist Britsh and French Governments continue unwilling to do as much for them as the conservative American Government.

Of course the appointment of a Negro governor will introduce no socio-economic millenium either in the Virgin Islands or any of the surrounding islands because that is beyond the capacity of any one man, but it does tend to arouse their pride and instill confidence in their capacity for effective self-government.

Virgin Islands Acclaim First Negro Governor

Defender

5,000 Attend Hastie Inauguration At Charlotte Amalie

By VENICE T. SPRAGGS

(Defender Staff Correspondent)

CHARLOTTE AMALIE, Virgin Islands—More than 5,000 persons made up a hushed audience in Emancipation Park here Friday, May 17, that witnessed for the first time in history, the inauguration of a Negro into the governorship of a U. S. territorial possession.

Representing a new era in colonial government, former Federal Judge William H. Hastie accepted the historic oath of office from his judicial successor, U. S. District Court Judge Herman E. Moore, also a Negro. 5-25-46

Nor were the 5,000-odd Virgin Island inhabitants, almost one sixth of the total population, who witnessed the ritual, unaware of its significance. A hopeful tenseness settled over the throng as their future governor was introduced by Acting Governor Morris DeCastro prior to accepting his new duties. This hope edged in the direction of realization when Hastie said later in an address to the islanders: Chicago, Ill.

'Two Sources of Power'

"We have two great sources of power—a reservoir of goodwill beyond our shores and a reservoir of ability and energy and wisdom among ourselves . . . I believe we are ready to pool these sources of power and make these islands hum with constructive activity."

The impressiveness of the governor's statement could be read easily on the faces of the gathering, members of which ranged from the humble frequenters of the market square to the holders of high positions in the islands business and government. Defender A large number of U. S. officials, headed by Secretary of Interior Julius A. Krug, were seated on the speakers' platform as Governor Hastie made the statement.

Unable to attend, President Truman sent a letter of congratulations to his appointee, which was read at the inaugural. The President expressed faith in Hastie's ability and pointed out that "a great responsibility has been entrusted to you and I am confident of your ability to shoulder it." In making the Hastie appointment, the President ignored the protests of reactionary southern congressmen, who bitterly opposed confirmation. 5-25-46

From the moment the inaugural caravan, dedecked with palm branches, flags and streamers, began its journey along Charlotte Amalie's main street, an air of optimism seemed to grip the spectators. In true holiday fashion, the caravan was met at the market square by a colorful parade of the municipal police force, a color guard of Virgin Islands war veterans, the St. Thomas home guard units of the Boy and Girl Scouts and the community band. After the merger, the procession continued to the park for the inauguration. Chicago, Ill.

At the close of the formal inaugural, Mrs. Beryl Lockhart Hastie, a large contingent of citizens of the islands, was presented to the Island's sugar magnates, was presented with a bouquet of vari-colored gladioli by a Girl Scout. Governor Hastie, after introducing Secretary of Interior Krug to the audience, presented Robert Lovett, ex-government secretary for the islands and present professor at the University of Puerto Rico. Lovett and Krug received tremendous ovations from the crowd.

Following this final phase of the inauguration, attended by a large contingent of citizens of the islands, was held at Government House. Later, the official family and some 150 persons were guests at a dinner on the balcony of Bluebeard's Castle Hotel, a government-developed facility which is one of the islands' showplaces. Sun 5-12-46

Gov. Tugwell In Party

Included in the official inaugural party were: Secretary Krug, Governor and Mrs. R. Guy Tugwell of Puerto Rico; Joel Wolfson and Creekman Fath, special assistants and Robert Day, assistant to the secretary; Carlton Skinner, director of information; Arthur Goldschmidt, director, division of power; Felix Cohen, acting solicitor; Irwin Silverman, acting director, division of territories; Mason Barr, chief of the Puerto Rican and Virgin Islands branch of division of territories and possessions; Prof. and Mrs. Robert Lovett; Acting Virgin Islands Governor and Mrs. Thomas and St. John; Judge and Mrs. Herman Moore and officers of military and naval units.

As New VI Governor Was Sworn Into Office

Judge William H. Hastie, former dean of the Howard University Law School, Washington, is administered the oath as Governor of the Virgin Islands by Judge Herman E. Moore in Municipal Park at St. Moses, Friday. Thousands of natives witnessed the ceremony in the islands' greatest demonstration.
